> >I repeat yet again that liberals so vehemently opposed by
the >>fundamentalist Baha'is have continuously spoken in favour of freedom >>of thought and expression.

>

> Oh yeah? You obviously haven't been aware of what has been going on on H-Bahai > lately.

>

> warmest, Susan

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: Women on the House

Date: Saturday, February 24, 2001 7:47 AM

Hi, Susan.

I reckon you posted this before reading everything I said. If you go back and read it all, you'll see that I said they were authoritatively interpreting, as they were using their power (authority) to insist that their interpretation was the only one allowed. Otherwise how could they

be calling people devoid or lacking of true understanding for having a different opinion, and in addition how could they be declaring such faulty understanding demonstrated failure to meet membership requirements?

I know they claim other people have been authoritatively interpreting -- the funny thing being these were people without power who were only expressing a difference of personal opinion. No, the authoritative interpretation being conducted these days, contrary to Baha'i scripture, is by the UHJ.

My posts are normally not that long. It doesn't hurt to read to the end before answering.

Thrive,
Michael

Susan Maneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

>> Whatever they call it, it's interpretation.

>

> Dear Michael,

>

> There is nothing in the Writings against interpretation which we must all > engage in. It is *authoritative* interpretation which is limited to the > Master and the Guardian.

>

> warmest, Susan

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: Hmmm.... Interesting!

Date: Tuesday, March 13, 2001 8:32 AM

Greetings, Gerald.

Many thanks for your post.

Actually, I think an unbiased historical analysis will agree with your assessment that it was the failing of Shoghi Effendi that is the principal origin of the decline of Baha'i. He it was who reared the organization, living as he was in an age of totalitarianism. Of course, he extracted his vision from the ocean of words of his predecessors, but sacred text permits a vast spectrum of understanding; the specific ideas of Shoghi Effendi are not exclusively all there is.

In addition I don't see what difference it makes really whether one has a pope or a UHJ, that is, the absence of a Guardian, in my view, is a red herring. It is a fundamentalist dogma that only the non-existing guardian is able to recognize that what Shoghi Effendi legislated or opined was applicable within the context of his lifetime. This is not the only understanding available, even within a Baha'i worldview. Fundies are very good at positing that the literal text demands a single perception and much pretty despicable stuff has stained human history flowing from this irrational premise.

I think you are quite correct that politics, the ambition of individuals to attain and maintain personal positions of authority and to insist on their personal and partisan platforms as the narrow limit defining Baha'i, has devastated the religion.

The vehement reaction of people such as Pat results from you hitting too close to home. Henderson doesn't have to run for the presidency to be political. After all, there is a brief eight years allowed to one to be president. A more astute politico would set his sights on reigning as long as he liked in Wilmette, and use the tools of the politician to remove people like Juan Cole from any possibility of replacing him, albeit the mystics who form the bulk of the exiled Baha'i liberals are more perceived by fundy politicians as threats than they are interested in the sterile administration which so bedazzles Henderson, Hooper and Co.

Interesting to meet another pagan here. I am Celtic. The falling of Baha'i (intended by its founder to be the cutting edge of all-embracing monotheism) to exclusivist literalist fundamentalism simply validates for me the view of my pagan ancestors that spirituality was too precious a thing to circumscribe with one god and with the written word. Little political minds are too capable of using monotheism and words asserted to be sacred to divide so as to rule, however undesirable the entity they create to rule may be.

Very Best Wishes,
Michael

"Gerald Smith" (gerald.smith38@gte.net) writes:

- > Greetings, everybody!
- >
- > I am Gerald Smith and I was a Bahai for 15 years, though I have no faith
- > whatsoever in that or any other form of Middle Eastern Monotheism. I find
- > it interesting that the dragon's teeth of totalitarianism sown by the - > leaders of the Bahai Faith are starting to sprout. I was led out of the - > faith by my awareness of how badly the faith was stagnating in the 1980's,
- > by the obvious inflexible rigidity of the leadership of the faith, parroting
- > the same thing over and over again they are still parroting, by the heavy
- > emphasis on proselytizing combined with lack of any real community spiritual
- > life, and most of all, by spending a year in Saudi Arabia where I got to
- > know some true, enlightened Muslims (none of whom were Saudis) and realized
- > that the best parts of Bahai were stolen wholesale from Islam.
- >
- > It doesn't surprise me that the seedlings of what I saw ten years ago are
- > bearing fruit now. It is obvious to me that the Covenant is dead, the Bahai
- > Faith a mere cult of no real importance that will doubtless linger for a - > long time but has lost its chance to become a first-class world religion. I - > believe it was Shoghi Effendi himself who said the Faith would have poor
- > chances at long term survival if it were deprived of the Guardianship and he
- > was right, but the fault is largely his for not writing a will, not having
- > children and excommunicating every relative who could have succeeded him.
- > The faith has effectively been dying since and has largely already
- > accomplished the little further that could be expected of it. Now that the
- > "dirty linen" the leaders of the faith so long successfully hid from the - > public is being prominently displayed, only long term decline

can be > foreseen.
>
> I don't regret the time that I spent as a Bahai, but it is to bad the faith > has been so ill-served by its leadership. Has anyone noticed how closely the > organization of the Bahai Faith as instituted by Shoghi Effendi parallels > that of the Communist Party? Right down to dictatorial control of the center > by a self-perpetuating oligarchy, "democratic centralism" and multi-year > plans. This is a great way to organise a small, power-hungry core of > disciplined fanatics into a totalitarian regime, but as with Marx-Leninism
> it will guarantee the long term decline and eventual disappearance of the > faith.
>
> Oh well, please keep in mind there is no one true religion and there are > plenty of other faiths you can explore in your spiritual seeking. I could > recommend the more liberal and enlightened forms of Sufi but I myself am > Pagan and polytheistic and more interested in the Primordial religions of > the Earth.
>
> Peace and Joy to you, Pilgrim!
>
> JerryBear
>
>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: Just another ridiculous revealed religion...

Date: Sunday, February 18, 2001 9:19 PM

Greetings, Susan.

Actually, no. You've had a traditional (Theravada) Buddhist posting

here. The distinction is that fundamentalists are generally exclusivists

intolerant of other opinions. It is the current situation within Baha'i

that a faction of exclusivists intolerant of other opinions, fundamentalists,

that is, have been engaging in political activity to insist that the view they hold is the only one permitted and those exercising their right to share other personal opinions be excluded. Bruce, has not demanded that his opinion be imposed on all Buddhists, as have fundamentalist Baha'is with their one only viewpoint. He is a traditional Buddhist. One may be a traditional Baha'i, but not by demanding all other opinions be excluded.

I repeat yet again that liberals so vehemently opposed by
the fundamentalist Baha'is have continuously spoken in favour of freedom of thought and expression. Traditional views are welcome; what is not welcome is any attempt to insist that only one viewpoint is valid in Baha'i.

To Tolerance Within Baha'i,
michael

Susan Maneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

>
> Not, really. We've had a fundamentalist Buddhist posting on Baha'i lists for > years. :-)
>
> warmest, Susan

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: Why there is no trace of USA in Bible!!!
Date: Sunday, August 12, 2001 2:51 PM

Hi, Michel.

Sounds like something for alt.history.what-if. On the flip side there's Turtledove's Byzantine stuff where Muhammad became a Christian monk and the Byzantine Empire is thriving.

As to Biblical stuff predicting North American Nations, then, there's Canada's claim that that verse, "And there shall be a dominion from sea to sea," applies to Canada.

I disagree with you at least in part. I'm mighty fond of the US and much prefer its liberalism to the theocratic visions of those in Haifa.
The US isn't perfect, but it's degree of imperfection is not as serious

a threat to human well-being as a lot of other totalitarian entities.
That said, I do prefer Canada, well, except maybe on the coldest days :)

Thrive,
michael

Michel Boucher (alsandorz@netcom.ca) writes:

> jolie296@cs.com (Jolie296) a écrit dans > news:20010810182252.01988.00003476@ng-bd1.news.cs.com:
>
>> Why there is no trace of USA in Bible!!!
>>
>> That is because USA is a pleasant surprise >> for the Human Race.
>
> Hardly. It's a millstone around the neck of every nation that opposes > its "liberal" policies with respect to its national interest.
And if > one looks at it another way, were we not supposed to embrace Islam, in > which case history would have evolved in a completely different way, > and the British Empire and the US would not have existed.
>
> I look on the US as the result of some very bad decisions all around.
>
> --
> The danger with depleted geranium is that it's like holding a pistil > to your head.
>
> Something I thought I heard on radio
>
> To send private mail, get the zed out.

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: Just another ridiculous revealed religion...
Date: Monday, February 19, 2001 6:57 AM

Diethe dhuit, Susan.

No, actually.

Bruce has simply responded to fundamentalist Baha'is insisting that Buddhists haven't got a clue about Buddhism, that Buddhists have distorted

and got wrong what Buddha said, and that it's the literal reading of the words of Abdu'l Baha that should take precedence over the scriptures of Buddhism for an understanding of Buddhism.

Anyone who has been reading these cyberspace fora ought to recall the facts of this. Anyone who has newly ventured in, need merely look at the archives.

Perhaps you can share with us the material from H-Bahai that shows the intolerance of those towards traditional, as opposed to fundamentalist, Baha'i positions. The archives of cyberspace should clearly show that Michael McKenny consistently upheld the right of anyone to share an opinion, and opposed only the demand that a single view be imposed as the exclusive Baha'i dogma. Exclusivity, dogmatism and the veils of intolerance adorning these being the only things he doesn't tolerate.

Slan Agat,
Michael

Susan Maneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

>> Actually, no. You've had a traditional (Theravada) Buddhist posting >>here. The distinction is that fundamentalists are generally exclusivists >>intolerant of other opinions

>

> Yes, that is what I was revering to. A certain Buddhist who has shown himself > to be exclusivistic and intolerant of the other's opinions.

>

>>Bruce, has not demanded that his >>opinion be imposed on all Buddhists,

>

> No, he mostly wants to impose them on us. So much so, that he has devoted > considerable energy over the last six years to achieve that end.

>

> >I repeat yet again that liberals so vehemently opposed by the >>fundamentalist Baha'is have continuously spoken in favour of freedom >>of thought and expression.

>

> Oh yeah? You obviously haven't been aware of what has been going on on H-Bahai

> lately.
>
> warmest, Susan

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: That's right: Opinions are not banned!
Date: Sunday, October 28, 2001 4:34 PM

Greetings, Pat.

Actually, you've got it wrong. I notice every time this issue comes up you say something like, "Well, Michael told the UHJ he thought they were Nazis and therefore they were justified in kicking him out."

Firstly, at the time I was a strong supporter of the UHJ. I was writing as a result of having been so advised by Auxiliary Board Member Sue Tamas. Baha'u'llah says somewhere that one in the presence of authority and justice need not fear, and simply has to tell the truth. I did not fear. My letter, if I recall correctly, states that I had been advised by others that writing to the UHJ was not a good idea. I wrote to them, despite such advice, something I would not have done, if I really thought they were Nazis.

Secondly, I was aware that the Service of Women Paper had been censored; I read the Rebuttal by the UHJ. They said that there was a Paper being read and creating quite a stir in New Zealand, but I was not permitted to read the Paper itself. The UHJ censored the Paper. Years later, after I joined Talisman, I received a copy by e-mail. This struck me at the time, and still does, as an unacceptable censorship. This and the use of the quote, in the context of the present honestly considered a mistranslation, in the Rebuttal is legitimate basis for mentioning the parallel to the Nazi policy of misinformation.

It is very legitimate, for example, for any strong supporter of the government and the Constitution of the US, or any of our other Western democracies, to express the opinion that recent anti-terrorist legislation appears tyrannical and despotic, even to compare it to the legislation of fascist and communist regimes. I, myself, am not saying that here; I have not studied this legislation sufficiently to hold such an opinion. I am saying that I have no hesitation that if I decide to express such an opinion, or if anyone else in our democracies wishes to express this point of view, this expression of personal opinion is fully compatible with one being a strong supporter of the government and the Constitution. Anyone, really thinking that President Bush or any other leader actually has become a totalitarian despot would keep silent and live, as lived and live, people in totalitarian states.

So, it was reasonable for me to say, "Frankly, I do not see the distinction between censoring the Service of Women Paper which says that Abdu'l Baha'i told Corinne True to accept her exclusion from the General House of Justice of Chicago, using that very quote (mistranslated) in the official Rebuttal to the censored Paper and the kind of stuff Goebbels was involved in." That is very reasonable on the part of one thinking he's dealing with decent people who are perhaps able to explain the distinction, and, in any case deserve to have honest perception of their policies.

Thirdly, as I have frequently said, people call the Prime Minister of Canada and the leaders of our other democracies all kinds of names. There is no problem, even if someone hosts a talk show on the radio or writes columns in the newspaper, calling the leader a tyrant, dictator or what have you, a different degree than one individual writing to the leader and saying this seems to me to resemble dictatorial or what have you policy. The problem only arises when the leader responds to this comment as would have responded dictators and tyrants.

Clearly, the response by the Universal House of Justice to the Service of Women Paper, to the letter by Michael McKenny, to the expression of personal opinion by the members of the Talisman e-mail list, etc., etc.

is the only significant factor in assessing the nature of those guys who now occupy the seats of the UHJ. People can say they perceive no distinction between your policy and that of Goebbels, they can call you a despot or anything they like and no impact has this on the actual determination of your character unless and until you demonstrate that the accusations are true by your responding in a despotic manner.

You are wrong that I thought the UHJ were Nazis.

You are wrong that I called them Nazis to their face.

You are wrong in saying the service of Women Paper was not censored.

You are wrong that even were I one so thinking and so calling that this would justify a tyrannical response on their part.

To A Better Future,
Michael

Pat Kohli (kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net) writes:

>> > A nice bit of deceptive propaganda! Michael wrote the UHJ as if they were >> the Nazi >> > party of the Third Reich. Then he got disenrolled.
>> >
>
> "Very frankly, it is very difficult to see the distinction between such Baha'i > practices and those directed by Goebbels which at length required the > intervention of my father and many millions like him. I can not describe for you > the extent of the impact it had on me when I learned that your initial response > to the reception of the information that the Writings contain passages in which > women are referred to as "men/rulers" and that it is quite likely that > Abdul-Baha was speaking about the House of Justice in Chicago and not the > Universal House of Justice at all was to prohibit the publication of this data."
>
> My impression is that Michael was misinformed that the Universal House of > Justice prohibited the publication of information that he alleges. Rather than > seeking some clarification, he compares them with the scourge of the 20th > century.

>
> Blessings!
> - Pat
> kohli@ameritel.net
>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: That's right: Opinions are not banned!

Date: Monday, November 05, 2001 9:14 AM

Greetings, Ron.

Many thanks for your comments.

You wrote:

> But in the end the UHJ > has proved by its continuing actions that it is incapable of making > Baha'u'llah's system work. That is my conclusion from accepting their > offer of studying the Baha'i community.

In my opinion, the current members of the UHJ, using an extremely literal and fundamentalist position that they must be obeyed no matter what they decide have demonstrated that such fundamentalism cannot work, except in the degeneration of spirituality to cult. Following
Baha'i principles and allowing for unfettered search for truth within Baha'i,
for the freedom of thought and expression, for the UHJ, as all consultative bodies so advised in principles of Baha'i administration, changing policies that fail, for the harmony of reason and faith, for the full equality of women and men, may create a different situation.
However, even here, it now seems very unlikely that the literalist expectation of uniting all the peoples of the world under a Baha'i
theocracy can be achieved.

Peace,
Michael

> --
> Ron House     house@usq.edu.au
>                https://www.sci.usq.edu.au/staff/house

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: That's right: Opinions are not banned!
Date: Monday, November 05, 2001 10:03 AM

Dia Dhuit, Pat.

The point is that the action of suppressing the academic analysis and invalidation of literalist interpretations of quotations used to excuse violating essential Baha'i principle and all-male leadership within Baha'i, of censoring this academic article (Where's Steve and Alyson Marshall? My understanding is that this paper actually PASSED review, but the guys on the UHJ got their hands on it and ordered it censored) does strike me as the kind of thing done by such totalitarian outfits as the NAZI propaganda ministry. Since this is true, and I challenge you to demonstrate the distinction, other than that of the identity of the individuals involved, it is quite valid for one who does not really believe the members of the UHJ are Nazis to ask them, "What is the difference between your policy of misinformation and the policy of misinformation policy of Goebbels?"

I look forward to your answering the issue that since people in our liberal democratic country call the Canadian PM a dictator, or what have you, even on radio talk shows and in newspaper articles, and we remain a liberal democracy, because such freedom of speech is allowed, the guys now running the show demonstrated their incapacity by their response.

Indeed, do you really consider it justification to boot someone out, even if he deliberately called the leaders Nazis?

Again, and every time I see you raise this point, I'll try to give the identical reply. The policy of misinformation and censorship is a reprehensible policy, especially on such a crucial issue of essential principle that permits the men currently running the show to prevent women from holding seats on the UHJ. It is valid for one to ask, without really thinking these guys are evil, how do you distinguish this policy from that of the NAZIs.

And, I reiterate for the umpteenth time, that those defending the men so violating Baha'i principle, use an enormous number of words about individuals, about people, ad hominem, because it seems quite clear they have little to say on the issue. This Michael McKenny is a bad guy, because he called the holy men running the show NAZIs.

What I say is that the POLICY of censorship, of the violation of the most essential Baha'i principles of freedom of expression, of the equality of women and men, of the harmony of reason and faith -- the POLICY of doing the opposite of what Baha'u'llah taught -- the POLICY of totalitarianism, extremism and fundamentalism is wrong. This POLICY is similar, if not identical, to the POLICY of Goebbels and others like him.

Now, Pat, honestly, ethically, morally, go ahead and speak to the issue, avoiding any mention of people. Speak to the issue of censoring academic analysis demonstrating that in context there is no impediment whatsoever to Baha'is living the life and abiding by principle, no restraint to women serving as members of the Universal House of Justice. Go ahead. I dare you.

I don't have much time in cyberspace, and what time I have, I want to devote largely to injecting a bit of reason into the issue of the current conflict, add my influence to avoiding an attack against Iraq, etc. Many days may pass without me reading this newsgroup. This article, the one Pat clearly didn't read thoroughly, and others further back in the archives are clearly adequate to refute his astonishing position that leadership justifies acting like tyrants because they perceive they have been called tyrants. The gods be praised, Canada has a leader of a much more reasonable, understanding and beneficial nature.

To a Better Future For Baha'i,
M.

Pat Kohli (kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net) writes:

> Guten Tag, Mein Feuhrer!

**>

> Michael McKenny wrote:

**>

>> Greetings, Pat.

>> Actually, you've got it wrong. I notice every time this issue comes >> up you say something like, "Well, Michael told the UHJ he thought they >> were Nazis and therefore they were justified in kicking him out."

>> Firstly, at the time I was a strong supporter of the UHJ. I was >> writing as a result of having been so advised by Auxiliary Board Member

>> Sue Tamas. Baha'u'llah says somewhere that one in the presence of >> authority and justice need not fear, and simply has to tell the truth.

>> I did not fear. My letter, if I recall correctly, states that I had been >> advised by others that writing to the UHJ was not a good idea. I wrote to >> them, despite such advice, something I would not have done, if I really >> thought they were Nazis.

**>

> Reading your reply, I sometimes get the impression that you might actually try to > wriggle off of comparing the UHJ to the Nazis.

**>

**>>

>> Secondly, I was aware that the Service of Women Paper had been >> censored; I read the Rebuttal by the UHJ. They said that there was a Paper >> being read and creating quite a stir in New Zealand, but I was not permitted >> to read the Paper itself. The UHJ censored the Paper. Years later, after I >> joined Talisman, I received a copy by e-mail. This struck me at the time, >> and still does, as an unacceptable censorship. This and the use of the >> quote, in the context of the present honestly considered a mistranslation, >> in the Rebuttal is legitimate basis for mentioning the parallel to the Nazi >> policy of misinformation.

>

> Thanks for the acknowledgment on your part of the Nazi parallels. At times, I might > get the vague suspicion that you are trying to pretend that you had no suggestions of > Naziism in your letter.

>

>>

>> It is very legitimate, for example, for any strong supporter of the >> government and the Constitution of the US, or any of our other Western >> democracies, to express the opinion that recent anti-terrorist legislation >> appears tyrannical and despotic, even to compare it to the legislation of >> fascist and communist regimes. I, myself, am not saying that here; I have >> not studied this legislation sufficiently to hold such an opinion. I >> am saying that I have no hesitation that if I decide to express such an >> opinion, or if anyone else in our democracies wishes to express this >> point of view, this expression of personal opinion is fully compatible >> with one being a strong supporter of the government and the Constitution.

>> Anyone, really thinking that President Bush or any other leader actually >> has become a totalitarian despot would keep silent and live, as lived and >> live, people in totalitarian states.

>

> Note your wind Michael, again with the totalitarian despotry!

>

>>

>> So, it was reasonable for me to say, "Frankly, I do not see the >> distinction between censoring the Service of Women Paper which says that >> Abdu'l Baha'i told Corinne True to accept her exclusion from the General

>> House of Justice of Chicago, using that very quote (mistranslated) in >> the official Rebuttal to the censored Paper and the kind of stuff Goebbels >> was involved in." That is very reasonable on the part of one thinking he's >> dealing with decent people who are perhaps able to explain the distinction, >> and, in any case deserve to have honest perception of their policies.

>

> Decent people???? Who the BLSC@!#$% do you think you are bullshitting here? If you > really do consider Goebbels and the rest of the Nazi party

"decent people", millions > of men likd your Dad need not have shed their blood, sweat and tears to rid this world > of that scourge which you now cast as "decent people".
Either that, or you > acknowledge that your comparsion of the UHJ with the Nazis was completely off base!
> You didn't address them as decent people then. . . sadly I find it a bit false of you > to try to pretend so now.
>
>>
>> Thirdly, as I have frequently said, people call the Prime Minister >> of Canada and the leaders of our other democracies all kinds of names.
>> There is no problem, even if someone hosts a talk show on the radio or >> writes columns in the newspaper, calling the leader a tyrant, dictator or >> what have you, a different degree than one individual writing to the leader >> and saying this seems to me to resemble dictatorial or what have you >> policy. The problem only arises when the leader responds to this comment
>> as would have responded dictators and tyrants.
>> Clearly, the response by the Universal House of Justice to the Service >> of Women Paper, to the letter by Michael McKenny, to the expression of >> personal opinion by the members of the Talisman e-mail list, etc., etc.
>> is the only significant factor in assessing the nature of those guys who >> now occupy the seats of the UHJ. People can say they perceive no distinction >> between your policy and that of Goebbels, they can call you a despot or >> anything they like and no impact has this on the actual determination of >> your character unless and until you demonstrate that the accusations are >> true by your responding in a despotic manner.
>
>>
>> You are wrong that I thought the UHJ were Nazis.
>
> You are wrong. I wrote "Michael wrote the UHJ as if they were the Nazi party of the > Third Riech." and by gum, you did! Deny it all you want, but you did!
>
>>

>> You are wrong that I called them Nazis to their face.
>
> You are wrong. I wrote "Michael wrote the UHJ as if they were the Nazi party of the > Third Riech." and by gum, you did! Deny it all you want, but you did!
>
>>
>> You are wrong in saying the service of Women Paper was not censored.
>
> You are wrong. In your letter to the UHJ, you wrote, "I learned that your initial > response to the reception of the information that the Writings contain passages in > which women are referred to as "men" ", and I pointed out that this was in publication > _long_ before the "Service of Women" paper.
>
>>
>> You are wrong that even were I one so thinking and so calling that >> this would justify a tyrannical response on their part.
>
> You are wrong, again. It was _alleged_ that you were disenrolled simply for > suggesting that women should serve on the UHJ and I suggested that that might not be > the case at all. I don't know why you were disenrolled, but I do know you've done far > more objectionable than simply discussing women on the UHJ, as was alleged. propaganda > which you show no interest in denying, Herr Goebels.
>
>> Pat Kohli (kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net) writes:
>>
>> >> > A nice bit of deceptive propaganda! Michael wrote the UHJ as if they were >> >> the Nazi >> >> > party of the Third Riech. Then he got disenrolled.
>> >> >
>> >
>> > "Very frankly, it is very difficult to see the distinction between such Baha'i >> > practices and those directed by Goebbels which at length required the >> > intervention of my father and many millions like him. I can not describe for you >> > the extent of the impact it had on me when I learned that your initial response >> > to the reception of the information that the Writings contain passages in which >> > women are referred to as "men/rulers" and that it is quite likely that >> > Abdul-Baha was speaking about the House of Justice in Chicago and not the >> > Universal House of Justice at all was to prohibit the publication of this data."

>> >
>> > My impression is that Michael was misinformed that the Universal House of >> > Justice prohibited the publication of information that he alleges. Rather than >> > seeking some clarification, he compares them with the scourge of the 20th >> > century.
>> >
>> > Blessings!
>> > - Pat
>> > kohli@ameritel.net
>> >
>
>
>

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)
From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: This is Bahai?
Date: Friday, November 23, 2001 10:55 AM

Greetings, Karen.

Many thanks for your comments.

You are quite right that the suppression of freedom of thought and expression is a quite telling and alarming aspect of current Baha'i life. What most upset me on first reading the Service of Women Paper was that it had been censored. What most upset me when I first entered Baha'i cyberspace was that there were Baha'i fundamentalists there seeking to suppress the expression of any opinion, but their own.

One point I stressed from early on was that the Baha'i Covenant was a two way street; it guaranteed the freedom of thought and expression for Baha'is, who, whatever their personal opinions, would accept the legitimacy of the authorized institutions. What is very remarkable about those who had the understanding that Baha'i women should be on the UHJ was that they only sought their legitimate right to express this opinion, and all stated it would come about when the UHJ called for it. No one staged a coup, or even passed around a special ballot.

Of course, what one does when one opposes the free expression of human opinion is expose one's own insecurity concerning one's own position. By censoring the Service of Women Paper, by exerting tremendous pressure on those stating their views on the e-mail lists, by having people visited by Counsellors, etc., those occupying seats on the UHJ revealed that the points made in that Paper and by those exercising their Baha'i right to speak their mind and heart are irrefutable. Those occupying those seats had no way of overcoming the reason and spirituality they encountered. They chose the policy of other despotic rulerships and sought to conceal views, to censor, to oppress, to intimidate, to create suspicion and division, to force those thinking the irrefutable thoughts to be silent or to begone.

Ad hominem arguments are invalid, but this was the policy, the only plank of reasoning those individuals, offered this splendid opportunity to prove Baha'is really do live the life of their principles, had and have. They seek to discredit the people who say what cannot be denied. They assert those currently on the UHJ are correct, because of who they are, and this was carried to the invalid proposition that the hands of the future members of the UHJ are bound according to the opinions of those now occupying that body. The validity of propositions is independent of the personality of individuals; all the contemporary members of the UHJ demonstrate by moving against personalities, by pressuring or even legislating the non-Baha'i status of people believing that spiritual principles trump particular literal interpretations appearing to exempt leaders from living according to spiritual principles is testify to their powerlessness to stand in the light of what they oppose and the extent they are willing to go to insist on their own understanding.

Again, I stress freedom of thought and expression includes the right of literalist interpretations to be spoken; it even includes the right of leadership to speak literal interpretations. What is forbidden is the suppression of other understandings, carried to the extent in this case to the completely false proposition that the particular literal interpretation of the contemporary members of the UHJ prevents their successors from feeling and reasoning in any other way. This view is invalid. Parliament may not bind its successors, and the members of the Universal House of justice are completely free at any time to legislate according to their own understanding without hindrance from the views of those who have sat in those seats previously. Considering the actual situation today, all one can say about the valid reality of the freedom of the future is, "Thank God!"

Thanks again for your comments and for the opportunity this allows for me to restate these points. The time I took to do this may have set back a little the completion of that Canadian archaeology project I'm working on, but it was worth it. Please feel free to repost any of my posts that in the ever flowing nature of cyberspace may seem called for yet again. The same points seem to flow as waves to the shore and it is only seldom now I look in here. Much I'm missing, but the archives have likely already received responses by me and others so irrefutable that exceptional ad hominem were all those sitting in UHJ seats had to answer with.

May you always be well.

To the Future,
Michael

"Karen Bacquet" (karenbacquet@hotmail.com) writes:

> --

> "The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice

... ." --

> Baha'u'llah

>

> This is an excellent observation, Michael. I recently was reading Marcus

> Borg's latest book, and he points out that scriptural literalism actually > requires a good deal of creative effort to maintain. If the idea that the > Guardianship, as in Institution, is still in existence is not a very > creative interpretation, I don't know what is. It is a "literal" approach > inasmuch as it seems to be based upon nothing more than the Will and > Testament's appointment of Shoghi Effendi, and his interpretations > concerning the necessary role of the Guardianship, but it sort of boils down > to "There's a Guardianship, because the Writings say there must be one". A > corollary is "The UHJ doesn't interpret because the Writings say it can't".

 > So anything that looks like an interpretation just is called an elucidation > instead. That, in itself, is an interpretation.
 >
 > Yes. Many times I wonder about the context of Shoghi Effendi's letters -- > who was he talking to, and what was the situation that cause him to respond > the way he did? Was it advice bounded by certain conditions, or was he > expounding on a general principle? I do know that his insistence on the > importance of the Guardianship was, at least partially, due to challenges to > his own position. Those that had the Guardian thought they should have the > UHJ; now those that have the UHJ think they should have a Guardian. The > grass is always greener, I guess. But when I look at the W&T, I see an > entire, coherent system that was cut down before it ever had the chance to > fully develop and work properly.

 >
 > Yes. I think that the issue of women's service on the UHJ is an "unclear > matter", and as such falls within the purview of the legislative power of > that body. However, as I've said before, the fact that enrolled Baha'is > cannot advocate this publicly without reprisals is something that concerns > me far more. There's no future for any sort of change or reform if Baha'is > do not have the freedom to promote their views.

 >
 > Yes. They're the ones with the power -- it is inevitable that they > interpret, and it is their choice how they do so. Literalism, as you point > out, is just one of those choices.

>
> Love, Karen
>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: "Shunning is the marker of a cult . . . note that these

Date: Monday, December 03, 2001 9:08 AM

Hi, Susan.

So, those people who have accepted Baha'u'llah and are opposing His key teachings of the independent search for truth, freedom of thought and expression, harmony of faith and reason, agreement of true religion with science, equality of women and men, etc. have a "Spiritual problem"? And, those people indoctrinated to consider mindless obedience to leadership as the only essential element of spirituality are signs of a cult? We are in complete agreement.

Thrive,
Michael

Susan Maneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

> More specifically accepting Baha'u'llah as a Manifestation yet rejecting key > elements of His Teachings is a "spiritual problem."
>
> Susan Maneck
> Associate Professor of History
> Jackson State University

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: "Shunning is the marker of a cult . . . note that these

Date: Monday, December 03, 2001 9:28 AM

Greetings, Karen and Susan.

As I've said before, these points are cyclical. They have been made and refuted already. Feel free to repost refutations any time. Some day,

I should write an FAQ, that deals with these issues and repost every full moon or something.

For starters, again, just how is posting two or three messages a day to the dinky e-mail lists, "A campaign of pushing misconceptions." Alas, I'm too busy to write another satire today, but this sure cries out for it. Of course, Baha'i is a religion whose Founder guaranteed freedom of thought and expression, and many other spiritual principles, but, if one arrives at an understanding as to how these spiritual principles can actually be put into practise and makes a couple of posts to e-mail lists a day, then one is waging, "A campaign pushing misconceptions." Smeone should let you in on the fact it's not 1984, but 2001. For those unfamiliar with the references, the year 1984 is used in a novel as a time when, "Newspeak" is endowing words with quite remarkable meaning in support of despotic rulership, and 2001 is from another novel dealing with the arrival of humanity at the threshold of elevated awareness.

Thrive,
Michael

Susan Maneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

> Dear Karen,
>
> You're taking that reference out of context. What they were saying is that had > Alison and Michael not made a campaign out of pushing their 'misconceptions' > then it would have remained a 'personal spiritual problem' not something the > institutions would have intervened in.
>
> warmest,
> Susan Maneck
> Associate Professor of History
> Jackson State University

**--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Sunday, December 09, 2001 5:09 PM

Hi, Pat.

Duh, have I wandered into another sliders world again. I recall some outlandish figure such as 900 plus NO votes the first time TRB was voted on. People at News.Groups noticed this and some helped out on finally getting the Newsgroup through. Sorry for my poor memory, but perhaps all these alternate universes I've passed through contributes to that. I do have the impression it took three tries before TRB got through. Taking all three votes, including that first one with its NSA of Iceland NO vote, or was that on the second ballot?, I strongly suspect more Baha'is voted to prevent this first uncensored line of communication in recent Baha'i generations.

Thrive,
M.

Pat Kohli (kohli@ameritel.net) writes:

>
> He has voting results which show that more Baha'is voted for TRB than against > it, yet he concludes that Baha'is were an obstacle to TRB formation.
>
> Blessings!
> - Pat
> kohli@ameritel.net
>
>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: bahai - talk.religion.bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."

Date: Tuesday, December 11, 2001 9:55 AM

Dearest Robert,

Our perceptions of reality are considerably different.
My experience, both on the e-mail lists with several dozen or score subscribers, and in wider cyberspace, is that there is a desire by some to prevent opinions at variance to their own from being expressed. It is not a question, in this wonderful modern technology, even of having to have your eyes sullied by the thoughts of those who disagree with you.

You can simply kill file them and delightfully imbibe what pleases you.
No, the issue is that these displeasing contradictory thoughts are so convincing that you, and more significantly, the men now sitting on the chairs intended for members of the Universal House of Justice, would rather no one read them.

I have often posted to Baha'i cyberspace that you and those like you can have your say. That's what freedom of speech is all about. If you are indeed the majority, then let all these 900 plus naysayers come and share with us words of wisdom and love. Surely, these will swamp all the hate you perceive here, though honestly I don't see that hate. What I see is honest criticism of the lot currently in power. Since they are ruling over an entity in considerable decline, such criticism is the opposite of hate. Anyone with an IQ higher than a twig's and hating Baha'is would merely gloat silently while the inept guys in power continued their dive. Those who for years have been speaking up have been doing so out of love for the Baha'i Faith.

To Love,
Michael

"Robert Little" (rlittle1@socal.rr.com) writes:

- > What happened is that Baha'is voted against it first time around. On the
- > last vote, most of those Baha'is who had voted against it the first time
- > simply did not vote again. The remaining Baha'is who had an interest in it
- > voted more for it than against it.
- >
- > As this is a newsgroup dedicated to discussion of Baha'u'llah and His Faith,
- > and as the majority of His followers who did vote that first time generally
- > did not want an unmoderated forum that would allow backbiting, spite,
- > deceit, lies, racism, bigotry and the like to populate a forum with the name
- > of the Glory of God attached; and, inasmuch as the Baha'i Faith inculcates
- > the concept of the will of the majority taking precedence over the will of > the few, it would seem reasonable to conclude that this newsgroup ought not > to exist, reasonable to conclude that it exists more because of hatred than > of love, reasonable to conclude that the protagonist of this newsgroup did > not wish to abide by the overwhelming wish of the Baha'i community.

>
> Robert A. Little
>
> "BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing"
<patrick_henry@liberty.com>
> wrote in message news:9v2c4k$cb2me$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de...
>> Michael,
>>
>> 600+ no votes on the first interest poll. You're right that >> people on news.groups were noticeably shocked by the >> figure and realized something was going on. One of them >> immediately created alt.religion.bahai in response. There's >> a very long and complicated record of fundamentalist >> interference in the creation of talk.religion.bahai.
>>
>> For those interested, most of the relevant docs are at this link:
>> <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/trbmenu.htm>
>>
>> --
>> FG
>> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
>> <https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>
>>
>>
>> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote
in message
>> news:9v0nel$q4k$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...
>> > Hi, Pat.
>> > Duh, have I wandered into another sliders world again. I recall some >> > outlandish figure such as 900 plus NO votes the first time TRB was voted >> > on. People at News.Groups noticed this and some helped out on finally >> > getting the Newsgroup through. Sorry for my poor memory, but perhaps all >> > these alternate universes I've passed through contributes to that. I do >> > have the impression it took three tries before TRB got through. Taking > all >> > three votes, including that first one with its NSA of Iceland NO vote,
> or >> > was that on the second ballot?, I strongly suspect more

Baha'is voted to >> > prevent this first uncensored line of communication in recent Baha'i >> > generations.

>> >

Thrive,
M.

>> >

>> >

>> >

>> >

>> > >

>> > > He has voting results which show that more Baha'is voted for TRB than >> against

>> > > it, yet he concludes that Baha'is were an obstacle to TRB formation.

>> > >

>> > > Blessings!

>> > > - Pat

>> > > kohli@ameritel.net

>> > >

>> > >

>> >

>> >

>> > --

>> > "My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

>> > (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

>> >

>>

>>

>

>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: bahai - talk.religion.bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."

Date: Tuesday, December 11, 2001 9:58 AM

Greetings, Frederick.

As I've said before, many thanks for your tremendous effort to pierce the balloon of Baha'i censorship.

Thrive,
Michael

"BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing"

(patrick_henry@liberty.com) writes:

> Michael,

>

> 600+ no votes on the first interest poll. You're right that > people on news.groups were noticeably shocked by the

> figure and realized something was going on. One of them
> immediately created alt.religion.bahai in response. There's > a very long and complicated record of fundamentalist > interference in the creation of talk.religion.bahai.
>
> For those interested, most of the relevant docs are at this link:
> <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/trbmenu.htm>
>
> --
> FG
> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
> <https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>
>
>
> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in
message
> news:9v0nel$q4k$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...
>> Hi, Pat.
>> Duh, have I wandered into another sliders world again.
I recall some >> outlandish figure such as 900 plus NO votes the first time TRB was voted >> on. People at News.Groups noticed this and some helped out on finally >> getting the Newsgroup through. Sorry for my poor memory, but perhaps all >> these alternate universes I've passed through contributes to that. I do >> have the impression it took three tries before TRB got through. Taking all >> three votes, including that first one with its NSA of Iceland
NO vote, or >> was that on the second ballot?, I strongly suspect more Baha'is voted to >> prevent this first uncensored line of communication in recent Baha'i >> generations.
>> Thrive,
>> M.
>>
>>
>> Pat Kohli (kohli@ameritel.net) writes:
>> >
>> > He has voting results which show that more Baha'is voted for TRB than > against >> > it, yet he concludes that Baha'is were an obstacle to TRB formation.
>> >
>> > Blessings!
>> > - Pat
>> > kohli@ameritel.net
>> >
>> >
>> >

>>
>> --
>> "My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
>> (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)
>>
>
>

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address
from your mailing list."

Date: Tuesday, December 11, 2001 9:25 AM

Top o' the Mornin' To You, Pat.

You agree there were three votes. I assume you also accept there were 900 plus no votes first time round.

Pat, I consistently request people posting to news groups to provide data to the newsgroup and not say go to the following url. I don't know whether some readers of this newsgroup are but a click away from what url

soever is named, but personally I have to get off trb, get out of the newsgroup feature of freenet, activate the www section, type in the url

and I see you've provided some that are so long they run off my screen and besides that they contain per cent signs, dollar signs and question

marks. If you want me to read it, post it here.

My point, as I understand your message, is accepted. There were 3

votes before TRB was established. There was a concerted effort to prevent the establishment of this first major uncensored Baha'i forum, as the results of the first vote clearly demonstrate, and no one can deny the basic fact that Fred was the primary originator of this forum.

For his tremendous effort to pierce the walls of Baha'i censorship, he deserves

the highest praise.

Slan,
Michael

Pat Kohli (kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net) writes:

- > May all the Gods smile on your face forever,
- >
- > The facts I had in mind can be checked at the links. I got on to unmoderated
- > Baha'i news a few months before the third vote and I still remember Fred trying to
- > convince me that, as a Baha'i, I was ethically and morally bound to vote for TRB.
- >
- > Michael McKenny wrote:
- >
- >> Hi, Pat.
- >> Duh, have I wandered into another sliders world again. I recall some
- >> outlandish figure such as 900 plus NO votes the first time TRB was voted
- >> on. People at News.Groups noticed this and some helped out on finally
- >> getting the Newsgroup through. Sorry for my poor memory, but perhaps all
- >> these alternate universes I've passed through contributes to that. I do
- >> have the impression it took three tries before TRB got through. Taking all
- >> three votes, including that first one with its NSA of Iceland NO vote, or
- >> was that on the second ballot?, I strongly suspect more Baha'is voted to
- >> prevent this first uncensored line of communication in recent Baha'i
- >> generations.
- >>
- Thrive,
- M.
- >>
- >> Pat Kohli (kohli@ameritel.net) writes:
- >> >
- >> > He has voting results which show that more Baha'is voted for TRB than against
- >> > it,
- >
- > <https://groups.google.com/groups?selm=789oo1%24l9s%40news3.newsguy.com&output=gplain>
- >
- >> > yet he concludes that Baha'is were an obstacle to TRB formation.
- >> >
- >
- > <https://groups.google.com/groups?selm=79c2k0%24j0k%40news3.newsguy.com&output=gplain>
- >
- > Slan!
- > - Pat
- > kohli@ameritel.net
- >

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address
from your mailing list."

Date: Tuesday, December 11, 2001 9:33 AM

Hi, Robert.

You do not negate anything I said. Baha'u'llah did say that the Baha'i House of Worship is to be a centre of humanitarian activity, and the Senior Citizens Residence was the first step taken generations ago to begin fulfilling this requirement. Closing it, unless another such humanitarian activity is undertaken, is a significant retrogression in the institution of the American National Mashriqal Adhkar, below what was acceptable in the time of Shoghi Effendi.

Regards,
Michael

"Robert Little" (rlittle1@socal.rr.com) writes:

> Easy

**>

> The present structure requires more money to upgrade to current legal > standards than it is worth. It, the structure, is therefore being closed.

**>

> Robert A. Little

**>

> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message

> news:9v2gbe$h81$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

**>>

>> Greetings, Dermot.

>> Actually, this could be a quite significant comment you made. Do you >> mean the US NSA is closing the Senior Citizens Residence at Wilmette? As

>> I understand the history, Baha'u'llah wrote that Baha'i Houses of Worship >> are intended to be centres of humanitarian activity and when the American

>> Baha'is suggested the Temple in Wilmette to begin fulfilling this >> requirement have a library connected with it, Shoghi Effendi, I think it >> was, said this was unacceptable and more direct care of society was >> necessary. Thus, was the senior citizens residence founded.

>> If my interpretation of your comment is correct and this is now being >> closed, unless some other alternative humanitarian activity is replacing >> it, we are observing a highly significant decline in the institution of >> the American National Mashriqal Adhkar, a retrogression below what was >> acceptable in previous generations by Shoghi Effendi.
>> I await with interest any clarification.
>> Slan,
>> Michael
>>
>> "Dermod Ryder" (Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com) writes:
>> > "Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message >> > news:20011209133223.16269.00002635@mb-ch.aol.com...
>> >> >
>> >> >Don't need to - I use Hendi's name and number to access that >> > place -
>> >> >not that it's worth it.
>> >>
>> >> Is that your wife? Are you saying you can access the US >> > administrative website
>> >> using an Irish I.D.?
>> >
>> > Geez! You really are a dumb cluck! "Hendi" as in Robert C.! Duh!
>> > Geddit! Sometimes, however, just for fun, I log on as you!
>> >
>> >>
>> >> >I haven't seen anything of importance on it >> >> >yet - nothing about reforms in New Mexico, declining numbers.
>> >>
>> >> Or a letter telling Baha'is not to say the prayer for America? :-)
>> >
>> > No - didn't see that but then I didn't claim to have seen it so why >> > would I have? Did see the lovely bit about closing the old folks' >> > home! Now there'll be nowhere for you in your dotage!
>>
>> --
>> "My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
>> (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)
>>
>
>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."

Date: Tuesday, December 11, 2001 10:18 AM

Greetings, Robert.

The correct plural in Latin is "Homines", as homo is a third declension noun. This is in the accusative, following ad. in English "Ad hominems" is generally used.

Freedom of speech is indeed about the ability to say what you feel, regardless of whether or not you agree with anyone else, including men now warming chairs intended for members of the Universal House of Justice.

As to Buddhism, as years ago I cited from Soc.Religion.Buddhism and as Buddhists have pointed out in Baha'i cyberspace, for which I saw them less than politely treated, traditional Buddhism does not have a creator god. Calling Buddha a Manifestation of God and asking Buddhists to accept Baha'u'llah as the World Unifier (Meitreya) Buddha coming from such a creator God is doing something outside of traditional Buddhism. I have seen Baha'is malign a traditional Buddhist expressing classical Buddhist thought on this point. I hope such maligning can be relegated to history, and those inclined to such maligning can accept freedom of thought and expression includes the ability of Buddhists to state understandings of Buddhism derived from Buddhist scriptures, even where such differ from the understandings these Baha'is have of Buddhism.

To Enlightened Understanding and Goodwill,
Michael

"Robert Little" (rlittle1@socal.rr.com) writes:

> Randy

**>

> You use a highly colored term ("trash talk") to characterize on srb what you > have referred to here on trb as "the clash of conflicting opinions".

**>

> Although the subject is not currently of that great an interest to me, I > have followed the Buddhist threads on srb, and I do not recall anything > remotely resembling what you describe, and in fact have seen Buddhists given > great exposure to reply to questions put to them by Baha'is.
Boths sides > have spoken to the question, have refrained from using such colorful > phraseology and have demonstrated a high degree of respect for each other, > something that same discussion failed miserably to achieve in the past here > on trb/arb.
>
> Previously on the unmoderated forums, I attempted repeatedly to engage the > Buddhist proponents in a discussion of common themes in both religions, such > as marriage, divorce, alcohol, murder, and other ethical questions. These > questions were never answered, although there were numerous examples of > "trash talk", and not-infrequent ad hominums (homini?).
>
> I do not understand how the concept of free speech is so frequently defined > as speech that agrees with one's already-formed opinions.
>
> Robert A. Little
>
> "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net> wrote in message
> news:0hhR7.651$vo1.134225@dfiatx1-snr1.gtei.net...
>> SRB will allow a Baha'i to trash talk Buddhism but will not let a Buddhist >> respond to this trash talk because it would be talking about Buddhism and >> not Baha'i and therefore irrelevant. I personally have no use for SRB and >> if it ceased to exist tomorrow I would not notice.
>>
>> Cheers, Randy
>>
>> --

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address
from your mailing list."
Date: Tuesday, December 11, 2001 5:13 PM

Greetings, Paul.

You're right that I don't want pictures here. I missed any quote Pat posted, of which those URLs were the background context. I don't mind at all posting here only what's relevant to one's point. As I wandered in, Pat seemed to be saying it wasn't true most Baha'is voted against TRB, so I answered him about the three votes and that very high number of NO votes on the first round.

As FG was, and has never denied to my knowledge, the major proponent of this newsgroup, I don't understand the surprise at him urging people to vote for it.

We completely agree on the nature of unmoderated newsgroups. I'll add, as I've said more than once in Baha'i cyberspace, that I, for one, never used and do not use kill files. I may be too busy to read everything, but I like the opportunity. And, as many already know, I delight in personal attacks directed at me, as these are ad hominem and testimony by their author that what I said is irrefutable. Otherwise, there would have been posted the refutation, rather than the personal attack.

Thrive,
Michael

"Paul Hammond" (pahammond@onetel.net.uk) writes:

- >
- > Sorry mike, but if the reference is to pictures, or extended texts,
- > it is *much* better that Pat provides a link, and hardly his fault
- > if your connection has quirks.
- >
- > Most of those long URLs you refer to are references to former
- > posts to usenet, as archived in google - the result of some advanced
- > searching thru that database, at a guess.
- >
- > I wouldn't want to encourage people to repost entire posts from
- > yesteryear, and Pat usually seems to provide the relevant paragraph
- > or phrase from whatever he has given the link to - it's good that
- > he gives the link to the entire post so that you can see for yourself
- > whether he has quoted selectively or not.

>
> Pat has good usenet habits, from my experience, and I wouldn't > want to encourage him into forming bad ones.

>
> Well, it was my comment that started this little byway. I *wasn't* > around at the time, but from what I've just read, Pat is confirming > to us that Fred was being very insistent on trying to persuade > Baha'is to vote *for* this forum, which I think was what I was > trying to say. I think what I got wrong was thinking that Robert
> Little had voted against. Though, since he has now gone to the > trouble of writing a "beginners guide" to Baha'i cyberspace, which > basically advises newbies to stick to srb, I think we can safely say > that his opinion of this forum is now very low.

>
> All this being a distraction from my main point, which was
that > *unmoderated* forums belong to no-one, and no-one can say who > is or is not entitled to post here, or how they can express themselves

>
> (by which I mean, of course, that one's *opinion* of someone > else's style may be expressed, but if someone annoys you too > much, you must have recourse to the killfile - there's no other > way here!)

>
> Paul
>
>
>

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address
from your mailing list."

Date: Wednesday, December 12, 2001 4:21 PM

And the Same Back at You, Lad.

I must admit I've always been partial to those humorous descriptive modifiers "A middlin' and paltry 92 per cent of people think X and a humungous mob of 8 per cent think Y." Being one very able to concentrate on the figures straight without the veils, I always am amused when I run into such obscuring modifiers.

We agree with regard to the third vote. I've got better things to do with my time than use oracle bone divination or whatever to determine the religion of people voting for and against TRB. But, the first vote was a horse of another hue. It was admitted that some computer guru in Baha'i cyberspace had been urging anyone and everyone to come and vote NO, I see you quote the name Mark Towfiq. The result actually was a very high number of NO votes (I recall something like 969, but whatever it was it was so high regulars on news.groups sat up and took notice).

As to democracy, well, yes, duh. The point of news.groups is to provide some kind of order, so that if a bunch of people really do want to chat about something in cyberspace, in the relatively chaotic realm
here, then they can go through a procedure, set themselves up and show they actually exist. If there were too few people wanting to talk about Harry Potter in 1997, maybe that's not the case now. And, 900 plus fans of Harry Houdini ought not have an eternal and permanent veto on there ever being a Harry Potter group. If they don't like it, fine they can surge through other reaches of cyberspace, permitting those who really want the newsgroup the opportunity to do their thing.

Like, freedom of speech, m'lad. Wonderful stuff.

Thrive,
Michael

Pat Kohli (kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net) writes:

> Top O' the afternoon to you, Michael,
>
> Ah yes. A fascinating exercise in democracy - keep voting until the 'right' answer is > returned.
>
> Nope.
>

> Please accept my apologies. As an aging man I do sometimes forget that you can not have > a web browser and a newsreader open at the same time. I usually surf and read news in > Netscape.
>
> xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx
> From: "FG" <FG@hotmail.com>
> Subject: Annotated NO voters - 3rd interest poll
> Date: 1999/01/22
> Message-ID: <789oo1$!9s@news3.newsguy.com>
> Organization: https://extra.newsguy.com
> X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V4.72.3110.3
> Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai
>
>
> Searching www.dejanews.com for a history of posting to Usenet, the > following results are obtained:
>
> Voted NO
> -----
-----
> ---
> B=Bahai
> N=no hits on www.dejanews.com or fewer than a recent dozen
> T=techie
> -----
-----
> ---
> 22 Bahais voted NO (only 27 YES)
> 10 Techies
> 26 or more NO hits or so very few as to raise the question of > the legitimacy of the email address.

>
> Nope. I have no idea what religion is held by each and every one of the folks who voted > against TRB in the first or second votes. I try to resist the temptation to speculate.
> I don't like it when other folks make up religions for me, but, other folks have other > ideas of what is good and seemly conduct. You are perfectly entitled to uphold the right > of someone to decide who is and who is not a Baha'i.
>
> I pointed out that when Fred did estimate the faith of the voters on the third poll, even > though he estimated that about 55% percent of the Baha'is voted "for" and 45% "against," > he concluded that they had been an obstacle.
>
> Fred systematically and patently stacks the cards | moves the goalposts | changes the > rules when dealing with Baha'is. Since it is plain, I was surprised that anyone gives > him much credence.

>
> The results do not indicate a concerted effort to fix the outcome; you want to refer to > examples of chicanery for that. If you simply accept negative results as evidence of a > conspiracy, you hold up every non-tie vote as such evidence.
>
> I can. Fred consistently sabotaged efforts to form TRB.
Even on the last vote, he > provided the basis for an official complaint, and, through his hypocritical dissociation > from the election rigging that he started, strongly tempted official protests.
>
>> For his >> tremendous effort to pierce the walls of Baha'i censorship, he deserves
>> the highest praise.
>
> We see Fred differently. I see him as a poster child for review.
>
> Blessings!
> - Pat
> kohli@ameritel.net
>
>
>

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address
from your mailing list."
Date: Wednesday, December 12, 2001 4:27 PM

Greetings, Karen.

Yes, I remember that goal. From the comments posted here hitherto, it didn't sound like it had been met. Thank you for coming out and saying that. Here's to a better future.

Thrive,
Michael

"Karen Bacquet" (karenbacquet@hotmail.com) writes:

> Dear Michael and all,
>

> It wasn't that long ago, early 90s, I think, when consideration of creating > another dependency to the mashriq in Willmette was part of the Plan. But > after that, not a word was said about it, much to my disappointment. Guess > they figured they had better things to do.
>
> Love, Karen

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: Dermot=Fred? Who else is missing?

Date: Thursday, December 27, 2001 9:08 AM

Greetings, Susan.

I hereby absolve you of all guilt of slander in any assertion
that Fred has a Ph.D. His possession, or the lack thereof, also has no bearing on any idea, thought, concept, opinion he may express here. I do admit that if he as witness is seeking to have accepted as evidence his view of you speeding through a red light, or onto a UFO, demonstrating his constant, eternal and absolutely reliable veracity, or the lack thereof, may be relevant to the acceptability of said testimony as infallible.
However, since I don't believe in infallibility, I can doubt any witness asserting you were seen speeding through that light or onto that flying saucer, whether or not said witness has a Ph.D.

The reliability of people expressing thoughts, opinions, ideas, views is quite a different thing than the reliability of witnesses in court, in the sense of people testifying to what they saw. Formal logic holds that ideas, opinions, propositions, concepts are assessed on their own merit and not according to the reliability, or the lack thereof, of the person who is credited with the idea; Baha'i consultation is supposed to occur on the same basis.

Here's to a good harvest of focused consideration of ideas, thoughts,
opinions, etc. freely expressed in this uncensored forum.

Peace,
Michael.

p.s. for the biographers in the crowd, yesterday I posted a lengthy reply, paragraph by paragraph, to soc.culture.indian, soc.culture.pakistan, soc.culture.usa and alt.religion.islam titled Re: Nukes should be armed. Those not bothering to read it will be correct in assuming I argued against the motion of increased violence in the Subcontinent. Also, I added three new reviews on ancient China on my freenet webpage, on Mencius, Ssu-ma Ch'ien and Liu Wu-chi's splendid A SHORT HISTORY OF CONFUCIAN PHILOSOPHY. I also added another bit to the CAMBRIDGE HISTORY OF ANCIENT CHINA review. All these are available to be independently checked, but my claim to having read some of Perry Mason solves the case of the FIERY FINGERS may be doubted as much as you like, according to credibility or the lack thereof. :)

Susan Maneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

>>The ad hominems in this newsgroup suggest that >>there could well be some considerable interest in such a project.
>
> Dear Michael,
>
> I'm afraid counsel, that such information does speak to credibility.
> Furthermore,
> I was responding to an accusation that I was somehow committing slander by > suggesting that Fred had a PhD. Since he had told me at one time, he did, I > thought I should check my facts. And I did so, uncovering a great deal of > information which I posted here in order to set the record straight.
> Susan Maneck
> Associate Professor of History
> Jackson State University
>
> "And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
> left to start again . . ."
> Don McLean's American Pie
> <https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>
>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: Dermot=Fred? Who else is missing?

Date: Thursday, December 27, 2001 4:55 PM

Greetings, Susan.

And, just what are these eyewitness assertions? I've already said that if he claims to having spotted you speeding through a red light or onto a flying saucer, I'm not taking that as infallible proof you did so, whether or not he has a Ph.D. I'll add even a certificate from the Unified Flight Operatives of Antares won't completely convince me. And, whether or not you sped through a red light or onto an Antares craft once, thrice or four score and seven times, is irrelevant to the cogency of any view you may express.

Peace,
Michael.

Susan Maneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

>> The reliability of people expressing thoughts, opinions, ideas, views >> is quite a different thing than the reliability of witnesses in court
>
> That's true, Michael. But Fred has done more than assert his personal thoughts, > opinions, ideas and views here. He has made statements of fact which are > largely false. It is for this reason people should be aware that his testimony > is suspect.
>
> warmest,
> Susan Maneck
> Associate Professor of History
> Jackson State University
>
> "And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
> left to start again . . ."
> Don McLean's American Pie
> <https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>
>

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: Enemies aid and abet
Date: Monday, September 08, 2003 8:17 AM

Hi, Starr.
You shared with us:

Starr* (starrjo99@yahoo.com) writes:

>
> Dear SolarGuard, Thank you for speaking to question informatively and > meaningfully.
>
>> The Khomeini regime in Iran launched a persecution of Baha'is that >> aroused very widespread sympathy for Baha'is worldwide.
>
> You are right, as I now recall that I took this as a sign that mass > conversion in the world at large was on the verge of becoming a > reality, at the time.

As I recall, it was the Universal House of Justice that made this point at the time, asserting that the then persecution in Iran was what would cause entry by troops, mass conversion and the Most Great Peace.

> The Peace letter >> written during this time received great attention. The seeds of such entry >> by troops, such entry of the masses into the Faith were planted and >> watered with the blood of Iranian martyrs.
>
> As I recall I was prepared to match their sacrifice at the time,
> however, it became evident that entryism and colonization was changing > the aims, writings, and praxis of the Faith.
>

It seems the guys in charge lost sight of the spiritual nature of what was going on, and thought in very material terms. I recall a Counsellor, likely David Smith, addressing us here and saying he'd returned from Haifa and the UHJ wanted the Baha'is to provide the UHJ with entry by troops. "Give us some muscle," was how he expressed it, unaware it seems that you don't just get a whole mass of people streaming into a hypocritical medieval thing violating its own essential spiritual principles on the issue of women being fully equal to men and eligible, indeed required, to serve at all levels as a mandatory prerequisite for world peace. The Sacred Text describing the essential nature of equality can provide some attention for Baha'i from the masses. The disregard by an all-male ruling council of such Sacred Text can only earn Baha'i the scorn of any masses that check it out. Baha'i's duty is to elevate any medievalists stuck in the ruts of such patriarchal medievalism and bring them into the 21st Century, not compete with them for domination of the male supremecist vote.

>> However, when the first wave of the masses began to investigate Baha'i, >> as the prophecy stood on the threshold of becoming history, these people >> comprising that first wave encountered the intolerable hypocrisy of a >> Faith asserting women were equal to men, but discriminating against women >> by refusing to accept women at the top, on the Universal House of Justice.
>
> I whole-heartedly that this is the very integral central issue that > lost the day for any progress. I am wondering if this hard stance > against women's full emancipation as written about in the Peace > Message has anything to do with the Faith's center being housed in the > heart of Israel?

>

I see it as the shoe being on the other foot, or the other entity being the cart. As I view it, since the Universal House of Justice has become so unBaha'i, has sought to play political games of divide and rule, however cultish, narrow-minded intolerant and petty the entity being ruled, the material reflection of that absence of spirituality is inflicted on the peoples of Israel and Palestine. Instead of an all-embracing, inclusive, peace-creating mindset, we are confronted with the political machinations, the intolerance, the injustice of a fundamentalist, colonizing and militaristic Sharon government. Israel deserves better, but there's no Baha'i spirit providing the example of better ways to live and no divine influence from Haifa enhancing peace in Palestine and Israel, to say nothing of the planet as a whole. This whole militaristic confrontation of right wing America in support of extremist Israel and fundamentalist Islam would be hard to imagine in a world where Baha'i had lived the life of the equality of women and men and become a bridge of spiritual understanding between West and East.

>> These people, this first wave of the masses, dropped Baha'i because of >> Baha'i refusal to walk the talk on the issue of the equality of women and >> men.

>> Had Baha'i been walking the talk on this issue, had Baha'i accepted >> women are able to serve on the UHJ, then there would have been the >> beginning of entry by troops, leading to mass conversion.

>

> You are absolutely spot on for the inherent Spirit of Peace and Wisdom > in women would have led their families to embrace global equality > supported by wise men such as yourself.

>

Actually, as I've documented elsewhere, and possibly in the archives of this newsgroup, in this city the presentation of the Peace Message gained the interest of many people of capacity and I personally observed them all drop Baha'i like a hot potato, as soon as it became known that Baha'i prevented women from rising to the top and being elected to the Universal House of Justice.

>>I am not sure >> that opposition elsewhere after that was inevitable (pre-empting such >> opposition was one of the issues about which I wished to consult when I >> entered Baha'i cyberspace c. 1995). However, opposition is generally the >> response to success and growth. Since Baha'i was dropped like a hot potato >> because of this hypocrisy on the issue of women, it declined. This decline >> explains the absence of attacks. There is no need to oppose what is dying.

>
> It was a strategic move of the colonizers to safe keep the structure > for their own agenda as Haifa knew that opposition would threaten the > Haifa Centre and it's coffers, while they made alliances with > Governments. Yes, now I see why the persecution did not continue - > thanks for helping me understand that point. It looks like a good idea > to be dying...while having agreements to rise again under global > agreements when the time is ripe?

>
I was perhaps naively concerned with seeking to find ways and means to communicate to religious fundamentalists (that is Islamic and Christian clerics, etc) that the rise of Baha'i would not be contrary to the interests of their religions, as Baha'i respected very much their Prophets and the handiwork of their Prophets. I wondered at the mechanisms of guaranteeing such leaders a decent living economically, as well as the respect of Baha'is in a society where Baha'i had greatly augmented its population. I was hoping that in a human condition of global maturity it might be possible for people to avoid juvenile conflict and antagonisms, the opposition of the old and new power elites. It remains a hope of mine that humans can get along and understand their common human identity. The one tremendous surprise I encountered was the existence of Baha'i fundamentalists and the whole mess that emerged with the divisive and intolerant, the unBaha'i, actions of those holding positions of responsibility within Baha'i, those using traditional, juvenile, factional and divisive politics to maintain their control of the entity they ruled contrary to the Baha'i Sacred Texts. This remains a tragedy of historical proportions, as 9-11 and all the aftermath confirm.

>>

>> > Are the >> > disgruntled dissident voices being used to this end? Will the bahai >> > involvement in Kelly's case bring attention to the global aims of the >> > hoped to be world religion?

>>

>> To the extent governments and peoples look at Baha'i, whatever it is >> directs them to look, they discover a cult of hypocrites with a view of >> women that can be dismissed as that rooted in fundamentalist Islam, a >> medieval worldview having no connection to global requirements today and >> in the future.

>

> Yes, I even believe, AO loyalist send out people to show these > faults...can they pander to the people and overcome the anomalies > and hypocrisy exposed to become more inclusive and just in days to > come when the global community has settled down - and do the people > want them to?

>

It took Christianity several centuries to achieve a domination within the Roman Empire and the brand of intolerance that characterized Christianity was not a wholly beneficial entity. It was not impossible for Baha'i to have emerged with the ending of the Cold War and inform the world situation then, as we advanced into the Lesser Peace. However, the failure of Baha'i leadership to live the life trashed that historic opportunity. Can it happen in another era? I suppose it's possible, but, in my opinion, it will be a shadow of what it could have been. One good thing is that as a consequence of the abuse of power by the men of the Universal House of Justice, this precedent will allow humanity to treat that institution with the scrutiny deserved, instead of according it the kind of unquestioning obedience that could have become conditioned. Had the UHJ lived the life in the late 20th Century and then went off the rails several generations down the road, it conceivably could have caused a much greater harm to those under its control, simply because so many more could have been under its control. Now, that it's demonstrated how susceptible it is to human failings, it will always be held to the same level of scrutiny expected from any authority.

>> > All things work together for the good of god, so the bible tells us.
>> > So moles, double mole teams, dissidants, enemies, liberals, >> > fundamentals, ex/unenrolled all play a part of what will be (if it >> > bahai who knows). I say let the *good* times roll so long as the good >> > of god is for equality, justice, and self knowledge.
>> >
>> > Starr*
>>
>> The division of Baha'is, the quite understandable rage and >> disappointment and all the articulations of those romantic idealists so >> abused by the men who retain power in Baha'i at the cost of the worth of >> the religion can be seen in spiritual terms, as a rerun of the suppression >> of the followers of the Holy Imams of Islam. The lessons of human history >> are that spirituality is not always dominant and often the unworthy have >> conquered the deserving.

>
> Another poster was pointing this out in another forum regarding the > suppression of Sufi's in Iran - but in my mind, this is the time in > this Cycle where the 'meek shall inherit the earth' if they STAND UP > and take that rightful position as ONE VOICE in many lands.

>
I don't believe in inevitability, so the attempts by right wing Americans and Islamic fundamentalists (operating in the vacuum created by the failure of the men of the Universal House of Justice to live an example of a better way) to impose a period of conflict and hostility upon humanity are rejected by me. I believe now is the time for the ordinary people of the planet and for all leaders deserving the name to advance the interests of the harmony of the species. Let the machinations of the war mongers be overcome. It says in the Koran that God is a better plotter than men. Now, is surely an excellent opportunity for such a passage to be verified through the triumph of human harmony and peace over the self-serving confrontational hostility of the Crusaders and the Jihadis.

>>It is not inevitable and any day Baha'i can >> emerge out of the Middle Ages, accept women on the UHJ and begin the >> process of healing and uniting its own as a prelude to contributing >> positively to the healing and uniting of humanity. I'm not holding my >> breath, but it is possible.

>
> Without full participation of women at the top decision making then

> those who want to see bahaism fail have ensured it is and will forever > fail. The Israeli-Palistine conflict must be resolved before any > changes can be made in haifa and the colonizers neutralized. Many > Eastern women now working at the UN and in politics are working to > uphold thier Government policies or they are removed from > representation - unfortunately. Of course there are some freelancers > making progress in academia and elsewhere (a hope to the future).

>

>> In the interval, my best wishes to you all. However understandable your >> disagreements, arguments, flamefests, these merely underline the nobility >> of each of you so terribly maligned by the men

>

> I'd like to take this opportunity to thank you and to say that in my > eight years of bahaicyberspace you, Michael, are the only person who > has ever acknowledged and voiced understanding of the persecution I > experienced in trying to enrol the Aborigine people into the faith and > the great suffering I bore, - the others seemed all to have no heart > towards my trials of betrayal and often villified my contribution. Of > course the people that know the circumstances in life greatly > sympathize. Once Errol gave some understanding and I don't forget that > either. I have never fully understood the cyber dissidants > unwillingness to understand or care and therefore wondered what > agendas they are hoping for - although that is becoming more > decipherable these days. Some times bahai is no more than a platform > for many, though I do not wish to judge - and as I said 'all things > can work towards the good'.

I guess it helped that I was taught in Canada the spiritual value of our native people. I don't know if I have said here that when I was turning into an adult, when I was twelve or thirteen years old, I went out into the forest and was gone for three days. They had people searching for me. Years later it occurred to me that without training and with no knowledge of what was happening, I had tried to go on a vision quest. I had responded to the spirit of the land, and conceivably there is some native blood in me, but this I have not yet proved. Anyway, in Canada the Baha'is for many years had greatly valued Native spirituality.

When I read your account of the Baha'i attacks against Australian Aboriginals, it was so shocking for me. And, here, indeed, was another account and one from halfway round the world from me of how the winds of night had blown out a candle that could have illuminated this poor planet above its juvenile wars. I salute you who suffered such living martyrdom as to see such inflicted upon a people by those wearing the name of Baha'i.
And, my hope is that whatsoever the future unfolds for the Aborigines, as for each people of this planet, it surpasses our highest hopes and exceeds are imagination in every beneficial way. Human potential is very great and it should not be overcome by the self-centred sowing seeds of disunity and conflict.

>>whose duty it was to >> exemplify their receptivity to the influence of your Prophet and His >> unifying teachings still very much in tune with the needs of humanity.
>
> The poison pills inserted must be removed, and the Spiritual Essence > extracted for it to ever be meaningful again - maybe that is what all > this deconstruction is all about - but it needs to go to the next step > of choosing the advanced level and then determining which part of the > cake delivers.

>

The current system allows the UHJ at any time to live the life, walk
the talk and really bring together in harmony a serene, mature and peaceful human civilization. The stimulating, energizing and creative possibilities of such are beyond our imagination. Many other scenarios exist and my hope remains that whatever does happen, whatever the details,
whatever specific events become actual history are luminous, beneficial and very worthy to a species that has seen too much tragedy for too many generations.
Thrive, Michael

> To a future that works for everyone in an ever evolving civilization!

> Starr*

>

>> Thrice Three Blessings, Michael

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: Enemies aid and abet

Date: Monday, September 08, 2003 8:30 AM

Hi, Dermot.

"Dermot Ryder" (grim_reaper MOST@btinternet.com) writes:

> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote
in message

> news:bjf8ln$b63$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

>

> Hi Michael,

>

> Good to see you back in the trenches here on good old TRB.

>

> Did you ever apologise to the DST for whatever it was you did that annoyed > her? Or, like me, are you still enrolled on the list of honour that is her > killfile?
>
I'm probably going to disappear, at least largely, again, as I only post here at the expense of time spent elsewhere. However, we'll see what happens. Conceivably, the UHJ will decide to get its act together and start harmoniously guiding the Baha'is and providing an example for the rest of humanity. I would be willing to cheer them on and spend a bit of time consulting on that, though as I've already said, there's now going to be a much healthier holding of them to basic standards, as with any other authority.
By the way, it was a pleasure to spot here posts from someone named Brid. She wrote in so Irish a way, it was a delight to read her.
I'm still reading very little of what is posted here. I am conscious that all the divisive flaming is only an indication of the extent to which the Baha'i authorities have fallen short of their duty to guide Baha'is on the High Road of spirituality. A vast variety of opinions is mandated as essential within Baha'i and there should never be any possibility of the UHJ and its subordinate institutions being accused of nefarious operatives, as such is contrary to really living the life.
I look forward to all that kind of thing being tossed in the trash bin of history, as they get on with what they were set up to do -- guide the Baha'is harmoniously as an example to a species that was supposed to be at peace no later than 2001. To you and yours, the very best.
Peace, Michael

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Michael McKenny <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: One area in which Liberty is Limited in the Baha'i Community
Date: Wednesday, July 21, 1999 7:58 AM

Greetings, David and Jennifer.

The point is that all things are to be taken in moderation. Yes, indeed there are limits to liberty. I can't simply walk down the street and have sex on the spot with any woman who catches my eye even if she doesn't want it. I can't simply move into any house that catches my eye, killing them that were living there previously. I can't, well, I think you get the picture. There is a golden mean, a middle path, moderation.

And, you know, that means there's a ditch on the other side of the road humanity is meant to stay out of, too. The quotes you provide are by no means meant to be an endorsement of the kind of administration endured by so many people in this Century in places such as the thankfully X USSR. And, this is precisely the problem with the narrow minded fundamentalist men in charge of the Baha'i Faith. Rather than ruling with principles that would be backed by the spiritual resources of the Faith and gain the admiration of a progressive humanity, they vomit attacks on liberty, backed by the literalist extremist readings of such passages, as if striving to gain the admiration of the most detested rulers in human history.

I will remind you that when Abdu'l Baha wrote to the Baha'is of Canada in "The Tablets of the Divine Plan" that, "In Canada, freedom will increase day by day," he made it sound like a good thing, that this would be, as a result, a great place to live. He did not say, "Drat, shucks and darn it, what a terrible tragedy, but..." Doug Martin, if none of the other eight, ought to have read that passage, and maybe ought to be doing more to foster the UHJ seeking to model itself a bit closer to Canada, praised by Abdu'l Baha, rather than the X USSR.

Here's to moderation, the Golden Mean, the Middle Path, to liberty rather than bestial unrestraint and rather than totalitarian suppression of human rights.

To the Future,
Michael

"David Fiorito and Jennifer Spotila" (fiospots@pond.com) writes:

> Here is the quote from Baha'u'llah - the Kitab-i-Aqdas:

>

> Consider the pettiness of men's minds. They ask for that which injureth > them, and cast away the thing that profiteth them. They are, indeed, of > those that are far astray. We find some men desiring liberty, and priding > themselves therein. Such men are in the depths of ignorance.

>

> 123

> Liberty must, in the end, lead to sedition, whose flames none can quench.
> Thus warneth you He Who is the Reckoner, the All-Knowing. Know ye that the > embodiment of liberty and its symbol is the animal.

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: non non-Baha'is revisited

Date: Wednesday, March 10, 1999 11:00 AM

Greetings, Robert.

I follow my practise of starting at the most recent of many unread posts and answer you without having read Juan's reference to me.

You wrote:

>

> Oh, the question: I don't know whether he is a Baha'i or not. According to my > recollection, a Baha'i is one who accepts the Author of the Baha'i revelation > (Baha'u'llah), His Forerunner (the Bab), and the perfect Exemplar of His > teachings ('Abdul-Baha'), and acknowledges that they have revealed laws and > ordinances which we must follow.

>

I did do that on June 23, 1971, though being a human being and not a monotheistic god I saw it as striving to follow what had been revealed. Also, not having become a lawyer, my focus was not on laws and ordinances, but on spirit and principles. I still tried to say prayers every day, even bowing down, according to directions. It is just that it was not Hammurabi whom I recognized as having returned, but the spirit of Buddha and Jesus, etc.

It was precisely because I, previously influenced by Roman Catholicism and Buddhism and aware of the superiority of males as compared to females, felt the spirit of the Baha'i Faith insisting on the equality of women and men, and the spirit of the Baha'i Faith confirmed my previously held ideas on the importance of having an open mind, of harmonizing reason and faith, of respecting representatives of all belief systems, of expressing my own incomplete understanding, of being personally responsible for my moral actions, of ceaselessly seeking to acquire a greater grasp of reality, that I spoke up on Baha'i e-mail lists, that I responded to Counsellor Birkland's invitation, as conveyed through Susie Tamas, that I met with her, and that, at her suggestion, I wrote to the Universal House of Justice. And, precisely because I was influenced by the spirit of the Baha'i Faith the un-Baha'i response of the Universal House of Justice did not satisfy me. That my refusal to conceal this dissatisfaction did not even produce a directive from the Universal House of Justice to shut up or else, but instead a notice without warning from them through the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Canada that I could not be considered a member of the Baha'i community only confirmed the remoteness this entity dwelt from the words universal and justice.

Now I accept the power of the UHJ to decide whom they may call Baha'is as I recognize that Stalin had the power to decide whom he felt was a good Soviet citizen and whom he could have placed in the gulag.

However, as I have previously stated, the soul-sphere of this species, what you call god, has been perceived by some in a monotheistic manner, and Baha'u'llah's vision, seeking to provide a harmonizing framework to permit the peaceful inclusion of all humans in a world civilization is one of the most laudable, IMHO, in history.

This highly praiseworthy effort of the prophet does not mean that I must reject the essential principles of the prophet and cling only to the literal words he wrote in a few places, defining many other things he wrote so as to reverse the normal meaning of the words he used. That is, I do not place as the only essential principle the deification of the obviously imperfect decisions of patriarchs and call fundamentalism broad-mindedness, search for truth, harmony of reason and faith, freedom of thought and expression, etc. Nor, am I willing to say that the prophet did not really mean there should be broad-mindedness, search for truth, etc.

The Universal House of Justice has repeated history and the lofty spirit of Baha'u'llah has come into the grasp of those taking advantage of poetic exaggeration as to their own responsibilities to insist on an absolute obedience of what is completely contrary to the universal vision of the prophet. I do not deny they have the power to redefine the Baha'i Faith, so that instead of being universal in outlook it is an exclusive cult. If these individuals would rather be cult figures than the leaders of the universal religion that is their choice.

And, if this is their choice, then they are completely correct that they can count me out.

And, since by their choice they have removed the universal from the cutting edge of the monotheistic worldview, then I am quite reasonably and spiritually in tune with the spirit of this age to be seeking perception according to the wisdom of most of the people who have ever lived on this planet, the pagans. Inasmuch as religious intolerance, conflict and persecution seem to be overwhelmingly the consequences of the exercise of power by exclusivist monotheists, then the current cycling back towards the broad-minded views of our early ancestors would seem to be a good thing.

To open-mindedness, to tolerance, to harmonious understanding.

All the Best,
Michael

> Has Mr. McKenny done this?

>

> with love,

>

> Robert A. Little

>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Michael McKenny <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: Juan Cole's theory of mutilation.

Date: Monday, June 07, 1999 8:01 PM

Greetings, Rick.

Again, what you are quoting is exhortation, strongly expressed advice, the urging of Shoghi Effendi that those who come after him will behave in the manner and according to the principles he has herein stated.

It is clear and evident that the course of Baha'i history has seen those come into power on the UHJ who have failed to follow this advice.

The quite remarkable distinction is made that since Shoghi Effendi was authorized to make official interpretations, no other understandings are allowed on any issue upon which Shoghi Effendi made an interpretation, but anything else Baha'u'llah said is not necessarily so strictly subject to such a literal understanding. Of course, the canon requires that what Shoghi Effendi wrote be taken literally.

More, no distinction is made between specific comments by Shoghi Effendi, or his various secretaries, to individuals, to groups or to the Baha'i world and general remarks. Further, since, in the absence of the UHJ, de facto administration was required by Shoghi Effendi, this happened and the Baha'i world at that time 1920s to 1957 was going through certain stages of developement that do not necessarily correspond to reality more than forty years after his death.

To have the central operating principle of the Baha'i Faith be the compilation of all the remarks Shoghi Effendi ever wrote about anything to anyone at any time and the foisting of this on the entire planet, in complete opposition to the essential principles of the Baha'i Faith and of its only reason for being, the harmony of humanity (let there be no doubt, human harmony cannot be attained through the imposition of a legal like code of the literal understandings of anyone, Shoghi Effendi, included, although some human mindsets have responded very well to such structures and caused enormous harm to fellow humans by persecuting those who view things through other eyes) is a very sad happening.

If it is possible for some comments by Baha'u'llah to be taken as appropriate in the context of when and to whom they were made, so that one's Faith need not be placed in opposition to some factual errors in a literal sense, why in the world is the Universal Manifestation of God allowed to address people and times in accordance with the capacity of those individuals then, but his great-grandson, only a human being, however remarkable a human being, is accorded the higher status of being absolutely and literally infallible, out of the context of the limiting circumstances applied to Baha'u'llah?

And so, at the time of Shoghi Effendi, when there was no UHJ, the issuing of a directive that, on the basis of the literal words of Abdu'l Baha written to a woman in Chicago, women could be elected to all Baha'i consultative bodies then existing, was a beneficial use of his position to implement essential Baha'i principle, in the face of cultural baggage that viewed females as inferior beings.

To insist today on the literal interpretation of that specific passage to prevent women from serving at the highest level within Baha'i in opposition to essential Baha'i principles, as well as the most reasonable understanding of what the Master was really telling Corinne True, has quite clearly been proven a harmful use of power by the men now in charge, thus seen as more interested in their hold on power than on what Baha'u'llah meant to be a great influence for good.

The practise of demanding unswerving acceptance of all the literal writings of Shoghi Effendi is demonstrated to be contrary to the best interests of the Baha'i Faith, and subjects the religion of Baha'u'llah to a drastic re-interpretation. This re-interpretation is what the current members of the UHJ have been so strenuously seeking to impose.

May the clarity of this point be unmistakable, may the light shone on this matter help advance the hour of the remedy, and may the future of all peoples be more pleasant, worthy and harmonious than has been the past.

Thrive Ever,
Michael

>

Shoghi Effendi strongly urged both all future Guardians and all to become members of the Universal House of Justice:

> "Though the Guardian of the Faith has been made the permanent head of so > august a body he can never, even temporarily, assume the right of exclusive > legislation. He cannot override the decision of the majority of his > fellow-members, but is bound to insist upon a reconsideration by them of any > enactment he conscientiously believes to conflict with the meaning and to > depart from the spirit of Baha'u'llah's revealed utterances. He interprets > what has been specifically revealed, and cannot legislate except in his > capacity as member of the Universal House of Justice."

> (Shoghi Effendi: World Order of Baha'u'llah, Page: 150)

>

> "Neither can, nor will ever, infringe upon the sacred and prescribed domain > of the other. Neither will seek to curtail the specific and undoubted > authority with which both have been divinely invested."

> (Shoghi Effendi: World Order of Baha'u'llah, Page: 150)

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Michael McKenny <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: House warns of opposition "campaign"
Date: Wednesday, June 02, 1999 9:26 AM

Greetings, Paul.

I'm back, though I don't have the time to devote to as appropriate an analysis of this message as it calls for. I'll at least start:

>
> To all National Spiritual Assemblies
>
> As a number of the friends are aware,, a campaign of internal > opposition to the Teachings is currently being carried on through > the use of the Internet, a communications system that now reaches > virtually every part of the world. Differing from attacks > familiar in the past, it seeks to recast the entire Faith into a > socio-political ideology alien to Baha'u'llah's intent.

Uhm, now let's get this straight. The guys who are into mysticism, into living the life of the the Baha'i spiritual principles of independent investigation of truth, of the broad-minded acceptance of the divine origin of all religions and the awareness that there are many imperfectly valid understandings of spiritual truth, of inspired words, of divine teachings, into the transcending of childish and partisan prejudices against other groups whether religious, class, or any other, into the implementation of the spiritual instruction by Baha'u'llah that this is the day for the bird of humanity to fly with both male and female wings developed, those aware of, conscious of and seeking to fulfill Baha'u'llah's injunction to avoid unbalanced reliance either solely on the intuitive or only on the rational aspect of understanding, who have so eloquently posted to these e-mail lists their acceptance of Baha'u'llah's word that evil does not exist, that only there is the light radiated by the Sun of Truth and reflected from all the souls created in the image of the Lord -- these guys are waging a campaign of internal opposition against the Baha'i Teachings?

And the guys who are into erecting enormous superstructures of texts, extracted out of context, imposing their understanding of such texts on all, using such superstructures to justify the non-adherence to such fundamental Baha'i spirituality as outlined above, but promoting instead the perception that there are divisions of humanity into light and dark, hostile and friendly, male (alone capable of highest leadership) and female (incapable of highest leadership) rulers to be obeyed without question whatsoever they may rule and mature humans who are to obey anything at all they are asked to obey, politically active (those mystics, etc. in the above paragraph) and spiritually minded (including such rulers who conveniently wage deliberate campaigns to discredit those in the above paragraph popular enough to be perceived as possible successors of these rulers) -- just how would one designate these guys in a system seeking some distance from Orwellian vocabulary?

I think any unbiased observer would note that were there any effort to ignore the spirituality of the Baha'i Revelation and introduce into the religion socio-political focus, such effort is coming from those who are opposing the following of the fundamental, universal and broad-minded spiritual teachings of the religion, seeking to present the harvest of the Glory of God as an exclusive club under the domination of directors quite conscious of those (all females included) who "threaten" their continued hold on power and use their office to communicate to the world what will allow an antagonistic viewpoint to be promulgated, thereby reducing the influence of these potential successors, to say nothing of the heart of what was revealed by the Prophet.

I must be off again.

Feel free to post this to Talisman or any other place this debate is taking place.

May the light of truth be unmistakably unveiled to the eyes of all, may the peace-inducing, harmonizing and spiritually resonant influence of Baha'u'llah ever touch the hearts of all who have recognized him, may the entire human species continually rise higher above the abyss of the idea of us and them which has so stained the pages of its infantile history.

All the Best,
Michael

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: All Baha'is are Pseudo-Baha'is

Date: Monday, February 01, 1999 10:13 AM

Greetings, Susan.

One of the fundamental principles of the Baha'i Faith is the agreement of faith and reason, the harmony of the heart and the mind, the accord of intellect and belief.

To interpret the emphatic language in Baha'i scripture concerning the legitimacy of the Universal House of Justice and its right to the loyalty of the believers in a fundamentalist and literalist manner, as expressing the necessity of each individual to comply in silence with anything at all that may be decided is contrary to this principle of the harmony of faith and reason, along with any other principles said decision may violate.

The Constitution of Canada makes it quite clear that the federal parliament has legitimacy and is entitled to the full respect of the people. This is also true in other countries, where the details of authority are set out. However, this designation of power, along with the responsibility of the citizens to obey the laws of their governments, requires something of these governments, that such laws are according to reason and morality.

There is no distinction in the Baha'i Faith, except that in a religion, in an ethical and spiritual movement, the responsibility of the leadership, the legitimate leadership, to base its decisions of ethics, morality and spiritual principle is all the more important.

This word Covenant means contract. On the one hand individuals are to acknowledge and show loyalty to the legitimate leadership. On the other hand the legitimate leadership has the responsibility to provide that ethical, moral and spiritual guidance based on the fundamental principles of the faith, such guidance as alone is endowed with the spiritual energy essential for the well-being of the faith.

Michael McKenny ceaselessly acknowledged the legitimacy of the Universal House of Justice, and he constantly demonstrated his loyalty to the Universal House of Justice, in full accord with the fundamental principles of the Baha'i Faith, by drawing attention to the consequences of the departure of the leadership of the Baha'i Faith from fundamental Baha'i principle, by providing as clearly expressed as he could the reasoning (faith and reason agree) permitting the practise of principle, and by calling on the legitimate leaders of the Baha'i Faith to perform those actions that would most foster the esteem and authority of these leaders.

To define the Baha'i Faith and its Covenant (agreement concerning responsibilities of individuals and legitimate leaders in the Baha'i Faith) so that only the fundamentalist and the literalist minded, only those who place an extreme weight on faith and ignore reason may accept it, is to redefine the Baha'i Faith as a cult instead of a world religion, and, surely by abandoning the fundamental principles of what was intended to be the Baha'i World Faith, one has asserted leadership over an entity other than the Baha'i Faith, whatever said entity may be called.

Although, it might be fully understandable were I to say something else, still I say that I think the easiest and best way out of this mess is for the legitimate leaders of the Baha'i Faith to act in accordance with Baha'i principles.

May this find you very well, and may each of the days to come be better than the one it succeeds.

To the Future,
Michael

Smaneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

> Dear Steve,

>

> In both Michael and Darrick's case the issue was not interpretation of the > teachings but continuous opposition to the stated policies of the Universal > House of Justice. Such behaviour is clearly prohibited in the Will and > Testament by 'Abdul-Baha.

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: Scent of the Bahji Rose

Date: Tuesday, January 26, 1999 8:59 AM

Greetings, Ron, from Ottawa.

You wrote:

> What I would ask of you is that you > understand one quality of God: He has patience. He is content to allow > years, decades, or centuries to pass before the truth is revealed.

Oh, I don't think, in this case, we have to wait hundreds of years to know what the truth of the matter is. Oppressing people because of their opinions is quite an unprincipled thing to do. Censoring academic work that exposes the dearth of scriptural basis for discrimination is also some considerable distance from principle.

Oh yes, the period of waiting for truth to be exposed has come to an end. There no longer is such a stranglehold on information about the Baha'i Faith. Now, here, we can post the Service of Women Paper and let the whole world read that in Baha'i texts women are referred to as "rajul" rulers/men, that the so seemingly clear fundamentalist obstacle to practising equality of men and women, the oft quoted sentence that appears to "infallibly" exclude them for a thousand years referred to the general house of justice in Chicago. Everyone can read the opinion that where fundamentalist literalism conflicts with principle then it is principle which ought to be followed.

And everyone can watch and see the response by those whose task it is to guide as if they are the source of all good. And everyone can note any distinction in this guidance between good and something else, any difference in the way these good guides treat people and the way some other kinds of leaders have treated people, including those leaders in Iran who did not wish anyone to hear ideas other than their own.

Oh yes, the truth now shines as clearly as the sun at noon.

May the sun of truth shine brightly upon all the people of the Earth. May the human species be blessed with the light of understanding. May humanity bask in the radiance of tolerance, amity and fellowship.

All the Best,
Michael

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Path: rQdQ!remarQ73!supernews.com!remarQ.com!nuq-peer.news.verio.net!newshub.northeast.verio.net!news-out.cwix.com!newsfeed.cwix.com!130.185.14.36!torn!nott
From: bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA (Michael McKenny)
Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai
Subject: Re: Shoghi Effendi believed 1963 would be the calamity year
Date: 12 Jul 1999 16:07:42 GMT

Greetings, Geoff.

Could you kindly quote a snippet of what you're responding to for the sake of clarity. I assume you're replying to me, but don't know for sure.

I don't quite follow you. As far as I know, the line is in action, not freedom of expression. There are extremes (please let's not hear of shouts about fires) but in general, normally, usually, one ought to be allowed to search independently for truth, as the Baha'i principle is, and to report the findings.

It is generally, usually, normally, quite harmful to impose censorship. This is quite often done to the advantage of the dominating individuals and clique to the disadvantage of truth, the greater good and society as a whole as is borne out again in the example of recent Baha'i history.

As Baha'u'llah said anything carried to extremes (yes, including shouting fire unnecessarily) is the source of harm. Thus, the principle of obeying the legitimate authorities (the Covenant) carried to the extremes of letting a fundamentalist group of men to discriminate against women, to strive very hard to suppress information (including, amazingly the greater part of the writings of someone, Baha'u'llah, who died one hundred and seven years ago!) and to drive out of the religion those most outspoken in favour of its principles, thus, being a cause of the disunity of the influence of the very prophet of harmony, is likewise a clear source of harm.

I suspect what you're missing in much of your lengthy hypothetical dialog (with me?) is both the scientific and the ideal Baha'i attitude of open-mindedness, of being constantly receptive to the views of others, of indeed, accepting the validity of a variety of viewpoints. Abdu'l Baha said that to be a Baha'i was to be a lover of humanity, to see the light in whatever lamp it was shining, to realize that names are meaningless. One has freedom of thought and expression, as do all others, and not only one voice, nor one single spiritual path has validity.

I completely deny that any biological difference in gender renders the traditionally dominant sex inherently deserving of exclusive rule at the top. I am a pagan. I consider the monotheistic paradigm with its single male deity and its male priesthoods and its patriarchal societies an extreme, the extreme of unbalanced force. My experience is that this extreme has been harmful and that it is based on no evidence other than domination by force.

It is astonishing for me to read your words that there is no ground to the principle of the equality of male and female other than the words of the Baha'i prophet. I have seen the works of enough male leaders, including the Baha'i patriarchs, the UHJ members, and enough female ones to know that there are no legitimate grounds for patriarchal rule. And, within normal, instead of obscure extremist, parameters, there are no areas of human endeavour which ought to be completely reserved for only the gender previously dominant on account of the exercise of brute force.

It is more astonishing still that anyone can claim that s/he accepts the principle of the equality of male and female, but women may not rise to top position, this being reserved for men. Absolutely astounding.

One is free to think and to say whatever one thinks, and even to hold to and to express the opinion that the Faith says X, X being a literal reading, and one is also free to say that the Faith says non X because the literal reading is a gross violation of an essential principle such as the equality of women and men.

Where harm comes in is where the one saying the Faith teaches X (this literal violation of principle) must be believed by everyone else, that historical evidence may be suppressed, that scholarship in general and individuals in particular may be cast in a bad light, that believers may be harassed, called names, driven out of the religion, that only this one fundamentalist viewpoint may be applied as a definition for the religion which suffered so many martyrs at the hands of fundamentalists.

This is what has happened in recent Baha'i history, and, alas, the men who would continue to rule in violation of essential Baha'i principle have confirmed the correctness that anything (even the Covenant) carried to extremes is harmful.

May those who would have their actions determined by others be granted the insight to learn where to draw the line, and the magnanimity to show accepting kindness to others, and the spirituality to see with their own eyes the value and validity of the light shining in so very many lamps, not only their own.

May the great harmonizing beneficial principles of the Baha'i prophet, the independent investigation of truth, the validity of a variety of spiritual paths, the equality of women and men, etc ever grow in their influence on the souls of mortals, on the spirits on those who call themselves after Baha'u'llah, on the rulers of the religion still using his name.

May today find the human species thriving, may tomorrow treat it even more kindly and may each day after that be better than the one it succeeds.

All the Best,
Michael

"Geoff Churchill" (fedge@clear.net.nz) writes:

> Kia Ora Koutou,

>

> Firstly, I want to know why Freedom of Thought is so crucial (I'm waiting > for a massive response for this comment, and I intend to follow through with > my argument if you will just bare with me).

>

> In fact, by every piece of scientific logic, there is no evidence for me to > believe that men and women are equal.

>
> So why, contrary to all my scientific logic, do I believe in the essential > equality of men and women?
>
> Because I'm a fundamentalist. (I never thought that I would ever say those > words, but that is the only conclusion that I can draw).
>
> Now, having established that, if the Prophet of this Faith said something, > and I didn't understand it, I might not believe it for the sake of what it > was, but I would believe it due to my belief in its source.
>
> Much Love
> Geoff Churchill
>
>
--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
    (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: To UHJ July 24, 1998

Date: Friday, January 22, 1999 9:41 AM

Greetings, Ron.

You state that you strongly oppose any linkage between intolerance practised by Baha'is and intolerance practised by non-Baha'is.

First, although history provides us the results of the laboratory of human experience, I am reading this first widely available, uncontrolled source of Baha'i information in order to observe present Baha'i practise. May the gods provide us unfolding days, weeks, months, and seasons ever more tolerant and understanding. May those responsible in Iran to show the world what effect Muhammad has in their lives, may these living proofs of the influence of that Prophet demonstrate that it was indeed something worthwhile that Muhammad brought to the people of Arabia and to all taking the time to look into what Muhammad offers.

And, whatever has happened in the past, may those responsible to show the world what effect Baha'u'llah has in their lives, those living proofs of the influence of that Prophet demonstrate that it was indeed something worthwhile that Baha'u'llah brought to the people taking the time to look into his offering.

As to the idea of contrasting and comparing intolerance coming from Baha'is and intolerance coming from non-Baha'is, the distinction lies in the religion of the authors of intolerance.

All authors of intolerance are manifesting their insecurity, their lack of complete trust in the ability of their views to persist in the midst of other views, their reluctance to permit their own minds and hearts to continue to develop, grow and flourish -- the most natural process in the world. They are also showing that they wish to prevent other humans from a similar opportunity to develop, grow and flourish.

All authors of intolerance are testifying that they disagree with the means by which Baha'u'llah intended to harmonize humanity. He knew that the individuals of this species cannot be compelled to think the same thoughts, to see things the same way, to believe identical things.

Humans are not a collection of clones. So, with remarkable insight, Baha'u'llah said that anyone could think and say whatever he understood, only he could not force anyone else to accept these views. Each one has the same freedom to believe and to share his views. He added that it was only to be expected that the passage of time could well modify the views one presently has so how could one insist on his views. By encouraging freedom to think and to believe and to share thoughts and understandings Baha'u'llah sought to eliminate intolerance.

Now, let us focus more on demonstrating present Baha'i acceptance of Baha'u'llah's insight than any analysis, fascinating as such may be, of previous hesitancy to acknowledge and implement this insight of the Prophet.

May this find you very well, and may each of the days ahead of us be better than the one it succeeds.

All the Best,
Michael

Ron House (house@usq.edu.au) writes:

> Now Fred, you didn't even revise this one before posting it. As I have > said before, I strongly oppose any linkage of Baha'i intolerance with > the behaviour of the persecutors in Iran. There is simply no comparison.

> I presume, as I said in my other reply to you today, that you have some > legitimate beef behind your criticisms. You will get much further in > helping us understand your real complaint if you drop this red herring > completely.
>
> --
> Ron House            house@usq.edu.au
>
> You can only be right if you have the courage to be wrong.

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: To UHJ July 24, 1998

Date: Monday, January 25, 1999 1:03 PM

Greetings, Ron, from Ottawa.

You wrote:

>

> Normally I would agree, but here we have a case where people are > actually dying, being murdered, and saving their lives by concerted > action is the first priority.

I have not been following the news. Maybe you could provide the date of the most recent Baha'i murdered by fundamentalists in Iran.

All such opposition to freedom of thought and expression demonstrates the insecurity of those performing the opposition. Let it be conveyed very clearly that the influence of Muhammad to produce a society worthy of being inhabited can be called into question as a consequence of the extent to which humans are decently treated by those claiming to be following the Prophet.

Let there be no mistake. The Baha'i Faith originated in Iran. It was born in Shi'ite Islam. It was engendered from the identical location both geographically and metaphorically which has provided us with the spectacle of current intolerance on the part of some Iranian authorities.

Literalist sensitivities as to the understanding of terms such as "Seal of the Prophets" correspond very closely with sensitivities by Baha'i leaders with terms such as "the men of Baha" and both sets of fundamentalists seem equally displeased that there are explanations and perceptions of such terms which others find convincing.

The only difference I have noticed in previous authoritative action is that one set of fundamentalist leaders possessed the capacity of the modern state to further its intent to silence such explanations and the other set of fundamentalist leaders, lacking this capacity, utilized the means available seeking to keep the Baha'i world ignorant of such explanations and perceptions through censorship, interrogation and harassment. Why in the world would anyone aware of the results of the laboratory of human experience expect that Baha'i authorities, more concerned with literalist understandings about silent compliance with any command soever than with acting in accord with the principles of their own religion, would distinguish themselves in any way from the fundamentalists in Iran had they but the capacity to do so?

Yes, indeed, there are lives at stake, maybe quite a lot of them. Shoghi Effendi stated that in the fullness of time the Baha'i World Order will have replaced current religious and political structures and this Universal House of Justice insisting on silent compliance with any unprincipled command soever is understood by Baha'i fundamentalists as being expected to rule the entire planet. History has shown that right or wrong such an expectation is not impossible. Monotheistic Islam and monotheistic Christianity both triumphed and thrust up such intolerance as spirituality had never before produced, though thankfully such atrocities were limited in time and geographic extent. Why, then, is it impossible for this to occur again?

This is one reason to get your act together, to proceed now along the road of freedom of thought and expression, to cease discriminating against women, to cease insisting that only a fundamentalist and literalist reading of scripture on the issue of authority may be tolerated. Prove to the whole world that you are different from what happened in the past, that if it were to occur that you assume some significant role in the future this would be beneficial.

And may Deity loving humans touch the minds and the hearts of all leader, so that tolerance and understanding be gifts unrestricted.

Thrive Ever,
Michael

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@freenet.carleton.ca>
To: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re So-called totalitarianism
Date: Monday, February 16, 1998 9:56 AM

Greetings, Ian, from Ottawa.

If you are well, it is well.

Many thanks for your post on the UHJ and ad hominem.

Those expressing articulately views not pleasing to the UHJ, including the fact that the fundamental Baha'i principles ought to be more widely exercised by the Universal House of Justice, such things as independent investigation of truth, harmony of science and religion and "The equality of men and women and their equal sharing in ALL rights" (emphasis added) etc. have been invited for conversations with Baha'i authorities who have discussed the personal beliefs of these individuals. In some cases they have been invited to remain quiet on e-mail lists about such personal thoughts in order that they may continue to interact with their Baha'i friends and associates. Some have been encouraged to leave the Baha'i faith, and I was, without notice, dropped from the rolls when I neither stopped expressing my views on e-mail lists, nor voluntarily resigned.

The Universal House of Justice has yet to implement the predicted freedom of all believers to publish material on the Baha'i Faith.

There are other terms for such actions and other means by which I could have expressed the contents of this post, more in keeping with the quite similar behaviour when coming from such regimes as those you named.

Those items on your list which necessitate a greater practical control by the Universal House of Justice than it currently possesses are of course, as yet, not part of the activities of this body. The main point in suggesting the necessity for the Universal House of Justice to follow the fundamental Baha'i principles and allow women to be eligible for membership, all the quite varied views to exist and to be stated, etc. is that if something as essential as these basic principles can be set aside and such activities as have already transpired occur in the absence of any capacity to do the things you itemize which authoritarian powers being able to do did do, then were it to happen that the Universal House of Justice found itself with the ability to accomplish these additional things, why in the world ought anyone to expect history would not be repeated.

By the way, possibly you'll reply to that unanswered question as to what are those principles which the UHJ uses instead of the defining fundamental principles of the Baha'i Faith? That is what principles are they using which supersede the independent investigation of truth, the harmony of science and religion, "The equality of men and women and their equal sharing in ALL rights." (emphasis added)

May this find you very well, and may the future be better than our brightest dreams.

All the Best,
Michael

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Michael McKenny <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: UHJ Fundamentalist Fantasy (Reply to Susan and all)
Date: Monday, August 16, 1999 2:41 PM

Greetings, Hooper.

You are addressed as we don't forget your great interest in cyberspace, as your vacation message indicated, and as these are your words quoted below.

You are speaking in Orwellian. Freedom of thought means freedom of expression. To say that one may think what one likes, so long as one keeps one's mouth shut, by defining speech as action, and going after those who dare to utter their thoughts aloud, the UHJ is violating essential Baha'i principle of freedom of speech and expression.

It ought to be noted again that the Orwellian phrase "Actions inimical to the basic principles" means saying out loud that the basic principles of freedom of thought and expression, the equality of women and men, the harmony of science and religion, the independent investigation of truth, the harmony of humanity ought to be practised rather than merely mouthed in the Baha'i Faith.

It could be asserted on the basis of experience that "The vital interests of the Faith" may better be rendered "The preservation of the hold fundamentalist males, including Hooper, have on this religion, the continuation of their memberships for life, whatever harm they do to the spiritual influence released by Baha'u'llah."

To a Better Future,
Michael

>
> "the institutions do not busy themselves with what individual believers think > unless those thoughts become expressed in actions which are inimical to the > basic principles and vital interests of the Faith."
>

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Michael McKenny <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: Wisdom of Reviewing Before Publication
Date: Monday, July 26, 1999 11:41 AM

Greetings, Hooper.

Yum. I continue to believe that nothing can so effectively convince people of the nature and extent of the problem within the Baha'i community as the writings of the Universal House of Justice. Whatever anyone else says either in defence or in outrage can be considered to be straying from balanced objectivity. However, the perfectly infallible words themselves make it quite clear what's really going on.

Oh, had I but the time to provide the level of analysis this calls out for. However, here's a start.

The Universal House of Justice states that there is censorship in the Baha'i Faith, and they have no intent of ceasing that any time soon. It ought to be noted that this newsgroup is an exception. I feel the negative publicity of having a massive NO vote on the first of three rounds on news groups may have contributed to that change of policy. I feel that publicity is very good, and that open scrutiny of what's going on in Baha'i can do no harm at all when it comes to reining in the excesses of people such as the members of the UHJ who have acted as if they could demand everyone do what ever in the world the UHJ said, regardless of ethics, morality and principle.

I will quote parts of these infallible words and respond to them below.

> M E M O R A N D U M

>

> Date: 8 September 1991

> From: The Department of the Secretariat

> ...

> The Universal House of Justice has asked that we reply to > your memorandum as follows.

> ....

> Concerning the second question from Dr. .... which > relates to literature review, specifically whether the > Universal House of Justice might be considering changes in > policy in relation to the review process, kindly convey to > him that no change is being considered at the present time.

>

We will continue censorship. More below.

>

> At this early stage in the development of the Baha'i > Faith, which is striving against great odds to establish > itself in a world that is highly critical, often > antagonistic towards new ideas,

Uhm, what new ideas is the world highly critical of? Do you mean the great principles of an unfettered search for truth, open-mindedness, human harmony, the agreement of true science and true spirituality, the equality of women and men, universal education, the economic well-being of all the citizens of the planet, the abolition of prejudices? Do you really think you have to have a monopoly on what is printed about the Baha'i religion because of great popular antagonism to such "new" ideas?

Or, maybe you mean that it's the censorship in the Baha'i Faith, the meetings of Counsellors with liberal arts university professors to determine the theological purity of the opinions of such professors, the rendering of threats of silence or being proclaimed a heretic to be shunned as a spiritual leper, maybe this is what you'd like to ensure is not brought out in the open, along with, of course, the fact that only men can get to the top in the Baha'i Faith.

But, gosh, what, then, is new here? This is pretty stale stuff. It's been the staple meal of quite a few totalitarian systems down the ages, many a cult, alas, many periods in religious history, and, uhm, you know, the prophet of the Baha'i Faith came to do away with this anachronistic way of patriarchal imposition of acceptable views. Or, is his intent something you'd like to censor, too?

So, no, openness is not likely to find the kind of great criticism of the new ideas of Baha'i, though, as any old boys club, you may find that you've less license to have things your own way. More below.

- > and whose communications
- > media tend to emphasize negative information,

Well, then, why don't you de-emphasize the negative, stop the meetings between your Counsellors, etc. and professors, etc. concerning the expression of and the orthodoxy of opinions, stop the exclusive preserve of your seats for males and focus on putting into practise, instead of excommunicating those who utter them, the essential Baha'i principles, which are, or, at least were a century ago, the "new" ideas, and, far from being highly criticized by those other than yourself, are now considered the sign of a decent society? More below.

- > it is
- > important that Baha'i authors, scriptwriters and filmmakers
- > endeavour to present the Faith with accuracy and dignity.

I am sure this statement is not unfamiliar to those reading in such places as the X-USSR. More below.

- > It
- > is one thing for a non-Baha'is to make erroneous statements
- > about the Faith; this can be excused on the basis of
- > ignorance. But for a Baha'i to make such errors is quite a - > different thing, because he is considered to be
- > knowledgeable about that which he espouses.

And, kindly illuminate the errors herein: The Baha'i Faith was intended to provide the harmony of the human species, by means of the recognition of an over-arching harmony of the prophetic missions of the past and of the religions they generated, of the acceptance of the divinely created diversity of human beings and the validity of the imperfect understandings of the varied individuals of the species, of the acknowledgement of the importance of unfettered and independent investigation of truth and of other fundamental principles, including the elimination of all forms of prejudice, including past practises of male supremacy. Why, pray tell, are you hounding people for the posting of such to cyberspace? More below.

- >
- > Therefore, a Baha'i author is expected to ensure to
- > the extent possible a correct representation of the Faith in
- > his work; as an aid he draws upon the reviewing facilities
- > provided by Baha'i institutions. A great many authors
- > spontaneously and informally submit their manuscripts to a
- > type of review, although they would not necessarily call it
- > that, when they request the comments and criticisms of
- > persons whose expertise and judgement they respect.

Though, in literary works, the opinions of my fellow writers may or may not influence the final product. In censorship, the "reviewer" may insist on what is in or out of a final product. The Baha'i system is censorship. More below.

- > Submission to Baha'i review is no greater a requirement, and
- > may well be less demanding in most cases, than the rigorous
- > review of scientific papers before their publication.

Hogwash. The Service of Women paper was not denied publication because of any deficiency in historical, scholarly or academic standards, but only because it exposed the true facts of a great violation of Baha'i principle by the Universal House of Justice, which continues to discriminate against women. You did not wish to ensure that academic standards are met. You wished to ensure they continue not to be met. More below.

....

>
> The Baha'i Faith makes very serious claims and has a > rich and complex history, but it is as yet a young religion > whose precepts are not widely understood.

Again, the essential Baha'i principles are widely understood, and considered the essence of civilized society as we head into the 21st Century. Also, quite well understood are such practises as patriarchal rule, totalitarianism and the insistence by religious elites that the masses render them unthinking obedience. It is not the uttering of the essential Baha'i principles by Juan Cole, Michael McKenny or anyone else that is getting you any bad publicity. It is the extent to which by your actions you prove you have little to do with what Michael McKenny (after all, you yourself disassociated yourself from him) says and a lot to do with patriarchal rule, totalitarianism and the insistence by religious elites that the masses render them unthinking obedience.

This already took too much time. Maybe more later, but you guys would be better off, were you really concerned with getting good press, with letting Juan, Michael et al. describe what is the Baha'i Faith, and do and say nothing yourselves, well, at least until you're ready to say and do what matches what is now considered the civilized way of getting along, rather than what is taught in history classes about the oppressive way people lived in the Middle Ages.

May today treat humanity very well, may tomorrow be even kinder to the human species, and may each day after that be better than the one it succeeds.

All the Best,
Michael

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Michael McKenny <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: UHJ Fundamentalist Fantasy (Reply to Susan and all)
Date: Sunday, August 15, 1999 9:33 AM

Greetings, Susan and all.

Actually, the comment below is of a class that is highly significant, if not central to an understanding of the ditch into which the Baha'i Faith has been driven.

The UHJ is here seeking to portray itself as lacking responsibility for what has happened. It is actually a normal custom of a beaurocrat to place responsibility for her/his own failure on anyone other than the one really responsible, i.e. herself/himself.

Here, the UHJ has the duty to guide the influence of Baha'u'llah, the movement associated with his name, indeed, all of humanity to harmony on a global scale. It has the responsibility to decide all issues of a divisive or of a confusing nature. It has a responsibility to guide according to the essential principles revealed by Baha'u'llah, expressly stated to be essential for the realization of the only reason for there being a Baha'i Faith, the attainment of human harmony.

Instead of doing this, the UHJ has devoted the attention and the resources of this religion into the erection of a canonical text and an authoritative interpretation of some words of Shoghi Effendi, Abdu'l Baha and Baha'u'llah in that descending order of priority. In other words the words of Shoghi Effendi, as literally understood, take precedence over the words of Abdu'l Baha' whose words take precedence over those of the Universal Manifestation of God.

The appointed members of "The Institution of the Learned" are sent around to ascertain the doctrinal purity of thoughts of the members of the Baha'i religion, notwithstanding the teaching that the harmony of humanity requires the independent investigation of truth, the harmony of science and religion, the non-interference with the thoughts and beliefs of any person, the freedom of expression, and tolerance of the views of others within, as well as without, the Baha'i Faith.

Now, this methodology adopted by the UHJ is not new. It has long been the natural encrustation of the spirit of a Manifestation after this being has departed this world and his religion has come into the hands of those lacking his vision, but of a mindset focusing on the letter of the word, instead of spirituality. This is why such individuals and clerical orders have been addressed so harshly by each Manifestation of God, as, for example, Moses harshly spoke to the priests of Egypt, Jesus to the priests who took control of the religion of Moses, Muhammad to those in charge of previous religions, and so on with the Bab and Baha'u'llah.

It is this methodology of seeking to impose one single interpretation, indeed, one single method of interpretation, the literal, upon what may be termed spiritual influence, the water of life, the light, only because it is a rising above, a cleansing of and a dispelling of the darkness of this dead, dirty, dark, literalist fundamentalism.

Let there be no Orwellian obfuscation. The UHJ, if it insists on a single, literal, monolithic "interpretation" of the words of Shoghi Effendi and Abdu'l Baha and then, at the lowest level of priority, the writings of the Word of God for this age, is solely responsible for the fantasy that it is seeking to perpetrate upon its own followers and the rest of the world.

There is no impediment at all to it guiding humanity, according to the essential, necessary and harmonizing principles enunciated by Baha'u'llah. That its hands are chained up by the infallible (has this word not already been explained as meaning "morally upright" and NOT inerrant?) letter of the words of Shoghi Effendi, and the leading according to the spirit of the text, according to the example of the Guardian and the Perfect Exemplar an impossibility, is a UHJ fundamentalist fantasy.

May it be this fundamentalist fantasy, rather than the Faith, which is ditched.

May the fundamentalists in the religion, all of them, from UHJ members on down, rapidly acquire that breadth of open-mindedness, tolerance, empathy and understanding it was the intent of the Central figures of this religion to seed, nurture and harvest.

May today find the human species faring very well, may tomorrow treat humanity even more kindly and may each day after that be better than the one it succeeds.

To the Future,
Michael

Smaneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

> If it is a fundamentalist fantasy it is Corinne True's and Shoghi Effendi's, > not the Universal House of Justice's.
>
> Susan Stiles Maneck

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: Censorship

Date: Monday, February 01, 1999 3:07 PM

Greetings, Rick.

You write:

>

> That's an interesting form of "censorship". At what point did the Universal > House of Justice state that you could not publish the views you held? At > what point did the Universal House of Justice instruct members of the Baha'i > community to refrain from reading whatever you write?

The Universal House of Justice insisted that one may not state that the Baha'i Faith should follow Baha'i principle. One of the non-Baha'i leaders of thought here, one who had received a copy of the peace message and attended followup "peace talks" at my place, only to drop Baha'i like a hot potato, on learning Baha'is do not practise Baha'i principle, on reading the material connected with the McKenny case said, "What are they afraid of?"

My assessment is that what was happening was that Michael McKenny was providing convincing reasoning that the obvious decline of the Baha'i Faith (one of the more fascinating facts posted to Baha'i e-mail lists was the number of local spiritual assemblies in the US in 1983, this being significantly higher than that more than a decade later, this, in spite of a concentrated campaign of "entry by troops") involved the definition of the Baha'i Faith from the top in fundamentalist terms contrary to the essential principles of the Baha'i Faith, and that he was demonstrating how Baha'i principle could be followed, that it simply was not true that we were necessarily stuck with a fundamentalist definition of the Baha'i Faith, that in fact all that was required was for the legitimate leaders of the Baha'i Faith to act in accordance with the principles of the religion.

When Michael McKenny refused to fall silent, the members of the Universal House of Justice wished to implement a method of reasoning (ad hominem) contrary to both the principles of elementary logic and of Baha'i consultation by defining the one uttering such reasoning as a non-Baha'i. In reality reasoning is valid on its own basis, and all issues of personality, such as the inclusion or exclusion of the one presenting the reasoning in the Baha'i community, are irrelevant.

Another interpretation of the exclusion of Michael McKenny, especially since this was done without any command to fall silent, any reminder that he had said he would fall silent, if indeed he did, was that he was meant to serve as a warning, and that, as a consequence of such an action, no one else would seek to express similar views, for fear of being dropped from the Baha'i roles, without warning.

May things go better in the days to come.

michael

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: What is a Cult? and McKenny case

Date: Saturday, January 30, 1999 12:17 PM

Greetings, Rick.

Many thanks for your comments.

You wrote:

>

> Dr. Cole, here, interprets this to mean that any religious organization must > be forced to admit to their membership anyone who wishes to claim that they > are members. This is a rather novel interpretation.

>

A couple of things need to be stated, here.

Michael McKenny had the belief that Baha'u'llah had come to provide a framework for the harmony of the human species. He was 21 years old when he encountered the Baha'i Faith, firmly convinced that the Cold War was going to become hot, and that he would die young, along with a great many others. He was a student activist, despite this negative assessment, the head World Federalist Youth in Canada. He was overwhelmed by the spirit he saw in the Baha'i Revelation and in the potential for this Revelation to serve as a means whereby humanity could escape the horrors of nuclear war, or, as most Baha'is believed at the time, emerge from the ashes of such a war and establish a glorious civilization.

For many years Michael McKenny had been meeting pagans, and often told them that were it not that he had first encountered the Baha'i Faith he would be a pagan. This is a bit inexact, in the sense that most pagans will tell you that paganism is not something you become, not something into which one is baptized or signs a card. What occurs is that people discover there is a word to describe what they have believed, what they have been, all along.

Then, as recounted elsewhere in some detail, Michael McKenny came onto the Talisman e-mail list seeking provisional translations of unpublished works by Baha'u'llah, only to run into a degree of Baha'i fundamentalism, of whose existence he had been totally ignorant. This led step by step to his meeting with Susie Tamas and her invitation that since he said he had no trouble with the Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Ottawa or the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Canada, but only with the Universal House of Justice, then he should write to the Universal House of Justice.

The concerns that led him to write to the Universal House of Justice, the extent to which these concerns were not addressed in the reply, and the numerous invitations Michael McKenny received to resign from the Baha'i Faith, did not cause him to cast aside the religion.

It has happened in the past that the spirit of a religion became something less than perfect at the top. The Baha'i Faith has the ability, the capacity, the potential to become what Michael McKenny imagined it would when he first encountered it. This is not facilitated by all the liberals resigning from the religion, because they are invited to do so by fundamentalists. This would be rather like all the democrats in the United States renouncing their US citizenship because they were being given a hard time by republicans. This is quite convenient for the republicans, it will make elections easier to win. However, it is not in the best interests of the United States.

Now, if the Baha'i Faith is a political party, or if it is any kind of limited outfit, such as a cult, then it is understandable if it is run so that only one segment, only the fundamentalists, only those humans who are able to believe in the priority being blind obedience of any command soever, even when this involves, censorship, interrogation and hounding of liberals out of the faith, and principles can be thrown in the garbage.

The Universal House of Justice never issued me a command saying, this is our last warning. Shut up or else. I certainly knew that they wanted me to shut up. If Susie Tamas says I promised to shut up after a reply came to my letter, i will not contradict her. i believe she is completely honest. After I came home from a meeting several hours long, I tried to write some notes so my memory could be prodded. I was not intentionally dishonest, and I was quite taken aback at the extent to which the reply did not respond to the letter I had sent.

I do not consider it is advantageous to the Baha'i Faith, or, were the Baha'i Faith so narrowly interpreted to become dominant in the world, gods forbid, for this insistence on silent obedience to the lack of principle. It is not likely that I would have obeyed even a command which said that I had to shut up or else. Freedom of speech is a basic principle and, certainly speaking about such basic principles as the equality of women and men is something that no one at all has the right to silence.

So, when without such a final warning, the Universal House of Justice, through the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Canada, informed me that they no longer considered me as within the Baha'i community, I accepted they had the power to do that, and, really, if the Baha'i Faith is an entity that actually discriminates against women, that really will prefer censoring information, analysis and opinion which promotes the principles of the religion, that truly uses its constitutional capacity concerning membership to exclude a rather eloquent liberal, then, yes, they are very right, and I am not a part of such an outfit.

And, so, I said in public, that I am a pagan. If really, the Baha'i Faith, the cutting edge of monotheis, in theory, now, in practise, has become a cause of conflict, contention and division, if it replicates the worst features of patriarchal structures from the past, then, the views of our pre-monotheistic ancestors are given greater weight and I am delighted to actively participate in the pagan community where i live.

And, still being a believer in the essential nature of freedom of speech, I will continue to post here, as busy as I may be, so that the Universal House of Justice may not imagine that by such means they may hide from convincing views, unpalatable as they may find them, though, really, I only post what I feel is in the best interests of the Baha'i Faith, and of humanity as a whole.

This has been typed live, off the top of my head, yet, I think it is quite adequate. I hope no one else need ever type such a thing.

To the Future,
Michael

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Redefining the Baha'i Faith

Date: Sunday, January 24, 1999 7:25 AM

Greetings, Susan, from Ottawa.

You wrote:

>

> It means people were using their authority as scholars to try and remake the > Faith in their own image.

Let's be more specific. Let's list some of these views which Susan calls a redefining of the Baha'i Faith, some of these beliefs considered so threatening to those in authority, some of these ideas deemed in the past so worthy of censorship, harrassment and exclusion from the Baha'i Faith.

Such views include that the Baha'i Faith be run according to the fundamental principles of the Baha'i Faith, that discrimination cease in the Baha'i Faith, that, as the prophet said there is no evil, then there are no enemies, that there is room in the Baha'i Faith for those who agree with the prophet that where the findings of modern science conflict with the literal text of scripture, then science may be correct, that the Baha'i "world" religion is big enough to include people of a Sufi-like temperament, people who perceive deity with a feminine aspect, people who understand that when a woman asked the son of the prophet before World War One why only men were running Baha'i affairs in Chicago, the answer was not tolerate a Baha'i world patriarchate to be established in 1963.

These are some of the so shocking opinions, some of the so heretical views (in a movement whose founder so insightfully said there are no heretical views) that academic work was censored, that scholars were interrogated, that some of the most broad minded members of the religion were hounded out of it.

Now in an uncontrolled forum everyone will have the opportunity to see these views, to observe what the reaction to them is now, to witness just how the Baha'i Faith really is defined.

May this find you very well, and may each day ahead of us be better than the one it succeeds.

All the Best,
Michael

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Testamonials From Infallible Sources
Date: Thursday, January 28, 1999 9:40 AM

Greetings, Frederick, from Ottawa.

Many thanks for your public statement concerning the way I was treated by the Universal House of Justice.

Actually, what they did was to provide a testimonial to the efficacy and the irrefutability of the views I was presenting on Baha'i e-mail lists. Now, when I post to this broader forum, I do so having received such a testimonial from an "infallible" source.

However, really, ideas stand on their own both according to the principles of basic logic and the Baha'i principles of consultation. All issues of personality, including the possession of such a testimonial, are irrelevant.

Let me be very clear. One interpretation of reality is that one individual sitting at a keyboard in snowy Ottawa was so shaking the authority of the infallible Universal House of Justice that extra-ordinary action was required.

So, what was accomplished by issuing such a testimonial? The chasm between Baha'i principles and Baha'i action was further exposed. If views are freely expressed, whatever those views are, then the Baha'i principle of freedom of thought and expression is shown to be more than a thing of words alone. If you take extra-ordinary measures intending to silence free expression, this exceptional behaviour is what shakes your actual authority.

Do you imagine actual authority, real beneficial influence, has any connection with insisting that everyone must silently comply with any command soever? Would you really wish to bequeath to your descendants a world where leaders were above putting principles into practise, a civilization where rulers took exceptional measures to enforce silent compliance with unprincipled commands?

You lead a religion endowed by its founders with the capacity to raise up individuals who will witness to the truth that fundamentalism is too narrow a mindset, that exclusion and division in religion, as in all aspects of humanity, are to evolve into ever increasing harmony. This is one of the strands of Baha'i history wherever the religion has met those seeking to maintain a stranglehold on human thought, wherever it has encountered forces opposed to the harmonizing principles of the Baha'i Faith. From the earliest days of the Baha'i Era the extent of this capacity to raise up such witnesses has gained international attention.

Why would you wish to draw international attention to the extent to which such witnessing was required in your presence, the extent to which you were seeking to maintain such a stranglehold over human thought, the extent to which you were causing fundamentalist exclusion and division in religion?

May the ever-growing Tree of Life speedily produce these initial blossoms intended by the Baha'i prophet.

May the most basic, the most essential, the most vital manifestation in the Baha'i Faith of the fundamental principle of the equality of women and men come into real existence through the recognition that there is no impediment to the election of women to the Universal House of Justice.

May the complete freedom of all Baha'is to express themselves on this, as on all topics, be acknowledged, in deed.

May all the beneficial principles of the Baha'i Faith be ever more widely evidenced, especially from those who are called upon to guide as if they are the Source of all Good.

Thusly, may their actual authority, their real beneficial influence, their true leadership ever shine more brightly.

To the Future,
Michael

>
> Thank you, Michael. I respect the integrity of your conscience > and believe still you were Wronged by the Universal House of > Justice when they shamelessly threw you out of the Bahai Faith.
> I'm ashamed of them. I'm ashamed to belong to such an > intolerant religion.
>

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@freenet.carleton.ca>
To: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Cc: smaneck@berry.edu <smaneck@berry.edu>; jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re Shunning Stories
Date: Sunday, February 08, 1998 9:32 AM

Greetings, Susan, from Ottawa.

If you are well, it is well.

It is not my intent to appear insensitive to your point of view.
And I would like to share the following facet of the gem of reality.
You wrote:

>I don't much like the practice myself, but I am not going to lash out >at the House of Justice or the Counselors for it. Clearly, if >anyone's to blame it would have to be 'Abdul-Baha. But those who are >calling this practice "cultish" don't want to blame Him.

>As Gleanings says "Lay not aside the Fear of God, O ye learned of the >World, and judge fairly. . ."

I reply:

The conditions of the world have changed since the days of Abdu'l Baha. The "blame" that is to be laid is at the feet of those presently in charge who are seeking to freeze the Baha'i Faith in a past mould.

I would like to share the following from Abdu'l Baha:

"Kindness cannot be shown the tyrant, the deceiver, or the thief, because, far from awakening them to the errors of their ways, it maketh them to continue in their perversity as before." (SELECTIONS p. 158)

The tools of the tyrant are the repressive practices of censorship, investigation of the thoughts of others (one is encouraged to be a deceiver and conceal one's thoughts; openly expressing examples of the divinely created diversity of humanity draws forth a tyrannical response; by the gods, had only Juan been deceitful and cunning enough to shield his thoughts, mouth the accepted cant and bide his time and he, with his fame and ability, could have worn the red cardinal's hat himself or even made it to the very top of the mountain) intimidation and threats, sanctions and shunning.

By the Master's own words the tyrants in Haifa will not benefit from compassionate treatment. Personally, I am unconvinced. My reading of Baha'i cultish thought is that disagreement with the Universal House of Justice is expected and that whatever form it takes it but proves the validity of the religion for the cult members.

Nevertheless, Abdu'l Baha wrote what he did. He also wrote a lot about the growth of the religion and the society at large. At a time when communications with a few scattered believers was poor, maybe there was some validity to seek to ensure only approved material was published and that the believers were protected from the deceitful.

However, now there has been such enormous change that it is tyrannical and cultish to maintain such practices.

I'll share something else from the Master:

"Yet another teaching of Baha'u'llah is the equality of men and women and their equal sharing in ALL rights. And there are many similar principles. It hath now become evident that these teachings are the very life and soul of the world." SELECTIONS p. 249, emphasis added.

It is the fundamental Baha'i principles which are essential. Only after this is recognized at the highest levels, only when tyrannical practices, including the exclusion of women from the Universal House of Justice, are stopped does this institution have any right to kindness, according to Abdu'l Baha.

May this find you very well, and may the future surprise us all in every pleasant and beneficial way.

All the Best,
Michael

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@freenet.carleton.ca>
To: smaneck@berry.edu <smaneck@berry.edu>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re Attacks
Date: Wednesday, February 11, 1998 3:57 PM

Greetings, Susan.

If you are well, it is well.

As to unique meaning of attack, in general, i find baha'i authority expects obedience of anything and everything even asking one to suspend conscience and principle, and defines the hesitation to do so as attack.

Constructive criticism as I understand it (Being quite a fallible individual, I welcome being handed dictionary and increased understanding) is what leads to improvement of situation.

Look at all i ever posted to so displease the UHJ. What was my intent. It was that the UHJ itself achieve increased esteem. However misguided I have been there is no question of such comments, in my mind being an attack.

Another point, recently I heard the point that if a woman has been abused, then she is prone to anger and shouting or whatever back, but her anger and shouts may this properly be termed abuse? it was a response. very interesting point when the tuning forks and the reverberations start going. So, both UHJ expecting obedience of anything at all and those expecting principle feel abused and un listened to. Well, solution is not for those seeking justice to to obey anything at all, to just take abuse indefinitely, and can you find a way out of this dilemma, then it will be truly a meritorious deed.

Be Ever Well,
Michael

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@freenet.carleton.ca>
To: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Cc: irfan@umich.edu <irfan@umich.edu>
Subject: Re Anonymous Remailers
Date: Monday, December 08, 1997 3:01 PM

Greetings from Ottawa, Canada.

If you are well, it is well.

Please forgive the lethargic pace of the season and my other preoccupations which have so reduced my participation in this discussion. I am posting this elsewhere I feel relevant, and invite others to send it to appropriate places I fail to reach.

Since I am one of the four individuals named in article #327619 posted Thursday December 4th to news.groups as having faced consequences from Baha'i authorities for freely expressing my views in Baha'i cyberspace, some comment may be called for. Also, since continued investigation of Baha'is by Baha'i authorities for views posted to e-mail lists has prompted the thread on the need for anonymous remailers, it becomes more understandable that some (such as many who voted YES last time) who would be expected to be very interested in this discussion on the formation of a new unmoderated Baha'i newsgroup (Talk.Religion.Bahai) could be reluctant to speak.

It is a fact that among the various Baha'i e-mail lists is the one referred to, with membership conditional on agreement not to forward posted views to Baha'i authorities and it is true that this condition was broken. It is a fact that the Universal House of Justice giving some information, two months after the announcement without warning that I could no longer be considered a member of the Baha'i community, said that I seemed not to understand what a Prophet was and that following that statement Baha'is discussed this in relation to the comment I'd made on this restricted list apparently providing grounds for such a statement, namely my remark that even were it true that among the mass of untranslated Baha'i Scripture existed a passage from the earlier Baha'i Prophet literally stating, "Leave not a single unbeliever alive in the Central Provinces of Iran," understanding such words would depend on already acknowledged spiritual principles from previous Prophets such as Moses and Buddha, who prohibited murder.

The fundamentalist view is that unquestioned obedience of Baha'i authority takes precedence over everything else, including one's conscience, as a recent post to Soc.Religion.Bahai by a person assessed as not qualifying for Baha'i membership confirms. It is very fortunate that one of the first things the most recent Baha'i Prophet said was that warfare was prohibited. However, given the capacity of "infallible" Baha'i authority to assert that "Exempting" women from service on the Universal House of Justice is equality of the sexes, I have been unable to re-assure the Interstellar Federation that a Baha'i interpretation of such a prohibition on warfare would guarantee peaceful contact with the human species. :)

Of course, in matters of religion, especially of fundamentalist monotheism, we are dealing with highly charged emotion, with issues of faith. Notwithstanding such Baha'i principles as the unfettered search for truth, of the freedom of conscience and of the harmony of science and religion, the existence of alternative views is very difficult for many literalist Baha'is to accept and the free flow of data inherent in the Internet does not correspond with previous Baha'i practice. The recent letter from the Universal House of Justice stating that Baha'is may freely express their views in cyberspace, although in full accord with basic Baha'i principle, represents an evolution beyond what was described at the beginning of this 20th Century as the "Temporary" requirement for "Review" of all material on the Baha'i Faith written by Baha'is.

Also, in light of the consequences of articulate expression of liberal views to e-mail lists, a belief that pre-publication "Review" has simply been replaced with post-publication "Review", is the most prevalent view I have encountered from those who would seem most likely to favour the creation of Talk.Religion.Bahai.

Probably the most sensitive datum of information awaiting Baha'is is that the all-male Universal House of Justice censored the academic paper written by leading Baha'i scholars in the late 80s which showed that the reservation of seats on the Universal House of Justice exclusively for men was based on the mistranslation and inadequate understanding of Scripture. My view expressed openly to the Universal Universal House of Justice that where literalism appeared to provide an excuse for the suspension of basic Baha'i principles (one of which is the equality of the sexes) it would be more seemly for principle to prevail appears to have assisted the assessment by the Universal House of Justice that I may not be considered a member of the Baha'i community.

Personally, this assessment by the authorities of what had seemed the cutting edge of all-embracing tolerant monotheism provided the occasion for me openly to identify myself with paganism. After all, if even the cutting edge of tolerant monotheism is pushing a fundamentalist agenda and seeking to silence liberal voices, then monotheism may be dismissed entirely.

However, liberal Baha'is who have not had their names removed without warning from the membership rolls, are encouraged by me to remain within the Faith whatever unpleasant truths may come to light in the free flow of information possible in cyberspace. In theory, the Baha'i Faith is a very open and tolerant path. And why would one who is open-minded want this path surrendered totally to those seeking to transform it into one more fundamentalist church, something, IMHO, the human race has as much need for as its sun going nova.

I hope this made some sense.

May the future exceed our highest hopes.

Peace,
Michael

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@freenet.carleton.ca>
To: smaneck@berry.edu <smaneck@berry.edu>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: More on Trying Constructively
Date: Thursday, February 12, 1998 6:50 PM

Greetings, Susan, from Ottawa.
If you are well, it is well.

You wrote:

>Not necessarily. Direct acts of disobedience to the Center of the >Covenant can make one a Covenant Breaker.

In my humble opinion, this is an indication of the problem. The issue appears to be that in orthodox Baha'i thought excessive weight is placed on enforcing compliance of commands with what I view as threats of draconian sanctions, , for goodness sakes, as if we were in the Dark Ages.

The one aspect of this, if you are correct, is that quite clearly the UHJ was right in saying somehow I did not understand the Covenant and they are right in that I had no intention of learning, if this is what they mean by what I needed to learn.

Authoritarianism, the concern only with issuing orders and seeing them obeyed is, IMHO, wrong both ethically and as a means of effective administration. What works best is to win voluntary support because the measures are unmistakably understood to be workable as well as fair. Laws will be obeyed even by people grumbling about them, if they are allowed to grumble and if these laws are seen to be fair. Those regimes which concentrated on compliance at all costs are not ones to be emulating. And which of these regimes, despite the most extreme measures, was able to achieve respect for authority?

You continue:

>The terms "unprincipled" and "mutilated" are drawn from statements >you and Juan have made. And my characterization of the House does not >go nearly as far as you suggest. But I do not think the House *ever* >acts "unprincipled" (or at least I've not seen evidence for >this.) Sometimes the principle of their action may not fully be >accord with yours or mine. As I suggested in my last post, part of >the problem is that we refuse to try and understand what the principle >for their actions are. Only by assuming that each of us act in accord >with principle and attempting to understand what the principles of >the "others" actions are can we ever hope to arrive at a resolution >of our difference. That is why labeling others as "unprinciple" is so >destructive and can only be seen as an attack which will invariably >elicit counter-attacks.

What I mean when I use the term unprincipled is that the basic principles of the Baha'i Faith: independent investigation of truth, the harmony of science and religion, "the equality of men and women and their equal sharing in ALL rights" <emphasis added> etc (see pages 248 and 249 of SELECTIONS OF THE WRITINGS OF ABDU'L BAHA et al.) what was used to define this religion to me in 1971 when I stated that yes, this I believe, these fundamental principles are being subordinated to something else.

I remain all ears to you listing and explaining whatever other principles are actually the guiding light of the Universal House of Justice.

However, if these other principles are simply attention to the personality rather than the issue, so, the need to accept the perfect knowledge of Shoghi Effendi or even his secretary, even to allow such to have the greatest weight among all the central figures of the Baha'i revelation, the necessity to uphold institutional authority at all costs (Burl's friend reporting 25 irregularities of one NSA to the Universal House of Justice; maybe they really were insignificant, though why should one bother the UHJ with what is insignificant; still, is there a principle that authority trumps everything else) the need for seeming agreement and unanimity (despite the principle of harmony, unity in great diversity) please don't be upset if I listen but am not easy to convince.

You quoted me:

>> I believe that previous monotheistic religions achieved some >> kind of success despite unprincipled leadership, unethical behavior, >> intolerance and oppression.

and you commented:

>Yes, they have. But the Baha'i Faith has to justify the existence of >but one more in a world that has plenty already. And if we have no >hope of fulfilling our purpose of bringing about the unity of >humanity what can we possibly contribute that the other monotheistic >traditions cannot already offer?

My sentiments exactly. In my view it is the fundamental Baha'i principles: independent investigation of truth, harmony of science and religion, complete equal rights for men and women, etc. which alone justify the claims of the Baha'i Faith as an independent world religion.

This other stuff, the divine right of the Pope or the Caliph, infallibility, doctrinal purity, excommunication, interdict, heresy, etc. this we've had before. We've worn that T-shirt and such authoritarianism, while it has, at times, had some worldly success, it has not achieved that kind of harmony (not unity, not uniformity, but harmony, unity in diversity) which this idealistic world federalist saw as the goal of the Baha'i Faith as it was presented in 1971.

You quoted me:

>> And why in the world is it impossible for the Baha'i Faith to >> achieve principled leadership. Indeed, what I think Baha'is ought to >> be using all their alleged consultative skills considering is how >> may there be a transformation of present reality into the stage of >> principled leadership and all the other aspects of maturing Baha'i >> and human life.

And you replied:

>It would be impossible if one understands the quote from Shoghi >Effendi in the manner in which Juan does; namely, that the >Cause will be inevitably mutilated if there is not a living Guardian.
>[Juan makes this assessment notwithstanding the fact that most of >the practices he finds the most "cultish" were implemented in their >present form by the Guardian and not the House of Justice at all!]

Juan may correct me. My reading of this is that, so long as a literalist approach is taken, according greatest weight to the words, right or wrong, of Shoghi Effendi, or his secretary, so long as the democratically elected head of the Faith hesitates to take the actions required to bring the Faith forward into the modern age, so long as the position is that only an offspring of Shoghi Effendi, alas, can take the necessary action, then, yes, so long as that the Cause will remain mutilated.

Goodness gracious, I am a democrat. I don't believe the people sent to Haifa (and maybe it would make a good deal of difference here if the people really did send them there through direct elections) ought to feel hogtied by the contested interpretation of someone who died forty years ago. If the feeling is that Shoghi Effendi, or which individual soever sitting in his seat today, would implement basic principle today, now that it matters, then such principle should be unhesitatingly implemented.

I have elsewhere stated that if it is possible to have the functions of the Hands of the Cause continued by individuals with a different title, then there is no reason that an individual may not be entrusted with exercising the functions of the Guardian, though someone called something else, and even subject to alternative conditions such as direct election, five year terms and a two term limit. However, personally, I am very reluctant to consider such an idea in a conservative climate and a literal landscape. I prefer world councils, though perhaps they should have more than nine members, to monarchies and papacies. I think it would be great if you could have a real democratically elected president, though the absence of such an official does not really prevent the Universal House of Justice from implementing Baha'i principle (I mean these things they listed for me in 1971). All that's needed is the will to implement principle.

I will read with keen attention any principles you list as being worthy of consideration, and any words you care to share explaining these principles which you suggest are the guiding lights of the Universal House of Justice.

>Warmest, Susan

May this find you very well, and may the future be more beneficial than we may imagine.

All the Best,
Michael

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@freenet.carleton.ca>
To: bahai-st@johnco.cc.ks.us <bahai-st@johnco.cc.ks.us>
Cc: Talisman@umich.edu <Talisman@umich.edu>; Irfan@umich.edu <Irfan@umich.edu>; dbikman@bwc.org <dbikman@bwc.org>
Subject: Loyalty to the Covenant
Date: Wednesday, December 10, 1997 12:47 PM

*The Baha'i Studies List*

Greetings, David, from Ottawa.

If you are well, it is well.

No, you have not correctly understood me.

I am the one who forwarded the message from the Universal House of Justice saying they are not opposed to the formation of an unmoderated newsgroup on the Baha'i Faith (Talk.Religion.Bahai) as well as that there is the kind of freedom of expression by Baha'is to which you refer to news.groups (the USENET site of this consultation) as well as to a number of Baha'i sites.

I am the one who has repeatedly advised the moderators of the moderated Baha'i sites (including soc.religion.bahai) that refusal to permit discussion of talk.religion.bahai could only confirm the impression that the Baha'i Faith is not serious about freedom of thought and expression, that this refusal would most fully demonstrate to non-Baha'is the need for an unmoderated newsgroup.

I agree with you that this message from the Universal House of Justice calls for freedom of expression, even though very few of the Baha'is have indicated they believe this. I believe there are now a lot of non-Baha'is attentively awaiting this vote to see whether the Baha'is are serious about freedom of expression.

If you are indeed prepared to allow the expression of views, if indeed, you are ready to respond with your reasons as to why you'd continue to exclude women from membership on the Universal House of Justice, and truly you have nothing to hide, then you'll prove this to the world by voting YES to Talk.Religion.Bahai

Although as a non-Baha'i I am not bound by Baha'i authority, I invite you to read what I replied to Roger, including my statement that the details concerning the eligibility of women on the Baha'i Universal House of Justice contained in the Service of Women Paper did not violate Baha'i authority (Covenant) as they awaited action from the Universal House of Justice which retains full authority to reverse any decision, including its ruling in 1988 that this issue did not lie within its jurisdiction.

I have already mentioned re those who would really involve themselves in matters of Baha'i authority, your Covenant Breakers who claim to be Baha'i Popes or High Priests or Grand Shamans or whatever, that were President Clinton to urge Americans to forbid the establishment of an unmoderated newsgroup on US politics on the grounds that loyal Americans could there encounter those claiming to be Emperors or Kings or Grand Dukes of the US of A, he would be the one granting legitimacy to such claimants and causing people to think, "Holy cow, there must really be a true American Emperor."

I hope this has made some sense, and shown, I trust, that I am not so much in disagreement with you as you first thought.

fare very Well,
Michael

Message #61 (61 is last):

Date: Wed Dec 10 10:34:23 1997

From: dbikman@bwc.org (David Bikman)

Subject: Re: For Those Who Feel Loyal To the Covenant

To: bn872@freenet.carleton.ca

Cc: talisman@umich.edu, irfan1@umich.edu, bahai-st@johnco.cc.ks.us

Reply-To: dbikman@bwc.org

Mr. McKenny,

Let me get this straight: you support an unmoderated Baha'i newsgroup so your views which challenge the Covenant will have the opportunity to reach Baha'is who do not challenge the Covenant. Is this essentially accurate?

I am failing to see how you intend your politics to aid your search for truth.

-David Bikman

PS: To respond in detail: As one who considers himself within the bounds of the Covenant, I have no desire to hide any issue, including the ordainment of men as members of the Universal House of Justice. I have no difficulty accepting it and no qualms about explaining it to others.

Also, you interpret a message from the House of Justice as condemning or restricting freedom of expression in cyberspace. I humbly propose, without prejudice, that your understanding of this particular message is limited. Freedom of expression for Baha'is is the brother of the command to independently investigate the truth. Not only is it our privilege, but our duty, to consult with one another in the attempt to resolve personal questions. All is open for discussion-- except the validity of the Authority which makes it possible for us to have these questions.

-d

End of File, Press RETURN to quit

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

-

To switch to the digested list, send the following commands to major@johnco.cc.ks.us in the message body

-

unsubscribe bahai-st subscribe bahai-st-digest

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@freenet.carleton.ca>
To: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Cc: irfan@umich.edu <irfan@umich.edu>
Subject: For Those Suspicious of the UHJ
Date: Wednesday, December 10, 1997 11:02 AM

Greetings from Ottawa.

If you are well, it is well.

This post addresses those who are very suspicious of the words of the Universal House of Justice concerning the freedom of thought and expression by Baha'is in cyberspace.

If you see yourself more as one whose loyalty to the Covenant makes the very concept of such suspicion repugnant, I've posted a separate message for you.

The important point is that the existence of a widely available unmoderated USENET news.group on this topic would provide the kind of public availability of information that traditionally has made despotic, totalitarian and corrupt administration difficult. The Baha'i institutions would be even more in the light of public scrutiny than they have been in the unmoderated e-mail lists whose membership is numerically small, and subject to identification.

I'll ask the technical question as to whether it is possible for a lurker on a USENET newsgroup to be identified if s/he doesn't post?

Instead of several dozen members, there could be many thousands of readers of such a newsgroup, and this weight of being in the eye of the public will be a great incentive for Baha'i authorities to behave more in keeping with the ideal, than in accord with what is normal when authority has absolute control of the media.

Baha'is worried about receiving my treatment of being declared a non-Baha'i as a result of expressing your views, or worse being declared one who must be shunned, can consider this. Simply allowing the newsgroup to exist, simply allowing others to post, and saying nothing yourself will let you test how it works, to see whether it does have a beneficial impact. If you really have something, such as that censored Service of Women Paper which you fear to post, there'll always be the options of anonymous remailers or relaying this through some non-Baha'i. Even if I personally am often busy, I'm sure there are those with more time available who'd be happy to post material which is flame free etc, but sensitive on ideological grounds.

May this find you very well, and may that long be so.

Peace,
Michael

This is a copy of a post to news.groups on the topic of Talk.Religion.Bahai

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Letter to the Editor - O&E Newspapers March 7, 2002 - A Response FG

The Detroit News, Sunday, September 23, 2001 FG

"Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatism" IRA RIFKIN

c.1997 Religion News Service

"Such Freedoms": New York Times, January 1998 NSA

Media Release 12/6/1998 FG

From Israeli Media - "Bahai center received irregular tax breaks" 9/3/2001

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan R. I. Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: quanta@mindspring.com <quanta@mindspring.com>; talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Control of media?
Date: Friday, February 06, 1998 9:15 PM

Burl is just attempting to muddy the waters. If he wrote an article on the Baha'i faith for a magazine with national circulation, the article would have to be vetted in Wilmette, and he knows it.

When I was a Baha'i professor of history, I was constantly harrassed by the Baha'i authorities who insisted on subjecting my academic writing to prepublication censorship. I was actually called up at home and browbeaten. I received nasty letters in the mail from Haifa containing personal insult. Now, the whole point of academic free inquiry is to discover new things and to delve into primary sources. Prepublication censorship by a religious organization would make that impossible. No self-respecting professional academic would agree to have his writing put through such censorship. Indeed, Firuz Kazemzadeh has written almost nothing about the Baha'i faith, he has told friends, precisely because he is unwilling to have his writing on the subject "reviewed" by religious bureaucrats. Baha'i writers are faced with a choice of silence, dishonesty or expulsion.

With regard to Professor Amanat's book, *Resurrection and Renewal*, the author refused to submit it for prepublication "review" by the Baha'i authorities, and as a result the "universal" house of "justice" sent a letter to the US NSA announcing that Professor Amanat is "not a Baha'i." However, the US NSA declined to take formal action against him, leaving him technically on the rolls! There was, of course, a lively controversy in Wilmette over whether his book could be carried by the Baha'i distribution service. It was only because he was *not* a Baha'i (though he had not made any such declaration himself) that the uhj allowed his book to be carried.

If you find all this confusing and faintly ridiculous, you are not alone. So, Burl, I'm afraid the story of that book, that author, and his fate are not exactly advertisements for the "openness" of the Baha'i administration.

cheers Juan

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan R. I. Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: SManeck@berry.edu <SManeck@berry.edu>; talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Control of media?
Date: Saturday, February 07, 1998 3:43 PM

The true story of Abbas Amanat is as follows. He was brought up a Baha'i, in a Kashan family that had traditionally been Jewish but that had converted to the Baha'i faith in the previous generation. His brother Husayn designed the monument at Azadi square in Tehran, and also the seat of the universal house of justice. His father is an accomplished historian and is writing a mult-volume history of the Kashan Baha'i community. His brother Mehrdad is also a historian and co-authored the section on Qajar Iran in the prestigious Cambridge History of Iran. As a young intellectual at Tehran University and then later at Oxford, Abbas noticed that there was an authoritarian and anti-intellectual streak to the Baha'i organization, as exemplified in bigots such as Furutan (who had played a very sinister role in the attack on and suppression of Mazandarani's scholarship back in the 1930s and 1940s). Abbas therefore very wisely decided rather early on that he wanted nothing to do with the Baha'i organization. However, he has said repeatedly and publicly that he is "in love with the Bab."

Abbas wrote his dissertation on the Babi movement at Oxford under the direction of Albert Hourani and Roger Owen, two of the magisterial historians of the Middle East in our times. He then came to the United States to teach at Yale. He did not ask to be transferred from the UK to the US Baha'i community, but some helpful person in Wilmette heard of his advent and entered him into the US rolls. Abbas, naturally, declined to submit his major historical study of the Babis for their approval or censoring to the motley assemblage of insurance salesmen, electrical engineers, bit part actors and failed businessmen who staff the upper echelons of the Baha'i administration. His book was published by Cornell University Press in 1989.

The Baha'i Distribution Service, to its credit, felt that Abbas's book would be of interest to the Baha'is, and therefore contracted with Cornell University Press to buy 500 copies.

When the book was distributed to the Baha'is, it generated large numbers of angry letters from the fundamentalists in the community who have the impression that they own the religion and can tell people what they may or may not say. They were upset that it departs from the details of Nabil's Narrative (which many have elevated to the status of infallible scripture) and Shoghi Effendi's God Passes By (ditto). Moreover, some religious bureaucrats in Wilmette became uneasy about carrying a book by an author who was on the rolls but who had declined to have it reviewed. A dispute therefore broke out in Wilmette as to whether the Baha'i Distribution Service should continue to carry the book.

This dispute was ultimately submitted to the universal house of justice, which in reply declared that Abbas Amanat was not a Baha'i, and therefore the Baha'i Distribution Service was welcome to distribute his book, as it would be to distribute the book of any non-Baha'i author. I have a copy of this letter, but it is in my file cabinets somewhere and I am not going to spend time digging it out just to satisfy Susan Maneck, who may believe it or not as she likes.

In the good old days before the universal house of justice's membership began being stacked with former counselors (who tend to have an Inquisitorial mindset, since part of their job is Inquisition), the only way to be removed from the rolls of Baha'i membership once you were entered on them was to write a letter explicitly renouncing belief in Baha'u'llah. Professor Amanat has never done so, although it is no secret that he long ago dissociated himself from the Baha'i organization and its authoritarian practices. I find Susan Maneck's speculation about his internal, private, existential beliefs, based on nothing more than hearsay, to be extremely rude and the height of slander (since she is bringing up slander). Has she ever had so much as a private conversation with Professor Amanat? I find her, and her organization's, willingness to expel Baha'is from their own religion by haughty and arrogant fiat, to be not only offensive but indicative of a quite dangerous mindset.

In any case, the US Baha'i authorities have slightly more integrity about these things than do the Canadian ones, since they declined to remove Professor Amanat from the rolls simply on the say-so of the universal house of justice. They have sought from him a clarification of his views, but he maintains that his views are nobody's business.

However, I will indulge in a little speculation. I think that if the Baha'i religious authorities really desire to make themselves so odious that they succeed in chasing out of the religion all the major Baha'i professors at major universities, that they will succeed in this. Apparently the real purpose of these intellectual pogroms is to ensure that it may be said that learned persons such as Denis MacEoin, Abbas Amanat and Linda Walbridge are not Baha'is, but the real Baha'is are ignoramuses who know no Middle Eastern languages, know nothing serious about Baha'i history, and adhere to a fundamentalist and intolerant point of view on the Baha'i faith, and who have managed to get themselves elected to high office (often through the most shameful campaigning and manipulation).

cheers    Juan

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan R. I. Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: SManeck@berry.edu <SManeck@berry.edu>; talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Control of media?
Date: Sunday, February 08, 1998 1:53 PM

The question here is rights. Rights don't depend on a person's attitudes. Human beings, even Baha'is and ex-Baha'is, have rights by virtue of being human beings.

The letter from Henderson to the NSA of Australia injured Nima Hazini's rights in a number of ways.

- 1) It injured Hazini's right to freedom of conscience, since it implied that there was something wrong with his declining to disavow Baha'u'llah when he withdrew from the Baha'i organization.
- 2) It injured Hazini's right to privacy, since obviously his movements were tracked, as was his joining a Sufi order. He is not a Baha'i. How did Mr. Henderson know he was going to Australia or that he had joined a Sufi order? How was that any of his business? What gives the Baha'i organization the right to spy on people, Baha'is or non-Baha'is?
- 3) It injured Hazini's right to free association, since it implicitly encouraged the Australian Baha'i authorities to discourage Australian Baha'i youth from associating with Mr. Hazini.

As for the possibility that Mr. Henderson's actions in this regard were "rogue" actions, for which he might be reprimanded (by his colleagues on the National Spiritual Assembly or by the Universal House of Justice?), you have no way of knowing this. You are simply speculating. I would place a rather large bet that if the Hazinis appealed all this to the universal house of justice, the latter would support Mr. Henderson's actions (as they have supported him in a number of other questionable cases).

And just let me repeat that a person's human rights cannot be withdrawn simply because they hold unpopular views. "Taking responsibility" seems to be Baha'i rightwing doublespeak for withdrawing human rights from dissidents. Dissent can be good, and it, too, is a human right. In any case, I'm unaware that Mr. Hazini has ever been publicly critical of the Baha'i administration. He certainly, obviously, was privately dismayed enough by it to dissociate himself from it, as a number of Baha'i intellectuals have been in the past two years.

cheers Juan

>Actually, I think Mr. Henderson's letter was *highly* problematic.
>In fact I would be very surprised if he were not 'called on the >carpet' for it. I just don't think you presented what it is said >very accurately. I also think that there are some who refuse to take >adequate responsibility for provoking these kinds of reactions from >members of the Institutions.

>

>Susan

>

>

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

The following article appeared in an Israeli paper.

You can also read the article directly from the newspaper at this link:

<https://www.haaretz.co.il/hasen/pages/ShArt.jhtml?itemNo=69711&contrassID=2&subContrassID=16&sbSubContrassID=0&listSrc=Y&itemNo=69711>

Saturday, September 01, 2001 Elul 13, 5761 Israel Time: 03:06 (GMT+3)

Bahai feel bashed by local media
By Charlotte Halle

CONTROVERSIAL: Haifa newspaper claims Bahai center received irregular tax breaks.

The Bahai movement, which plowed $250 million into re-landscaping the gardens of its Haifa world headquarters, charges that it has been unfairly treated by the local media.

Articles have appeared in the local and national press accusing the Bahai World Center of receiving government tax reimbursements which it is not entitled to, of having unethical links with the Labor Party, of using excessive amounts of water to maintain the gardens and, most absurdly, of worshipping idols and using incense during religious practices.

Officials are particularly furious about an "untrue and unfair" article that appeared in the Haifa weekly newspaper Zman Haifa earlier this month, which claimed that the world center had received millions of shekels in irregular payments from the Israeli government. The Bahais are particularly distressed because they say the newspaper gave them just one hour to respond to the allegations before the article went to press. "It upsets us that people look for an ulterior, negative motive in what we are doing," says Glen Fullmer, senior information officer at the center. He attributes the attacks to the Bahai community's dramatic shift from "obscurity" to "high-profile" target for media coverage following the opening of the new garden project.

"We were silent citizens," he says, "and sometimes the story we have to tell - that we are beautifying our holy places with voluntary contributions from Bahais around the world on a nonprofit basis - just doesn't seem to add up."

Based on an acceptance of all world religions, the Bahai faith supports the unification of humanity and the emergence of a global civilization. Its principles forbid accepting donations from any individual or institution outside of the faith.

The opening of the gardens surrounding the world-famous golden-domed Shrine of the Bab - a tranquil haven for visiting pilgrims - is the result of 15 years of planning and construction, and a $250-million investment by the Bahai community. The center signed an agreement with the Israeli government in 1987, entitling it to tax exemptions on the basis of the fact that it is an international religious, nonprofit organization. The center stands to receive a tax refund on the order of $20 million.

The Zman Haifa article was based on questions about tax reimbursement that were submitted by an independent auditor to the Ministry of Tourism.

Bahai sources claim that all the auditor's queries were satisfactorily answered, and that it was "defamatory" and unfair of the newspaper to portray the questions as based in fact. Furthermore, the world center placed a full-page advertisement in the newspaper a week later, refuting the paper's claims with quotes from Ministry of Tourism and Ministry of Finance officials. The Bahai center is still considering taking legal action against the newspaper for the "malicious and unprofessional" article.

Zman Haifa editor Sharon Gal told Anglo File that reporters had given the Bahais about seven hours to respond to the claims. Due to a "technical error," their response to the allegations had not appeared, but added that a response was printed in full the following week, the same week the full-page advertisement was published. He added that many editors would not have agreed to print the advertisement of the Bahais because it was so overtly critical of the newspaper.

Murray Smith, deputy secretary-general of the Bahai World Center, says the gardens have given a "big boost" to the social and economic life of Haifa, with almost 35,000 Israelis visiting the site every week since June. This represents a radical rise in the number of day visitors to the city, at a time when tourism is at an all-time low. He emphasized that entrance to the gardens is free and that they are open daily. The opening of the gardens, Smith adds, has forced the Bahais into the "limelight," although they prefer to keep a low profile, to avoid "upsetting people in a way that will be of negative consequence to Bahais in other countries."

Smith dismisses as "completely false and erroneous" the claims in the media that the Bahais worship idols and use incense. He also outlined the world center's strict regulations - built into the planning of the gardens - stipulating avoidance of water-intensive plants, and use of state-of-the-art irrigation technology. He adds that many "positive" articles also appeared in the press following the opening of the gardens.

In general, says Smith, the Bahai center has enjoyed good relations with all Israeli governments, a fact that has not escaped the attention of the government of Iran. There, Bahai believers are persecuted under the fundamentalist Islamic regime, which accuses them of being Zionist collaborators. Baha'u'llah, the founder of the monotheistic Bahai faith - which broke off from Islam 150 years ago - arrived in the Holy Land from Iran as a prisoner of the Ottoman Empire in 1868 and died near Acre in 1892. According to Smith, when the Bahais arrived in Palestine, Baha'u'llah instructed his followers that they must not seek or accept converts here, a rule which is still strictly observed today.

The elected governing body of the world's Bahai community, the Universal House of Justice, has its seat in Haifa on Mount Carmel, adjacent to the Shrine of the Bab and the new gardens. Haifa and Acre together comprise the international spiritual and administrative center for the five million followers of the Bahai faith, of whom 800 live in Israel, volunteering for a time at the Haifa headquarters before returning home.

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

PRESS RELEASE - (Use as Model) - Letter to the Editor -
March 7, 2002

Observer & Eccentric Newspaper* - Oakland County, Michigan (Third wealthiest county in the nation.)
Circulation 120,000. A Response to half-page Baha'i Ad.

Feel free to use or customize this letter as a model to respond to any local propaganda efforts by fundamentalists among my fellow bahais in your area since it has passed at least one editor's evaluation.
SUGGESTION: Use Karen Bacquet's article instead of, or with,
Prof. Cole's.

Ascii text version of this press release

-----

In response to the paid half-page ad by my fellow Baha'is in your February 28 issue (2002), which offers a website link "for more information," I believe Professor Juan Cole, of the University of Michigan's Department of History, has a website of extensive and disturbing documentation that anyone interested in the Baha'i Faith should be aware of, especially his article "Fundamentalism in the Contemporary U.S. Baha'i Community,"
Religious Studies Review, Vol. 43, no. 3 (March, 2002):195-217:
https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/2002/fundbhfn.htm

In his book Modernity and the Millennium, published by Columbia University Press in 1998, Professor Cole observes the Baha'i administration has increasingly come under the control of fundamentalists, "stressing scriptural literalism . . . theocracy, censorship, intellectual intolerance,
and denying key democratic values (196)."

For numerous other views in balance to the paid ad O&E ran,
I also recommend the over 50 megabytes of documentation on my own website, The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience: <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

FG
Rochester Hills

---

Karen Bacquet, "Enemies Within: Conflict and Control in the Baha'i Community." Published in American Family Foundation's Cultic Studies Journal, Volume 18, 2001, pp.109-140:
<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/enemies.html>

"AFF (American Family Foundation) is a nonprofit, tax-exempt research center and educational organization founded in 1979. AFF's mission is to study psychological manipulation and cultic groups, to educate the public and professionals, and to assist those who have been adversely affected by a cult-related experience. AFF consists of a professional staff and a growing network of more than 150 volunteer professionals in fields ranging from education, psychology, and religion to journalism, law enforcement, and business." Further details about AFF:
https://www.csj.org/aff/aff\_about.htm

---

[on page A10]

----

Appeared as O & E half-page page ad on February 28, 2002, on page A3:

----

The Destiny of America and the Promise of World Peace
A Statement from the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'í of the United States

At this time of world turmoil, the United States Bahá'í community offers a perspective on the destiny of America as the promoter of world peace.

More than a hundred years ago, Bahá'u'lláh, the founder of the Bahá'í Faith, addressing heads of state, proclaimed that the age of maturity for the entire human race had come. The unity of humankind was now to be established

as the foundation of the great peace that would mark the highest stage in humanity's spiritual and social evolution. Revolutionary and world-shaking changes were therefore inevitable.

The Bahá'í writings state:

The world is moving on. Its events are unfolding ominously and with bewildering rapidity. The whirlwind of its passions is swift and alarmingly violent. The New World is insensibly drawn into its vortex. . . . Dangers, undreamt of and unpredictable, threaten it both from within and from without. Its governments and peoples are being gradually enmeshed in the coils of the world's recurrent crises and fierce controversies. . . . The world is contracting into a neighborhood. America, willingly or unwillingly, must face and grapple with this new situation. For purposes of national security, let alone any humanitarian motive, she must assume the obligations imposed by this newly created neighborhood. Paradoxical as it may seem, her only hope of extricating herself from the perils gathering around her is to become entangled in that very web of international association which the Hand of an inscrutable Providence is weaving.

The American nation, Bahá'ís believe, will evolve through tests and trials to become a land of spiritual distinction and leadership, a champion of justice and unity among all peoples and nations, and a powerful servant of the cause of everlasting peace. This is the peace promised by God in the sacred texts of the world's religions.

Establishing peace is not simply a matter of signing treaties and protocols; it is a complex task requiring a new level of commitment to resolving issues not customarily associated with the pursuit of peace.

Universal acceptance of the spiritual principle of the oneness of humankind is essential to any successful attempt to establish world peace.

Racism, one of the most baneful and persistent evils, is a major barrier to peace.

The emancipation of women, the achievement of full equality of the sexes, is one of the most important, though less acknowledged, prerequisites of peace.

The inordinate disparity between rich and poor keeps the world in a state of instability, preventing the achievement of peace.

Unbridled nationalism, as distinguished from a sane and legitimate patriotism, must give way to a wider loyalty, to the love of humanity as a whole.

Religious strife, the cause of innumerable wars and conflicts throughout history, is a major obstacle to progress. The challenge facing the world's religious leaders is to contemplate, with hearts filled with compassion and the desire for truth, the plight of humanity, and to ask themselves whether they cannot, in humility before their God, submerge their theological differences in a great spirit of mutual forbearance that will enable them to work together for the advancement of human understanding and peace.

Bahá'í's pray, "May this American Democracy be the first nation to establish the foundation of international agreement. May it be the first nation to proclaim the unity of mankind. May it be the first to unfurl the standard of the Most Great Peace."

During this hour of crisis, we affirm our abiding faith in the destiny of America. We know that the road to its destiny is long, thorny and tortuous, but we are confident that America will emerge from her trials undivided and undefeatable.

ùNational Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'í's of the United States

For more information and for a free copy of the booklet "The Promise of World Peace" please visit our web site at www.us.bahai.org or call us toll

free at 1-800-22-UNITE Local Phone 248-737-4006
https://www.us.bahai.org/world\_peace/amers\_destiny.html

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

9/24/01 8:42 AM 1 out of 12

The Detroit News, Sunday, September 23, 2001

"We Stand *United*. Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere. We are caught in an inescapable network of mutuality, tied in a single garment of destiny. Whatever affects one directly, affects all indirectly."
-Martin Luther King Jr., Letter from the Birmingham Jail

SIGNED by 30+ churches and organizations, including the Metropolitan Detroit Bahai Community.
People of Faith United for Reconciliation, Justice and Peace.

An interfaith service will be held at 4:00pm on Sunday, September 23rd at Fort Street Presbyterian Church at 631 W. Fort Street, Detroit.

Ad Paid for by 30+ local businesses and organizations.

**--

No one remotely familiar with the actual record of the bahai faith, especially during the last decade, would recognize how ironic, hollow, and hypocritical the words of this ad are in relation to the bahai faith's involvement with this event. Indeed, the bahai administration is relying on the ignorance of most people with its actual record of injustice, censorship, coercion, and suppression of free speech and conscience. The bahai faith's using the WTC attack in this manner is truly tantamount once again to FRAUD.

Professor Juan Cole, History Department, The University of Michigan, discusses related issues in his journal article "The Baha'i Faith in America as Panopticon, 1963-1997":
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/1999/jssr/bhjssr.htm>

The uninformed public might want to look closely at the evidence on his and my websites, especially relating to fraud and the recent lawsuit in New Mexico.

Courtesy copy to the Detroit News ad department at tlucido@detmain1.dnps.com

**--

FG

Resident of Metro Detroit

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Released on December 6, 1998 to fifty major or college newspapers and news services in four countries.

---

From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
To: bmw@pilotonline.com <bmw@pilotonline.com>
Subject: MEDIA RELEASE
Date: Sunday, December 06, 1998 7:06 PM

MEDIA RELEASE

For immediate release. . .

Contact: FG (xxx) xxx-xxxx

FG@hotmail.com

Baha'is Debate Freedom of Speech and Conscience

On December 3rd the third interest poll began for talk.religion.bahai, a proposed unmoderated newsgroup on the part of the Internet known as Usenet. Critics charge members of the Baha'i Faith have opposed its creation now for more than a year and a half because they would not be able to exercise the kind of control they exert over soc.religion.bahai, a moderated newsgroup.

Under the Usenet guidelines for discussion groups, if a newsgroup is moderated, a single moderator or panel of moderators chooses which messages are posted for all subscribers to read. There seems to be a classic struggle between Baha'is and ex-Baha'is of liberal sentiment and the elements of a conservative orthodoxy. With recent clashes even taking place on America Online and soc.religion.bahai banning for months now any links to any web sites whatsoever, both appear ready for another stormy battle on alt.religion.bahai; unlike during the last interest poll, Bahais seemed to be agreed on keeping the controversy off news.groups, the discussion group where the creation of a new forum is always usually debated.

With three Americans and two Australian proponents, the controversy has become truly international with people contributing from Scotland, England, Canada, Poland, Germany, the Middle East, China, Japan, and elsewhere around the world. Many have pointed out that the very nature of the discussion about the Bahai Faith has only become possible because of the new far-flung and open nature of the Internet.

One such critic even goes further. Dr. Juan Cole of the Department of History at the University of Michigan, a former Baha'i who withdrew from the Faith after more than twenty years, has asserted there is widespread, pervasive censorship and distortion of information throughout the religion that belies the gentle and tolerant universalism of its Founders. Dr. Cole has said, "The checks and balances . . . will have to come from public opinion, within the faith and without."
Cole17.htm

A poet and literary critic who remains a Baha'i after more than two decades of membership, FG, one of the proponents of talk.religion.bahai, has developed a web site, "The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience," documenting numerous instances of interference with free speech by the moderators of soc.religion.bahai and the Baha'i Administration, with nearly 5,000 hits on it since May of this year:
bahai.htm

Whatever the outcome of the third interest poll, the more than 30,000 messages posted to alt.religion.bahai, a less accessible newsgroup than the one wanted, shows Baha'is and others have a lot to say on the matter!

Page Not Found

The page you tried to access does not exist on this server. This page may not exist due to the following reasons:

1. The page has been removed or renamed (or incorrectly uploaded).
2. The URL that you have entered in your browser is incorrect. Please re-enter the URL and try again.
3. The Link that you clicked on incorrectly points to this page. Please contact the owner of this web site to inform them of this situation.

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

See Dialogue archives at Dialogue Magazine 1986-1988

---

dialogue: S U M M E R / F A L L 1 9 8 7

A Modest Proposal: Recommendations Toward the Revitalization of the American Baha'i Community

Since the fourth epoch of the Age of Transition has dawned, and momentous events both within and without the Baha'i community have ushered in our rapid emergence from obscurity, a new sense of maturation and openness has begun to infuse the followers of Baha'u'llah. No longer a minuscule band of true believers braving the odds in a hostile world, the worldwide Baha'i community is now a dynamic, awakening force; its millions of adherents flexing new spiritual muscle, beginning to look outward beyond their confines and meeting the eyes of mankind as they begin to look in. This maturational process, though, is fraught with all the difficulties, transitions, and growing pains inherent in any rapidly-changing organism. Chief among any organism's growth adjustments is the major shift from closed system to open system; from dependence to independence. In the growth and maturation cycle of almost all higher life forms there is a natural and even beautiful process of a decreasing need for nurturance and a consequent and increasing need for self-realization and unprotected development. The seed becomes sprout becomes sapling becomes tree and bears fruit; the bird gradually learns flight; the child becomes a woman. As growth and maturation in the physical realm leads from attachment to detachment, so the cycle of spiritual maturity in a given community is a function of increasing autonomy and openness to discovery, awareness, and change.

No objective observer could fail to recognize the signal growth and maturation of the American Baha'i community since its inception 91 years ago. Moving from a tiny enclave of co-religionists to what has now become a well-known and dynamic community of faith, the Baha'is of the United States far outweigh in activity and influence our modest size of about 100,000 believers. However, there is clear and compelling evidence that the fortunes of the United States
Baha'i
community have stagnated, at least by some objective measures, within the past decade. Americans are loathe to face such stagnancy or admit that any decline is occurring, but even a cursory look at a few basic facts and indicators reveals the trends:

Declarations have slowed to a maintenance pace. In the 1960s and early '70s, 10,000 declarations a year, many among young people, were not unusual.
Since 1974, enrollments have hovered around the 3,000 per year level, which is approximately what it takes to replace attrition to withdrawals, pioneering, deaths, etc.

Youth declarations have dropped even more precipitously as we have been unable to sustain the influx of youth and young adults at levels comparable to the 1969-1973 period, when unprecedented numbers of youth enrolled in the Faith. Consequently the total of 19,000 Baha'i youth in the American community in the peak year (1971) has declined to a total of 2,800 in 1987.
Baha'i
While the goals of the Nine, Five, and Seven Year Plans were, for the most part, won, the American Baha'i community has yet to achieve anything close to widespread enrollments and the beginning of the process of "entry

by troops" expected here for over a decade.

Inactivity and alienation are difficult to measure quantitatively. However, the most commonly accepted gauge of inactivity-Baha'is who are listed as being "address unknown" status-now comprise a staggering percentage of the total community: 40-45,000 names of 100,000 believers. In the 1970s, this figure generally stayed within the 30 percent range, while now almost 50 percent of our community are "address unknown"-a figure that likely indicates increasing inactivity and alienation among the believers. The national Fund faces a greater deficit than ever before, and contributions, while up monetarily each year, continue to represent stagnant or even smaller numbers of participants, both in terms of individual contributors and local Spiritual Assemblies. And most seriously, many conscientious Baha'is are convinced that a spiritual malaise has settled upon our small community, infecting us with a lassitude that has compromised our ability to grow and be healthy.

These are serious and troubling matters. But they are not new, nor are they insurmountable. The Baha'i community of the United States has faced similar tests and periods of dormancy before, and has redoubled its efforts and overcome its trials. Such effort was often painful, requiring much personal sacrifice as well as the sacrifice of sacred cows; but the results were great victories like those realized during the Ten Year Crusade and Nine Year Plan.

And not all, certainly, is bleak. There has been great progress and a veritable explosion of Baha'i culture in the past 20 years, with signal developments in the areas of Baha'i scholarship, development of Baha'i institutions, social and economic development, and the level of maturity of the community, to name just a few areas. No one discounts or denies that growth, but the problems remain large and seemingly intractable, and could seriously erode the aforementioned gains if not addressed.

The purpose of this essay is to attempt a beginning at the discussion of potential remedies for our plight. `Abdul-Baha assures us that the solutions to tests and difficulties come from frank and honest consultation.

Hopefully, this proposal will serve to launch earnest and soul-searching discussion within the community. By no means does this essay pretend to be; all-inclusive, nor does it portend to have all or even one of the answers.

We have restricted our observations and proposals to a limited range of national policy issues that can be consulted on and implemented or rejected in a timely manner. It is our hope that the implementation of new policies, designed to open up the flow of information between the believers and their institutions, will bring about more honest communication and consultation and thereby assist us all to more effectively address such issues as deficiencies in Baha'i devotional life, or problems with racism, prejudice, cultural pluralism, and sexism in our midst-problems which many readers may view as more fundamental than the one's we raise here. It is the fondest hope of the authors that these observations and recommendations will be accepted in the spirit of loving and honest consultation, and not taken personally by any one or looked on as hostile, destructively critical, or dissembling in any way.

One caveat: We begin with a fundamental assumption: that the members of the American Baha'i community are essentially good and sincere Baha'is. This is a declaration of faith founded on the belief that renewal and growth can only come when it is assumed that there exists a potential for change; that the most successful endeavors come when high self-esteem flourishes; that high expectations assure outstanding results. We can repeat the many ills which test the members of the community; we know that our pain is no different from the pain of countless others who are not Baha'is; we recognize that violations of Baha'i law occur in communities across our land. Nevertheless, we believe that another litany of our shortcomings will not inspire us to the task before us. Too often we hear lack of progress in the Cause blamed on a parallel lack of spirituality or commitment in the body of the believers. While there may be some truth to such assertions, a fair observer must acknowledge that our leadership and our ingrained traditions and even some of our time-honored spiritual shibboleths must also bear at least partial responsibility for our community's slow growth. Again and again, Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha, although profoundly aware of our limits, emphasize the good that we can do, as all great teachers must.

Few have improved because they have been told that they are worthless or, once again, failing to attain their assigned goals; they succeed to the extent they see before them a vision of their own potential for perfection. This vision motivates our willingness to discuss openly disappointments, miscalculations, and mistakes, for beyond them is a love no paralysis of will, no crippling, time honored administrative tradition, no amount of apathy criticism can destroy. Love, therefor, emboldens us and perhaps makes us appear arrogant or (foolish; but we offer these proposals believing, as all lovers do, that anything is possible.

1. The Guardian's admonition to "drown your troubles in a sea of new believers" has oft been alluded to in communications from the Universal House of Justice, but never really realized in the United States. Cultural conditions here may prevent such entry by troops now, but sufficient resources have never been allocated, whether locally or nationally, to find out if that is the case. In fact, the large enrollments in the South and elsewhere during the last period of rapid expansion in our community were a source of much controversy, and led to an emphasis on consolidation

that the effect of stifling further expansion by depriving it of resources and administrative support Today, less than 10 percent of the national Fund contributions are spent in the service of teaching. And while more money
does not necessarily equate with more teaching, at least an increased commitment would demonstrate our priorities are in order.

ISSUE: If we want to spread our Faith, we need to put our money where our mouth is.

PROPOSAL: (A) Establish a National Teaching Fund, to be used solely
for teaching activities by a rejuvenated National Teaching Committee with full power to encourage and create large-scale enrollments through providing grants to local spiritual assemblies for teaching projects; (B) Utilize these Funds for long range teaching projects with deputized full-time Baha'i
teachers.

OBJECTIVE: That contributions to the national Fund will increase once a new emphasis is placed on support of teachings projects, and the teaching work
that proceeds from such contributions will bring unprecedented expansion of the Cause to the United States.

2. The process of excessive centralization, so often castigated in the writings, has gone too far in the US, both at the local and the national levels.

Such centralization has inhibited the "grass roots" growth of new ideas and new energy. Moves such as the establishment of Town Meetings and
the recasting of electoral districts into smaller units are positive, progressive actions the National Spiritual Assembly is to be applauded
for taking. The Universal House of Justice has called for a "devolution of autonomy" in the affairs of the community, and more of this vital new trend should be pursued.

ISSUE: The chief unit of the Faith is the local community, and the community's voice in the affairs of the Faith has too often gone unheard or unheeded. As a corollary, the grass roots efforts borne of individual initiative have too often been unsupported, ignored, or not given adequate consideration by a well-meaning but over-protective national administration.

PROPOSAL: (A) That the National Spiritual Assembly adopt and publish a new policy emphasizing openness and decentralization in the affairs of the American Baha'i community; (B) That the National Spiritual Assembly consider a more Universal House of Justice-modeled administrative approach by establishing a national secretariat, with at least two or three NSA members based in Wilmette and responsible for the day-to-day direction of the NSA and its activities; (C) That American assemblies, both local and national, endeavor by policy to more actively seek out the views and input of their respective constituencies before undertaking any major initiative or program; (D) That the National Spiritual Assembly, its staff, committees, and agencies adopt a more open administrative style that will encourage and permit more individual initiative and the growth of nontraditional or unconventional approaches to Baha'i activity, with the aim of fostering unfettered and creative new approaches to teaching, consolidation, and administration.

OBJECTIVE: That activities undertaken with the prior knowledge and consultation of the community at large will be exponentially more successful, and that a new spirit of openness, tolerance, and acceptance off diversity on the part of the NSA will provide an example for the community and let a thousand flowers bloom.

The free flow of ideas and opinions is vital to the open consultation process and, more importantly, to the spirit of that cardinal Baha'i principle: the independent investigation of truth. Certainly, signing a declaration card does not strip the new believer of his or her access to said principle; yet we often act as if it were necessary to protect the Faith from its adherents. As a consequence, there are many who feel that the zeal with which our National Spiritual Assembly pursues the mandated policy of reviewing prospective publications and special materials (once necessary in the days of our community's infancy) has overstepped the bounds of moderation. Originally intended by Shoghi Effendi only to insure accuracy and dignity when presenting the Baha'i Faith to the public, review of publications has become a politicized process whereby reviewing bodies may impose their particular views of the Faith in unmitigated and unchecked censorship. This policy, now often utilized to silence disparate opinion and frank expression of non-mainstream views, has become a silent censor, hidden from the community at large and doubly dangerous because of its cloistered nature. As the recently "opened up" Letters column in The American Baha'i proves, Baha'is not only have a high level of interest in unfettered expression, but use such opportunities thoughtfully and responsibly. The Guardian himself declared that the review process was only a "temporary" measure and would "definitely be abolished" once the Faith was better known.

ISSUE: In a community that has "emerged from obscurity," review and its accompanying censorship have no place. In fact, since all non-Baha'is can openly write and publish freely on the subject of the Faith, Baha'is should certainly be afforded the same freedom.

PROPOSAL: That the National Spiritual Assembly petition the Universal House of Justice for the abolishment of review in the United States Baha'i community.

ALTERNATIVE PROPOSAL: Review be confined to introductory literature aimed at explaining the Baha'i Faith and teachings to the public produced by the Baha'i Publishing Trust (that is, material that would be perceived by the public as "official" literature of the American Baha'i community and its institutions). Evaluation of Baha'i scholarship, literature, and special materials produced by independent Baha'i publishers and companies should be made by those responsible for the material.

OBJECTIVE: If review is abolished, the flow of ideas, scholarly debate, and intellectual fervent will increase, becoming a boon to the quality of Baha'i life, individually and collectively. A climate in which people feel comfortable to speak out and share controversial or new ideas will be created. Also, non-Baha'is will begin to see a community that values and gives full expression to diversity.

The National Baha'i Convention is a wonderful institution, brimming with the spirit of the Baha'i electoral process and alive with potential dialogue and interchange between the believers' democratically elected delegates and their NSA. But for too long, the national convention has been a hollow shell of what it can be, with limited and even truncated time for consultation, with speechifying instead of meaningful exchange of views, and with the subsequent loss of the real opportunity to get to know one's fellow delegates. Even though the formal convention itself may be time- or agenda-limited by guidance from the World Centre, nothing prohibits us from extending it by holding a delegate conference beforehand.

ISSUE: That the Baha'i National Convention is a vital opportunity to translate community concerns and perceptions into national action.

PROPOSAL: That each national convention be supplemented by holding a delegates'' conference just prior to convention with: (A) Sufficient time for delegates to prepare by mailing of NSA and committee reports at least one month beforehand; (B) the formation of small-group working sections and study groups on particular issues; and (C) publication of position papers produced by working groups of delegates around particular issues; (D) there be a pre--convention announcement the delegates of upcoming NSA issues/agenda items; and (E) increased levels of input and responsibility from the delegates concerning major capital expenditures the NSA expects in the coming year.

OBJECTIVE: That a growing sense in the community that the process of opening up our administration to new input and influence is important; and ultimately a much better and more responsive administration. Many National Spiritual Assembly members, beginning with Horace Holley, have complained of the difficulty in serving administratively for long periods of time. Extended incumbencies, especially at the national level, tend in any governing body to produce stasis and inertia that can become hidebound and inflexible, thus turning such servants of the Cause from progressive forces to entrenched defenders of the status quo. For a Faith without a clergy, some would argue that we have created, by continuing to elect the same people to our National Spiritual Assembly, a professional class of administrators in the US Baha'i community. These leaders, then, tend to remain on administrative bodies because of their high level of visibility and name recognition, and thus generate extended incumbencies that insulate and draw them away from the concerns and activities of the rank-and-file believers. Dynamic leadership, important in any newly emerging group, cannot afford to lose contact with the experience of their constituency, and almost invariably does so in an extended incumbency.

ISSUE: That the Continental Board of Counselors has taken a significant and insightful step forward in appointing Auxiliary Board members to renewable five year terms.

PROPOSAL: That we extend such insight to our Rulers; and that the terms of National Spiritual Assembly members (and local, where possible) be limited to five years of service, with re-election permissible after a one or two-year hiatus.

OBJECTIVE: That the coursing of new blood and new leadership through the Cause effected by such a move, and the parallel and consequent benefits of having recent NSA members return to active non-administrative involvement, would spawn an exciting, fresh new level of creativity and strength in our administrative affairs and in the community-at-large. Our financial base as a community is, as we know, the "lifeblood of the Cause." Many observers have noted, however, that our accountability of how we spend our funds is lacking.

ISSUE: That we should do a better job of last-dollar financial accounting in terms of telling the believers exactly where their contributions have gone.

PROPOSAL: That we publish a clear, comprehensible, last-dollar annual report, detailing the expenditure of Baha'i funds, every year prior to national convention.

OBJECTIVE: If we publish a detailed annual report, the believers will see the myriad and important uses of their contributions more clearly, and will subsequently increase their giving.

No small amount of progress has been made over the past decade in the US

Baha'i community in terms of uniting and bringing together the institutions of the Rulers and the Learned in consultation and in action. This is a trend that bodes well for the Baha'i future, and should be expanded and enhanced.

In fact, the need for an advisory group, to provide fact-finding assistance, expert guidance, a wide spectrum of opinion, and consultative input on crucial questions facing the community, is an obvious use for the expansion and greater application of this trend. Most decision-making bodies use such think tanks to so advise them.

ISSUE: There is too large a gap between the local believer and the NSA in a large complex community like the United States, and that gap can be partially bridged by forming a think tank designed to advise the administrative order on crucial matters.

PROPOSAL: That the NSA and the Continental Board appoint, from among elected delegates and other qualified believers recommended by Local Spiritual

Assemblies, four regional advisory boards (in `Abdu'l-Baha's designated regions). Special attention should be given to placing persons from minorities and lower-class backgrounds on the Advisory Boards and other national committees. All too often, these are Baha'is alienated from the

Baha'i administration, which operates on a white corporate America model as much as any ideal Baha'i model. At present, national committees do not reflect the ethnic or class background of these groups. That is to say, even though national committees often have members from different ethnic backgrounds, they are usually drawn from middle and upper-middle class

Baha'is who share a similar perspective on the Faith and its implications for humanity. Beyond participation by minorities, the Advisory Boards

should also be comprised of active teachers, Baha'i scholars, and especially the elected delegates; and the consultation of these boards be open to the community at large. The NSA would then meet with each of the four boards once a year in the respective region, and consult on matters of concern and significance there.

OBJECTIVE: The affairs of the Faith, when seriously, and reflectively consulted on by a divers group of minds, can only be beneficially affected with additional input to our governing bodies.

8. One of the most sacred, important, and crucial responsibilities incumbent on the Administrative Order is its role in the establishment of world peace.

Called on to be a herald of the Lesser Peace by Shoghi Effendi, the Universal House of Justice has certainly set in motion a mighty process by the release of The Promise of World Peace. National Spiritual Assemblies the world over have promulgated the peace message, but few have gone beyond simple proclamation. The principles enshrined in the peace message need to be studied, applied, and acted on at the national and local level in the United States, not only so that the Baha'is can put their principles into practice, but so the world can see we revere deeds more than words.

ISSUE: That world peace is a major goal of the Baha'i Faith, and that the American Baha'i community has a great bounty and responsibility toward urging its establishment.

PROPOSAL: That the National Spiritual Assembly appoint an executive-level National Peace Committee, empowered to make significant steps in the application of Baha'i ideals as they represent peace and word unity.

OBJECTIVE: That a National Peace Committee could have a real galvanizing impact, not only on the believers, but on the United States, its people, and its leaders.

Five years ago, the Universal House of Justice alluded to future glory for Baha'i institutions when it referred to "great humanitarian projects which will be launched" under the aegis of the administrative order. As a rule, though, Baha'i institutions have avoided involvement in humanitarian projects like famine relief, the resettlement of refugees (other than our own), or the provision of general assistance to victims of violence, natural disasters, or oppression. Many Baha'is argue, in fact, that our resources and energy must be used solely to build up the Baha'i pattern, because they are so limited, and should not be expended in the cause of "outside" concerns. This view has crippled our ability to show the world that our concern for humanity goes beyond a set of high-toned principles. The beginnings of a remedy for this perception have taken root in various social and economic development activities, but most have been limited and primarily local in their scope. The national coordination of annual social and economic development priorities, and the development of one goal area during each Plan for the general assistance of humanity, would much more closely parallel the Master's life and example.

ISSUE: If the Baha'i community could consult and agree on a more unified and specific approach to social and economic development at the national level, our effectiveness in demonstrating our concern for our fellow human beings and thus our teaching efforts would bear more fruit.

PROPOSAL: That the NSA establish in each successive Plan a specific area for the Baha'is to focus on-although not to the exclusion of other areas in

the matter of social issues (for example, civil rights, human rights, drug abuse, minority employment, etc.). Further, that the national assembly
itself take on the task of conceptualizing, planning, and carrying out
the centerpiece activity of such a campaign.

OBJECTIVE: That the resultant campaigns would bring Baha'i solutions to bear on difficult community problems; cause a vital intermingling of Baha'is
and non-Baha'is who are interested in solving society's problems: and provide every Baha' i with the assurance that his or her religion is interested in reaching out to others with a selfless and pure hearted concern.

The nine foregoing suggestions, as far as the authors know, violate no statutory provision in the Baha' i lexicon, nor do they go counter to any vital Baha'i spiritual principle. Their implementation would be a matter of simple legislation by the National Spiritual Assembly, and would only in a few cases involve further consultation with the Universal House of Justice.

None, with the possible exception of numbers 1 and 9, would require
any significant expenditure of funds. Most, if not all, would win wholehearted support by the majority of believers. And, perhaps most important, none of them are irreversible once adopted. All could be tried, and if found wanting, be easily jettisoned. Given the current state of our community,
might it not be worthwhile to give at least some of them a chance?

Note: This article never appeared in print. The editors submitted it for "review" (in-house official Baha'i prepublication censorship) to the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, and actually met with two members of that body in the spring of 1988. At National Convention in April
1988, the authors and editors were condemned for even thinking

about

publishing such a document. The editors, heart-broken, ceased publication of Dialogue. - Ed.

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Nima Hazini

---

Selected Messages for 2001

---

Selected Messages for 2000

---

Also see these related messages:

Re: The root of the problem 9/13/99

Re: The root of the problem \(was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer\) 9/24/99

Re: The root of the problem \(was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer\) 9/16/99

Re: The root of the problem \(was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer\) 9/14/99

Re: The root of the problem \(was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer\) Michael McKenny 9/10/99

Re: The root of the problem \(was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer\) 9/10/99

Re: The root of the problem \(was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer\) 9/7/99

---

From: <nima_hazini@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: The root of the problem (was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer)

Date: Monday, September 06, 1999 11:21 PM

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@email.msn.NOSPAMcom> wrote:

> Well, Nima, I was on Talisman at the time, and your account of the > facts leaves much to be desired.

Well, Rick, your official line interpretation of the facts hasn't shed much illumination, either, I dare say. Which leaves everybody still pretty much at square one.

> The individual who had been subject to administrative sanctions had > posted **slanderous remarks**, had agreed to post a

Slanderous remarks?! Hardly! The post(s) in question the honorable gentleman was taken to the proverbial cleaners for hardly constituted "slander" by any functional legal definition of the word. If so, why didn't the AO just sue the good gentleman in the courts? Well, it wasn't slanderous and so they couldn't do anything other than to take institutional retaliatory measures against the said individual's standing in the Baha'i community. And just to refresh your memory about the post in question, he was speaking of his personal observations about a particular mode of administrative operation the American NSA continually engaged in, and not about people's mothers or who they were sleeping with, etc. And how is drawing learned parallels between Stalinist or Nazi kangaroo courts and how the AO does things legally slanderous, pray tell? I'd really like to know this one for my own edification. Thanks.

> retraction, and failed to do so during the time-frame that he had >agreed to post that retraction.

Nonesense. I was both on Talisman and on Majnun, saw all the relevant correspondence between the good gentleman, the NSA and the House about the matter, and the good gentleman was given an extension on the time-frame by the NSA itself pending the House's reply. But when the said gentleman retracted (to the chagrin of the rest of us majnunis who advised him that he shouldn't) he was held to the original deadline, and thus had sanctions imposed. Now how are the actions of the AO to be taken in this matter other than that they were disingenuous from the beginning and that the good gentleman was being set-up as a scapegoat from the get-go? This I'm dieing find out.

> As for the post that Covenant-breakers were lurking on Talisman, it >was a simple statement of fact, and was, indeed, quite true.

Oh, really! Care to elaborate?

>The fact that far too many people misunderstand what the Counsellor >meant ought, by no means, become an indictment of the Counsellor who >made those posts.

OK. Let's see. The good Cousellor's first language is English. He's an American from the Midwest. He is an erudite and educated man. I believe he holds an MBA and teaches Business Administration and is some professional consultant, am I right? Therefore, his command of language and, need I say communication skills, is hardly that of a fifth grader. How is it then that the good Counsellor could convey his message in such vague and sloppy terms that the rest of us could so misunderstand his intentions? Rick, you're a much more conscientious and intelligent man than that, so be so good and stop insulting our intelligence.

> Lastly, to answer the question, there appeared to be a group of >individuals who were engaging in activities, and who appeared to have >motives, that were strikingly similar to those of Ahmad Sohrab.

And the US State Department in the late 40s/early 1950s was infiltrated by communist agents in the pay of Moscow after all...And ya'll get so angry when we draw comparisons to McCarthyism.

>The primary purpose for paying > people a visit would be to ascertain the truth.

Of what?

>Yet, we are to believe that this is a bad thing.

Well, look at it this way, if some official of a religious organization you happen to belong to barges into your living room and without context accuses you of being a near heretic because of your views, is that supposed to be a good thing?

> Dr. Cole has certainly intimated that the purpose of these visits was >to threaten people, but how can that be?

Very simple. When you start telling people that their statements on an academic email list are "covenantally suspect" and that they are "dangerously close" and then just barge into their living rooms stating the same and worse, just what in the heck is that other than a threat?
The good Counsellor wasn't exactly wooing the good Professor for a good old smooch session, you know I-)

>The Counsellors don't have the authority to do anything,

As they shouldn't, since they're not elected representatives.

>so, even if they do make a threat, they can't follow through with it.

Well, someone in the high ups should have had the foresight and decency to say just that before everything exploded into some Wagnerian opera.
But given that Counsellors usually do not act on their own initiative in such weighty matters, it was obvious to us that it wasn't the good Counsellor who was making the threats in the first place, but the ITC through the House.

>Every Counsellor knows this, and, thus, if we are to > accept Dr. Cole's thesis, we must presume that these Counsellors are > blithering idiots.

Much wisdom and calculation behind the blithering of idiots...

>Not one of the Counsellors I know could be remotely > described as "foolish".

I wholeheartedly agree. Very intelligent people, these Councilors.
They execute so well what they're told to, and strategically at that.

> Now, Counsellors do have the duty to inform people of the >consequences of their behavior.

And how, pray tell good sir, was the behavior of Juan Cole, John and Linda Walbridge, Steven Scholl, David Langness, Tony Lee, myself and a host of others on an academic email list either consequential or misbehavior? It wasn't. The powers-that-be did not desire real academic discourse in the Baha'i community in the first place (period) so moved as they did. Heck, they were ready to do it way back in January 95, long, long before Tasliman was even a 'consequential' email discussion list or a Majnun post strayed. They did it in 1988 with Dialogue magazine, for God's sake.

>If we are to accept Dr. Cole's thesis, however, we must > discount this possibility entirely.

Well, duh!

>Either that, or telling someone that walking into traffic could have >serious consequences for their health would have to be deemed a >"threat".

Non sequitor alert!

Rick (and am laughing heartily writing this) go back and read Baha'u'llah's Kitab-i-Iqan and come back and say this to me. But all the same it is not the business of Councillors who are not trained academics themselves to be telling people (and people who are within the bounds) what they can or cannot believe or state about their beliefs on an academic email list - and neither can the House. There is no ortho-doxo (correct opinion) in the Baha'i faith, but ortho-praxy (correct practice in terms of the divine Law). Furthermore, just what was so objectionable that the parallel of walking into traffic has been drawn? Because for instance they were stating the obvious that Shoghi Effendi's pronouncements on certain matters are not immutable for all time? Gee, even Shoghi Effendi said that about his own interpretations, Rick!

>Neither of these possibilities seems particularly plausible.

:-) Well, perhaps not to you...But, then again, it's your job to make it to be implausible. That's why you're an Assistant to an Auxilliary Board and not me or Michael. Not exactly my idea of a disinterested party, dude.

> I can't answer for Dr. Maneck, but I can return the question about > obfuscating truths. You've done it in this post. In fact, I've yet >to see anyone make a clear allegation about the "modus operandi" of the > Administrative Order without omitting rather important facts >regarding the events in question.

Oh, come off it, Rick! You and I weren't born yesterday. OK. You want facts about modus operandi. Let's talk about one example close to home. This is my own personal experience, so I trust you won't accuse me of embellishing or making things up.

I withdrew in November 1996 and moved back from California to the Southwest in March. I pretty much had severed all contact with Baha'is during this time, not to mention that I was off-line for much of 1997 (March to December). I reignited my former contacts with Sufi friends in the area and was even initiated into an Order. No one other me and one or two relatives, or so I thought, knew about my affiliation. In late December I came to visit my parents in Australia, and lo and behold, there's a letter waiting intercepted and kindly forwarded by the Local Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the Gold Coast to my parents. The letter originated from the Office of the Secretary-General of the US NSA which the Australian NSA had summarised key contents and forwarded to the LSA here. It was supposed to be strictly an internal, confidential administrative communique, but given that the LSA here are all decent people who know my family and I well, out of their genuine concern they sent a copy along - and a week before I arrive at that (the original US NSA to the Aussies communication having arrived a week before that).

In it the US NSA advises the Aussies that I had withdrawn accusing them of nasty things (not that I disagree with the assertion), and informing them that I had become "a supporter of Sufism." They then advise the Aussies to carefully monitor my activities, by which the NSA here adds that I should be kept away from the youth in the community and that my activities should be put under surveillance and reported to them, etc. And then I hear from one of the LSA members that they had previously been informed about me, my activities and my association and friendship with those bad scholars. And, this, to a community I didn't even belong to!

Now 1) how in the world did the US NSA know I had joined a Sufi order (I didn't advertise it) and 2) was coming to Australia? Moreover, 3) what business was it of the US NSA to spy into my personal life months after I had officially resigned and not even been in contact with Baha'is? Also, 4) what gives the US NSA and the Australian NSA the right to incite others to shun me when I'm not technically even a Baha'i? Don't they know that, at least here in Australia, surveillance of individuals for ideological purposes and institutional sanctioned shunning are illegal under the law? And 5) why is such Stalinist measures of surveillance, spying and blacklisting taken by certain "rogue" elements within the AO in the first place?

So, unlike some people, I do not believe such modus operandi are isolated instances. Stuff like this happens all the time within the Baha'i community to ideological undesirables like yours truly. And the other, similar, cases have already been recounted here again and again and again and elsewhere.

>This "modus operandi" emperor has no clothes.

Well, hopefully I've put some underwear on his Majesty.

> So, perhaps you will answer the question to which every other critic >has responded with nothing but personal insults. Why has no critic >ever told us all the facts, and has never given us just the facts >without either embellishing upon them or adorning them with >flourishing rhetoric?

Well, make what you will of the facts pertaining to my own case, and if you're man enough, draw the appropriate inferences from the other cases you know about.

But before I go, let me qualify something here. Unlike some others I do not believe that the entire AO is constituted by mean old fascist Stalinists tout court. Experience has proven to me that there are some genuinely good and sincere people within it. Maybe you're even one them, Rick. Who knows? The problem is that the "jerks" seem to be at the helm of things for now and the good ones, a silent majority, or just walking in step with the the jerks.

Regards,
Nima

> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

---

From: <nima_hazini@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: The root of the problem (was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer)
Date: Monday, September 06, 1999 12:49 AM

smaneck@aol.com (Smaneck) wrote:
> I have already stated why the Counselors visited certain persons, so I > will not repeat myself, here.

Why, pray tell? The good Counselor had already requested a meeting with at least one of the scholars before the infamous majnun post had even been misdirectedly posted. And at least one of the majnunis was being threatened with sanctions at the time by the Office of the Secretariat of the US NSA for a posting on Talisman. And let me remind you, since you weren't there, that it was the good Counselor who started posting vague, ambiguous messages about CBs lurking on Talisman, and it was a Baha'i-in-the-know in the UK who had first written Juan drawing parallels to Sohrab. So, again, given this, why exactly was the good Counselor so concerned about paying people visits?

> But I think Michael Mckenny is confused as to whose views > he is really opposed to.

Well, I don't speak for Michael, and neither do I agree with his wiccan-esque ecofeminism. But he's made many valid points here, points you yourself at least privately have conceded to in the past. So, I don't get it! Why is it, Susan, you will express your misgivings about the AO's modus operandi in private, but in public you will come out, intentionally obfuscate truths and take such a hardline defending its indefensible actions.

Regards,
Nima

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

---

From: <nima_hazini@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: The root of the problem (was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer)

Date: Tuesday, September 07, 1999 2:06 AM

"David Fiorito and Jennifer Spotila" <fiospots@pond.com> wrote:
> If I independently investigate the postulation the Baha'u'llah speaks >with Divine authority and I reach the conclusion that He does how am I >supposed to disregard His writings in favor of my own interpretation?

Because other than very specific areas of the Law, Baha'u'llah gives you the right to do so. Read the Kitab-i-Iqan. And how would a given conclusion necessarily disregard or negate His Writings? It would be a highly narrow, circumscribed view of the nature of Revelation to argue that it is. The range and scope of what He says is so infinitely vast in any given context, that a multiple and plurality of conclusionary applications are possible at any given time (so long as they are not touted as being authoritative). This is the difference between seeing progressive Revelation also applicable in the domain of our understanding of the Book, and one that sees it only in one domain (i.e. history) and insists the Book is closed until further notice. It's the difference between holding to a Logos that is forever active and immanent and engaging with and within us, and one who has no real connection to it other than in a peripherally superficial way.

> To me once an investigation has reached a conclusion and the Truth is >found then all you are left with is the duty to obey and the duty to >retest your conclusion, but not to disregard some ordinance that you >dislike.

That's assuming that any given conclusion is a once and for all, one time-only affair, static and immutable from further understanding(s) or refinement or fluidity. And who is saying that an ordinance has been disregarded? Any ordinance itself (because of its spiritual Divine nature) has a vast applicational range. But if a conclusion is skewed, it is skewed (no matter where the motivating premises derive from - albeit that does not negate the underlying principle itself, i.e. ordinance). No amount of justification is going to make it otherwise. And certainly Baha'u'llah never meant "rida" (acquiescence) to imply some sort of blind obedience or sheepish abeyance. That's Calvinism, ultra-montanist Roman Catholicism, usuli Twelver Shi'ism, but definitely **not** Baha'u'llah.

> If one does not agree with Baha'u'llah how can that person possibly >be a Baha'i?

This is a serious non sequitor. A fallacy of reasoning. The premises you seem to be setting out to justify in your conclusion are not borne out by facts in the world. And it also happens to be a red herring easily refutable. You're claiming that anyone who does not subscribe to a particularly closed hermeneutical vision of the Baha'i religion is ipso facto not a Baha'i. Baha'u'llah Himself already challenged that notion implicitly in the Aqdas, Iqan, his Tablet to Jamal Borujerdi and elsewhere.

> Independent investigation of the truth does not mean constantly >challenging authority and having things your own way.

Again a non sequitor. It's not simply a matter of someone having their own way or challenging authority for its own sake. Independent investigation of truth entails that it be unfettered and not fettered; unbound, not bound. Meaning, you follow the line of investigation wherever it might lead. If it be fettered as many fundamentalists would have us believe (doesn't matter what religion they belong to), then it's not an independent investigation of truth, but something else. So if it's something else (or, since there's failure to apply the unfettered standard to the quest), why call it 'independent' or an 'investigation', let alone of the truth. The type of pseudo-reasoning that is being called independent investigation of the truth by some within the Baha'i public sphere these days is in reality some sort of vacuous tautological doublespeak which does not care to think outside of its own narrow framework or paradigms. It sets out to demonstrate that which is already known to it, or rather that which it already has demonstrated to/and for itself. Now, how would this make it the same independent investigation of the truth of the sort lauded by Baha'u'llah? It simply isn't.

- > It means deciding for yourself
- > and living with the consequences of your decision.

So what's the problem?

Regards, Nima

---

From: <nima_hazini@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: The root of the problem (was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammar and Mahdi's grammar)
Date: Friday, September 10, 1999 11:26 PM

Hi Michael,

The fact is they had no legitimate grounds whatsoever for writing such a overtly slanderous letter about someone who is no longer a Baha'i on the rolls even. And what it in fact amounts to is institutional indulgence in one of Baha'u'llah's three deadly sins (i.e. backbiting, adultery and murder). Since I'm neither a drug dealer or a sexual predator (I'm too much of an old fashioned prude for either one), the only reason for advising that the youth be kept away from me, was for no other but for ideological purposes (period). And as far as 'corrupting the youth' in that respect is concerned, I guess I stand in the company of such important figures as Socrates :) This simply flatters me. The funny thing is, though, the letter in fact had the very opposite of the desired effect - especially since it was the LSA who forwarded the letter to my family. All the same, the thing to remember here is that no amount of Kafka-esque, Twilight Zone logic engaged in by Rick Schaut and other hardliners can in all honesty justify this sort of cultist behavior by the US and Aussie NSAs. No need to point out that it is this sort of internal blacklisting communiques that the Church of Scientology regularly conducts against disgruntled ex-members.

Regards,
Nima

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <nima_hazini@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: The root of the problem (was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer)

Date: Friday, September 10, 1999 1:02 AM

Dear Susan,

> I would be interested to see where Shoghi Effendi says this about his > interpretations (as opposed to his policies or his translations.)

I said "pronouncements" which would also fall under the rubric "policies" and "translations". But perhaps we could entice Jackson Armstrong-Ingram to post some unpublished letters, correspondences, etc., that would place certain interpretations under its purview, as well.

> You denied it a couple of years ago

I denied what a couple of years ago? That I had called the US NSA authoritarian!? Wrong denial, babe. Get your facts straight. I think I still have our correspondence tucked away somewhere, maybe I can find it and send it along to you to refresh your memory. If you recall, what I specifcally denied was the charge that I personally was responsible for some bogus claim that scholars should become a counter institution legally checking the powers of the UHJ. I'd never said any such thing. That was someone else.

> when I offered that as a possible > explanation for why this letter was written.

Your explanation was way off-the-mark.

> I read that letter and don't remember it saying anything about > monitoring your activities. Perhaps you could post the relevant > portion here.

I'll post the whole thing. See below.

> As I recall, it said the youth should be advised as to your present > status. Again, I don't remember it saying anything about being "kept > away."

No, it advised the LSA as to my present status. But, in effect, what it said was for me to be actively shunned and to be "alert" to my activities. Maybe I'm stupid, but what does being "alert" to someone's activities mean other than to monitor them?

Regards,
Nima

----

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHAI'S OF AUSTRALIA
INCORPORATED A.R.B.N. 009 727 128
(Incorporated in the A.C.T.) (Liability of members limited)

Phone: (02) 99113 2771 SECRETARIAT
Fax: (02) 9970 7275
Email: ausnsa@bahai.org.au

4 November 1997

The Local Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the Gold Coast
PO Box 833
Southport 4215

Dear Baha'i Friends,

RE: MR. NIMA HAZINI

The National Spiritual Assembly of Australia has been informed by the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States that Mr. Nima Hazini occasionally spends time in Australia visiting parents and often associates with the Baha'i youth here. As Mr. Hazini's parents are members of your community we are sharing the following information (which has been provided by the National Assembly of the United States) with your Assembly:

"...It is important for you to know that Mr. Hazini withdrew his Baha'i membership in December 1996 after expressing his strong dissatisfaction with the Baha'i community and our National Spiritual Assembly. Shortly after his withdrawal was accepted, Mr. Hazini wrote to the National Spiritual Assembly stating that he had not withdrawn from the Baha'i Faith but had withdrawn only from the Baha'i community. He provided a copy of his letter to the Universal House of Justice...When Mr. Hazini received a copy of the Universal House of Justice's letter, he chose not to pursue reinstatement of his Baha'i membership. The last information that we had about him was that he had decided to become a follower of Sufism."

At one stage Mr. Hazini was transferred to the United States as a Baha'i in good standing. However, in light of the information given by the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States we have made the necessary changes in our records about his status. Your Spiritual Assembly is advised to be alert to Mr. Nima Hazini's activities in your area, when he comes to Australia to visit his parents, especially his association with the Baha'i youth.. Thanking you for your cooperation and with loving Baha'i greetings.

Gul Williams for the Secretariat Reg.
Office: Baha'i National Centre,
173 Mona Vale Road, Ingleside, NSW

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Ex-Bahai - his response to Bahai NSA Surveillance 9/7/99 Nima Hazini

Bahai Fundamentalism Defined 9/25/2001 Nima Hazini

---

A letter from the NSA of the Bahais of the United States of America to their counterpart in Australia, posted to talk.religion.bahai by Nima Hazini:

(nima_hazini@my-deja.com) writes:

> ----
> NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHAI'S OF AUSTRALIA
> INCORPORATED A.R.B.N. 009 727 128
> (Incorporated in the A.C.T.) (Liability of members limited)
>
> Phone: (02) 99113 2771 SECRETARIAT
> Fax: (02) 9970 7275
> Email: ausnsa@bahai.org.au
>
> 4 November 1997
>
> The Local Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the Gold Coast
> PO Box 833
> Southport 4215
>
> Dear Baha'i Friends,
>
> RE: MR. NIMA HAZINI
>
> The National Spiritual Assembly of Australia has been informed by the > National Spiritual Assembly of the United States that Mr. Nima Hazini > occasionally spends time in Australia visiting parents and often > associates with the Baha'i youth here. As Mr. Hazini's parents are > members of your community we are sharing the following information > (which has been provided by the National Assembly of the United States) > with your Assembly:
>
> "...It is important for you to know that Mr. Hazini withdrew his Baha'i > membership in December 1996 after expressing his strong dissatisfaction > with the Baha'i community and our National Spiritual Assembly.
Shortly

> after his withdrawal was accepted, Mr. Hazini wrote to the National > Spiritual Assembly stating that he had not withdrawn from the Baha'i > Faith but had withdrawn only from the Baha'i community. He provided a > copy of his letter to the Universal House of Justice...When Mr. Hazini > received a copy of the Universal House of Justice's letter, he chose > not to pursue reinstatement of his Baha'i membership. The last > information that we had about him was that he had decided to become a > follower of Sufism."
>
> At one stage Mr. Hazini was transferred to the United States as a > Baha'i in good standing. However, in light of the information given by > the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States we have made the > necessary changes in our records about his status.

Your Spiritual

> Assembly is advised to be alert to Mr. Nima Hazini's activities in your > area, when he comes to Australia to visit his parents, especially his > association with the Baha'i youth.. Thanking you for your cooperation > and with loving Baha'i greetings.
>
> Gul Williams for the Secretariat Reg.
> Office: Baha'i National Centre,
> 173 Mona Vale Road, Ingleside, NSW
>
>
> Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
> Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Re: The root of the problem (was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammar and Mahdi's grammar)

Date:

1999/09/24

David Fiorito commenting, said:

> My understanding is that people who withdraw from the Faith are not > shunned in fact fellowship with them is welcome but their status should > be clear so that the relationship can be honest.

In the context of the missive of the US NSA to the Australians, this is a complete non-issue. Because 1) my family and relatives all knew about my withdrawal when I made it, 2) I was not living in Australia at the time (and had not for a good seven years when the letter was written) and only came to visit my parents and relatives once every year or so as a "visitor" and "guest", 3) therefore my status in a national community I was not even a member of was not the business of either the US NSA or the Australian NSA to clarify.

> The only "shunning" is the avoidance of Covenant breakers.

Which raises the issue that since the Baha'i AO has absolutely no legitimate grounds to declare either me or the rest of the Talisman 1 liberals or Michael McKinney tout court as CB's, they must resort to the same blacklisting and shunning methods engaged as if we were CBs. And the bottom-line in all this is about entrenched power and not principle. They do what they do, as in the letter about me, because we dare to speak the truth to their entrenched power.

<snip>

> It seems to me that the letter upset Nima and that both sides of the > debate are trying to use it to their advantage.

Upset?! Try libelled.

> When I read it I read some things that concerned me but I also saw some > things that I thought were quite legitimate when seen from the > perspective of an administrative body trying to protect the Faith

Protect the Faith from what?! A non-Baha'i? And what sorts of things in it were legitimate in your view from the perspective of any administrative body? That I had been spied upon by Brent Poirier for over a year after I had withdrawn and had absolutely nothing to do with Baha'is or the Baha'i community and that the letter arrives less than a fortnight before I came to visit my family is a legitimate undertaking in your view? You don't see the sinister disingenuity of Bob Henderson's action in this regard?

> though the methods and the wording of the letter may be > questionable.

Gee, I'll say...

> For instance - was Nima active in working with the youth?

Nope! Wasn't very active nor interested in such activities even when I was a Baha'i.

>If so doesn't the US NSA have a right to be concerned?

If I had been working with youth, yes, perhaps they would have a legitimate gripe to be weary of me from filling the heads of their precious youth with radical ideas. But since I never worked much with youth, even when I was a twenty-something Baha'i youth myself before I withdrew, I don't see what the point of the concern is.

>Could someone less principled than Nima withdraw from the Faith in one >country and then pose as a Baha'i in another and try to stir up >division?

You're leading into a straw man and a non sequitor and a red herring all in one fell swoop. a) I withdrew. b) everyone in my family knew I had withdrawn. c) after I had withdrawn I couldn't care less about the Baha'i community or its AO. d) therefore I joined a Sufi order in order to have some sort of spiritual outlet. e) I wasn't even going to look back on my tracks, until I arrived in Australia in November 1997 and found that libellous letter waiting for me. Now, who created the division: me or the AO?

>Isn't that a legitimate concern?

For the above reasons, and the other ones I've already spelled out in this thread, no they aren't.

> The question is what is the right way and what is the wrong way.

The question is why keep tabs on people in the first place and report on people who are not Baha'is but ones the office of the Secretary-General of the US NSA considers ideological enemies.

>The US NSA may have had the right intentions with the wrong execution.

Since Robert C. Henderson is the sole author of the original missive, both his intention and execution were misplaced and therefore unethical.

> I do not read the same sinister undertones that some of you have, but >I also don't read the same innocent undertones that others have either.

Well, at least you're more level-headed about the matter, which is refreshing.

Regards,
Nima

Sent via Deja.com

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <nima_hazini@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: The root of the problem
Date: Monday, September 13, 1999 1:56 AM

Susan,

> Well, if you reject the Will and Testament and the Covenant, you are >entitled to say that Nima. It was 'Abdul-Baha who forbade this, as I'm >sure you know.

Come again? I didn't reject anything. But now you're turning around introducing the tried and true ultra-orthodox ploy on the narrow reading of the WT of AB argument, and then you'll turn around later, I guess, and impute I'm a cb because I don't read it like you do?! Homey don't play that game. Sorry, try something better, Susan.

The doors of ijtihad as far as specific points of the Baha'i sharia are closed. That's it. Everything else as far as the Kitab-i-Iqan is concerned is wide open. But since ya'll subscribe to the "we'll take it from here Baha'u'llah" school of thought, you dismiss Baha'u'llah's fundamental importance and what He said in the greater scheme of things and especially His foundational critique of religious absolutism in the Kitab-i-Iqan. As such you have all misappropriated Baha'u'llah. Thus, to Baha'u'llah we shall return.

<snip>

> Because when we ignore 'Abdul-Baha's wishes we ignore Baha'u'llah as >well. It was They who estalished this system of authoritative >interpretation.

No one's ignoring `Abdul-Baha. But it would stand to reason that ya'll have ignored His Father.

Regards,
Nima

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <nima_hazini@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: The root of the problem (was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammar and Mahdi's grammar)

Date: Tuesday, September 07, 1999 2:06 AM

"David Fiorito and Jennifer Spotila" <fiospots@pond.com> wrote:
> If I independently investigate the postulation the Baha'u'llah speaks > with Divine authority and I reach the conclusion that He does how am I > supposed to disregard His writings in favor of my own interpretation?

Because other than very specific areas of the Law, Baha'u'llah gives you the right to do so. Read the Kitab-i-Iqan. And how would a given conclusion necessarily disregard or negate His Writings? It would be a highly narrow, circumscribed view of the nature of Revelation to argue that it is. The range and scope of what He says is so infinitely vast in any given context, that a multiple and plurality of conclusionary applications are possible at any given time (so long as they are not touted as being authoritative). This is the difference between seeing progressive Revelation also applicable in the domain of our understanding of the Book, and one that sees it only in one domain (i.e. history) and insists the Book is closed until further notice. It's the difference between holding to a Logos that is forever active and immanent and engaging with and within us, and one who has no real connection to it other than in a peripherally superficial way.

> To me once an investigation has reached a conclusion and the Truth is > found then all you are left with is the duty to obey and the duty to > retest your conclusion, but not to disregard some ordinance that you > dislike.

That's assuming that any given conclusion is a once and for all, one time-only affair, static and immutable from further understanding(s) or refinement or fluidity. And who is saying that an ordinance has been disregarded? Any ordinance itself (because of its spiritual Divine nature) has a vast applicational range. But if a conclusion is skewed, it is skewed (no matter where the motivating premises derive from - albeit that does not negate the underlying principle itself, i.e. ordinance). No amount of justification is going to make it otherwise. And certainly Baha'u'llah never meant "rida" (acquiescence) to imply some sort of blind obedience or sheepish abeyance. That's Calvinism, ultra-montanist Roman Catholicism, usuli Twelver Shi'ism, but definitely *not* Baha'u'llah.

> If one does not agree with Baha'u'llah how can that person possibly > be a Baha'i?

This is a serious non sequitor. A fallacy of reasoning. The premises you seem to be setting out to justify in your conclusion are not borne out by facts in the world. And it also happens to be a red herring easily refutable. You're claiming that anyone who does not subscribe to a particularly closed hermeneutical vision of the Baha'i religion is ipso facto not a Baha'i. Baha'u'llah Himself already challenged that notion implicitly in the Aqdas, Iqan, his Tablet to Jamal Borujerdi and elsewhere.

> Independent investigation of the truth does not mean constantly
> challenging authority and having things your own way.

Again a non sequitor. It's not simply a matter of someone having their own way or challenging authority for its own sake. Independent investigation of truth entails that it be unfettered and not fettered; unbound, not bound. Meaning, you follow the line of investigation wherever it might lead. If it be fettered as many fundamentalists would have us believe (doesn't matter what religion they belong to), then it's not an independent investigation of truth, but something else. So if it's something else (or, since there's failure to apply the unfettered standard to the quest), why call it 'independent' or an 'investigation', let alone of the truth. The type of pseudo-reasoning that is being called independent investigation of the truth by some within the Baha'i public sphere these days is in reality some sort of vacuous tautological doublespeak which does not care to think outside of its own narrow framework or paradigms. It sets out to demonstrate that which is already known to it, or rather that which it already has demonstrated to/and for itself. Now, how would this make it the same independent investigation of the truth of the sort lauded by Baha'u'llah? It simply isn't.

> It means deciding for yourself
> and living with the consequences of your decision.

So what's the problem?

Regards, Nima

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <nima_hazini@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: The root of the problem (was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer)

Date: Thursday, September 16, 1999 10:58 PM

Agha Cyrus jan,

Thank you for your forthrightness. It is always refreshing when an outsider sees and points things out objectively to certain fanatical adherents who blindly swallow and then attempt to enforce through serendipitious perversions of the truth the dicta of their amoral leaders. And you are definitely right that the sort of biased and selective interpretation of events which systematically attempts to put the Baha'i ao's actions always in the best light when there in confuting evidence to the contrary is no different than the the sort of thing we see with arch-defenders of the Islamic republic and mullocracy everyday on SCI and elsewhere who justify by minimizing the abuses committed by the khomeinist totalitarian religious fascism in Iran.

The real heartbreaking tragedy in all of this however are the Baha'is in Iran; those poor people who have innocently suffered for so long under the yoke of among the most blood-thirsty theocratic tyrants in history, the Shi'i `ulama, all the time unawares that the leadership of their own religion outside of Iran has become during the intervening years no different in its fundamentalist mindset and modus operandi than those turbaned theocratic stalinists in Qom and Tehran, the only difference being that the Baha'i leadership doesn't actually kill people. But as the saying goes, "kharr haman kharrast, faqat palanash avaz shodeh ast." ;-)

Furthermore, what's even more tragic in all of this, is the fact that we Iranian Baha'is for many years prided ourselves over many of our fellow non-Baha'i compatriots over the fact that the teachings of our religion were far more progressive, open, democratic and universalist than the rigid, exclusivist and generally bassackwards model of religion offered to our fellow countrymen by the obscurantist Shi'i `ulama. But when it came to the application of many of those teachings outside of our country in the past decades, we have, due to the connivance of some of our leaders, so far failed - and miserably; becoming yet another dysfunctional sect-like authoritarian cultic religion in the West among the numerous many such as the Church of Scientology or the Mormon Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, etc. It was this realization as well as others that finally propelled me out of the religion, but a religion whose best ideals I still maintain the utmost respect and reverence for.

However, having said that, this current dark abysmal trend within the Baha'i Faith, insha'llah, will change and reverse itself some day - leaving the current fundamentalist zealots and their destructive agenda in the trash-heap of history. Of that, I am fully confident.

Regards,
Nima

> Hmm. Why is it that religious fanatics and hardliners are _always_ > worried about _youth_ ? This is true in current Iran and now, with > your admittance, true about AO's worries and concerns ? Do you, or > Australia's NSA think of youth as bunch of sheep who can be > deceived by a travelling tourist with a different point of view > that "official" Aussie's NSA ? Amazing !
>
> > But I don't hear > > them suggesting that you should be shunned,

>
> You dont hear it because you are in line with "official" point > of view and nothing any NSA or LSA does is deemed wrong by you.
> Any outsider will see, by reading this letter, that some individual > is being spied upon and talked about simply because of his "thoughts" > (ie. Thought Crimes). And also, I agree with Nima, that that > particular LSA was being adviced (or ordered) to spy on Nima when > got there. There is absolutly no other way for LSA to be "alert" > of his activities.
>
> This letter confirms that all organized religions are afraid > of slightest free thoughts and opinion which is different from > their "official" world-view.
>
> > only to make sure you aren't trying > > to stir up some kind of trouble with the youth.
>
> ..again: Dont "youth" have any sort of brain of their own to > "think" ? Seems like Australia's NSA (and you I must say) are as > much afraid of possible poor Nima's influence on Youth as > Iranian Mullahs are afraid of Western thought's influence on > brainwashed Iranian Youths !!
>
> And this easily manipulated, brain-dead "youths" which can be so easily > turn "non-Bahai" by a travelling tourist ..is supposed to change > the world ?
>
> > Whether they had any reason to > > be concerned about this, you know best.
>
> Nima: stop messing with "youths" ! poor incocent "youths" that > all religious fanatics are worried about them.
>
> - Cyrus
>
> Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
> Share what you know. Learn what you don't.
>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <nima_hazini@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: The root of the problem (was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer)

Date: Tuesday, September 14, 1999 9:05 PM

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@email.msn.NOSPAMcom> wrote:
>
> <nima_hazini@my-deja.com> wrote in message > news:7rk7kc$jgu$1@nnrp1.deja.com...
> > > Again, there is nothing about shunning in that letter.
> > > Susan Stiles Maneck
>
> > What is it, you can't read, Susan?!
>
> Actually, Dr. Maneck is fully capable of reading. What she isn't > doing is reading into the text what you think she should be reading > into the text.

Rick, don't insult my intelligence. I tell you what, I'll post the appropriate law in a day or two for you, as well as Black's Law Dictionary's definition of libel and slander.

> I'm beginning to think that the "back to Baha'u'llah" movement has > little to do with Baha'u'llah and everything to do with a handful > academics who don't want to be bothered with having to understand how > Baha'u'llah's principles ought to be applied within an administrative > framework.

Which principles, Rick? Baha'u'llah never meant his principles to be applied into some fascist, Stalinist framework. And since neither you or Maneck read Persian or Arabic, you have no educated idea how to appropriately contextualize Baha'u'llah in the first place. And since you are also both nothing but quisling functionaries of the system, you are the last people on earth who are in any position to be expounding on what Baha'u'llah's principles even are. So, go tell that one to your priest, my friend.

> > This is what I meant when > > I said ya'll are such adepts at Kafka-esque, Twilight Zone logic.
>
> When the truth becomes slander, there certainly is a great deal of > "Kafka-esque, Twilight Zone logic" running through someone's head.

What truth, Rick? This is a superb display of Twilight Zone logic, not what I'm saying. That there was an attempt (and I say "attempt" since it backfired) to malign me by Robert Henderson is a lie and the Aussies sheepishly pursued someone else's agenda??? Three attorney's wanted to take the case here, since there was a case, but because I have some decency and decided that I did not wish a law suit upon an old friend (i.e. the Baha'i institutions in OZ), with my family's urging, held back from pursuing it. Shall I have one of my former attorney's out here now write your beloved leaders all a letter explaining the specific points of the law in Australia both the US NSA and the OZ NSA broke in this instance?

And btw what's this 'good cop/bad cop' game you and Susan are playing on this forum?

Regards,
Nima

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Michael McKenny <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
Subject: Re: The root of the problem (was Re: Baha'u'llah's grammer and Mahdi's gwammer)
Date: Friday, September 10, 1999 5:57 PM

Greetings, Nima.

Many thanks for posting this. It's always great to have the primary source documents for such things.

Yum. What a tasty little candy this is.

In my opinion, if they really had proof you were some kind of drug dealer or sexual predator, which is how that repeated comment about you and the youth could be taken, then, perhaps, they ought to have notified the police.

I've just said that there's this theory that one may not be insulted by errors in fact or by comments that are praiseworthy. So, if anyone wishes to check, they'll see I don't do drugs and I'm only interested in sex with consenting women of legal age. Such a letter couldn't insult me, were I the one being backbit here.

And, I guess in a Baha'i context, that's what's primarily at issue here, isn't it? What possible legitimate reason could there be for such backbiting? I wish I had more time. Oghma willing, I'll read some fascinating replies to your post and this quite informative letter, in the sense of demonstrating the backbiting being conducted by Baha'i institutions. I look forward to those responses.

To A Better Future,
Michael

(nima_hazini@my-deja.com) writes:

> ----
> NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHA'IS OF AUSTRALIA
> INCORPORATED A.R.B.N. 009 727 128
> (Incorporated in the A.C.T.) (Liability of members limited)
>

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <wahdat@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Letter of resignation
Date: Monday, July 26, 1999 1:35 AM

Dear Susan and all,

Sorry to jump into the conversation. I usually don't post to these forums. But something you wrote caught my eye. You said:

"My understanding of our present policy, which is based solely on empirical observation, not any statement in writing, is that if a person wishes to leave for reasons other than losing faith in Baha'u'llah the NSA will write them back and inform them that this is really not an adequate reason for withdrawing. However, the NSA will accept their resignation if they write back and second time and insist on leaving."

This isn't exactly how it happened to me. When I sent in my resignation letter to the American National Spiritual Assembly back in November 1996, I told them in no uncertain terms that I wished to withdraw from the *Baha'i community* due to the wrong direction I felt the Baha'i Faith was currently being led by its leadership given all that transpired as a result of the Talisman 1 fiasco. But I also spelled it out to them very strongly that I continued to believe in Baha'u'llah as the Manifestation of God for the age (which I still do). They speedily accepted my resignation without why or wherefore, yet didn't seem to have gotten the distinction I made in my letter that I was merely leaving the community and not the Faith itself. Interestingly, when the House responded to my withdrawal (I had cc'd them), they did understand the distinction I had made but told me it was one I couldn't make. To make a long story short, I chose to remain on the outside until such time as the internal contradictions (to use a marxian catch-phrase) within the Baha'i community are resolved. But I am still very much a believing Baha'i (Bab, Baha'u'llah, `Abdul-Baha, Shoghi Effendi, Universal House of Justice and all).

Best regards, Nima

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

9 Bahai Denominations

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/ninedenominations.htm>

Also see US District Court of Northern Illinois rules against Haifan Baha'is - April 23, 2008

Amici curiae, Reform Bahai Faith

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USDistrictCourt07.htm>

The Orthodox Baha'i lawyer Jeffrey Goldberg in his Response to the 2006 lawsuit that is currently being brought against other Bahai denominations in the Courts of Illinois rightly points out that there are now 9 denominations of the Bahai Faith. (I believe there has now evolved a 10th Baha'i denomination.)

"There are at least nine organizations now existing and operating at some level that practice a denomination of the "Bahá'í" religion (Goldberg Decl., Para. 51; Schlatter Decl., Para. 18-21). One is not a Bahá'í because of which denomination one belongs to, one is a Bahá'í because of the system of set of beliefs and doctrines one holds. The NSA's own web site defines a Bahá'í in this manner (Schlatter Decl., Para. 43)."

https://trueseeker.typepad.com/true\_seeker/court\_case.html

Nine Denominations (10):

Four Orthodox Bahai denominations, believing Charles Mason Remey was the successor to Shoghi Effendi.

1) Orthodox Bahá'í Faith (the OBF Respondents, following Joel B. Marangella); <https://www.orthodoxbahai.com/>

2) Bahá'ís Under Provisions of the Covenant (the other Respondents, following Leland Jensen); <https://www.bupc.org/>

3) Tarbiyat Bahá'í Community (formerly known as Orthodox Bahá'ís Under the Regency) (Rex King group); www.tarbiyatcenter.org

4) Bahá'ís Under the living Guardianship <https://guardianshipofthebahaifaith.org> (Donald Harvey as the third Guardian and Jacques Soghomonian as the fourth Guardian), an organization that is the successor to the Remey NSA; www.Bahai-Guardian.com

Three denominations believing that the 1921 unprobated will & testament of Abdul-Baha is a fraudulent document and that Abdul-Baha did not appoint Shoghi Effendi or anyone else as a successor, but that he looked forward to a "spiritual democracy, not a theocracy," with ultimately an elected Universal House of Justice.

5) Reform Baha'is <https://www.reformbahai.org/>

6) Free Baha'is <https://freebahais.com>

7) Unitarian Baha'is <https://members.tripod.com/ninetin/abdulbaha/contents.htm>

UU? Unitarian Baha'is <https://www.unitarianbahai.org/>

One denomination believing in the authenticity of the unprobated, unauthenticated will and testament of Abdul-Baha, which they believe appointed in 1921 Shoghi Effendi as a guardian, a Shiite mullah or pope-like figure controlling a theocratic world order.

8) The Bahá'í Faith or Bahá'í World Faith (the Movant NSA) - (AKA Haifan Baha'is)

One denomination believing the next Manifestation of God is imminent, rather than appearing in a thousand years as prophesied by Baha'u'llah.

9) John Carre (followers of Alif a Third Manifestation of God - the third letter of the Greatest Name) <https://www.metavergence.com/john/> "

THE SPIRITUAL FOUNDATION OF SOCIETY

https://ca.geocities.com/johncarre/island\_of\_hope.html

AN ISLAND OF HOPE

https://ca.geocities.com/johncarre/island\_of\_hope.html

TARIQAT

<https://ca.geocities.com/johncarre/tarigat.html>

www.angelfire.com/amiga/humanity/Bahai\_Orgs.htm

10) I would add a 10th denomination. The so-called "unenrolled Baha'is" or "independent Baha'is" who in some sort of quixotic dream await the uhj to wake up or reform itself into the liberal, sane, moderate religion that both Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha clearly taught and envisioned, yet who, in their implicit exemplification of Abdul-Baha's Teaching that the Bahai Movement cannot be organized, essentially follow, partway, the practice of the Reform Bahais, who realize that the only course now open at this historical juncture is to renew and return to the Example and Interpretation of the Center of the Covenant, the 1912 Covenant, the authentic Covenant of Abdul-Baha.

For those unfamiliar with the Haifan NSA's attempt to deprive other Bahais of their first amendment rights of liberty and freedom of religious conviction, I urge you to read the documents involved on both sides at

https://trueseeker.typepad.com/true\_seeker/court\_case.html

[some URLs added above and text edited and revised]

Jeffrey Goldberg has further annotated a few of the nine denominations mentioned above:

"NSA-UHG = The National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States Under the Hereditary Guardianship. This was the entity against whom the 1966 Judgment was entered -- the NSA under Mason Remey --.

PNBC = The Provisional National Baha'i Council of the United States - the national governing body of the Orthodox Baha'i Faith (OBF) and one of the entities the Wilmette NSA brought into court.

SIBC - This is the Second International Baha'i Council. Involved in the action brought by the Wilmette NSA, the SIBC was the governing body of the Jensen group. This has nothing to do with the OBF. The SIBC also was the name of an unrelated body under Mason Remey of the same name.

BPUPC - Baha'i Publishers Under the Provisions of the Covenant - One of the entities the NSA brought contempt charges against and it is related to the Jensen/ Chase group and not to the OBF."

For a historical perspective, see the documents at Lawsuit by Wilmette NSA Against Other Denominations

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

One can only hope the Court will be wise enough to understand what is truly involved.

--

FG

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

See 2007 - Lawsuit by Wilmette NSA Against Other Denominations

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

See too Mahmoudi

For further evidence of baha'i involvement in politics, see extensive manipulation of the United Nations

To understand the uhj's playing to the NGO community, a further instance of its subtle involvement in politics, see its use of Marxist historian Eric Hobsbawm cited in The Century of Light.

---

----- Original Message -----

From: "Freethought110"
<freethought110@yahoo.com>

Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai,soc.culture.iranian

Sent: Saturday, August 09, 2003 10:03 PM

Subject: NITV's baha'is

> This is a repost.
>
> Note:
>
> Sabet Imani (Vice President) is a Baha'i. HOW CAN A BAHA'I BE > OPENLY INVOLVED IN POLITICS AS TO HAVE
FINANCIAL SHARES IN A > PRO-MONARCHIST TV STATION ? ? ? ! ! ! [ in Los Angeles broadcasting to Iran ]
>
> Mojdeh Habibi (news anchorwoman) is a Baha'i
>
> Dr Leila Hashemi (Psychologist) is a Baha'i
>
> Parviz Nazerian is a Baha'i
>
> Mitra Rashidi is a Baha'i. Homa Mahmoudi has now left NITV.

No response has ever been given to this letter instead Patrick O'Holy Kohli has offered misdirected obfuscation and non sequiturs without answering the key question _why_ baha'is have been involving themselves in partisan politics that includes a stated platform to overthrow the government and regime of the Islamic Republic of Iran when they claim neutrality, while a baha'i like Abdulhamid Taheri in Perth, WA is threatened, sanctioned and his life disrupted by the nsa of Australia for merely reading Persian poetry on a local cable access channel? Can Holy Kholi address this without making himself and his cult look ridiculous? Probably not.

Note Homa Mahmoudi has since moved from NITV but has been replaced by Mitra Rashidi. Also, all the current news broadcasters of NITV are all Iranian baha'is. Zia Atabay (whose brother has been personal secretary to the office of Farah Diba Pahlavi) is also related to baha'is.

--

I would like to draw the attention of my fellow compatriots as well as average rank-and-file Baha'is to an issue which I believe beautifully underscores the blatant public hypocrisy and power mongering of Baha'i officials and those who are connected to them, and why especially non-aligned Iranians should be ever heedful of wools being pulled over their eyes by the PR machine of the Baha'i administration. To begin with, it is a well known (or, rather, well claimed) principle of the Baha'i faith that sectarian political involvement of any sort is to be shunned and is therefore categorically prohibited to Baha'is. While this principle has not always been meticulously adhered to either by officials or those connected to them (i.e. Sabet, Yazdani, Ayadi, et al), nevertheless it is an issue which has been used repeatedly to either sanction or strong-arm less well connected (and average) Baha'is by the Baha'i leadership into compliance with its dictates.

Recently Ms Homa Mahmudi has been a regular commentator on and contributor to the satellite opposition Iranian Television broadcasting station NITV. The station itself, its broadcasts or its specific slant or political views are not an issue for me, as I sometimes watch it myself as well as include myself firmly within the camp of opposition to the illegitimate fascist totalitarian Islamist regime in Tehran which I hope will be toppled in short order. However I am not a Baha'i, but Homa Mahmudi is! The specific issue in question relates to --and one which in due time I will disclose the full details relating thereunto to SCI, TRB and other Iranian groups and boards on the internet -- the double standards regularly employed by Baha'i officials to dupe a non-Baha'i public audience, on the one hand; and the authoritarian bullying of average individual Baha'is internally who sincerely engage in association and fellowship with other Iranians who are non-aligned, locally and on a smaller scale, in no different terms than what Ms Mahmoudi is doing herself in LA, on the other. Baha'i officials regularly admonish rank-and-file Baha'is to keep far and away from their compatriots, but then actively seek celebrity status in the name of the Baha'i faith to advance some dubious agenda of their own within the larger Iranian community.

That said, it has been claimed for two decades now by Baha'i officials that any overt acts of alignment or fellowship with various non-Baha'i groups with stated political platforms will have adverse repercussions for the Baha'is of Iran. To any unbiased observer, Homa Mahmudi's activities in any capacity on the NITV network do just that -- it also gives the lie away and a useful weapon to the IR itself to use against the Baha'is inside Iran --and as such it is highly irresponsible of the Baha'i leadership at this time to be foisting Ms Mahmudi on the NITV network and upon the larger Iranian community, given the potential fallout such activities will most definitely have for their co-religionists back home. Rank-and-file Baha'is have been sanctioned and humiliated by the Baha'i leadership for far less than what Ms Mahmudi is being led to do right now representing the Baha'i leadership as she is on NITV.

Of course I am most delighted that this revelation about Baha'i AO officiocratic involvement with the pro-monarchist NITV has now come out into the full light of day. This places the Baha'i AO's cards firmly on the table on where they actually stand regarding the future of my homeland. So now let me ask them the following:

1) Who negotiated with NITV to have this program? Such programs do not appear out of thin air. There are always legal/contractual processes involved in the finalization of such things long before they are aired.

2) Who decided that the monarchists should be given preferential treatment over other opposition groups?

3) On what grounds did Zia Atabai grant them permission to air a program on the Baha'i faith on their station, and what are the trade offs?

4) Given this, is it not therefore possible to speculate (as it has been by Islamists) that are ties between the Israeli government, Iranian Jews in LA, Iranian Jewish producers in LA (who direct NITV) and the AO mob obviously in charge of promoting this program?

Arguably the people who made this decision are the old time moneyed
Nouveau Riche Baha'i hacks of Pahlavi era yore who enjoyed unlimited privileges under the Pahlavi regime (namely Shapour Rassekh, Iraj Ayman, Farhang Halaaku'i, and others). At this time from the numerous feedback I and others have recieved privately over this there are clear signs of discomfort and disenchantment amongst many Iranian Baha'is of an even conservative bent over this program and its forum. This shows that the AO is not only out on left field, as usual, but also completely out of touch with many among its own core political constituents.

Clearly, at this point, it seems the dominant clique inside the Baha'i religion who are pulling the strings are longing for a repeat of the good old days under Mohammad Reza Shah Pahlavi: actions which ultimately cost the Baha'i community heavily and dearly under the Khomeinists and was the basis upon which many innocent, average Baha'is suffered persecution by that regime. At this time, there doesn't seem to be any guarantees that should Reza Pahlavi be installed as monarch (constitutional or otherwise) the Baha'i AO would not support another Hojabr Yazdani, Dr Ayadi or Habib Sabet from cooperating with the Pahlavi mob. Their current behavior and their relationship with NITV currently demonstrates otherwise. So I frankly ask the Baha'i leadership the following (since they are obviously reading
this):

- 1) Do you believe in the democratic form of government?
- 2) Do you believe in the separation of religion and the state?

3) Do you believe in self-determination and independence for Iran?

4) What lessons have you learnt from the last Revolution?

5) What do you truly think of the activities of Habib Sabet, Hojabr

Yazdani and Dr Ayadi and co under the last Pahlavi regime before the Revolution?

6) What is your attitude to an individual Baha'i having a program on,

let us say for the sake of argument, a network run by the Iranian Communist Party, the National Front or even the MKO?

I look forward to the Baha'i administration's official response regarding all (not some but ALL) of these questions.

--

Freethought110 - Nima Hazini

---

----- Original Message -----

From: "Freethought110"
<freethought110@yahoo.com>

Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai,soc.culture.iranian

Sent: Sunday, August 10, 2003 7:32 PM

Subject: baha'is backpeddle on NITV

Recently one baha'i internet agent said to another regarding NITV:

"Dear Paul,

I think if Nima had done his homework he would have found that none of the Baha'is involved in this network are really active in the Baha'i community in any case. They are mostly Baha'is in name only.

warmest, Susan"

LOL

First they deny there is a program. Then they deny that there is anything wrong with baha'is participating on NITV as well as denying that Zia Atabay's station is political or until recently allied to the cause of Reza Pahlavi. Now the story changes that those baha'is participant on NITV aren't actually active or good baha'is at all. Obviously the baha'i authorities have no coherent response to the questions about their participation on NITV while having us believe at the same time that it is not political. I guess following this train of logic, NITV wasn't instrumental (among other forces) in leading the recent student protests. The IRI hasn't complained about NITV and Fidel Castro's Cuba hasn't actually blocked it's signals. No. These are figments of our imagination, or so the baha'i authorities (via their internet agents) would have us believe.

It would certainly be news to both Homa Mahmoudi and Mitra Rashidi - who both have hosted overtly baha'i programs on NITV and as far as I am aware are both still active baha'is - that somehow they are not good baha'is or active anymore and baha'i in name only. Mitra Rashidi actively promoted baha'ism on her show, and she invited baha'i guests to promote the religion on this show, all the guests whom are noted active Iranian baha'is living in the Los Angeles area and not just in name only, such as the painter (Golestaneh?) who exhibited her painting representing baha'i martyrs earlier in the year. No folks.

None of this really happened. Mitra Rashidi, Homa Mahmoudi, the baha'i programs and those baha'i crew of NITV are figments of our imagination. They are not *really* baha'is. They don't really exist. They are computer generated animations. Technological fictions, no less, albeit they walk among us in the real world and identify themselves as baha'is in the *real world*. This, dear compatriots, is the world of baha'i spin!

---

----- Original Message -----

From: "Freethought110"

<freethought110@yahoo.com>

Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai,soc.culture.iranian

Sent: Saturday, September 20, 2003 1:48 AM

Subject: NITV, baha'is & Australia

It has been brought to my attention that a certain Mr Jamshid Fanayan has been deputized by the national spiritual assembly of the baha'is of Australia (nsa) to call the Iranian baha'is throughout the country and discuss with them the thorny, embarrassing issue which the opposition satellite station NITV has become for the fascist baha'i administration. This issue had been a hot topic as recently as the last baha'i national convention in April this year. It seems that many baha'is both in Australia as well the United States have been intensely questioning their baha'i representatives about the overtly political nature of baha'i involvement on this - until recently - overtly pro-monarchist statellite station. Mr Fanayan, as scripted by the politiburo of the baha'is - its Stalinist AO based in and serving the masters of Zionist occupied Palestine -, has been arguing that the involvement of baha'is is not political due to the fact that news anchoring and interviewing is harmless and does not

ipso facto constitute political involvement per se. This is overt obfuscation and a case of unbelievable spin-doctoring and outright deception and goes completely against the grain of what Dr Maniac - the most prominent agent of the baha'i cult on the internet - argued until recently, saying that those baha'is on NITV are really inactive and baha'is in name only. It also goes against the established fact that Mr Sabet Imani, a long time baha'i and a very active member of the Los Angeles baha'i community, holds, I have been told on very reliable authority, close to a 50% share in the ownership of NITV. He and Zia Atabai are business partners in the NITV venture. Yet Mr Fanayan has been silent about this fact in his telephone "goh khordan" conversations with the Iranian baha'is whom he has been calling around the clock recently.

In this conversation, as a face-saving measure for the corrupt AO and its actions, Mr Fanayan point-blank admitted that 1) political non-involvement was a specifically ad hoc measure introduced by Abbas Effendi Abdul-Baha (d.1921) during the last stages of
the 1905-09
Constitutional Revolution when the imperialist powers Britain and Russia intruded in the process of Iran's politics, as well as due to Azali and Islamist enmity towards baha'is, and so therefore Abbas Effendi Abdul-Baha had urged baha'is to pull themselves out of Iran's politics and remain neutral for that time only. It was indeed the demented authoritarian grandson of Abbas Effendi Abdul-Baha, Shohgi Effendi Rabbani, who apparently misunderstood the issue and made this principle into an immutable baha'i teaching.
Interestingly historian Juan Cole has been arguing this same point, and establishing documentary evidence to that effect, since the early 90s. Yet he was targetted, bullied and blacklisted by the fascist baha'i administration for saying it. This proves that when it suits these hypocritical two-faced fascist Stalinists they will use the arguments of their own enemies to extricate themselves out of any embarrassing situation which they have put themselves in. 2) Unbelievably Mr Fanayan has also point blank stated that baha'is were heavily involved in politics during the Shah's regime, held high positions in the civil service and - wait for it! - even ____held administrative posts in the Shah's secret police, the SAVAK____. This is the same SAVAK that was trained and established by the CIA and MOSSAD, and the same SAVAK which exercised the, until then, the most brutal methods of torture out of all the secret police agencies of any Mid East regime at the time. Mr Fanayan mentioned this because he wished to emphasize the fact that political non-involvement vis-a-vis baha'is is a moot point and no longer relevant. But we already knew that, but no one has bothered to tell that to Stephen Hall who disenrolled Abdulhamid

Taheri for reading the poetries of Rumi and Parvin Ete'sam on a local cable program in Perth, WA. Nor has anyone bothered to mention this to the uhj and various national baha'i assemblies who prohibit rank-and-file baha'is from joining any human rights organization or peace groups on the basis that they are political, let alone get involved in outright political causes. Obviously, as always, Mr Jamshid Fanayan is merely articulating the well established doctrine of "two truths" and "two standards" which is the preeminent doctrine exercised by the baha'i administration.

Following from this, as of last month the Australian satellite company which has carried NITV from its inception, without explanation or reason to any of its subscribers, cancelled its subscription to NITV, and so as of August NITV is no longer carried by any satellite network in Australia. The rumours which have circulated amongst Iranians of all walks in Australia is that this was the work of the IRI. However, I believe this is rubbish, absolutely not the case and that the IRI would have more reason to come to an arrangement to have NITV cancelled in the US, Canada or Europe rather than Australia. Rather, given the frenetic pace by which the baha'i authorities are trying to allay the grilling questions directed at them about baha'i involvement on NITV daily, it would make more sense and appear that the blame lays squarely at the feet of baha'i administration itself who have possibly come to an arrangement and thus paid off this company to cancel NITV on this continent. This, because publicity about baha'i involvement in NITV was exposed from Australia by myself and not in the US, Canada, Europe, or the Mid East, but Australia. Obviously the ao is increasingly becoming more and more desperate as more and more of its dirty laundry is being exposed, and more and more it is revealed just what kind of organization the haifan baha'i cult is running, especially given the exposure of baha'i Mai Pederson and her career as a spook for Uncle Sam.

So, given all this, I would ask my fellow compatriots in Australia who are pissed off that their satellite company cancelled NITV without explanation, to more appropriately direct their questions from now on to the baha'i authorities in this country, for it would seem they (not the IRI) has more stake and reason to see this program be cancelled and not covered in Australia.

Kosh peesh!

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Also see US District Court of Northern Illinois rules against Haifan Baha'is - April 23, 2008
Amici curiae, Reform Bahai Faith
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USDistrictCourt07.htm>

---

New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD & LIBEL 3/2/2001 Deborah Buchhorn
New Mexico LAWSUIT - Response to Motion to Dismiss 5/2001
Yorgos D. Marinakis, Attorney
New Mexico LAWSUIT - Attorney's Statement 5/26/2001 Yorgos D. Marinakis, Attorney
New Mexico LAWSUIT - Amicus Curiae 7/13/2001 FG

See my comments at New Mexico Lawsuit Annotated

SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT
COUNTY OF BERNALILLO
STATE OF NEW MEXICO

DEBORAH BUCHHORN, for herself and for MINORITY MEMBERS OF THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHAIS OF ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO,
Plaintiffs,

vs. No. CV 2001-01978

TRUSTEES OF THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHAIS OF
ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, and
THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHAI OF ALBUQUERQUE,
NEW MEXICO, a non-profit corporation, and the NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHAI OF
THE UNITED STATES, an Illinois Corporation,

Defendants.

VERIFIED COMPLAINT FOR FRAUD, LIBEL, BREACH OF CORPORATE DUTIES, AND DECLARATORY AND INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

COMES NOW Plaintiffs by and through their attorney of record, Yorgos D.
Marinakos, and for their Complaint states as follows:

INTRODUCTION

- 1. Plaintiffs file this shareholder or member derivative suit against:
  - the Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of Albuquerque,
New Mexico (Local Spiritual Assembly, or LSA),
  - their Trustees, and
  - the Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of the United States (National Spiritual Assembly, or NSA), with whom the Local Spiritual Assembly and its Trustees have privity.
- 2. Plaintiffs allege that Trustees breached their duties as corporate officers.
- 3. Plaintiffs allege that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their duty of deciding appeals owed to Plaintiffs.
- 4. Plaintiffs allege that the literature review policies of the Local Spiritual Assembly and the National Spiritual Assembly, which lie in privity, unlawfully prevent shareholders from their right to communicate with other shareholders.
- 5. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants failed to execute their duties under their corporate by-laws.

PARTIES

- 6. Named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn was a shareholder or member of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of Albuquerque, New Mexico, at the time of the incidents stated in this Complaint, and she continues to be a member.
- 7. The Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of Albuquerque, New Mexico (Local Spiritual Assembly) is a New Mexico non-profit corporation.

Shareholder-members may appeal decisions by the Local Spiritual Assembly to the National Spiritual Assembly.

8. The Trustees of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of Albuquerque, New Mexico (Trustees) individually reside in Bernalillo County, New Mexico, as a condition of their Trusteeship. Trustees are Kambiz Victory, Ok-Sun and John McHenry, Manijeh Kavelin, Nelson Sapad, Harry and Sondra Day, Owen Creightney, and Carol Caldwell. Jenny Beery was a Trustee during the time of many of these incidents.

9. The Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of the United States (National Spiritual Assembly) is incorporated in and has its principal place of business in Illinois.

FACTS

10. The Bah 'i have no clergy. Instead, each community in the Bah 'i Faith annually elects nine Trustees or a "Local Spiritual Assembly," which acts as an agent or subsidiary of the National Spiritual Assembly. Each National Spiritual Assembly answers to the supreme Bah 'i body, The Universal House of Justice. The Universal House of Justice established the Continental Board of Counsellors (sic) to assist them, and the Countinental Board of Counsellors further has the Auxiliary Board to assist them.

11. In the particular situation between the Trustees of the Spiritual Assembly of Bah 'is of Albuquerque, New Mexico, Defendants Trustees controlled what member activities Plaintiffs were able to engage in and what members they were able to talk to. They stopped them from interacting with friends at member events. They stopped Plaintiffs from serving on committees and stopped their individual activities for personal reasons.

They made all the decisions relating to Plaintiffs' membership-related activities. They told named Plaintiff that opinions she may personally hold were bad and implicitly threatened to curtail her presence at member functions. They acted as if the abuse were no big deal, that it was Plaintiff's fault, and denied doing it. They failed to act when one member was physically threatened and shoved by another member.

12. Although Plaintiffs have consistently complied with Defendant Trustees' demands, they have also consistently filed complaints against them with the National and International Bah 'i authorities. This has enraged the Defendant Trustees.

13. Defendant Trustees have never made specific accusations or informed Plaintiffs of wrongdoing, other than vague statements such as "you have issues with the Spiritual Assembly."

14. Therefore, deep-seated animosities and distrust have arisen between Plaintiffs and the Trustees, which are incapable of resolution and thereby present an irreconcilable barrier to the ability of the corporation to function as is.

15. Plaintiffs' reasonable expectations that they would be able to participate in the management and activities of their corporation, as minority shareholders, have been thwarted since at least 1995.

16. Article IV of the LSA by-laws provides that the LSA shall compose differences and disagreements among members of the community. Article VII, section 9 of the NSA by-laws provides that any member of a Bah 'i community may appeal from a decision of his LSA to the NSA.

Failure to Allow Inspection of Books and Records

17. The books and records of the corporation have been maintained in an inaccurate and inequitable manner.

18. The year 2000 annual meeting showed a 10%,

$10,000 discrepancy in the corporate books.

19. In a letter dated September 3, 2000, named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn informed the Local Spiritual Assembly that she desired to inspect their financial books. Defendants refused.

20. Following mailing of the demand letter, the LSA offered to allow named Plaintiff to inspect the books and records, but under conditions that the Plaintiff deemed in bad faith.

Fraudulent Oppression and Prevention of Communications between Shareholders

21. On April 19, 1998, Defendant Trustees ordered named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to refrain from discussing her "issues" with anyone but Auxiliary Board member Brent Poirier and the Local Spiritual Assembly. Plaintiff complied and appealed to Brent Poirier and the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action. Defendant LSA has wrapped many of their dealings with members in the cloak of secrecy in a like manner.

Electioneering

22. At the Annual Meeting Feast of 1999, Defendant Trustees fraudulently rigged the election of Trustee Nelson Sapad by calling for applause for him three times prior to an election of corporate officers. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

23. Defendant Trustees or their agents fraudulently rigged the election of Harry and Sondra Day, by introducing them and calling for applause moments before an election of corporate officers.

24. Trustees do not ensure secret balloting at the Annual Meeting Feast. The usual practice is not to use a ballot box, but for members to lay their ballots on a plate or in a basket in plain sight of the election tellers.

Ms. Buchhorn appealed to Brent Poirier on at least one election. Mr.

Poirier responded by handling the collection basket himself.

25. In the member newsletter and prior to the annual election and during the Annual Meeting Feast, Trustees have used scriptural quotes to draw attention to persons serving on certain committees.

Fraudulent and Oppressive Behavior Relating to the TV Show "Spiritual Reality"

26. Plaintiffs conceptualized and produced a TV show named "Spiritual Reality." After 100 showings, during which Defendant Trustees only complimented Plaintiffs, Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, mandated major changes in the show. Plaintiffs complied and appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

27. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered Plaintiffs to "temporarily postpone" their television show, "Spiritual Reality." Plaintiff complied, and Defendants never specifically informed Plaintiffs what they had done to precipitate the arbitrary and capricious termination. The effect of this order, namely the termination of the TV show, violated the right of shareholders to communicate with other shareholders.

28. Trustees fraudulently and under false pretences stated that the reasons for termination would be fully discussed at a later meeting, at which meeting those reasons were never discussed. Defendant Trustee Kambiz Victory, employee of channel 41, knew or should have known that a television program cannot be "temporarily postponed." Plaintiffs appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action.

29. Defendant Kambiz Victory, a Trustee, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, told named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn in regards to her television show that "Your teaching can have no effect because you are not in unity with the Spiritual Assembly." Defendant knew that Ms. Buchhorn's television show brought in 15% of the information requests during an unrelated major regional advertising campaign by Defendants. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action.

30. Defendant Trustees fraudulently and under false pretences set-up Plaintiffs to a "confession" of their animosity towards Defendant Trustees. Named Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action.

Other Oppression

31. As an act of individual initiative, named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn organized a Bah 'i parade float for several years for the New Mexico State Fair Parade. In 2000, Defendant Trustees convened a task force to organize the parade float for that year. On August 22, 2000, approximately 19 days before the parade, Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, instructed Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to terminate her parade float activities. A false reason for this termination was published in the membership newsletter by Defendant Trustees, causing Plaintiff embarrassment. Plaintiff complied, and Defendant never informed Plaintiff as to the reason for that termination. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

32. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to receive instruction on the Bah 'i Covenant. Plaintiff complied and attended that "instruction," which in fact consisted of three (3) hours of interrogation by Trustee Owen Creightney, and John and Ok-Sun McHenry. It became apparent at this meeting that Trustee Creightney had lied to the Trustees in order to oppress named Plaintiff. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

33. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to resign from the Bah 'i gospel choir. Plaintiff complied, and Defendant never informed Plaintiff as to the reason for that termination. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

34. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, undermined named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn's Saturday Night Coffee House and in effect stopped her Coffee House. Defendant never informed Plaintiff as to these circumstances. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

35. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, have ordered numerous Bah 'is to shun Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn.

36. Defendant Trustee Kambiz Victory told a Plaintiff "I am the voice of God in this community."

Libel

37. Defendant Trustees knowingly published false and defamatory information about Plaintiffs in the Albuquerque Bah 'i newsletter, specifically relating to the parade banner.

Unlawful Prevention of Communication between Shareholders

38. Defendant National Spiritual Assembly has the policy that Local Spiritual Assemblies are responsible for reviewing pamphlets and newsletters and materials that mention the Faith such as songs, play scripts, souvenir items, and greeting cards, intended for publication or distribution within their communities, whereas the National Spiritual Assembly is responsible for review of those same materials intended for nationwide publication.

CAUSES OF ACTION

Count I

39. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

40. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly acted and continue to act fraudulently towards the Plaintiffs.

41. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count II

42. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

43. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly libeled the named Plaintiff.

44. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count III

45. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

46. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to act and continue to fail to act in good faith, which failure constitutes fraud.

47. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count IV

48. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporates all previous paragraphs.

49. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to act and continue to fail to act with the care an ordinary prudent person in like position would exercise under similar circumstances, which failure constitute fraud.

50. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count V

51. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

52. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to act and continue to fail to act in a manner they reasonably believe to be in the best interests of the corporation and its members, which failure constitutes fraud.

53. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count VI

54. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

55. The Trustees have repeatedly failed their duty to compose differences and disagreements with themselves and the members, in violation of their by-laws, which failure constitutes fraud.

56. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count VII

57. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

58. The National Spiritual Assembly has repeatedly failed their duty to hear appeals from Plaintiffs, in violation of their by-laws.

59. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count VIII

60. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

61. The literature review policies of the National and Local Spiritual Assemblies violate the rights of corporate members to communicate with other corporate members.

62. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count IX

63. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

64. The practice of the Local Spiritual Assembly to direct members not to speak about their dealings with the LSA with other

corporate members violates the rights of corporate members to communicate with other corporate members.
65. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

JUDICIAL RELIEF

WHEREFORE, for these reasons, Plaintiffs request that this Court:

- 1. Declare that the Trustees acted fraudulently towards Plaintiffs;
- 2. Declare that Trustees libeled Plaintiffs;
- 3. Declare that the Trustees breached their corporate duties towards Plaintiffs;
- 4. Remove the Trustees from their positions and enjoin them from serving in official Bah 'is capacities for nineteen (19) years;
- 5. Remove the LSA Directors who are also Trustees;
- 6. Declare that the Local Spiritual Assembly violated members' rights to inspect corporate books and records;
- 7. Compel Defendant LSA to retain an independent certified public accountant to audit the books for the last two years;
- 8. Declare that Defendant LSA violated their corporate by-laws by failing to compose differences and disagreements among members of the community;
- 6. Declare that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their duty of hearing Plaintiffs' appeals;
- 7. Declare that the literature review policies of the Bah 'is violate United States common law as preventing corporate members from communicating with other corporate members;
- 8. Enjoin Defendants National Spiritual Assembly and Local Spiritual
Assembly from enforcing their literature review policy;
- 9. Declare that the secrecy practices of the Local Spiritual Assembly violate United States common law as preventing corporate members from communicating with other corporate members;
- 10. Enjoin Defendant Local Spiritual Assembly from continuing their secrecy practices;
- 11. Award compensatory damages from Defendants to

Plaintiffs;

12. Award attorney's fees and costs to Plaintiffs;

13. Any other relief this Court deems appropriate.

Respectfully submitted,

---

Yorgos D. Marinakis
Attorney for Plaintiffs
P.O. Box 45923
Rio Rancho, NM 87174
505-459-4664
877-430-9550 (fax)

Named Plaintiff's Verification

STATE OF NEW MEXICO )
) ss.
COUNTY OF BERNALILLO)

COMES NOW Deborah Buchhorn, and being duly sworn, states as follows:

- 1. I have read and understood the contents of this Complaint.
- 2. I have personal knowledge of the facts stated herein.
- 3. I attest to and verify their truth and accuracy.

---

DEBORAH BUCHHORN
SWORN TO AND SUBSCRIBED before me this ___ day of _____, 2001.

---

Notary Public

My Commission Expires:

**Homepage**

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Also see US District Court of Northern Illinois rules against Haifan Baha'is - April 23, 2008
Amici curiae, Reform Bahai Faith
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USDistrictCourt07.htm>

---

New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD & LIBEL
3/2/2001 Deborah Buchhorn
New Mexico LAWSUIT - Response to Motion to Dismiss 5/2001 Yorgos D.
Marinakis, Attorney
New Mexico LAWSUIT - Attorney's Statement 5/26/2001 Yorgos D.
Marinakis, Attorney
New Mexico LAWSUIT - Amicus Curiae 7/13/2001 FG

See my comments at New Mexico Lawsuit Annotated

See also Summary of Defendants' Motion to Dismiss
7/18/2001 Jeffrey Goldberg

SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT
COUNTY OF BERNALILLO
STATE OF NEW MEXICO

DEBORAH BUCHHORN, for herself )
and for MINORITY SHAREHOLDER- )
MEMBERS OF THE SPIRITUAL )
ASSEMBLY OF THE BAH ' 'S OF ) ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, )

)
Plaintiffs, )

)
vs. ) No. CV 2001-01978

)
)
TRUSTEES OF THE SPIRITUAL )
ASSEMBLY OF THE BAH ' 'S OF )
ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, and )
THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE ) BAH ' 'S OF ALBUQUERQUE, )
NEW MEXICO, a non-profit ) corporation, and the )
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY ) OF THE BAH ' 'S OF THE ) UNITED STATES, )
an Illinois Corporation, )
)

Defendants.        )

PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE TO DEFENDANT TRUSTEES MOTION TO DISMISS

COME NOW Plaintiffs by and through their attorney of record Yorgos Marinakis and for their response state as follows:

INTRODUCTION

By incorporating in the United States, Defendant Trustees agreed to follow the law of the land, but it is clear from their Motion to Dismiss that they believe the law of the land places them above the law. If the Bah 'i wish to undertake such civil jurisdiction over their members, they must provide due process, which they have failed to provide for seven years.

ALLEGED FIRST AMENDMENT ISSUES

There are simply and categorically no first amendment issues in this case. Churches are not immune from suit over issues that do not involve religious doctrines:

"[w]ithout regard to the governing structure of a particular church, a court may, where appropriate, apply neutral principles of law to determine disputed questions that do not implicate religious doctrine. Jones v. Wolf, supra, 443 U.S. 595, 99 S.Ct. 3020, 61 L.Ed.2d 775. 'Neutral principles' are wholly secular legal rules whose application to religious parties or disputes does not entail theological or doctrinal evaluations."

It will be shown below that these "neutral principles" are well-established for religious nonprofit corporations. As a general rule, Courts can decide secular legal questions in cases involving some background issues of religious doctrine, so long as courts do not intrude into determination of doctrinal issues. When the canons of Bah 'i law are in conflict with the law of the land, the canons must yield.

Defendant Trustees implicitly assert (Motion to Dismiss, page 9) that this Court cannot hear this case because it involves an intangible or emotional harm to an individual committed by a church. In fact, this case involves violations of New Mexico State corporate law and

U.S. corporate common law, not simply offenses to someone's sensibilities. Counts III-V allege violations of statutory duties of corporate officers, Counts VI and VII allege specific violations of filed corporate by-laws, and Counts VIII and IX allege violations of U.S. corporate common law. Count I alleges fraud and Count II alleges libel, not as individual harms but as torts by a corporation upon a minority set of member-shareholders.

Defendant Trustees assert (Defendant's Motion, Section B) that their actions are protected by the first amendment as "ecclesiastical" or "internal," simply because they are a religious entity. If that were the rule, then the Catholic Church could have claimed that a priest's decision to commit pederasty was an ecclesiastical decision and therefore not a civil matter.

Plaintiffs in actuality allege that Defendant Trustees oppressed and abused minority shareholder-member Plaintiffs, while Defendants National Spiritual Assembly failed to act upon Plaintiffs' appeals. This is simply a case of fraud and oppression on the shareholders, committed by corporate officers, which cases State Courts decide every day. The fact that the corporation is a non-profit religious society is irrelevant, because there are no background issues of religious doctrine in this case. I will now justify that statement.

One of the allegations relates to the failure to allow inspection of the corporate books. New Mexico law of non-profit corporations clearly states that corporations must allow its members to inspect all their books and records:

"All books and records of a corporation may be inspected by any member, or his agent or attorney, for any proper purpose at any reasonable time."

In denying shareholders access to corporate books and records, the corporation has the burden to demonstrate strong and articulable reasons for denying that access, such as improper purpose. Defendant Trustees denied Plaintiff Buchhorn access to their books and failed to demonstrate strong and articulable reasons for doing so, having merely informed Defendant Buchhorn that they needed the guidance of the National Spiritual Assembly. Because the right to inspect books and records by members was a right at common law, Defendants National Spiritual Assembly and knew or should have known that this action by Defendant Trustees violated the law. Named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn's purpose was proper: the "draft" Annual Report showed an admitted 10% discrepancy in the books, and she wanted to investigate it.

As another example, Counts III-V allege breach of duties of corporate officers and directors. New Mexico non- profit corporation law clearly states the duties of directors:

"A director shall perform his duties as a director including his duties as a member of any committee of the board upon which the director may serve, in good faith, in a manner the director believes to be in or not opposed to the best interests of the corporation and with such care as an ordinary prudent person would use under similar circumstances in a like position."

These are the same duties set forth in section 8.30 of the ABA Model Nonprofit Corporation Act (herein "Model Act"). These are the "neutral principles" discussed above in the first excerpt. According to that same Model Act, nondirector officers with discretionary authority have the same general duty of care and loyalty as directors. As delegates of the board of directors, officers are fiduciaries of the corporation and within the scope of their delegated management functions are subject to the same fiduciary duties as are directors.

According to the Model Act, to determine whether a director or officer discharged the duty of good faith, the Court must

"look to the director's state of mind to see if it evidenced honesty and faithfulness to the director's duties and obligations, or whether there was an intent to take advantage of the corporation. A director of a religious corporation in making a good faith determination may consider what the director believes to be: (1) the religious purpose of the corporation; and (2) applicable religious tenets, canons, laws, policies and authority." (emphasis added)

This clearly implies that the Model Act applies to religious corporations. Case law also permits the Court examine the religious purposes or applicable religious laws:

"Civil courts adjudicate ecclesiastical matters only when civil or property rights are involved, and then only when their determination is necessary and incident to the adjudication of civil or property rights. The courts will inquire only as to what are the rules and decisions of the church and its tribunals, and what parties or factions adhere to them, without questioning their wisdom or propriety[.]"

There is, however, no need for the Court in this case to examine the religious purpose of the corporation. Defendant Trustees acted in a manner that would qualify as domestic violence. These actions are so far opposed to the true interests of the corporation as to lead to the clear inference that no one thus acting could have been influenced by any honest desire to secure such interests, but that they must have acted with intent to subserve some ulterior purpose, regardless of the consequences to the corporation and in a manner inconsistent with its interests. Even if this Court finds that the issues in this case involve religious doctrine, it may still hear this case, because decisions by religious entities may be the subject of civil inquiry in cases of alleged fraud:

"a civil court might be empowered to examine the propriety of such an appointment [i.e., the ecclesiastical decision of appointment to a Roman Catholic chaplaincy] if it were a product of 'fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness.'"

This is precisely the situation in the instant case. Defendant Trustees have made numerous decisions that Plaintiff alleges were the product of fraud.

Moreover, even if this Court finds that the issues in this case are purely ecclesiastical, it may still hear the case, because they may pose a substantial threat to public safety, peace and order:

"The courts may not intervene in purely ecclesiastical matters, including church disciplinary actions concerning the conformity of church members to the standards of morals required of them, unless such actions pose a substantial threat to public safety, peace or order. Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972); Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963); Paul v. Watchtower of New York, Inc., 819 F.2d 875 (9th Cir. 1987), cert denied, _____ U.S._____, 108 S.Ct. 289, 98 L.Ed.2d 249 (1987)."

The Bah 'i are the world's second-most widespread religion. Spiritual Assemblies, similar to Defendant, are located in cities across the United States. Widespread abusive and oppressive behavior by these entities is plausible and may represent a substantial threat to public safety, peace or order.

Defendant Trustees claim that Plaintiffs' membership in the Bah 'i Faith constitutes implied consent to their government, which confers upon Defendant Trustees'

decisions an internal nature deserving of judicial deference (Motion to Dismiss, page 6).

However, this situation invites abuse if the Local Spiritual Assembly fails to follow its own commitment to the laws, which Plaintiff alleges they have done here. As discussed above, this Court has the power to determine whether the Bah 'i have followed civil and their own religious law.

Defendant Trustees implicitly asserts "'religious questions permeate all of the issues in this case.'" The Supreme Court of New Jersey responded to such an allegation

by stating that it was the Court's duty not to refer civil issues to a religious tribunal, but to hear them:

"To the contrary, as we have noted, distinct civil issues should have been reserved

by the court not merely because it had the discretion to decide them, but also because it had a duty to do so."

Plaintiff suggests that if this Court is concerned with the first amendment issues that it follows the recommendations of the Supreme Court of New Jersey, and order the parties to fully brief which issues are religious and which are civil:

"It is imperative, in order to avoid unconstitutional entanglements of civil and religious issues and to preserve the right to civil adjudication of secular disputes, for a trial court to specify which issues are religious and therefore to be settled by religious authority; and which issues are civil and to be resolved by the court Thus, when faced with cases such as this, trial courts initially should entertain full briefing and argument by the parties as to what issues are 'religious' and what are 'civil'; and as to what is the proper authority to decide 'religious' questions. By providing complete and clear rulings on such questions before referral to any religious tribunal, a trial court will provide the parties and appellate courts with a clear record for informed review of any possible first amendment issues."

ALLEGED PLEADING ISSUES

Plaintiffs' Complaint has complied with the New Mexico law of notice pleading, shareholder derivative suit pleading, and fraud pleading. In New Mexico, the theory of pleadings is to give the parties fair notice of the claims and defenses against them, and the grounds upon which they are based.

Notice pleading requires only sufficient detail so that the parties and the court will have a fair idea of the action about which the party is complaining and can see the basis for relief.

In a shareholder derivative action specifically, the complaint must be verified, the plaintiff must allege that she was a shareholder or member at the time of the transaction in question, and the plaintiff must allege with particularity the efforts she made to obtain the action she desires from the corporation.

In Complaints for fraud, the plaintiff must allege the circumstances constituting fraud with particularity.

Plaintiffs complied with all these requirements. The Complaint contains numerous specific incidents and factual allegations that involve more than named Plaintiff. Named Plaintiff verified the Complaint. There is no requirement to name all minority shareholders as Defendant Trustees claims. More specifically, as to Defendant Trustees' assertion regarding the libel claim (Motion to Dismiss, Section F, page 11), Plaintiff refers Your Honor to paragraph 31 of the verified Complaint. As to Defendant Trustees' assertion regarding the literature review claim (Motion to Dismiss, Section G, page 12), Defendants' literature review policy facilitated this abusive situation by preventing shareholders from communicating with other shareholders. This policy is in violation of U.S. law:

"[t]he statutory right accorded a stockholder to communicate with other shareholders regarding matters of common interest as stockholders is much similar to freedom of speech."

The fundamental position occupied this right can be seen by the frequency by which shareholders use it to justify their requests to inspect corporate books and records . In addition to enabling and facilitating the jeopardization of reasonable expectations of minority shareholders, this policy also in and of itself constitutes oppressive behavior.

WHEREFORE, for these reasons, Plaintiff requests that this Court DENY Defendant Trustee's Motion to Dismiss.

Respectfully

submitted,

Yorgos D. Marinakis
Attorney for Plaintiffs
P.O. Box 45923
Rio Rancho, NM 87174
505-459-4664
877-430-9550 (fax)

I hereby certify that a true and correct copy of the foregoing was mailed to:
Deborah D. Wells
on this ____ day of May, 2001.

_____
Yorgos D. Marinakis

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Also see US District Court of Northern Illinois rules against Haifan Baha'is
- April 23, 2008

Amici curiae, Reform Bahai Faith

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USDistrictCourt07.htm>

---

New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD & LIBEL 3/2/2001 Deborah Buchhorn

New Mexico LAWSUIT - Response to Motion to Dismiss 5/2001 Yorgos D. Marinakis, Attorney

New Mexico LAWSUIT - Attorney's Statement 5/26/2001 Yorgos D. Marinakis, Attorney

New Mexico LAWSUIT - Amicus Curiae 7/13/2001 FG

See my comments at New Mexico Lawsuit Annotated

---

From: "Yorgos" <nthyorgos@hotmail.com>

Subject: From the attorney

Date: Saturday, May 26, 2001 1:09 PM

Re: The lawsuit against the Albuquerque LSA and the NSA

Who are we and why did we file this lawsuit?

There is a growing group of us Baha'i attorneys who want to return the Faith into conformity with the vision of Baha'u'llah and the directives of the Universal House of Justice. The Baha'i Faith is like a tooth with cavities that need drilling and filling --- but the patient is unwilling. To "save the tooth" we have decided to act in conformity with the UHJ, which has directed the named plaintiff to "take positive action." For those of you who doubt, I suggest that you examine:

a.. the section on the role of the individual in the letter from the Universal House of Justice titled "To the Bah=E1'EDs of the World Ridvan 153";

b.. the May 19, 1994 letter to the National Spiritual Assembly from the Universal House of Justice; and c.. Dr. Peter Kahn's taped speech on the Four-year plan.

The offenses that concern me most are when LSA's behave like the KGB. They think that the role of a spiritual assembly is to control and guide, rather than to facilitate and to follow. In addition, some older male members from Iran tend not to fully understand the "two wings of a bird" concept, believing that women should be seen and not heard. Understand this: the Baha'i Faith is meant to be a grassroots, bottom-up movement, not an elitist, top-down scam. Read the writings.

The named plaintiff in the Albuquerque case is a 51-year old widowed mother of two children, and a Baha'i of 30 years. Her 30-year old son has muscular dystrophy and has been unable to breathe without a respirator for 15 years. The named plaintiff has taken care of her son at her home all these years. She turned to her Faith for support and love, and instead has consistently received abuse, oppression and fraud. The NSA has consistently failed to respond in a meaningful way to her appeals, and the UHJ finally told her to "take positive action." She did, and we filed this lawsuit. I might add that the named plaintiff knows the writings better than 99.99% of the Baha'i I have met, and she dedicated any monetary awards she will receive to be used for the purpose of direct teaching. The other unnamed plaintiffs have been Baha'i on an average for 30-50 years.

The LSA has recently moved to dismiss the complaint, rather than deal with their issues like grown adults. The NSA has irresponsibly chosen to ignore the summons and complaint.

If your spiritual assembly behaves like the KGB, please contact me to discuss starting a similar lawsuit in your city. We are preparing these suits all over the USA. Work with us to return the Faith to conformity with the vision of Baha'u'llah and the directives of the UHJ.

-Yorgos Marinakis, Ph.D., J.D.
Attorney-at-law

From: "Yorgos" <nthyorgos@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re: Re: From the attorney

Date: Monday, May 28, 2001 12:14 AM

Thank you for your comments, all of you.

The reason I chose a shareholder/member derivative suit is because that particular cause of action constitutes the most failsafe way to sue a religion. Religions are well-protected from lawsuit by the First Amendment of the US and most state constitutions. You typically can't sue them only for emotional injuries, absent an accompanying physical harm, though there might (MIGHT) be an exception if you allege fraud. But a shareholder/member derivative suit is their Achilles heel. Instead of an individual claiming that her sensibilities were violated, we are claiming that the LSA violated state and U.S. corporate law. I know it sounds silly to you, but to a lawyer it is elegant and matchlessly effective. It took the NSA so much by surprise that they are paralyzed. I hope they recover soon and start dealing with their responsibilities like mature adults.

It doesn't matter if the corporation does not issue shares. It only matters that the plaintiff was a card-carrying member at the time of the defendant's actions.

Any more questions that I can answer for you?

BTW, my "offer" is limited to helping put you in touch with attorneys in your area, and sharing all my research and resources.

From: "Yorgos" <nthyorgos@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re: bahai - LAWSUIT - Re: From the attorney

Date: Monday, May 28, 2001 12:28 AM

I have indeed read numerous allegations against the UHJ from persons who apparently have had very bad experiences. This is a matter that I have not yet had time to study. Time permitting, I will give it the scrutiny that it deserves. When did these incidents occur? It seems that the UHJ recently has been displaying exemplary intellect, such as Dr. Kahn's speech. You know, every court has made bad decisions. Ironically, in some of the worst cases only the dissent shows brains, and that dissenting opinion is often written by one of my least favorite judges (e.g., Rehnquist). Go figure.

From: "Yorgos" <nthyorgos@hotmail.com>

Subject: Unconstitutional (per UHJ Constitution) NSA By-law

Date: Monday, May 28, 2001 12:20 AM

As of today, the NSA has failed to even acknowledge receipt of this fax:

*****

TO: Geoffrey N. Wilson, Esq.

Office of Legal Affairs

1233 Central Street

Evanston, IL 60201-1611

847-733-3534 (voice)

847-733-3533 (fax)

April 14, 2001

RE: DEBORAH BUCHHORN ET AL. v. TRUSTEES OF THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAH'IS OF ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO ET AL.

Dear Mr. Wilson:

My client and I were investigating the by-laws of the National and Local Spiritual Assemblies, and we found entries that apparently violate the Constitution of the Universal House of Justice. One of the unconstitutional provisions lies in Article VII Section 9 of the by-laws of the National Spiritual Assembly:

"Any member of a local Bah'N community may appeal from a decision of his Spiritual Assembly to the National Spiritual Assembly, which shall determine whether it shall take jurisdiction of the matter or leave it to the Local Spiritual Assembly for reconsideration. In the event that the National Spiritual Assembly assumes jurisdiction of the matter, its finding shall be final." (emphasis added)

The other unconstitutional provision appears as an omission in the end of Article III of the by-laws of a Local Spiritual Assembly:

"It [a Local Spiritual Assembly] shall, on the other hand, have the authority and right to appeal from the decision of the National Spiritual Assembly to the Universal House of Justice for review and final decision of any matter related to the Faith in.[sic]"

(This provision gives the NSA the right to appeal to the UHJ, but fails to give members the right to appeal to the UHJ.).

These contradict Article VIII Section 1(b) of the Constitution (by-laws) of the Universal House of Justice:

"Any Bahá'í may appeal from a decision of his National Spiritual Assembly to the Universal House of Justice which shall determine whether it shall take jurisdiction of the matter or leave it within the final jurisdiction of the National Spiritual Assembly." (emphasis added)

Apart from being prima facie violations of the Constitution of the UHJ, these omissions deliberately prevent access to the UHJ by members.

Within a reasonable time, please inform me as to when I can expect a response to this matter from the National Spiritual Assembly.

I send to you personally my warmest regards.

With Bahá'í greetings,

/s/ Yorgos D. Marinakis

Attorney for Plaintiffs

From: "Yorgos" <nthyorgos@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re: Handling Appeals (was Re: bahai - Re: Unconstitutional (per UHJ Constitution) NSA By-law)

Date: Monday, May 28, 2001 4:40 PM

Thank you. I greatly appreciate this posting, because it demonstrates the irony of the situation.

First of all, my client followed these appeal procedures for 7 years, during which time the NSA repeatedly did nothing. By their own admission the NSA's appeal procedures are so inadequate that they cannot tell the difference between an informational letter and an appeal. Call up Mr. Wilson and ask him yourself. They took 19 months to answer one appeal, and that answer was nothing more than a letter acknowledging receipt of the appeal.

Second, whatever is written in Developing Distinctive Baha'i Communities has nothing at all to do with the filed by-laws. The corporation is legally bound to follow its by-laws, not another publication.

Third, it was established in 1215 on the green meadows at Runnymede, where the rebellious Barons assembled and forced the King John to sign a draft of the Magna Carta, that THE SOVEREIGN MUST FOLLOW HIS OWN LAW. This has become the hallmark of every civilized country. A Baha'i member's adherence to the rules becomes meaningless at the point that the sovereign (NSA) fails to follow the rules as well. It creates fertile soil for fraud and abuse, which happened repeatedly in Albuquerque.

Fourth, by incorporating in the USA and in New Mexico, and by filing by-laws, the NSA and the LSA agreed to follow corporate law. They agreed to open themselves up to legal action if they did not follow that law. I'm playing by their own rules.

From: "Yorgos" <nthyorgos@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re: Re: Re: From the attorney

Date: Monday, May 28, 2001 4:47 PM

Q. Personally, from my perspective, I've always believe everything should be thrown out open to public view. Are you sure that's the way to procede in terms of a lawsuit?

A. The only way that something would be secret is if we made some sort of settlement. We will not settle for anything less than the demands stated in the Complaint, which demands are inconsistent with secrecy.

Q. Is there any possibility that you might be revealing anything here that might injure your case or provide assistance to the defendants?

A. I fully disclosed my research and legal briefs to the NSA and the LSA prior to filing this lawsuit, in an attempt to get them to resolve this matter out of court. They chose not to act. Can you imagine that? We have the truth on our side. Their knowledge of our case cannot hurt us.

Q. Why did you choose not to name the uhj as a defendant?

A. My client believes in the limited infallibility of the UHJ. Under no circumstances whatsoever would she ever criticize the UHJ in any manner, which includes a lawsuit. I will not state my opinion because it is not relevant. However I do think it is funny to suggest that we are in collusion with the UHJ. I check my mailbox every day, expecting to find a disenrollment letter.

From: "Yorgos" <nthyorgos@hotmail.com>

Subject: Clarification

Date: Tuesday, May 29, 2001 6:38 PM

Ms. Buchhorn informed me that, regarding the "take positive action" paraphrase, the actual quotation is: "pursue positive lines of action that would assist my community to overcome their deficiencies." This is in response to some deficiencies that she reported to the UHJ. It was our interpretation that led us to file suit.

She has been a Baha'i for 26 years.

And contrary to my earlier understanding, it is the role of the LSA is to guide, but to guide according to the writings, not out of their own innate sense of right and wrong.

From: "Yorgos" <nthyorgos@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re-post of clarification & more

Date: Monday, June 04, 2001 6:56 PM

First, I want to re-post the clarification that I made, to ensure that it is very clearly seen:

"Ms. Buchhorn informed me that, regarding the "take positive action" paraphrase, the actual quotation is: "pursue positive lines of action that would assist my community to overcome their deficiencies." This is in response to some deficiencies that she reported to the UHJ. It was our interpretation that led us to file suit."

"She has been a Baha'i for 26 years."

"And contrary to my earlier understanding, it is the role of the LSA is to guide, but to guide according to the writings, not out of their own innate sense of right and wrong."

Second, regarding all of this discussion and argument about the case:

I am touched, moved and inspired by the zeal with which you all are exercising the independent investigation of the truth. Please be advised that the named plaintiff certified the Complaint and I verified it (The Complaint is available on-line and includes the case number. You may call the court clerk to order an official copy.). If upon receiving the evidence the court finds that the certification and verification were groundless or in bad faith, which I know it will not, then there are very serious consequences for us. I personally would be subject to disbarment and very heavy fines. You would read about it in the news.

The case is now in the hands of the court. It is in the best interests of both the plaintiffs and the defendants for the court rather than you to decide this case, because the court is accountable for their procedures --- and you are not accountable for yours. These procedures provide enormous protection for the defendants. For example, the LSA has moved to dismiss the Complaint, and they will have their day in court on July 18, which you are entitled to attend.

Some of you have already decided that this case never should have been filed. You are entitled to your opinion. But neither the LSA nor the NSA has stated that Baha'i law was violated by filing this Complaint. The NSA stated that they were saddened by the Demand Letter, but they never stated that it was inappropriate to bring this lawsuit. The UHJ has not intervened. That is where things stand. That is where your Baha'i Faith stands.

If you suspend judgment for a moment and consider that the plaintiffs really just might have a genuine case, that there really was fraud and abuse and the appeals system really is inadequately handled, that the NSA passed over several years of opportunities, consider what damage would be done by stopping this case: fraud and abuse in the Faith will be able to go unchecked.

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Also see US District Court of Northern Illinois rules against Haifan Baha'is - April 23, 2008
Amici curiae, Reform Bahai Faith
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USDistrictCourt07.htm>

---

New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD & LIBEL
3/2/2001 Deborah Buchhorn
New Mexico LAWSUIT - Response to Motion to Dismiss 5/2001 Yorgos D.
Marinakakis, Attorney
New Mexico LAWSUIT - Attorney's Statement 5/26/2001 Yorgos D.
Marinakakis, Attorney
New Mexico LAWSUIT - Amicus Curiae 7/13/2001 FG

See my comments at New Mexico Lawsuit Annotated

---

See also Summary of Defendants' Motion to Dismiss
7/18/2001 Jeffrey Goldberg

SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT
COUNTY OF BERNALILLO
STATE OF NEW MEXICO

DEBORAH BUCHHORN, for herself )
and for MINORITY SHAREHOLDER- )
MEMBERS OF THE SPIRITUAL )
ASSEMBLY OF THE BAH ' 'S OF ) ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, )
)
Plaintiffs, )
)
vs. ) No. CV 2001-01978
)
)
TRUSTEES OF THE SPIRITUAL )
ASSEMBLY OF THE BAH ' 'S OF )
ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, and )
THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE )
BAH ' 'S OF ALBUQUERQUE, )
NEW MEXICO, a non-profit )
corporation, and the )
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY ) OF THE BAH ' 'S OF THE ) UNITED STATES, )
an Illinois Corporation, )

)
Defendants. )

PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE TO DEFENDANT TRUSTEES MOTION TO DISMISS

COME NOW Plaintiffs by and through their attorney of record Yorgos Marinakis and for their response state as follows:

INTRODUCTION

By incorporating in the United States, Defendant Trustees agreed to follow the law of the land, but it is clear from their Motion to Dismiss that they believe the law of the land places them above the law. If the Bah 'i wish to undertake such civil jurisdiction over their members, they must provide due process, which they have failed to provide for seven years.

ALLEGED FIRST AMENDMENT ISSUES

There are simply and categorically no first amendment issues in this case. Churches are not immune from suit over issues that do not involve religious doctrines:

"[w]ithout regard to the governing structure of a particular church, a court may, where appropriate, apply neutral principles of law to determine disputed questions that do not implicate religious doctrine. Jones v. Wolf, supra, 443 U.S. 595, 99 S.Ct. 3020, 61 L.Ed.2d 775. 'Neutral principles' are wholly secular legal rules whose application to religious parties or disputes does not entail theological or doctrinal evaluations."

It will be shown below that these "neutral principles" are well-established for religious nonprofit corporations. As a general rule, Courts can decide secular legal questions in cases involving some background issues of religious doctrine, so long as courts do not intrude into determination of doctrinal issues. When the canons of Bah 'i law are in conflict with the law of the land, the canons must yield.

Defendant Trustees implicitly assert (Motion to Dismiss, page 9) that this Court cannot hear this case because it involves an intangible or emotional harm to an individual committed by a church. In fact, this case involves violations of New Mexico State corporate law and U.S. corporate common law, not simply offenses to someone's sensibilities. Counts III-V allege violations of statutory duties of corporate officers, Counts VI and VII allege specific violations of filed corporate by-laws, and Counts VIII and IX allege violations of U.S. corporate common law. Count I alleges fraud and Count II alleges libel, not as individual harms but as torts by a corporation upon a minority set of member-shareholders.

Defendant Trustees assert (Defendant's Motion, Section B) that their actions are protected by the first amendment as "ecclesiastical" or "internal," simply because they are a religious entity. If that were the rule, then the Catholic Church could have claimed that a priest's decision to commit pederasty was an ecclesiastical decision and therefore not a civil matter.

Plaintiffs in actuality allege that Defendant Trustees oppressed and abused minority shareholder-member Plaintiffs,

while Defendants National Spiritual Assembly failed to act upon Plaintiffs' appeals. This is simply a case of fraud and oppression on the shareholders, committed by corporate officers, which cases State Courts decide every day. The fact that the corporation is a non-profit religious society is irrelevant, because there are no background issues of religious doctrine in this case. I will now justify that statement.

One of the allegations relates to the failure to allow inspection of the corporate books. New Mexico law of non-profit corporations clearly states that corporations must allow its members to inspect all their books and records:

"All books and records of a corporation may be inspected by any member, or his agent or attorney, for any proper purpose at any reasonable time."

In denying shareholders access to corporate books and records, the corporation has the burden to demonstrate strong and articulable reasons for denying that access, such as improper purpose. Defendant Trustees denied Plaintiff Buchhorn access to their books and failed to demonstrate strong and articulable reasons for doing so, having merely informed Defendant Buchhorn that they needed the guidance of the National Spiritual Assembly. Because the right to inspect books and records by members was a right at common law, Defendants National Spiritual Assembly and knew or should have known that this action by Defendant Trustees violated the law. Named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn's purpose was proper: the "draft" Annual Report showed an admitted 10% discrepancy in the books, and she wanted to investigate it.

As another example, Counts III-V allege breach of duties of corporate officers and directors. New Mexico non-profit corporation law clearly states the duties of directors:

"A director shall perform his duties as a director including his duties as a member of any committee of the board upon which the director may serve, in good faith, in a manner the director believes to be in or not opposed to the best interests of the corporation and with such care as an ordinary prudent person would use under similar circumstances in a like position."

These are the same duties set forth in section 8.30 of the ABA Model Nonprofit Corporation Act (herein "Model Act"). These are the "neutral principles" discussed above in the first excerpt. According to that same Model Act, nondirector officers with discretionary authority have the same general duty of care and loyalty as directors. As delegates of the board of directors, officers are fiduciaries of the corporation and within the scope of their delegated management functions are subject to the same fiduciary duties as are directors.

According to the Model Act, to determine whether a director or officer discharged the duty of good faith, the Court must

"look to the director's state of mind to see if it evidenced honesty and faithfulness to the director's duties and obligations, or whether there was an intent to take advantage of the corporation. A director of a religious corporation in making a good faith determination may consider what the director believes to be: (1) the religious purpose of the corporation; and (2) applicable religious tenets, canons, laws, policies and authority." (emphasis added)

This clearly implies that the Model Act applies to religious corporations. Case law also permits the Court examine the religious purposes or applicable religious laws:

"Civil courts adjudicate ecclesiastical matters only when civil or property rights are involved, and then only when their determination is necessary and incident to the adjudication of civil or property rights. The courts will inquire only as to what are the rules and decisions of the church and its tribunals, and what parties or factions adhere to them, without questioning their wisdom or propriety[.]"

There is, however, no need for the Court in this case to examine the religious purpose of the corporation. Defendant Trustees acted in a manner that would qualify as domestic violence. These actions are so far opposed to the true interests of the corporation as to lead to the clear inference that no one thus acting could have been influenced by any honest desire to secure such interests, but that they must have acted with intent to subserve some ulterior purpose, regardless of the consequences to the corporation and in a manner inconsistent with its interests.

Even if this Court finds that the issues in this case involve religious doctrine, it may still hear this case, because decisions by religious entities may be the subject of civil inquiry in cases of alleged fraud:

"a civil court might be empowered to examine the propriety of such an appointment [i.e., the ecclesiastical decision of appointment to a Roman Catholic chaplaincy] if it were a product of 'fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness.'"

This is precisely the situation in the instant case. Defendant Trustees have made numerous decisions that Plaintiff alleges were the product of fraud.

Moreover, even if this Court finds that the issues in this case are purely ecclesiastical, it may still hear the case, because they may pose a substantial threat to public safety, peace and order:

"The courts may not intervene in purely ecclesiastical matters, including church disciplinary actions concerning the conformity of church members to the standards of morals required of them, unless such actions pose a substantial threat to public safety, peace or order. Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972); Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963); Paul v. Watchtower of New York, Inc., 819 F.2d 875 (9th Cir. 1987), cert denied, _____ U.S._____, 108 S.Ct. 289, 98 L.Ed.2d 249 (1987)."

The Bah 'i are the world's second-most widespread religion.

Spiritual Assemblies, similar to Defendant, are located in cities across the United States. Widespread abusive and oppressive behavior by these entities is plausible and may represent a substantial threat to public safety, peace or order.

Defendant Trustees claim that Plaintiffs' membership in the Bah 'i Faith constitutes implied consent to their government, which confers upon Defendant Trustees' decisions an internal nature deserving of judicial deference (Motion to Dismiss, page 6).

However, this situation invites abuse if the Local Spiritual Assembly fails to follow its own commitment to the laws, which Plaintiff alleges they have done here. As discussed above, this Court has the power to determine whether the Bah 'i have followed civil and their own religious law.

Defendant Trustees implicitly asserts "'religious questions permeate all of the issues in this case.'" The Supreme Court of New Jersey responded to such an allegation by stating that it was the Court's duty not to refer civil issues to a religious tribunal, but to hear them:

"To the contrary, as we have noted, distinct civil issues should have been reserved by the court not merely because it had the discretion to decide them, but also because it had a duty to do so."

Plaintiff suggests that if this Court is concerned with the first amendment issues that it follows the recommendations of the Supreme Court of New Jersey, and order the parties to fully brief which issues are religious and which are civil:

"It is imperative, in order to avoid unconstitutional entanglements of civil and religious issues and to preserve the right to civil adjudication of secular disputes, for a trial court to specify which issues are religious and therefore to be settled by religious authority; and which issues are civil and to be resolved by the court. Thus, when faced with cases such as this, trial courts initially should entertain full briefing and argument by the parties as to what issues are 'religious' and what are 'civil'; and as to what is the proper authority to decide 'religious' questions. By providing complete and clear rulings on such questions before referral to any religious tribunal, a trial court will provide the parties and appellate courts with a clear record for informed review of any possible first amendment issues."

ALLEGED PLEADING ISSUES

Plaintiffs' Complaint has complied with the New Mexico law of notice pleading, shareholder derivative suit pleading, and fraud pleading. In New Mexico, the theory of pleadings is to give the parties fair notice of the claims and defenses against them, and the grounds upon which they are based.

Notice pleading requires only sufficient detail so that the parties and the court will have a fair idea of the action about which the party is complaining and can see the basis for relief.

In a shareholder derivative action specifically, the complaint must be verified, the plaintiff must allege that she was a shareholder or member at the time of the transaction in question, and the plaintiff must allege with particularity the efforts she made to obtain the action she desires from the corporation.

In Complaints for fraud, the plaintiff must allege the circumstances constituting fraud with particularity.

Plaintiffs complied with all these requirements. The Complaint contains numerous specific incidents and factual allegations that involve more than named Plaintiff. Named Plaintiff verified the Complaint. There is no requirement to name all minority shareholders as Defendant Trustees claims. More specifically, as to Defendant Trustees' assertion regarding the libel claim (Motion to Dismiss, Section F, page 11), Plaintiff refers Your Honor to paragraph 31 of the verified Complaint. As to Defendant Trustees' assertion regarding the literature review claim (Motion to Dismiss, Section G, page 12), Defendants' literature review policy facilitated this abusive situation by preventing shareholders from communicating with other shareholders. This policy is in violation of U.S. law:

"[t]he statutory right accorded a stockholder to communicate with other shareholders regarding matters of common interest as stockholders is much similar to freedom of speech."

The fundamental position occupied this right can be seen by the frequency by which shareholders use it to justify their requests to inspect corporate books and records . In addition to enabling and facilitating the jeopardization of reasonable expectations of minority shareholders, this policy also in and of itself constitutes oppressive behavior.

WHEREFORE, for these reasons, Plaintiff requests that this Court DENY Defendant Trustee's Motion to Dismiss.

Respectfully

submitted,

Yorgos D. Marinakis
Attorney for Plaintiffs
P.O. Box 45923
Rio Rancho, NM 87174
505-459-4664
877-430-9550 (fax)

I hereby certify that a true and correct copy of the foregoing was mailed to:
Deborah D. Wells
on this ____ day of May, 2001.

_____
Yorgos D. Marinakis

---

**Homepage**

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Annotated NO voters: 65

Searching www.dejanews.com for postings by the 65 NO voters, the following results are obtained, approximately 29 votes are from people or fictitious email addresses with no history of postings to Usenet.

X = voted NO on 1st & 2nd vote for talk.religion.bahai; 26 people

B = Bahai; 20 people

SRB = messages all or primarily to soc.religion.bahai

---- = not a single hit on dejanews.com.

techy indicates interests appear to be in computer technology or technical subject matter

BCCA = frequent poster to the Bahai Computers and Communications Assn's bahai-discuss number with hits = number of messages to Usenet on dejanews.com

Voted No

|        |                                          |                           |                    |
|--------|------------------------------------------|---------------------------|--------------------|
| X,B    | abir [at] comtrol.com                    | Abir Majid                |                    |
| X,B    | andrew.pemberton-pigott [at] ualberta.ca | Andrew Pemberton-Pigott   | BCCA               |
|        | babboo [at] writeme.com                  | Peter Buchy               | techy              |
| B      | barneyk [at] ziplink.net                 | Michael "Barney" Kennedy  | 4 hits             |
| B,SRB  | bobbymitchell [at] totacc.com            | Bobby Mitchell            | 8 hits             |
|        | centiped [at] grey.xs4all.nl             | Roelf Renkema             | techy              |
|        | d [at] idiom.com                         | d                         | techy              |
| ----   | David.Robinson [at] Eng.Sun.COM          | David Robinson            | 0 hits             |
| ----   | djull [at] mindspring.com                | David Jull                | 0 hits             |
|        | dwolff [at] world.std.com                | David "Not a Bahai" Wolff | esparantoist       |
| B,SRB  | EdvardJ [at] simi.is                     | Edvard T. Jonsson         |                    |
|        | Ekkehard.Uthke [at] gmx.de               | Ekkehard Uthke            | techy              |
| B,SRB  | fdbetts [at] mindspring.com              | Dean Betts                |                    |
|        | forbes [at] cheerful.com                 | Forbes Benning            | 2 hit              |
| X,B    | Gata [at] aol.com                        | Shirley Macias            |                    |
| X      | globe99 [at] Mlink.NET                   | Derrick Jobidon           | 1 hit              |
| B      | gpoirier [at] acca.nmsu.edu              | G. Brent Poirier          | BCCA               |
| X,B    | Graham [at] fragrant.demon.co.uk         | Graham Sorenson           | BCCA               |
| X      | hcwtcurtis [at] email.msn.com            | Larry D. Curtis           | 1 hit              |
|        | hfung [at] lerami.lerctr.org             | Hank Fung                 | trains & techy     |
| ----   | hhouse [at] mailcity.com                 | Harry House               | 0 hits             |
| B      | hymanfam [at] samoatelco.com             | William M. Hyman          | SRB moderator BCCA |
| X,B    | iskandar [at] acsu.buffalo.edu           | Iskandar Hai              |                    |
| X      | jasmine [at] fl.net.au                   | Jasmine Taylor            | Pagan              |
| ----   | jjam [at] hplabsz.hpl.hp.com             | Jim S. Jam                | 0 hits             |
| X      | judd.rook [at] pnn.com                   | Judd A Rook               | 1 hit              |
| X      | kimdv [at] best.com                      | Kim DeVaughn              | 0 hits             |
| X,---- | krc1 [at] mail.enter.net                 | Phil Thomas               | 0 hits             |
| X,B    | ksm8p [at] avery.med.virginia.edu        | kavian milani             |                    |
| X      | lcs [at] zk3.dec.com                     | Larry Smith               | techy              |
| X      | LSEAMANS [at] MU3.MILLERSV.EDU           | Lynne Seamans             | techy              |
| ----   | marcus9 [at] usa.net                     | Marcus Davidson           | 0 hits             |
| B,SRB  | mehyar22 [at] siol.net                   | Mehyar Badii-Azandahi     | 3 hits             |
|        | mlcook [at] jerez.cca.rockwell.com       | Michael Cook              | techy, 2 hits      |
|        | mlocher [at] ibm.net                     | Maximilian Greer Locher   | 2 hits             |
| X,B    | momen [at] northill.demon.co.uk          | Moojan Momen              |                    |

|        |                                         |                                   |                          |
|--------|-----------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|--------------------------|
| X      | naddy [at] mips.rhein-neckar.de         | Christian Weisgerber              | techy                    |
| ----   | nigel [at] nigelshomes.com              | Nigel Austin-Weeks                | 0 hits                   |
| X      | nightrd [at] humboldt1.com              | Douglas Myers                     | 0 hits                   |
| B, SRB | ongang [at] mail.indigo.ie              | Ann O'Neill                       | 2 hits                   |
|        | pan [at] syix.com                       | Pan                               | Pagan                    |
| X      | patl [at] cag.lcs.mit.edu               | Patrick J. LoPresti               | techy                    |
| B      | persia [at] persia.com                  | Robert Moldenhauer                | BCCA, 0 hits             |
| X      | petcook [at] total.net                  | Peter Cook                        | 0 hits                   |
| X,B    | pewatler [at] cyf-kr.edu.pl             | Miguel Watler                     | SRB                      |
| X,---- | ph289jk [at] prism.gatech.edu           | Joseph Khoury BCCA secretary,     | 0 hits                   |
| ----   | polzer [at] uran.informatik.uni-bonn.de | Andreas Polzer                    | 0 hits                   |
|        | red [at] rahul.net                      | Red                               | alt.politics.white-power |
| ----   | riazor [at] nutecnet.com.br             | Irlandes Fernandes Gonzaga Junior | 0 hits                   |
|        | rmp [at] heehaw.com                     | Rafael Palmeiro                   | 1 hit                    |
| B      | roger.borseth [at] mci2000.com          | Roger Borseth                     | BCCA                     |
| SRB    | rossdee [at] ramhb.co.nz                | Ross Deeley                       | techy                    |
| B      | samoasys [at] samoatelco.com            | Jane C. Hyman                     | SRB moderator?           |
| X      | shohre [at] itis.com                    | Shohre Mansouri                   | 0 hits                   |
|        | shrao [at] nyx.net                      | Shrisha Rao                       | Hindu?                   |
| X      | stainles [at] bga.com                   | Dwight Brown                      | non-Bahai?               |
| X      | steiners [at] primenet.com              | Jason Steiner                     | Christian?               |
|        | steve [at] Watt.COM                     | Steve Watt                        | techy                    |
| ----   | stronguv [at] freenet.edmonton.ab.ca    | Donald Strong                     | techy 0 hits             |
| B,SRB  | Sunday122 [at] aol.com                  | Sunday Marie Witte                | 6 hits                   |
| ----   | talishman [at] usa.net                  | T. Albert-Ishmael Anderson        | 0 hits                   |
| X      | tlawson [at] amug.org                   | Todd C. Lawson                    | Sandra-Bullock fan       |
| X,---- | todd.kutches [at] attws.com             | Todd Kutches                      | 0 hits                   |
|        | wdmaddox [at] rice.edu                  | Bill Maddox                       | Freemasonry              |
|        | wpagel [at] wazoo.com                   | Karen L. Pagel(1 on SRB)          | 2 hits                   |

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Searching www.dejanews.com for a history of posting to Usenet, the following results are obtained:

Voted NO

B=Bahai

N=no hits on www.dejanews.com or zero or fewer than a recent dozen

T=techie

22 Bahais voted NO (only 27 YES)

10 Techies

26 or more NO hits have so few postings as to raise the question of the legitimacy of the email address.

|                             |                           |   |                         |
|-----------------------------|---------------------------|---|-------------------------|
| mansouri#one.net.au         | Shahab Mansouri           | N |                         |
| dany.steyaert#ping.be       | Dany Steyaert             |   | T                       |
| carol_bowie#mindlink.bc.ca  | David Bowie               | B |                         |
| towfiq#401kforum.com        | Mark Towfiq               | B | BCCA member or chairman |
| Aerfani#aol.com             | Abbas Erfani              |   | B                       |
| Hlpflhanna#aol.com          | Debbie Jenkins            | B |                         |
| Mac0000013#aol.com          | Dennis M. McDonnell       | B |                         |
| Starlet001#aol.com          | Katherine Mayerovitch     |   | N                       |
| kimdv#best.com              | Kim DeVaughn              | T |                         |
| stainles#bga.com            | Dwight Brown              | T |                         |
| david.ritscher#bigfoot.com  | David Ritscher            | N |                         |
| r.woodlock#bigfoot.com      | Rachel Butson             | B |                         |
| lcs#zk3.dec.com             | Larry Smith               |   | games                   |
| camm#enhanced.com           | Camm Maguire              | T |                         |
| caryenochr#enochsvision.com | Enoch's Vision Cary Enoch | N |                         |
| wcol#erols.com              | William Collins           |   | B                       |
| tom-hodges#geocities.com    | Tom Hodges                | B |                         |
| aromatica45#hotmail.com     | Victoria Williams         | N |                         |
| bearone1#hotmail.com        | Gary Rosenbaum            | N |                         |
| fazlollahi#hotmail.com      | Ahmad Fazlollahi          |   | N                       |
| rachel_t#hotmail.com        | Theresa McClendon         |   | N                       |
| screamingb#hotmail.com      | Screaming Banshee         | N |                         |
| swatchking#hotmail.com      | Fred Tague                | N |                         |
| jjam#spica.hpl.hp.com       | Jim Jam                   | N |                         |
| nightbrd#humboldt1.com      | Douglas Myers             | B |                         |
| shohre#itis.com             | Shohreh Mansouri          |   | B                       |
| bruce.limber#juno.com       | Bruce D. Limber           | B |                         |
| lpolk01#juno.com            | Linda L Polk              |   | B                       |
| palmtop#mailtag.com         | Bonnie Blanford           | N |                         |
| djull#mindspring.com        | David Jull                | N |                         |
| slr1bpz#mindspring.com      | George McCoy              | T |                         |
| bfwkendo#netvigator.com     | Brian Walker              | B |                         |
| chriseb#nortelnetworks.com  | Chris Ebenezer            | N |                         |
| dc#panix.com                | David W. Crawford         |   | T                       |
| persia#persia.com           | Robert Moldenhauer        | B |                         |

|                             |                       |                                  |
|-----------------------------|-----------------------|----------------------------------|
| Sandy-Allan#dial.pipex.com  | Sandy Allan           | B                                |
| billh#samoatelco.com        | Bill Hyman            | B soc.religion.bahai "moderator" |
| doug.obrien#the-spa.com     | Doug O'Brien          | travel                           |
| manialip#wowmail.com        | Kate Sparks           | N                                |
| francis_uy@yahoo.com        | F Uy                  | T                                |
| Ekkehard.Uthke#gmx.de       | Ekkehard Uthke        | T                                |
| naddy#mips.rhein-neckar.de  | Christian Weisgerber  | T                                |
| cnelson#calpoly.edu         | Craig Nelson          | N                                |
| aull#ll.mit.edu             | Brian Aull            | N                                |
| rick#bcm.tmc.edu            | Richard H. Miller     | N                                |
| kohli#mail.ameritel.net     | Pat Kohli             | B                                |
| helenko#bellsouth.net       | Helen Oney a.fan.     | happyman                         |
| cybrmage#dave-world.net     | Bud Polk              | B                                |
| rogerb#foxinternet.net      | Roger Borseth         | B                                |
| ellis#ftel.net              | Rick Ellis            | T                                |
| vpdura#hiwaay.net           | Vic Dura              | N                                |
| Scarecro#ime.net            | Tim Griffin           | N                                |
| jcornell#lightspeed.net     | John B. Cornell       | N                                |
| verbrugh#pionet.net         | Albert Verbrugh       | B soc.religion.bahai "moderator" |
| okoboji#prodigy.net         | Loriann=20            | B                                |
| mehyar22#siol.net           | Mehyar Badii-Azandahi | N                                |
| scooter#taranaki.ac.nz      | Scooter               | B                                |
| NUFAITH#wcnet.org           | Dennis Rule           | N                                |
| tr8770#bristol.ac.uk        | Tom Richards          | N                                |
| srm103#york.ac.uk           | Simon Mawhinney       | N                                |
| merlin#A470.demon.co.uk     | Darren Wyn Rees       | N                                |
| Graham#fragrant.demon.co.uk | Graham Sorenson       | B                                |
| leili#Justice.Medford.MA.US | Leili Towfigh         | N                                |

----- A few comments:

Mark Towfiq, member of the "BCCA," the Bahai Computer and Communication Association, the far right wing of the Universal House of Justice online, campaigned against the 1st proposal for talk.religion.bahai: Towfiq.htm
BCCA at BCCA.txt

Bill Hyman vowed as early as August 1997 to censor me and is a notorious "moderator" of soc.religion.bahai: srb29.htm

Albert Verbrugh is also a "moderator" of soc.religion.bahai; William Collins is a Bahai "administrator" in South Africa. Robert Moldenhauer, Graham Sorenson, and Tom Hodges are extremely rigid minds whose fanatical outpourings may be read in my BCCA archive opposing the 2nd interest poll: <https://209.185.180.230/~FG/Bahai-Discuss-Archive.txt>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

[Published in The New York Times, January 1998.]

A RESPONSE TO THE PUBLIC MESSAGE OF PRESIDENT KHATAMI TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

January 13, 1998

His Excellency President Mohammad Khatami Islamic Republic of Iran
Tehran, Iran

Your Excellency,

We, the American Baha'is, residing in more than seven thousand cities and towns across the United States and representing all races, cultures and ethnic origins in our nation, have listened with great interest to your words addressed to the American people, of which we are an organic part.

Your message prompts us to address you directly, because of your expressed dedication to the principles of freedom, justice and the rule of law - principles which, as you noted, are cherished by the American people.

We who enjoy such freedoms hope that our co-religionists in Iran, who have been deprived of them, will be granted their full rights as law-abiding citizens of your nation.

We are particularly encouraged by your assertion "that religion and liberty are consistent and compatible." As you said, "Human experience has taught us that prosperous life should hinge on three pillars: religiosity, liberty and justice." These, you concluded, "are the assets and aspirations of the Islamic Revolution as it enters the twenty-first century."

Are the Baha'is of Iran - your nation's largest religious minority - included in these aspirations?

Your explicitly stated determination to fulfill the provisions of the Iranian Constitution and to establish the rule of law gives us hope that the freedom of the Baha'i community in Iran openly to practice its religion will be guaranteed.

May we not expect, in the light of your commitment to human dignity and freedom, that the United Nations General Assembly Resolution (A/RES/52/142), which calls for the emancipation of the Baha'i community of Iran, will now be implemented?

Respectfully yours,

THE BAHA'IS OF THE UNITED STATES
Robert Calvin Henderson
Secretary

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHA'IS OF THE UNITED STATES
1320 NINETEENTH ST., N.W., SUITE 701 . WASHINGTON, D.C. 20036 .
202.833.8990

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

"Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/nsa1996.htm>

---

In 1996 my request to the circulation department for the American Bahai, repeated twice and perhaps a third time, read, "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list." I had torn off the preprinted address change label regularly published on the back page of the American Bahai and mailed it into the address given for subscription changes.

I asked for nothing other than my name and address to be removed from the mailing list--no gloss, no explanation, no complaint, no threat, etc.... Dermot Ryder's speculation that willingness to receive the American Bahai has become compulsory should give pause....

Again, note well, I used the address on the back of the American Bahai given specifically for handling subscription addresses. I did not write the nsa, its secretary, etc. My communication was limited to the simplest of requests: remove my name and address from your mailing list. Not a word or suggestion about withdrawing from the Bahai Faith, nor any criticism of it whatsoever, real nor implied. I conveyed my wishes to the proper address, as announced in the American Bahai itself. That I received an ignorant and insulting response back from an entirely different address speaks volumes, as they say. After six years, I believe the time is now right to release it publicly. I've scanned the letter so others might read the original.

I am not about to accept the slander and backbiting of fanatics and fundamentalists nor allow them to provoke me into one action or another. I prefer the facts: Again, I declared my belief in Baha'u'llah in 1976 and notified the nsa, who sent me back the declaration card available on my homepage. I have never notified them otherwise. They have never notified me to the contrary. I am a Baha'i in Perfectly Good Standing. The nsa owes my wife and I an apology.

The other two letters were related to the Detroit local spiritual assembly and its junk mail.

Further details at BIGS, Bahai in \*Perfectly\* Good Standing

See also the threatening, coercive email to me from an auxiliary board member, Hoda Mahmoudi, in 1997 attempting to interfere in the voting for talk.religion.bahai. Further details on Hoda Mahmoudi's coercive email. My other messages to the uhj may be found on the homepage near the bottom right.

---

After reading below, you might find interesting, The Old Lie

---

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
OF THE
BAHÁ'ÍS OF THE UNITED STATES
536 SHERIDAN ROAD, WILMETTE, ILLINOIS 60091-2649 • (708) 869-9039

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY
EMAIL: COMMUNITY@USNSC.ORG

August 26, 1996

Mr. Fredrick Glaysher
Mrs. Pamela Glaysher
3212 Avon Manor Road
Rochester Hills, MI 48307-5422

Dear Bahá'í Friends:

The National Spiritual Assembly has received your request asking that you not be sent The American Bahá'í, and we have been asked to contact you in this regard.

We are not certain from your action whether or not you continue to consider yourselves Bahá'ís and are therefore providing the following information to you. As you may know, the basis of membership in the Bahá'í Faith is acceptance of Bahá'u'lláh's claim to be the Manifestation of God for this day and age. It is of course the right of every believer to determine his or her level of participation in the activities of the Bahá'í community.

If you continue to believe in Bahá'u'lláh, we will maintain your names on the membership rolls of the Bahá'í community and respect your decision not to be sent The American Bahá'í at this time. If, however, you no longer believe in Bahá'u'lláh's station or His claims, and no longer consider yourselves Bahá'ís, please notify us of this fact, and we will remove your names from the membership rolls of the American Bahá'í community.

We hope that you will reflect on the above and inform us of your wishes as to membership in the Bahá'í community. The National Assembly would like to assure you of its loving prayers on your behalf.

With warm Bahá'í regards,

For the Office of the Secretary

---

668 Bolinger
Rochester Hills, MI 48307

December 4, 1997

Louhelen Bahai School 3208 South State Road
Davison, MI 48423

To Whom It May Concern:

Please remove my name and address from all of your mailing lists.

Sincerely,

FG

---

668 Bolinger
Rochester Hills, MI 48307

December 4, 1997

Bahai Faith
P.O. Box 14487
Detroit, MI 48214

To Whom It May Concern:

Please remove my name and address from all of your mailing lists.

Sincerely,

Frederick Glaysher

---

668 Bolinger
Rochester Hills, MI 48307

June 12, 1998

Bahai Faith
P.O. Box 14487
Detroit, MI 48214

To Whom It May Concern:

I enclose a copy of my December 4, 1997 letter requesting that you remove my name and address from all of your mailing lists. I have patiently waited for my request to be honored, understanding how long such minor matters can take in the Bahai Faith. Please do not force me to have to write a third time.

If necessary, please draw this matter to the attention of the LSA of Detroit. Perhaps they can find someone competent enough to accomplish the task.

Sincerely,

Frederick Glaysher

---

----- Original Message -----

From: "Bahai Faith" <BI*P*GS@liberty.com>

Newsgroups:

alt.politics.org.un,alt.religion.bahai,soc.culture.indian,talk.religion.bahai,talk.religion.misc

Sent: Tuesday, April 23, 2002 5:36 PM

Subject: One Country - "Belief and Tolerance: Lights Amidst the Darkness" - October-December 2001 Issue

One Country

Newsletter of the bahai international community
866 United Nations Plaza, Suite 120
NY, NY 10017 1country@bic.org

Please remove me from your mailing list. While I was an accredited participant at the Millennium Forum (May 22-26, 2000), I never gave permission to the bahai international community to use my private information for the delivery of its deceptive and hypocritical propaganda.

RECID#: 26201

Mr. FG

INDEPENDENT PARTICIPANT

[address withheld to protect me from further recriminations]

EXCERPTS:

The human spirit must be free to know. Apprehending who we are, for what purpose we exist, and how we should live our lives, is a basic impulse of human consciousness. This quest for self-understanding and meaning is the essence of life itself. The innate and fundamental aspiration to investigate reality is thus a right and an obligation of every human being.

To search for truth--to see with one's "own eyes and not through the eyes of other"--is to undertake a process of spiritual discovery with a keen sense of justice and openness....

The right to freedom of thought, conscience and belief now codified in international human rights instruments directly finds its roots in the scriptures of the world's religions. This fact should assure each of us that truth need not be feared, as it has many facets and shelters all of our diverse expressions of faith. If, after all, people of religious faith believe that the Creator is eternal and the center of all existence, then they must also believe that the unfettered and genuine search for truth will lead to truth.... Etc., etc., etc....

NON-BAHAI OBSERVERS:

Please compare these dishonest claims with the 50+ megabyte record of bahai coercion and suppression of conscience available on my website below.

--

FG

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

The Old Lie

---

Fanatics among my fellow bahais, especially Susan Maneck, have routinely now for years asserted that I threatened the NSA, not Mahmoudi, with a lawsuit should it contact me in any way, which justifies their never having done so, taking an issue from one context and applying it to another, YEARS LATER....

If a letter or message had been sent to Hoda Mahmoudi, auxiliary board member, why and how would Maneck know anything about it? The Mahmoudi message was sent to me the very morning of the day that the first voting period for talk.religion.bahai ended and the RESULTS was posted, when over 600 fundamentalists followed the advice of fanatic Mark Towfiq and others to oppose free speech and open discussion.
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Towfiq.htm>
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/1stRESULT.htm>

If a letter was sent to Mahoudi, it addressed only that context.
It's a well known fact that Maneck is Gharidian's sycophant.
If she has been given a letter intended for the context of Hoda Mahmoudi's interfering in the free and unfettered voting for talk.religion.bahai, thereby violating the very Words of Abdul-Baha extolling freedom of speech and conscience and which led me to appeal to the uhj for an explanation of Mahmoudi's deceitful interference, let her post a copy of it on talk.religion.bahai, though it is tantamount to backbiting and further slander, in my opinion, to distort a communication in one context to fit the evil designs of a corrupted fundamentalist administration in another.
See Mahmoudi's deceitfully sugarcoated, intimidating letter at

the bottom of the link below. Note that Mahmoudi never asked to meet with me but to telephone her. Other claims along these lines are false. Further note that the administration is definitely interfering in free speech and conscience here on talk.religion.bahai
and other online venues through their various sycophants in contradistinction to Abdul-Baha's elevating vision.
To the Universal House of Justice - March 31, 1997
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/To-UHJ1.htm>
To the Universal House of Justice - July 24, 1998
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/UHJ72498.htm>
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/uhj12-10-99.htm>

I reiterate that I am under no obligation to believe the claims
of vulgar liars and slanderous pseudo-academicians distorting past events and communications to fit a now different agenda.

I notified the nsa of my declaration of belief in Baha'u'llah in 1976. They acknowledged my declaration by sending me back the ID card available for viewing on my homepage and by accepting monetary contributions from me for years, not to mention many personal sacrifices. Further details of my participation in the bahai faith, in sundry ways, may be found in my uhj letters also accessible from my homepage. If the nsa has unilaterally changed my status as a member of the bahai faith, the obligation resides with them to notify me to that effect, which they have never done....

I urge the non-bahai looking in on this exchange to investigate and reflect carefully on the issues involved and on what they reveal about the bahai faith in practice versus theory....
Consider too that the real target of the fundamentalist attack on me may actually be the bahai community at large, to strike fear and obedience in their hearts in order to control them and to insure their submission, lest they too become the object of such a ferocious,
incessant onslaught of slander and abuse....

Other relevant messages and details at <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/nsa1996.htm>
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/images/Bahai-IDgif.gif>

For those who think this smear campaign is something new, Google
archives my being hounding by the fundamentalists along these lines for years:
[https://groups.google.com/groups?
q=Mahmoudi&hl=en&group=talk.religion.bahai&filter=0](https://groups.google.com/groups?q=Mahmoudi&hl=en&group=talk.religion.bahai&filter=0)

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

On Bahai Liberty

The Prisoner of Akka, Baha'u'llah, lived much of His life deprived of liberty, harassed and suppressed by the tyranny of one despot or another, yet He envisions a world of global freedom and universal brotherhood. From His experience of the liberty of His own Mind, from His mystical experience of the oneness of God, He teaches the oneness of all religions and the oneness of humankind. His immortal and challenging proclamation is "The earth is but one country and mankind its citizens." His love of liberty resonates with the noblest reflections on liberty that run throughout human history, East or West. Like Edmund Burke, Lord Acton, and the signers of the Declaration of Independence, Baha'u'llah upheld a responsible liberty seasoned with a sense of duty to God and society, while preserving and protecting the sanctity of the individual from tyranny and debasement.

What the Baha'i Faith has become today contrasts sharply with His enlightened Writings: a prison house of oppression, coercion, deception, manipulation, employing all manner of "slandorous vilification" against its own members for the slightest ideological divergence from its interpretation of His Teachings, calculated to deprive the individual of religious liberty and freedom of conscience, demanding nothing less than complete, absolute, and servile obedience. From a secular perspective, the Baha'i Faith has become the antitheses of the liberty discussed by John Stuart Mill in his classic work and the antitheses of the virtues extolled by Baha'u'llah and his son in the societies of England and the United States of America.

To those who are unfamiliar with the complicated history of the Baha'i Faith during the last one hundred years, these claims may well seem extreme and unwarranted, if one only knows the version propagated by self-serving Baha'i sources; To those who have suffered at the hands of Baha'i administrative inquisitors and oppressors, these claims will ring all too true, evoking bitter and painful memories. For the past ten to thirty years, the Baha'i Faith has imposed one inquisition after another upon its members. It has been widely assumed by many Baha'is that these incidents marked a temporary aberration from Baha'i administrative conduct, which would soon be corrected once the Universal House of Justice became sufficiently apprised of the issues involved, and that it would reprimand the particular counselor or auxiliary board member involved. Time has gone by, and incident after incident has accumulated, bringing home to many that far from a temporary aberration, a prison house of tyranny has indeed supplanted the liberty of the individual mind and soul that Baha'u'llah and Abdu'l-Baha had guaranteed their followers.

It is the sheer number of these incidents that convey, more than any one of them, the truest picture of what has become of Baha'u'llah's Faith. In the mid 1970s, a group of young students and scholars in Los Angeles loosely formed a study class for the sharing and encouragement of their research of Baha'i history and theology. They were harangued, harassed, and attacked, some leaving the Baha'i Faith in confusion and disbelief. Later in that decade, Bahai scholars at the University of Michigan and elsewhere who were commissioned, by the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States of America, to write a Bahai encyclopedia, met with a similar experience, many ending up having to resign from working on it, believing they could not do so in good conscience, given the interference of Baha'i authorities regarding historical fact and detail; some were driven out into the self-censorship of silence. The 1980s witnessed an increasing number of incidents. In 1987 "A Modest Proposal," intended for, but never published, in Dialogue Magazine, attempted to suggest improvements in procedure and operation of the national community, only to be publicly denounced at the national convention the following year, while its writers were handled in a most reprehensible fashion, some threatened with excommunication. Another group of scholars and writers in 1998 contributed to a paper known as "The Service of Women" which again met with a vehement crackdown all out of proportion to the issues and intentions of its authors. No brief highlighting of the shockingly dictatorial abuse of power by the Baha'i administration would be complete without mention of an open letter in 1996 by Steven Scholl, one of the Dialogue editors, which attempted to bring attention to the frequency and severity of these incidents and urged moderation and a more open and tolerant community. Many of the young editors and writers of Dialogue Magazine, as well as others, have been harassed and hounded into silence or driven out the door.

With the wide availability and development of the Internet during the 1990s, Baha'is all around the world, enjoying the liberty given them by God Himself and lauded by both Baha'u'llah and Abdu'l-Baha, entered into free and open discussion in a number of online venues. One of the first was Talisman, an email list sponsored through one scholar's affiliation with Indiana University. Baha'i interrogators of conscience were quick to quibble and denounce members for their views and opinions expressed in emails to group members, ultimately denouncing, as had happened in previous incidents, individuals as "covenant breakers" or possibly holding opinions which were tending toward covenant breaking. Through such methods, the abuse of individuals was carried out "in the best interest of the Faith," driving more young, intelligent, inquisitive, vigorous minds and souls away in shock and horror over what the Baha'i Faith had become, not was.

Another major incident, publicly documented in the newsgroup databases of Google and other search engines, was the proposal of an open and unmoderated newsgroup, talk.religion.bahai. Given the pervasive censorship and manipulation of thought and discussion on the previously existing newsgroup, soc.religion.bahai, praised in The American Baha'i, many Baha'is and non-Baha'i observers believed such a newsgroup was essential for unfettered discussion about Baha'i matters of concern. The overwhelming opposition of Baha'is to its formation shocked many inside and outside of the Baha'i Faith, as many fundamentalists called upon Baha'is "in good standing" and "firm in the covenant" to vote NO against it, garnering more than 600 votes through such rabble-rousing techniques on private Baha'i-only email lists. It took three years and as many rounds of voting to create what is still, as of 2004, the only forum on the Internet that cannot technically prevent the expression of any opinion or point of view.

No survey of incidents should fail to mention the lawsuit of Deborah Buchhorn against the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States and the Assembly of Albuquerque, New Mexico for fraud and libel in 2001. The court's dismissal of the lawsuit proved only that the government of the United States was wisely not about to adjudicate on issues of religion and conscience and in no way exonerated the Baha'i administration of the charges.

Throughout all these incidents and others, most Baha'is thought only in terms of an aberration, surely something had gone wrong, a miscarriage of Baha'i justice that the ultimate defender of justice, the Universal House of Justice, would rectify, restoring order and sanity to Baha'u'llah's Cause. Yet the tactics used were virtually identical in each case, and have become widely known, through talk.religion.bahai, as The Baha'i Technique, essentially, "slanderous vilification," imputations of covenant breaking or incipient covenant breaking, frightening people involved into silence, fear, and self-censorship. To assist in this program of ideological terrorization of the Baha'i community, the uhj has on a number of occasions apparently, or purportedly, autocratically thrown people out of the Baha'i Faith, despite such a practice not existing anywhere in the Baha'i Writings, despite Shoghi Effendi explicitly stating that only the Guardian could pronounce someone a covenant breaker. This indefensible, desperate tactic, non-doctrinal, has been wielded a number of times since 1997. All these incidents and more are documented on the Internet and elsewhere for those unfamiliar with them or for those who wish to independently investigate them further: <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

How often in religious history have the teachings and vision of the Founder become debased by the organization that rears itself upon His Sacrifice. No impartial, fair-minded observer who conscientiously explores, to whatever degree, these incidents, thus far recounted, can fail to perceive that the Baha'i Faith and what it calls its "administrative order" has become, in the most apropos words of Martin Luther, a "terrible tyranny." Its wolves in sheep's clothing have turned far aside from the Middle Path, envisioned by Baha'u'llah and Abdu'l-Baha, universally condoned by the reason of all persuasions. On all sides Baha'i administrators see only heretics and apostates, point the finger, denounce people as breakers of Baha'u'llah's covenant, or Abdu'l-Baha's Will and Testament, or Shoghi Effendi's non-existent will, which, in disobedience to Abdu'l-Baha, he never wrote.

In 2004, H-Net, a scholarly website supported by Michigan State University and Humanities & Social Sciences Online, reprinted in digital format the works of Mirza Ahmad Sohrab, who for over eight years served Abdu'l-Baha as a secretary and translator in the Middle East and on his American and European journeys. In Sohrab's several books, especially in Broken Silence: The Story of Today's Struggle for Religious Freedom (1942) and The Will and Testament of Abdu'l-Baha: An Analysis (1944), Sohrab presents his opinion that the Baha'i Faith was already well on the road to becoming an oppressive organization in the 1920s and '30s, exploitative of the individual, and departing further, with every year, from the moderation and predominately democratic liberalism of Baha'u'llah and Abdu'l-Baha. Sohrab located the source of the emerging problems of conscience and religious freedom in the desire of some early American Baha'is for absolute control, modeled on the Roman Catholic Church and other forms of autocratic religious organization, leading to and encouraging Shoghi Effendi's increasingly fanatical interpretation of Abdu'l-Baha's Will and Testament:

To interpret this section of the Will in such a literal sense, is, to say the least, utterly short-sighted and a complete subversion of all the glorious teachings of the Bahai Cause (53).

The young and impressionable Shoghi Effendi, a little dreamy and not entirely ready for it all, unsure of himself and what direction to chart after Abdu'l-Baha's passing, increasingly came under the influence of people in both the East and West who wanted a rigidly controlled bureaucratic system, until his own hand became the dominating force shaping the now trademarked, incorporated, and copyrighted organization. H-Net's digital reprinting brought home for insightful observers of the victimization of fellow Baha'is, during the purges and pogroms of the 1970s and after, the inescapable realization that, far from an aberration, the same pervasive fanaticism and censorship had indeed been experienced by Sohrab and earlier Baha'is in virtually the same form and manner. No amount of distorting and slandering the intentions and beliefs of Sohrab and Mrs. Chanler could deny the validity and eloquent truth of their own testimony, repeated and confirmed by the experience of subsequent generations of Baha'is.

Dying without leaving a will in 1957, Shoghi Effendi left the Baha'i Faith with no infallible successor, no appointed Guardian, and no infallible interpreter of Baha'u'llah's Writings. Shoghi Effendi's own words state emphatically that without a Guardian the Baha'i Faith would be mutilated and completely deprived of the "unerring guidance of God." Subsequent to his death, Baha'i experience only corroborates his judgment. No matter to what extent the Hands of the Cause assumed, or presumed, an authority that neither Abdu'l-Baha's Will and Testament nor any of the writings of Shoghi Effendi bestowed, their innovations and attempts to lay a credible foundation for the uhj failed, and time has proven it, made it open and blatant as the noonday sun.

The end of the Guardianship and the innovations and attempts to fill in the gaps and unfulfilled portions of Abdu'l-Baha's Will and Testament have continued unabated since the earliest schism between the Hands of the Cause, their unilateral and unauthorized attempt to fill the interpretive void left by Shoghi Effendi's failure to foresee his untimely end and the commotions it would unleash upon Baha'u'llah's Faith. Neither the custodians nor the Orthodox Baha'is had, or have, a credible claim to assumption of the mantle of authority. Nothing in Abdu'l-Baha's Will and Testament nor Shoghi Effendi's writings anticipated or justified what they did after the Guardian's death. Similarly, the International Baha'i Council that the Hands put aside was not in the Will and Testament nor an instrument of the Master for the appointment of a new Guardian. That the Hands were nominated and appointed by Shoghi Effendi gave them no legitimate authority to assume, or usurp, the "rights and powers in succession to the Guardian," which they claimed, nor to change the method of creating a universal house of justice from what was stipulated by the Master in His Will and was already anticipated by the Guardian through the unfolding of the International Baha'i Council. Any pretense to "infallibility" ended with Shoghi Effendi, and subsequent Baha'i experience has proven it in the ruined and destroyed lives of many thousands of individuals, married couples, families, and Baha'i communities.

The eventual creation by the uhj of the continental board of counselors, a type of Baha'i college of cardinals, and the auxiliary boards, notorious for operating like the Jesuits at their worst, has only exacerbated the situation and deepened the rift between Baha'is in all walks of life and the barely concealed clergy that now exists and demands at every turn "obedience" to the covenant, as the "infallible" universal house of justice interprets it, ignoring that Abdu'l-Baha and Shoghi Effendi both explicitly stated that only the Guardian has interpretive guidance and that the uhj has only legislative authority.

For decades the fanatical interpretation of Abdu'l-Baha's Will and Testament has demonstrated that not the slightest reform, or suggestion of reform, will be tolerated, let alone considered or acted upon. The uhj and its clergy have demonstrated beyond a doubt that they do not possess infallible powers or interpretive authority worthy of respect, let alone obedience.

Reform Bahais have watched or participated in all this. Many have been victims of intolerance and witch hunts; of coercion of conscience and denunciation, ostracism and shunning, and all the other tactics and techniques of The Baha'i Technique, suffered under the ferocious attacks of their fellow Baha'is who never hesitate to violate the Words of Abdu'l-Baha: "According to the direct and sacred command of God we are forbidden to utter slander."

Far from censuring such slander, a corrupted organization has encouraged among its cadre an ever more vicious campaign of slander, by what Mirza Ahmad Sohrab rightly recognized and scathingly called in the 1940s, "fawning, cringing, sniveling, mealy-mouthed sycophants, flatterers and flunkies."

Lessoned by time and history, by experience that cannot be taken but as a revelation of the Will of God, an unveiling of what lies behind the marble facade, acknowledging that the loss of the dream of unity and infallibility happened long ago, Reform Bahais seek to recover, restore, and return to Baha'u'llah's central and pristine Teachings—the oneness of God, the oneness of religion, the oneness of humankind—to His vision of responsible individual liberty in service to humanity, to the Example of the Master's Love, Wisdom, Kindness, Compassion, and Self-Sacrifice.

Reform Bahais choose to leave those who choose hatred, denunciation, shunning, endless and unproductive argument and recrimination over Abdu'l-Baha's Will and Testament, seeking justification for fanaticism, over the Will of Shoghi Effendi, which he never wrote or implied, or over the successors he never intended or appointed, or over the oppressive organization Baha'u'llah Himself never envisioned nor proclaimed.

Reform Bahais invite all Bahais, all humanity, to a Convocation of celebration, peace, love, and brotherhood, to seek humbly His Will, during Ridvan 2006.

FG

The Reform Bahai Faith

www.ReformBahai.org

October 4, 2004

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

See also the United Nations Menu

---

From: FG

Sent: Tuesday, April 23, 2002 5:36 PM

Subject: One Country - "Belief and Tolerance: Lights Amidst the Darkness" - October-December 2001 Issue

One Country

Newsletter of the bahai international community

866 United Nations Plaza, Suite 120

NY, NY 10017 1country@bic.org

Please remove me from your mailing list. While I was an accredited participant at the Millennium Forum (May 22-26, 2000), I never gave permission to the bahai international community to use my private information for the delivery of its deceptive and hypocritical propaganda.

RECID#: 26201

Mr. FG

INDEPENDENT PARTICIPANT

[address withheld to protect me from further recriminations]

EXCERPTS:

The human spirit must be free to know. Apprehending who we are, for what purpose we exist, and how we should live our lives, is a basic impulse of human consciousness. This quest for self-understanding and meaning is the essence of life itself. The innate and fundamental aspiration to investigate reality is thus a right and an obligation of every human being.

To search for truth--to see with one's "own eyes and not through the eyes of other"--is to undertake a process of spiritual discovery with a keen sense of justice and openness....

The right to freedom of thought, conscience and belief now

codified in international human rights instruments directly finds its roots in
the scriptures of the world's religions. This fact should assure each of us that truth need not be feared, as it has many facets and shelters all of our diverse expressions of faith. If, after all, people of religious faith believe that the Creator is eternal and the center of all existence, then they must also believe that the unfettered and genuine search for truth will lead to truth.... Etc., etc., etc....

NON-BAHAI OBSERVERS:

Please compare these dishonest claims with the 50+ megabyte record of bahai coercion and suppression of conscience available on my website below.

**--

FG

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

---

The bahai international community is abusing its access to the Millennium Forum's list of participants by improperly using people's addresses. See link below for the list of participants:
<https://www.millenniumforum.org/html/MFParticipants.pdf>

"This information is intended strictly as a reference and should not be used in any other fashion without the written permission of the Millennium Forum."

There are 335 pages of names and addresses, mine being only one among the many thousands to whom the bahai international community has been sending its deceptive propaganda piece now for over two years.

Notice that the contact email for the Millennium Forum has a "bic" domain, bahai international community, mngof@bic.org and can hardly be trusted to handle properly any complaint since THEY ARE the problem, which leaves little choice but to appeal elsewhere:
MFDiscuss@yahoogroups.com and inquiries@un.org

**--

FG

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

"Bahai Faith" <BI\*P\*GS@liberty.com> wrote in message news:aa4k7j\$7mfav\$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de...

> One Country
> Newsletter of the bahai international community
> 866 United Nations Plaza, Suite 120
> NY, NY 10017 1country@bic.org
>
> Please remove me from your mailing list. While I was an accredited > participant at the Millennium Forum (May 22-26, 2000), I never gave > permission to the bahai international community to use my private > information for the delivery of its deceptive and hypocritical propaganda.
>
> RECID#: 26201
> Mr. FG
> INDEPENDENT PARTICIPANT
> [address withheld to protect me from further recriminations]
>
>
> EXCERPTS:
>
> The human spirit must be free to know. Apprehending who we are, for what > purpose we exist, and how we should live our lives, is a basic impluse of > human consciousness. This quest for self-understanding and meaning is the > essence of life itself. The innate and fundamental aspiration
to > investigate reality is thus a right and an obligation of every human being.
>
> To search for truth--to see with one's "own eyes and not through the eyes
of > other"--is to undertake a proccess of spiritual discovery with a keen sense
> of justice and openness....
>
> The right to freedom of thought, conscience and belief now codified in > international human rights instruments directly finds its roots in the > scriptures of the world's religions. This fact should assure each of us
that > truth need not be feared, as it has many facets and shelters all of our > diverse expressions of faith. If, after all, people of religious
faith
> believe that the Creator is eternal and the center of all existence, then > they must also believe that the unfettered and genuine search for truth

will > lead to truth.... Etc., etc., etc....

>

> NON-BAHAI OBSERVERS:

>

> Please compare these dishonest claims with the 50+ megabyte record of bahai > coercion and suppression of conscience available on my website below.

>

> --

> FG

> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

> <https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

---

On the first page of the list of participants it is clearly stated that

"This information is intended strictly as a reference and should not be used in any other fashion without the written permission of the Millennium Forum."

<https://www.millenniumforum.org/html/MFParticipants.pdf>

As an accredited participant, I ask does the bic have such explicit WRITTEN PERMISSION from the Millennium Form?

cc: MFDiscuss@yahoogroups.com and inquiries@un.org

--

FG

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

>From: "One Country" <1country@bic.org>

>To: "FG" <FG@hotmail.com>

>Subject: RE: One Country - "Belief and Tolerance: Lights Amidst the Darkness" - October-Decem

>Date: Tue, 23 Apr 2002 18:15:40 -0400

>MIME-Version: 1.0

>Received: from [216.236.137.99] by hotmail.com (3.2) with ESMTP id

MHotMailBE8F264600BB40043161D8EC896315240; Tue, 23 Apr 2002 15:08:06 -0700

>Received: from ONECOUNTRY ([192.168.0.16]) by mail.bic.org (8.9.3/8.9.2)

with SMTP id SAA28647; Tue, 23 Apr 2002 18:08:02 -0400

>From: 1country@bic.org Tue, 23 Apr 2002 15:08:58 -0700

>Message-ID:

<NCBBJGGKCKHEJDCJAGMAKEFHCKAA.1country@bic.org>

>X-Priority: 3 (Normal)

>X-MSMail-Priority: Normal

>X-Mailer: Microsoft Outlook IMO, Build 9.0.2416 (9.0.2911.0)

>Importance: Normal
>X-Mimeole: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V6.00.2600.0000
>In-Reply-To: <F258vIj4blrOk6frahj00000e25@hotmail.com>
>
>
>Dear Mr. Glaysher,
>
>Your address has been removed from our complimentary mailing list. We apologize
>for any inconvenience.
>
>Regards,
>
>Veronica Shoffstall, Editorial Assistant
>ONE COUNTRY, the newsletter of the >Bahá'í International Community
>866 United Nations Plaza, Suite 120
>New York, NY 10017 USA
>tel: 212-803-2543 fax: 212-803-2566
>email: rshoffst@bic.org
>web: <https://www.onecountry.org>
>~~~~~
>"The earth is but one country and mankind its citizens."
>Bahá'u'lláh
>
>
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: FG mailto:[FG@hotmail.com]
> > Sent: Tuesday, April 23, 2002 5:36 PM
> > To: 1country@bic.org > > Subject: One Country - "Belief and Tolerance: Lights Amidst
the > > Darkness" - October-Decem
> >
> >
> > One Country
> > Newsletter of the bahai international community
> > 866 United Nations Plaza, Suite 120
> > NY, NY 10017 1country@bic.org
> >
> > Please remove me from your mailing list. While I was an accredited > > participant at the Millennium Forum (May 22-26, 2000), I never gave > > permission to the bahai international community to use my private > > information for the delivery of its deceptive and hypocritical propaganda.
> >
> > RECID#: 26201
> > Mr. FG
> > INDEPENDENT PARTICIPANT > > [address withheld to protect me from further recreminations]
> >
> >

> > EXCERPTS:

> >

> > The human spirit must be free to know. Apprehending who we are, for what > > purpose we exist, and how we should live our lives, is a basic impulse of > > human consciousness. This quest for self-understanding and meaning is the > > essence of life itself. The innate and fundamental aspiration to > > investigate reality is thus a right and an obligation of every human being.

> >

> > To search for truth--to see with one's "own eyes and not through the eyes of > > other"--is to undertake a process of spiritual discovery with a keen sense > > of justice and openness....

> >

> > The right to freedom of thought, conscience and belief now codified in > > international human rights instruments directly finds its roots in the > > scriptures of the world's religions. This fact should assure each of us that > > truth need not be feared, as it has many facets and shelters all of our > > diverse expressions of faith. If, after all, people of religious faith > > believe that the Creator is eternal and the center of all existence, then > > they must also believe that the unfettered and genuine search for truth will > > lead to truth.... Etc., etc., etc....

> >

> > NON-BAHAI OBSERVERS:

> >

> > Please compare these dishonest claims with the 50+ megabyte record of bahai

> > coercion and suppression of conscience available on my website below.

> >

> > **--

> > FG

> > The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

> > <https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

> > POSTED to talk.religion.bahai

Sent: Wednesday, April 24, 2002 4:15 PM

You dodged, not answered, my question. On the first page of the list of Millennium Forum participants it is clearly stated that

"This information is intended strictly as a reference and should not be used in any other fashion without the written permission of the Millennium Forum."

<https://www.millenniumforum.org/html/MFParticipants.pdf>

As an accredited participant, I ask does the bic have WRITTEN PERMISSION from the Millennium Form? (That's a yes or no question.)

My name and address NEVER appeared anywhere else other than the Millennium Forum list and I immediately began receiving unsolicited copies of One Country following the Forum in May of 2000. Your explanation is false.

**--

FG

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

**-----

Dear Mr. Glaysher,

We get our lists from a variety of sources. Your name may have been from any one of a number of conference lists, directories, or submissions from other organizations with whom we associate. Our list generally consists of prominent people and organizations active in matters of global concern. Perhaps your name made it to one of these lists and was entered to our complimentary mailing list.

The publication is sent at no charge to the recipients and many of our readers are interested in the articles about NGO conferences, development activities and in the book reviews and other items that relate to their field, as well as in learning more about the philosophy and activities of members of the Baha'i Faith. If they are not interested, they ask to be removed from the list, as you

did, and their record is deleted from our files.

I'm sorry this seems to have caused you such distress. As I said, your name
has been removed from our mailing list.

Sincerely,

Veronica Shoffstall, Editorial Assistant
ONE COUNTRY, the newsletter of the
Bahá'í International Community
866 United Nations Plaza, Suite 120
New York, NY 10017 USA
tel: 212-803-2543 fax: 212-803-2566
email: rshoffst@bic.org
web: <https://www.onecountry.org>

~~~~~

"The earth is but one country and mankind its citizens."

Bahá'u'lláh

From :

"One Country" <1country@bic.org>

To :

"FG" <FG@hotmail.com>

Subject :

RE: One Country - "Belief and Tolerance: Lights Amidst the Darkness" -
October-Decem

Date :

Wed, 24 Apr 2002 10:46:49 -0400

MIME-Version: 1.0

Received: from [216.236.137.99] by hotmail.com (3.2) with ESMTP id

MHotMailBE901A82006B40043164D8EC896320BE1; Wed, 24
Apr 2002 08:30:18 -0700

Received: from ONECOUNTRY ([192.168.0.16]) by mail.bic.org
(8.9.3/8.9.2) with

SMTP id KAA06891; Wed, 24 Apr 2002 10:39:10 -0400

From 1country@bic.org Wed, 24 Apr 2002 08:30:41 -0700

Message-ID:

<NCBBJGGKCKHEJDCJAGMAAEFLCKAA.1country@bic.org>

X-Priority: 3 (Normal)

X-MSMail-Priority: Normal

X-Mailer: Microsoft Outlook IMO, Build 9.0.2416 (9.0.2911.0)

X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V6.00.2600.0000

In-reply-to:

<F237hwWn5WNW51QW40j00001758@hotmail.com>

Importance: Normal

> -----Original Message-----
> From: FG [mailto:FG@hotmail.com]
> Sent: Wednesday, April 24, 2002 7:33 AM
> To: 1country@bic.org
> Subject: RE: One Country - "Belief and Tolerance: Lights Amidst the > Darkness" - October-Decem
>
>
> On the first page of the list of participants it is > clearly stated that "This information is intended strictly as a reference
> and should not be used in any other fashion without the > written permission of the Millennium Forum."
> <https://www.millenniumforum.org/html/MFParticipants.pdf>
>
> As an accredited participant, I ask does the bic have > such explicit written permission from the Millennium Form?
>
> cc: MFDiscuss@yahoogroups.com and inquiries@un.org
>
> --
> FG
> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
> <https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

Please note how convenient it is that "Posting to this group has been temporarily disabled" at this time. I believe it constitutes an obvious attempt by bahai fundamentalists to suppress knowledge of their abusing their access to the Millennium Forum's mailing list and thereby from reaching others associated with the Forum:

We are unable to deliver the message from <earthrisepress@hotmail.com>
to <MFDiscuss@yahoogroups.com>.

Posting to this group has been temporarily disabled.

For further assistance, please email support@yahoogroups.com or visit <https://help.yahoo.com/help/us/groups/>

From :

"" <earthrisepress@hotmail.com>

To :

MFDiscuss@yahoogroups.com

Subject :

One Country - "Belief and Tolerance: Lights Amidst the Darkness" -

OctDec01Issue

Date :

Wed, 24 Apr 2002 20:20:30 +0000

You dodged, not answered, my question. On the first page of the list of Millennium Forum participants it is clearly stated that

"This information is intended strictly as a reference and should not be used in any other fashion without the written permission of the Millennium Forum."

<https://www.millenniumforum.org/html/MFParticipants.pdf>

As an accredited participant, I ask does the bic have WRITTEN PERMISSION from the Millennium Forum? (That's a yes or no question.)

My name and address NEVER appeared anywhere else other than the Millennium Forum list and I immediately began receiving unsolicited copies of One Country following the Forum in May of 2000. Your explanation is false.

Dear Mr. Glaysheer,

We get our lists from a variety of sources. Your name may have been from any one of a number of conference lists, directories, or submissions from other organizations with whom we associate. Our list generally consists of prominent people and organizations active in matters of global concern. Perhaps your name made it to one of these lists and was entered to our complimentary mailing list.

The publication is sent at no charge to the recipients and many of our readers are interested in the articles about NGO conferences, development activities and in the book reviews and other items that relate to their field, as well as in learning more about the philosophy and activities of members of the Baha'i Faith. If they are not interested, they ask to be removed from the list, as you did, and their record is deleted from our files.

I'm sorry this seems to have caused you such distress. As I said, your name has been removed from our mailing list.

Sincerely,

Veronica Shoffstall, Editorial Assistant
ONE COUNTRY, the newsletter of the
Bahá'í International Community
866 United Nations Plaza, Suite 120
New York, NY 10017 USA

tel: 212-803-2543 fax: 212-803-2566

email: rshoffst@bic.org

web: <https://www.onecountry.org>

~~~~~

"The earth is but one country and mankind its citizens."

Bahá'u'lláh

From :

"One Country" <1country@bic.org>

To :

"FG" <FG@hotmail.com>

Subject :

RE: One Country - "Belief and Tolerance: Lights Amidst the Darkness" -

October-Decem

Date :

Wed, 24 Apr 2002 10:46:49 -0400

MIME-Version: 1.0

Received: from [216.236.137.99] by hotmail.com (3.2) with ESMTP id

MHotMailBE901A82006B40043164D8EC896320BE1; Wed, 24
Apr 2002 08:30:18 -0700

Received: from ONECOUNTRY ([192.168.0.16]) by mail.bic.org
(8.9.3/8.9.2) with

SMTP id KAA06891; Wed, 24 Apr 2002 10:39:10 -0400

From 1country@bic.org Wed, 24 Apr 2002 08:30:41 -0700

Message-ID:

<NCBBJGGKCKHEJDCJAGMAAEFLCKAA.1country@bic.org>

X-Priority: 3 (Normal)

X-MSMail-Priority: Normal

X-Mailer: Microsoft Outlook IMO, Build 9.0.2416 (9.0.2911.0)

X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V6.00.2600.0000

In-reply-to:

<F237hwWn5WNW51QW40j00001758@hotmail.com>

Importance: Normal

>-----Original Message-----

>From: FG [mailto:FG@hotmail.com]

>Sent: Wednesday, April 24, 2002 7:33 AM

>To: 1country@bic.org

>Subject: RE: One Country - "Belief and Tolerance: Lights Amidst the

>Darkness" - October-Decem

>

>

>On the first page of the list of participants it is >clearly stated that "This information is intended strictly as a reference

>and should not be used in any other fashion without the >written permission of the Millennium Forum."

><https://www.millenniumforum.org/html/MFParticipants.pdf>

>

>As an accredited participant, I ask does the bic have >such explicit written permission from the Millennium Form?

>
>cc: MFDiscuss@yahoogroups.com and inquiries@un.org
>
>--
>FG
>The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
><https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

---

Homepage

---

1stRESULT.htm
1stRFD.htm
2ndRESULT.htm
2ndRFD.htm
3rdRESULT.htm
3rdRFD.htm
95 Theses of the Reform Bahai Faith.htm
ABG.htm
AOL.htm
AOL1.htm
AOL10.htm
AOL11.htm
AOL12.htm
AOL13.htm
AOL14.htm
AOL15.htm
AOL16.htm
AOL2.htm
AOL2001.htm
AOL2002.htm
AOL3.htm
AOL4.htm
AOL5.htm
AOL6.htm
AOL7.htm
AOL8.htm
AOL9.htm
AOLcensorship.htm
AOLcensorship1.htm
AOLmb.htm
AOLremove.htm
ATTN.htm
Abbas\_Amanat\_Resurrection\_and\_Renewal\_1989.htm
AbdulB1.htm
AbdulB2.htm
Abdul\_Baha\_1912\_Authentic\_Covenant.html
AdminEx1.htm
AdminEx2.htm
AdminEx3.htm
AlisonMarshall.htm
AlisonMarshall2.htm
AmicusC.htm
Antinomies.htm
Areopagitica.htm
BANK\_FRAUD.htm
BCCA\_Ap.htm
BCCAattacks.htm
BCCAMenu.htm
BIGS.htm

Bacquet.htm
Bacquet2.htm
Bacquet2000.htm
Bacquet2001.htm
Baha'i rift Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith.html
Baha'u'llah's Passport Photo.htm
Bahai al-Qaida.html
BahaiAttacksonme.htm
BahaiLinks.htm
BahaiThreatsLawsuit.htm
Bahais in My Backyard.html
Bahais in My Backyard Fraud Shop.html
Books.htm
CAMitchell\_Report.htm
CAMitchell\_comments.htm
CChafe.htm
CHarassment.htm
Caution.htm
Charade.htm
Chicago\_Tribune.html
Cole.neworthodoxy.htm
Cole.htm
Cole1.htm
Cole10.htm
Cole11.htm
Cole12.htm
Cole13.htm
Cole14.htm
Cole15.htm
Cole16.htm
Cole17.htm
Cole18.htm
Cole19.htm
Cole2.htm
Cole20.htm
Cole2000.htm
Cole2001.htm
Cole2003.htm
Cole21.htm
Cole22.htm
Cole23.htm
Cole24.htm
Cole25.htm
Cole26.htm
Cole27.htm
Cole28.htm
Cole29.htm
Cole3.htm
Cole30.htm
Cole31.htm
Cole32.htm
Cole33.htm
Cole34.htm
Cole35.htm

Cole36.htm
Cole37.htm
Cole38.htm
Cole39.htm
Cole4.htm
Cole40.htm
Cole41.htm
Cole42.htm
Cole43.htm
Cole44.htm
Cole45.htm
Cole46.htm
Cole47.htm
Cole48.htm
Cole49.htm
Cole5.htm
Cole50.htm
Cole51.htm
Cole52.htm
Cole53.htm
Cole54.htm
Cole55.htm
Cole56.htm
Cole57.htm
Cole58.htm
Cole59.htm
Cole6.htm
Cole60.htm
Cole61.htm
Cole62.htm
Cole63.htm
Cole64.htm
Cole65.htm
Cole66.htm
Cole67.htm
Cole68.htm
Cole69.htm
Cole7.htm
Cole70.htm
Cole71.htm
Cole72.htm
Cole73.htm
Cole74.htm
Cole75.htm
Cole76.htm
Cole77.htm
Cole78.htm
Cole79.htm
Cole8.htm
Cole80.htm
Cole81.html
Cole9.htm
ColeBQ.htm
Concerning Christian Liberty.htm

Conscience1.htm
Covenant1.htm
Criticism.htm
Crush.htm
Culhane.htm
DMartin.htm
DeMorgen.htm
DiscussionAgendaTrb.htm
DmozGoogle.htm
Evil.htm
Ex.htm
Ex10.htm
Ex12.htm
Ex13.htm
Ex14.htm
Ex15.htm
Ex16.htm
Ex17.htm
Ex18.html
Ex2.htm
Ex3.htm
Ex4.htm
Ex5.htm
Ex6.htm
Ex7.htm
Ex8.htm
Ex9.htm
Exbahai2001.htm
FAQ.htm
FAQ2.htm
FWtoo.htm
FalseStats.htm
Farewell.htm
Fran.htm
Fran1.htm
Fran10.htm
Fran11.htm
Fran2.htm
Fran3.htm
Fran4.htm
Fran5.htm
Fran6.htm
Fran7.htm
Fran8.htm
Fran9.htm
Freedom1.htm
Freedom2.htm
Fundamentalism.htm
Gnosis.htm
Grobe1.htm
Grobe2.htm
H-Net\_H-Bahai.html
Hatemail2001.htm
Hazini2000.htm

Hazini2001.htm
Hobsbawm.htm
House.htm
House1.htm
House10.htm
House11.htm
House12.htm
House13.htm
House14.htm
House15.htm
House16.htm
House17.htm
House18.htm
House19.htm
House2.htm
House20.htm
House21.htm
House22.htm
House3.htm
House4.htm
House5.htm
House6.htm
House7.htm
House8.htm
House9.htm
Huffington\_Post\_Bahai.html
IPU.htm
Interfaith\_Forums\_UK.html
Johnson.htm
Johnson1.htm
Johnson10.htm
Johnson11.htm
Johnson12.htm
Johnson13.htm
Johnson14.htm
Johnson15.htm
Johnson16.htm
Johnson17.htm
Johnson18.htm
Johnson19.htm
Johnson2.htm
Johnson20.htm
Johnson2000.htm
Johnson21.htm
Johnson22.htm
Johnson23.htm
Johnson24.htm
Johnson25.htm
Johnson26.htm
Johnson27.htm
Johnson28.htm
Johnson29.htm
Johnson3.htm
Johnson4.htm

Johnson5.htm
Johnson6.htm
Johnson7.htm
Johnson8.htm
Johnson9.htm
Juan\_Cole\_On\_Bahai\_Takfir.html
Justice.htm
KalimatP.htm
Kelly.htm
Kelly100502.htm
KellyAppeal.htm
KellyMai.htm
LCCC.htm
Langness.htm
LarryRowe.htm
Lawsuit.htm
LettersAmD1989-1994.htm
Liberty.htm
MacEoin.htm
MacEoinRev.htm
Mahmoudi.htm
MahmoudiTV.htm
Majnun.htm
Majnun1.htm
Majnun2.htm
Majnun3.htm
Majnun4.htm
Majnunpost.htm
Maneck1.htm
Maneck10.htm
Maneck2.htm
Maneck3.htm
Maneck4.htm
Maneck5.htm
Maneck6.htm
Maneck7.htm
Maneck8.htm
Maneck9.htm
ManeckAdw.htm
Marshall2000.htm
Mather.htm
McKenny.htm
McKenny2000.htm
McKenny2001.htm
McKenny2003.htm
Mckenny1.htm
Mckenny10.htm
Mckenny11.htm
Mckenny12.htm
Mckenny13.htm
Mckenny14.htm
Mckenny15.htm
Mckenny16.htm
Mckenny17.htm

Mckenny18.htm
Mckenny19.htm
Mckenny2.htm
Mckenny20.htm
Mckenny21.htm
Mckenny22.htm
Mckenny23.htm
Mckenny24.htm
Mckenny25.htm
Mckenny26.htm
Mckenny27.htm
Mckenny28.htm
Mckenny29.htm
Mckenny3.htm
Mckenny30.htm
Mckenny31.htm
Mckenny32.htm
Mckenny33.htm
Mckenny34.htm
Mckenny35.htm
Mckenny36.htm
Mckenny4.htm
Mckenny5.htm
Mckenny6.htm
Mckenny7.htm
Mckenny8.htm
Mckenny9.htm
Media6.htm
NITV.htm
NMLawsuit.htm
NMLawsuitAnn.htm
NMLawsuitAttorney.htm
NMLawsuitResponse.htm
NOvoters.htm
NOvoters3rd.htm
NSA.htm
Nima1.htm
Nima10.htm
Nima2.htm
Nima3.htm
Nima4.htm
Nima5.htm
Nima6.htm
Nima7.htm
Nima8.htm
Nima9.htm
OldLie.htm
On Bahai Liberty.htm
OneCountry.htm
OrdinarySiteMap.html
OrthodoxBahaiPR.htm
Outburst.htm
Penn.htm
Pickering.htm

Psalm35.htm
RWhiteLibC.htm
Reformation.htm
Review-Censorship.htm
RobertHayden.htm
Rod.htm
RollCall.htm
Ruth White.htm
Ryder.htm
Ryder2001.htm
SRB151198.htm
SRB251198.htm
SRB351198.htm
SRB51998.htm
SWomen.htm
Scapegoat.htm
Scholl.htm
Scholl2.htm
Scholl3.htm
Scholl4.htm
Selected2000.htm
Selected2001.htm
Selected2001Part2.htm
Selected2003.htm
Sen McGlinn.htm
Shoot the Messenger.htm
Shunning.htm
Signposts of a Journey.htm
Sohrab.htm
SohrabEx.htm
StephenBirkland.htm
SufiOnAbuse.htm
SummaryMD.htm
The Modern Inquisition.htm
To-UHJ1.htm
To-UHJ2.htm
ToUHJ-1.htm
ToUHJ-10.htm
ToUHJ-11.htm
ToUHJ-12.htm
ToUHJ-13.htm
ToUHJ-14.htm
ToUHJ-2.htm
ToUHJ-3.htm
ToUHJ-4.htm
ToUHJ-5.htm
ToUHJ-6.htm
ToUHJ-7.htm
ToUHJ-8.htm
ToUHJ-9.htm
TombURS.htm
Towfig.htm
Tyranny.htm
UHJ1.htm

UHJ2.htm
UHJ72498.htm
UHJLetterApril71999.htm
UN.htm
UN2.htm
UNmenu.htm
USCourt\_Appeals09.htm
USDistrictCourt07.htm
US\_7th\_Circuit\_Court\_of\_Appeals\_11-23-2010.html
Usenet.htm
VABillRights.htm
VAStatuteRF.htm
WTitle.htm
WalbridgeL.htm
Why1.htm
Why2.htm
WhyLeft.htm
Wikipedia\_Frederick\_Glaysher.html
William\_Garlington.htm
allexperts\_dot\_com.html
anonymou1.htm
anonymou2.htm
anonymou3.htm
anonymous.htm
apostates.htm
apostates\_takfir.htm
arb.htm
arb1.htm
arb1198-22898.htm
arb83198-103198.htm
archive.htm
archiveBackuplinks.htm
bahai.htm
bahai1996.htm
beliefnet\_bahai.html
cadre\_bahai.htm
cadre.htm
censored.htm
censored2.htm
coollist-archive.htm
danesh.htm
democ1ha.htm
democ2ha.htm
details.htm
environment of intellectual repression.htm
exbahai2000.htm
foul\_deeds.htm
fraudulent\_will\_and\_testament.htm
hate.htm
hate1.htm
hate10.htm
hate11.htm
hate12.htm
hate13.htm

hate14.htm
hate15.htm
hate16.htm
hate16orig.htm
hate2.htm
hate3.htm
hate4.htm
hate5.htm
hate6.htm
hate7.htm
hate8.htm
hate9.htm
hatethreats2008.htm
hatmail2002.htm
hikmat.htm
hikmat2.htm
hikmatMENU.htm
index.html
media.htm
media1.htm
media2.htm
media3.htm
media4.htm
media5.htm
mediarelease.htm
modest.htm
ninedenominations.htm
nsa1996.htm
reposits.htm
reviews-cole.htm
shun1.htm
shun2.htm
shun3.htm
shun4.htm
shunning2.htm
shunning3.htm
soulpancake\_bahai.html
srb-bq.htm
srb.htm
srb10.htm
srb100.htm
srb101.htm
srb102.htm
srb103.htm
srb104.htm
srb11.htm
srb12.htm
srb13.htm
srb14.htm
srb15.htm
srb16.htm
srb17.htm
srb18.htm
srb19.htm

srb20.htm
srb21.htm
srb22.htm
srb23.htm
srb24.htm
srb25.htm
srb26.htm
srb27.htm
srb28.htm
srb29.htm
srb3.htm
srb30.htm
srb31.htm
srb32.htm
srb33.htm
srb34.htm
srb35.htm
srb36.htm
srb37.htm
srb38.htm
srb39.htm
srb4.htm
srb40.htm
srb41.htm
srb42.htm
srb43.htm
srb44.htm
srb45.htm
srb46.htm
srb47.htm
srb48.htm
srb49.htm
srb5.htm
srb50.htm
srb51.htm
srb52.htm
srb53.htm
srb54.htm
srb55.htm
srb57.htm
srb58.htm
srb59.htm
srb60.htm
srb61.htm
srb62.htm
srb63.htm
srb64.htm
srb65.htm
srb66.htm
srb67.htm
srb68.htm
srb69.htm
srb7.htm
srb70.htm

srb71.htm
srb72.htm
srb73.htm
srb74.htm
srb75.htm
srb76.htm
srb77.htm
srb78.htm
srb79.htm
srb8.htm
srb80.htm
srb81.htm
srb82.htm
srb83.htm
srb84.htm
srb85.htm
srb86.htm
srb87.htm
srb88.htm
srb89.htm
srb9.htm
srb90.htm
srb91.htm
srb92.htm
srb93.htm
srb94.htm
srb95.htm
srb96.htm
srb97.htm
srb98.htm
srb99.htm
srbban.htm
straw man.htm
taqiyya\_taqqiya\_taqiya\_taqiyyih\_hikmat.html
technique.htm
thanks.htm
trb102499.htm
trb1199-22899.htm
trb3199-43099.htm
trbmenu.htm
uhj-3Aug1999.htm
uhj12-10-99.htm
uhjIran112603.htm
wrongs.htm

archives/

A History of Freedom of Thought.htm
Baha'i faith and Its Teachings by William McElwee Miller.htm

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

See also the court documents at Lawsuit by Wilmette NSA against Orthodox Baha'i Faith

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

NEWS RELEASE

Wilmette Bahá'í Organization Threatens Minority Bahá'ís Through Court Action

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States (NSA), located in Wilmette, Illinois, has called upon the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division to hold in contempt members of minority Bahá'í organizations (the Orthodox Bahá'í Faith and the Bahá'ís Under the Provisions of the Covenant--two separate and distinct entities) who, the NSA claims, are in violation of an injunction its predecessor obtained some 40 years ago against a rival Bahá'í body.

In legal documents provided to the court on December 6, 2006, the NSA claimed that members of the current minority Bahá'í groups are bound by the 1966 Judgment. While not providing any specifics with regard to how the minority bodies have harmed the majority body, the NSA contends that the websites of the smaller organizations are doing irreparable damage to the NSA.

The basic contention of the NSA is that the members of the minority groups are violating the NSA's alleged trademarks on the name "Bahá'í" and the religious symbol of the "Greatest Name", and it seeks from the court a ruling which would prohibit the minority members from using the alleged trademarks to the detriment of the NSA.

The NSA seeks to restrain both those individuals who at one time were even remotely associated with the enjoined rival Bahá'í body and any 'nonparty' members who have since developed different Bahá'í organizations.

Those members of the minority group who call themselves Orthodox Bahá'ís, to distinguish themselves from the members of the majority organization, state that the trademark by the Wilmette NSA on the "Greatest Name" is the equivalent of a Christian denomination trademarking the Cross and then saying that no other Christian congregation can use that symbol in their activities or in their contacts with others.

Additionally, Orthodox Bahá'ís maintain that the name "Bahá'í" is in the public domain and cannot be the exclusive property of one organization. They say that like the name "Christian" and "Muhammadan", which refer to followers of Christ and Muhammad respectively, the name "Bahá'í" refers to a follower of Bahá'u'lláh, who all Bahá'ís acknowledge as the latest Prophet from God.

For some 35 years the Orthodox Bahá'ís have been employing the name "Bahá'í" in their newspaper and magazine publicity and in the telephone Yellow Pages, and during that time the NSA has made no move to implement the provisions of the injunction that the majority organization is now using to seek contempt citations against members of the minority groups. Should the NSA be successful in its efforts to curtail their activities, Orthodox Bahá'ís contend that, for them, the First Amendment of the Constitution is no longer valid.

To see the court papers: <https://www.truebahai.com/court/>

See Jeffrey Goldberg's poignant story. I hope others will take the time to read and reflect on it.

Shunning > Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm>

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <jricole@my-deja.com>

To: <talisman@umich.edu>

Subject: Commentary on the letter of the House of Justice dated April 7, 1999 (pt. 1)

Date: Sunday, June 06, 1999 12:54 PM

Dear Friends:

Since there has been controversy over the letter of the Universal House of Justice to the National Assemblies dated 7 April 1999, and since some have suggested that I am among those discussed in the letter, it seemed appropriate for me to comment. I do so only as one, inadequate individual, from a necessarily partial point of view, but I hope that in this instance as in others, the "spark of conflicting opinions" shall issue in "the truth" as we were promised by `Abdul-Baha.

I shall proceed by attempting a close commentary on the text. But first, some general comments must be made about the context of the letter and the institution that issued it.

The Universal House of Justice, with its seat in Haifa, is the legitimate head of the Baha'i faith. However, it is different from the papacy or the caliphate and many other past such bodies in several ways.

First of all, its members are elected and change over time. Second, it may not abrogate or set aside the revealed text of the Baha'i scriptures or their authoritative interpretation by `Abdul-Baha' or Shoghi Effendi. Third, future Houses of Justice may abrogate rulings and laws passed by their predecessors.

Baha'u'llah writes in the Splendors (my reworking of the official translation with reference to the Persian text):

"The eighth Ishráq: This passage, now written by the Pen of Glory, is accounted as part of the Most Holy Book: The men of God's House of Justice have been charged with the affairs of the [Baha'i] community [millat]. They, in truth, are the Trustees of God among His servants and the daysprings of authority in His countries. O people of God! That which traineth the world is Justice, for it is upheld by two pillars, reward and punishment. These two pillars are the sources of life to the world.

"Inasmuch as for each day there is a new problem and for every problem an expedient solution, such affairs should be referred to the House of Justice that the members thereof may act according to the needs and requirements of the time. They that, for the sake of God, arise to serve His Cause, are the recipients of divine inspiration from the unseen Kingdom. It is incumbent upon all to be obedient unto them.

"All matters of [leadership (umur-i siyasiyyih)] should be referred to the House of Justice, but acts of worship ( ` ibadat) must be observed according to that which God hath revealed in His Book.

"O people of Bahá! Ye are the dawning-places of the love of God and the daysprings of His loving-kindness. Defile not your tongues with the cursing and reviling of any soul, and guard your eyes against that which is not seemly. Set forth that which ye possess. If it be favourably received, your end is attained; if not, to protest is vain. Leave that soul to himself and turn unto the Lord, the Protector, the Self-Subsisting. Be not the cause of grief, much less of discord and strife. The hope is cherished that ye may obtain true education in the shelter of the tree of His tender mercies and act in accordance with that which God desireth. Ye are all the leaves of one tree and the drops of one ocean." -Tablets of Baha'u'llah, pp. 128-129.

Note that the Universal House of Justice is empowered only in matters of leadership or perhaps legislation of sanctions (umur-i siyasiyyih) is ambiguous in the original. Note that it may not abrogate the explicit text of Baha'u'llah (referred to as matters of 'worship'). Note that it is charged with making new laws that address new issues that arise.

`Abdul-Baha says of this body in his *Will and Testament* pp. 19-20 that:

"By this House is meant that Universal House of Justice which is to be elected from all countries, that is from those parts in the East and West where the loved ones are to be found, after the manner of the customary elections in Western countries such as those of England. It is incumbent upon these members (of the Universal House of Justice) to gather in a certain place and deliberate upon all problems which have caused difference, questions that are obscure and matters that are not expressly recorded in the Book. Whatsoever they decide has the same effect as the Text itself. Inasmuch as the House of Justice hath power to enact laws that are not expressly recorded in the Book and bear upon daily transactions, so also it hath power to repeal the same. Thus for example, the House of Justice enacteth today a certain law and enforceth

it, and a hundred years hence, circumstances having profoundly changed and the conditions having altered, another House of Justice will then have power, according to the exigencies of the time, to alter that law. This it can do because these laws form no part of the divine explicit

Text. The House of Justice is both the initiator and the abrogator of its own laws . . ."

It should by now be clear that the Universal House of Justice's sphere of authority is solely that of legislating Baha'i law. Neither Baha'u'llah nor any other Baha'i holy figure bestowed upon the House of Justice the authority to exercise authoritative Interpretation of the Baha'i texts. It is simply not an interpretive body. Moreover, no individual House of Justice (since they are elected every 5 years there have been 7 sessions) can permanently bind or constrain its successors by making a law not found in the Baha'i texts and attempting to make it permanent.

Nor is the Universal House of Justice to interfere in the free expression of individual conscience:

"Palo Alto, California, 9 October 1912: Before `Abdu'l-Baha left Palo Alto, a group again had the honor of gathering in the most holy court. Among his blessed utterances was an explanation of religious conflicts, especially those of the Christians. `Some said Christ was God, and some said he was the Word, while others called him a prophet. Because of these differences, conflicts arose among them, such that in the community there was enmity instead of spirituality, and estrangement rather than unity. But Baha'u'llah has closed the door on such differences. By arranging for interpretation to be carried out by an authoritative Interpreter of the Book, by establishing the Universal House of Justice--or in other words the Parliament of the [Baha'i] community--and by commanding that there be no interference in beliefs or conscience, He blocked such breaches from occurring. He even said that if two persons discussing some matter develop a dispute, such that it leads to a polarization, both are wrong and discredited.' - In Mahmúd Zarqání, Kitáb-i Badá'i` al-Athár, 2 vols. (Hofheim-Langenhain: Bahá'í-Verlag, 1982), 1:294.

Unlike past ecclesiastic institutions, the Baha'i houses of justice, whether international, national or local, are according to `Abdul-Baha not to attempt to interfere with the expression of individual conscience.

`Abdul-Baha also said, in a talk given in 7 April 1913 in Budapest

"He is God. Liberty is of three sorts. One is the divine freedom, that is confined to the essence of the Creator. He is autonomous and absolute. No one can compel Him with regard to anything at all. Another form of liberty is that of the Europeans, which holds that human beings may do as they please on the condition that they not harm one another. This is the liberty of nature, and its highest degree is found in the animal world. This is the estate of the animal. Look at these birds, in what liberty they live. Whatever human beings might do, they can never be as free as animals. Rather, order stands in the way of freedom. As for the third sort of liberty, it is under the divine laws and ordinances. This is the liberty of the human world, which severs the heart's relationship with all things. It soothes all hardships and sorrow. The more the consciences of human beings progress, the more free their hearts become, and the more glad their spirits become. In the religion of God there is freedom of thought, for no one can rule over the [individual's] conscience save God. But [freedom of thought] exists only to the extent that it is not expressed in terms that depart from politeness. In the religion of God there is no freedom of deeds. No one can transgress the divine law, even if in so doing he harms no one. For by the divine law is intended the training of oneself and others. For to God, harming oneself or harming others are the same, and both are reprehensible. In hearts there must be the fear of God, and human beings must not commit blameworthy deeds. Therefore, the freedom of deeds that exists in civil law does not exist in religion. As for freedom of thought, it must not transgress the bounds of politeness. And deeds are also linked to fear of God and the divine good-pleasure. - In `Abdu'l-Hamíd Ishráq-Khávarí, ed., Má'idih-yi Asmání, 9 vols. (Tehran: Bahá'í Publishing Trust, 1973) 5:17-18.

Now, if `Abdul-Baha had been speaking of only privately held beliefs when he mentioned "conscience," it would not have been necessary for him to insist that conscience be expressed politely. He clearly was pointing to the inadmissibility of Baha'i houses of justice interfering with the verbal *expression* of individual conscience in the Baha'i faith. For more on human rights in the Baha'i faith see my "The Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Baha'i Scriptures." Occasional Papers in Shaykhi, Babi and Baha'i Studies, vol. 3, no. 2 (April, 1999) at <https://h-net2.msu.edu/~bahai/bhpapers/vol3/rights.htm>

In **Baha'i Administration**, pp. 63-64, Shoghi Effendi wrote:

"Let us also remember that at the very root of the Cause lies the principle of the undoubted right of the individual to self-expression, his freedom to declare his conscience and set forth his views. If certain instructions of the Master are today particularly emphasized and scrupulously adhered to, let us be sure that they are but provisional measures designed to guard and protect the Cause in its present state of infancy and growth until the day when this tender and precious plant shall have sufficiently grown to be able to withstand the unwisdom of its friends and the attacks of its enemies. Let us also bear in mind that the keynote of the Cause of God is not dictatorial authority but humble fellowship, not arbitrary power, but the spirit of frank and loving consultation."

Since the Universal House of Justice in its letter of May, 1995, recognized the validity of email discussions and exempted them from literature Review, this principle of the Guardian is now fully applicable to them.

Let us return to the difference between interpretation and legislation. Shoghi Effendi writes in **World Order of Baha'u'llah**, pp. 149-150:

"From these statements it is made indubitably clear and evident that the Guardian of the Faith has been made the Interpreter of the Word and that the Universal House of Justice has been invested with the function of legislating on matters not expressly revealed in the teachings. The interpretation of the Guardian, functioning within his own sphere, is as authoritative and binding as the enactments of the International House of Justice, whose exclusive right and prerogative is to pronounce upon and deliver the final judgment on such laws and ordinances as Bahá'u'lláh has not expressly revealed. Neither can, nor will ever, infringe upon the sacred and prescribed domain of the other. "

This quotation reinforces what `Abdul-Baha said above, that the Universal House of Justice is solely a legislating body and has no authority to Interpret, and is not to stray into interpretation.

But what would in practical terms prevent such an outcome, i.e., the departure of the Universal House of Justice into the realm of Interpretation? It is the presence on that body of a living Guardian.

Shoghi Effendi also wrote in the **World Order of Baha'u'llah**, p. 148:

"Divorced from the institution of the Guardianship the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh would be mutilated and permanently deprived of that hereditary principle which, as `Abdu'l-Bahá has written, has been invariably upheld by the Law of God. "In all the Divine Dispensations," He states, in a Tablet addressed to a follower of the Faith in Persia, "the eldest son hath been given extraordinary distinctions. Even the station of prophethood hath been his birthright." Without such an institution the integrity of the Faith would be imperiled, and the stability of the entire fabric would be gravely endangered. Its prestige would suffer, the means required to enable it to take a long, an uninterrupted view over a series of generations would be completely lacking, and the necessary guidance to define the sphere of the legislative action of its elected representatives would be totally withdrawn."

Note that Shoghi Effendi was very concerned to delineate the proper sphere of authority of the Universal House of Justice, which is wholly legislative in nature and has nothing to do with Interpretation. And note that he clearly felt that it is the living Guardian who had the authority and ability to keep the Universal House of Justice from straying into Interpretation from legislation.

Now, in 1957, the Baha'i world was visited with a catastrophe, since henceforth there was not and could not be a living Guardian. The Universal House of Justice that was elected in 1963, while legitimate, was a "mutilated" body, crippled by the lack of divine guidance that a living Guardian would have provided. Some have piously hoped that the body of interpretation left by the first and only Guardian could substitute for the presence of a living Guardian, but clearly this is not the case. It is in the give and take of consultation in the chambers of the House of Justice that a living Guardian would make his interventions, guiding members away from areas that are not in that body's purview. In the absence of a living Guardian, the Universal House of Justice lacks the ability to take a long view; it lacks the precise judgment that would allow it to realize when it has strayed from its authoritative sphere of legislation. It is not I who says this but Shoghi Effendi. But all is by no means lost. To be "mutilated" would now be termed instead to be "challenged." We might once have used the words "crippled," "disabled" or "handicapped" for such a body, but the brave struggles of our fellow human beings among the blind, the lame, and the mentally impaired, have taught us that such conditions do not represent an end to life but rather a set of special challenges to overcome. In the same way that we all have a responsibility to help the specially challenged overcome their disabilities, we all have a duty to help the Universal House of Justice overcome its.

These texts and these developments help to explain the problems that have arisen with the advent of academic Baha'i scholarship and the rise of the internet and email. Individual opinions and non-authoritative individual interpretation are freely allowed to Baha'is according to the explicit texts of all the Holy Figures.

Shoghi Effendi wrote in **Unfolding Destiny,** p. 423: 6 April 1928 [From the Guardian] "I feel that regarding such interpretations (of verses from the Scriptures) no one has the right to impose his view or opinion and require his listeners to believe in his particular interpretation of the sacred and prophetic writings. I have no objection to your interpretations and inferences so long as they are represented as your own personal observations and reflections. It would be unnecessary and confusing to state authoritatively and officially a dogmatic Bahá'í interpretation to be universally accepted and taught by believers. Such matters I feel should be left to the personal judgement and insight of individual teachers...."

Shoghi Effendi was the divinely appointed and authorized Interpreter of Baha'i scriptures. He would have been within his rights to promulgate a dogmatic understanding that would be imposed uniformly. He eschewed such a dictatorial path, so reminiscent of papacy and caliphate, and instead allowed individuals to express their non-authoritative views freely. What he disallowed as the demand by any believer of another that he or she submit to a particular interpretation. There is no evidence of anyone being exempted from this prohibition, including auxiliary board members or institutions such as houses of justice, neither of which have any special Interpretive authority.

To be continued

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan,
jrc@umich.edu

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrc@umich.edu/bahai.htm>

Buy *Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

From: <jrc@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: Commentary on the letter of the House of Justice dated April 7, 1999 (pt. 1)

Date: Sunday, June 06, 1999 5:32 PM

In article <7je936$1mu$1@nnrp1.deja.com>, jrc@my-deja.com wrote:

Now, after this admittedly lengthy, but I think very necessary preparation, let us turn to the letter of 7 April 1999 from our dear, human, brothers, the members of the Universal House of Justice.

(Though

to be fair, it should be noted that the letter is most immediately from the Department of the Secretariat, and that very frequently such letters are generated by one member or a handful of members of the House within whose portfolio the subject lies).

>THE UNIVERSAL HOUSE OF JUSTICE BAHAI WORLD CENTRE

>Department of the Secretariat 7 April 1999 To all National Spiritual Assemblies

>Dear Baha'i Friends,

>Issues Related to the Study of the Baha'i Faith

>In May of 1998, Baha'i Canada reproduced a collection of letters which >the Universal House of Justice had written to various individuals on >the subject of the academic study of the Baha'i Faith. Copies of this >compilation were subsequently mailed by the Canadian National Spiritual

>Assembly to its sister Assemblies. The reprint has now been made >generally available in booklet form by the United States Baha'i >Publishing Trust. The House of Justice has asked us to forward you a >copy of the latter publication with the following comments.

>As a number of the friends are aware, a campaign of internal opposition

>to the Teachings is currently being carried on through the use of the >Internet, a communications system that now reaches virtually every part >of the world.

I know that our dear Baha'i brothers who are members of the Universal House of Justice view certain developments in this ominous fashion, but I really believe that this is another instance where these blessed souls have been deprived, through no fault of their own, of the ability to take a long view of the development of the faith and to avoid straying from their only legitimate function, of legislation. There is no cabal promoting 'internal opposition' to *the* Teachings of the Baha'i faith.

There are some sincere Baha'is whose individual, non-authoritative interpretation of the Baha'i texts has differed from that of Doug Martin, Ian Semple, Farzam Arbab and other members of the Universal House of Justice. For the latter to label this difference of opinion among devoted believers "internal opposition to the Teachings" is to demonstrate an unfortunate inability to grant others their due and to recognize their sincerity. It is also to claim official Interpretive authority for our brothers on the House of Justice, since they are claiming the right to declare interpretations at variance with their own "opposed" to the Teachings. Yet, as the extensive quotations presented above definitively prove, the House of Justice has no such authority.
It is only by loving and frank consultation that the Baha'i community can help its challenged ("mutilated") Head pull back from this brink and return to the straight path.

>Differing from attacks familiar in the past, it seeks to recast the >entire Faith into a socio-political ideology alien to Baha'u'llah's >intent.

Again, our dear brothers are mistakenly claiming the right to determine "Baha'u'llah's intent," which is a matter of Interpretation, not of legislation. They are speaking beyond their purview. If they believe that any Baha'i intellectual has sought to cast the faith as a 'socio-political ideology,' they have simply misunderstood that person's intent, and it is hoped that further consultations will clarify matters.

>In the place of the institutional authority established by His >Covenant, it promotes a kind of interpretive authority which those >behind it attribute to the views of persons technically trained in >Middle East studies.

I know that the emergence of academic Baha'i studies among Baha'is in the West has been very painful for our beloved brothers on the Universal House of Justice. Academics such as Denis MacEoin at Cambridge pioneered a new way of looking at Babi-Baha'i history and texts in the 1970s, learning Arabic and Persian, using historical tools such as putting things in their context, and trying to seek the original meaning of these texts. As a result, he was so cuttingly attacked by some conservative Baha'is that he was forced out of the Baha'i faith. In biblical studies such an approach is called Higher Criticism, and it underpins works such as John Dominic Crossan's books on the historical Jesus. Such an approach to religion is normal and taken for granted among thinking persons in the modern and postmodern world. It is, however, vehemently rejected by religious fundamentalists and by most thinkers in the Global South.

I think the problems have arisen, however, because non-academics do not understand the nature of academic writing. In the academic world, no one accepts an argument from authority. No proposition is true because such and such historian asserts it. It is true because it can be proven to be true by texts and reasoning. When it cannot in this way be upheld, the proposition is revised or rejected. The process is like that in science. Thus, academic writing is an on-going dialogue--fluid, unstable, not fixed. When an academic such as myself writes about the Baha'i faith from an academic point of view, he or she is in a sense merely putting forward personal insights based on available texts and upon reasoned analysis of them.

This academic writing, being a form of individual, non-authoritative interpretation subject to public debate and revision, should not be seen as forming a threat to, or an alternative to, the authoritative interpretation of `Abdul-Baha and Shoghi Effendi. Given that the Universal House of Justice is Interpretatively challenged, however, that body may over time find that academic writing actually is helpful to it, owing to the rigor of its methods. At the very least, such writing poses no threat to the integrity of the faith, and was encouraged by all the Holy Figures. What Mirza Abu'l-Fadl wrote was simply a 19th century form of academic Baha'i discourse, and he was praised for it by `Abdul-Baha. Shoghi Effendi named Fadil Mazandarani and H.M. Balyuzi (the latter with formal academic credentials in history from the London School of Economics) as Hands of the Cause! Indeed, it was Shoghi Effendi who instructed Mr. Balyuzi to write the biography of Baha'u'llah, knowing full well his command of academic methods. Academic writing should be seen for the tentative, revise-able, non-authoritative discourse that it is.

>Early in 1996, the deliberate nature of the plan was revealed in an >accidental posting to an Internet list which Baha'i subscribers had >believed was dedicated to scholarly exploration of the Cause.

The Universal House of Justice has been given misinformation here. This is a constant problem. Since our dear brothers in Haifa are so busy running the entire Baha'i world, they do not have time individually to investigate every issue. They depend heavily on reports from their counselors and NSA members. Unfortunately, some of these persons in the U.S. are personally unreliable; a few have frankly paranoid tendencies that cloud their reports. John Walbridge's famous "majnun" posting to the first Talisman list does not demonstrate the existence of any sort of plot or conspiracy, but rather quite the opposite--it shows that he believed that it was inappropriate to "organize" and that rather the effects of email consultation would be salutary for the faith in themselves. For what it is worth, I also condemned the hotheaded suggestions of a majnun subscriber, which were in any case not very serious.

>Some of the people responsible resigned from the Faith when Counsellors

>pointed out to them the direction their activities were taking. A small >number of others continue to promote the campaign within the Baha'i >community.

Well, I am afraid that there was only one person responsible for the majnun posting, or maybe two if you counted the poster to whom it came as a response. I wasn't responsible for either one and didn't agree at all with the one or with much of the latter, and several others whom the Counselors bothered were also entirely innocent in this regard. As I have pointed out, the majnun posting itself is not something that would be considered "criminal" in any civilized system. Moreover, I can attest as an eye-witness that if the House of Justice merely desired that the Counselors consult with me about the "direction" my "activities" were taking, then Counselor Stephen Birkland grossly exceeded his instructions, since in fact he threatened me and others with being declared covenant breakers and sentenced to the "social death" of shunning merely for our talisman email postings!

>In the past, in situations of a somewhat similar nature, the patience >and compassion shown by 'Abdul-Baha and the Guardian helped various >believers who had been misled by ill-intentioned persons to eventually >free themselves from such entanglements.

There have not been any similar situations in the past, because neither `Abdul-Baha nor Shoghi Effendi bothered Baha'i scholars such as Mirza Abu'l-Fadl or George Townshend or Hasan Balyuzi, but rather encouraged them. While the Talisman academics do not have the stature of either one, they were continuing, and saw themselves as continuing, the intellectual tasks begun by those giants.

>In this same spirit of forbearance the Universal House of Justice has >intervened in the current situation only to the extent that has been >unavoidable, trusting to the good sense and the goodwill of the >believers involved to awaken to the spiritual dangers to which they are >exposing themselves. Nevertheless, certain Counsellors and National >Spiritual Assemblies are monitoring the problem closely, and the >friends can be confident that whatever further steps are needed to >protect the integrity of the Cause will be taken.

I think the Universal House of Justice has in fact been relatively measured in its further communications after Mr. Birkland's disastrous handling of the situation in 1996. Given my own anger and sometimes immoderate email messages about the entire situation, this seems admirable. We should not forget, however, that the House of Justice authorized threats against prominent Baha'i academics by Mr. Birkland in 1996; that it had the International Teaching Centre threaten other email posters in 1997, and expelled Michael McKenny from the Baha'i faith that year. The House of Justice has encouraged what can only be characterized as dishonest behavior among some rightwing Baha'i intellectuals, as it admits when it says it has put the counselors and NSAs up to spying on the Baha'is, which I regret not only because dishonesty and snooping are unethical but because I think this behavior betrays a lack of trust in the very good will and good judgment they say they believe in. This April 7 letter seems to me a further unfortunate and unnecessary departure from moderation.

>As passages in the enclosed reprint make clear, this campaign of >internal opposition -- while purporting to accept the legitimacy of the >Guardianship and the Universal House of Justice as twin successors of >Baha'u'llah and the Centre of His Covenant -- attempts to cast doubt on >the nature and scope of the authority conferred on them in the >Writings.

I think the real problem is that some Baha'is, especially the powerful ones, have a somewhat naive and absolutist approach to the Baha'i institutions and are reluctant to admit of any limitations on them, even those delineated by the Holy Figures themselves! However, Shoghi Effendi warned against such "extreme orthodoxy" (Baha'i Administration p. 42). Again, the House of Justice is straying into matters of Interpretation, which are not its purview.

>When other Baha'is have pointed out that such arguments contradict >explicit statements of the Master, persons behind the scheme have >responded by calling into question the soundness of 'Abdul-Baha's own >judgement and perspective.

There is not and never has been any concerted "scheme" on the part of Western Baha'i intellectuals to undermine the Baha'i faith. Most of the people the counselors targeted didn't even get along in the 1980s! To now amalgamate Professor Linda Walbridge (a Baha'i for 25 years, a pioneer to difficult posts in Lebanon and Jordan who was forced out of the faith for her stand for women's rights) and Steve Scholl (similarly an old-time Baha'i, former editor of Dialogue magazine similarly threatened, bullied and forced out) is to ignore the major tiff between the two acted out in Dialogue magazine itself! The discourse here most unfortunately resembles that explored by Hofstadter in his classic "The Paranoid Style in American Politics."

I would be interested in seeing the particular quote calling into question `Abdul-Baha's judgment and perspective. I don't personally remember anything like that, and I saw it all. The big to-do on Talisman I was over `Abdul-Baha's mistaken statement, gleaned from medieval Muslim historiography, that Socrates met the Israeli prophets in the holy land, which is certainly untrue (which prophets were in the Holy Land during Socrates' life anyway, and why do the ancient Greek authorities deny he ever travelled abroad?) In any case, `Abdul-Baha himself denied to his companions that he claimed to be infallible ("da`vat-i ma`sumiyyat namikunam"), which was one of the charges levelled against him by the Muhammad-`Ali covenant breakers. Surely the House of Justice does not desire to confirm the covenant breakers' charges about the Baha'is by falling into the sort of idolatry where `Abdul-Baha's judgment can never be questioned?

>Gradually, these arguments have exposed the view of those involved that

>Baha'u'llah Himself was not the voice of God to our age but merely a >particularly enlightened moral philosopher, one whose primary concern >was to reform existing society.

I just don't know who ever said such a thing. May we have at least a quote, please? Much of Talisman I is up on the World Wide Web, so it is easy enough to quote. This assertion sets up a non-existent straw man that is easy to knock down. When Birkland barged into my living room and interrogated me on behalf of the House of Justice, one of the things he said was, 'How can you say you are a Baha'i when you talk about Baha'u'llah as though he were a historical person?' This was one of the heresy charges against me and others, and it is probably what lies behind this mysterious passage.

I think this problem has to do in part with the differences in discourse about religion between most Iranians and most educated Westerners. Iranians often show their piety by a kind of exaltation of holy personages that most Westerners would feel excessive and even paralyzing or idolatrous. We can't have a world religion if Mr. Nakhjavani isn't going to make a place for the Denis MacEoins and Juan Coles and Linda Walbridges whose discourse he finds distasteful because they are Western academics. All I can say is that a majority of American Christians certainly believe that Jesus was a historical person, and only fundamentalists would deny that they are Christians. that I speak about Baha'u'llah as a historical person does not mean I reduce him to a philosopher. I happen to have written a long essay on the "Concept of Manifestation in the Baha'i Writings." I know what a Manifestation of God is, and I believe Baha'u'llah was one.

There are two wider points I have to reemphasize here. The first is that Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha both fully recognized the humanity and historicity of the Manifestations of God.

Explaining the meaning of "clouds" in past scriptures in His Book of Certitude, pp. 71-72, Baha'u'llah freely admits to the mortality of the Manifestations: "In another sense, they mean the appearance of that immortal Beauty in the image of mortal man, with such human limitations as eating and drinking, poverty and riches, glory and abasement, sleeping and waking, and such other things as cast doubt in the minds of men, and cause them to turn away. All such veils are symbolically referred to as 'clouds.'" Although Baha'u'llah recognizes that discourse acknowledging the historical limitations on the Manifestations can form a stumbling block to some, He clearly cannot have desired to the fact of it covered up, since He Himself proclaimed it here!

The second is that it is simply is not the place of the Universal House of Justice to inquire into my personal beliefs or those of anyone else, expressed in email messages, about Baha'i theology and the station of Baha'u'llah. This area of conscience is not a matter of legislation. It is, frankly, none of their business, and `Abdul-Baha explicitly forbade them from interfering in it. While they are welcome to their own theological opinions, and are welcome even to lobby for those, using their vast prestige within the community, they do not have the right to Interpret authoritatively. The Baha'i faith was not designed by Baha'u'llah to be a religion of orthodoxy, but rather, like Islam, a religion of orthopraxy, of right practice of law and ritual.

If the House of Justice made a law, like the Caribbean dictator in Woody Allen's film *Bananas*, that we must all change our underwear every day, and that we must all wear it on the outside so it can be checked, then my understanding of the Covenant is that we should have to do so. The House of Justice may enact laws and punish behavior. But they may not promulgate dogmas and punish individuals for their conscientious expressions of belief. It is simply not the case that such speech is a form of behavior, and making it a crime is to create thought-crimes, as in totalitarian states. Where they criminalize mere individual opinion, the House of Justice breaks the Covenant `Abdul-Baha established with the intellectuals of the West in His own day, with Hyppolite Dreyfus and Auguste Forel and others, which pledged that the Baha'i faith would not be a persecuting, anti-intellectual religion like so many of the others.

To be continued . . .

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan,
jrcole@umich.edu

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy *Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>

To: <talisman@umich.edu>

Subject: Re: Commentary on the letter of the House of Justice dated April 7, 1999 (pt. 3)

Date: Monday, June 07, 1999 12:52 AM

The House of Justice wrote:

>By itself, such opposition would likely stand little chance of >influencing reasonably informed Baha'is. As one of the letters in the >enclosed reprint (20 July 1997) points out, the scheme relies for >effect, therefore, on exploiting the confusion created in modern >thought by the reigning doctrines of materialism.

Cole replies:

Again, the word "scheme" here is troubling insofar as it indicates a preconceived and deliberately plotted attempt to do something dishonest.

Its mere use puts the intellectuals on the defensive and makes them have to deny it. It is too ridiculous to deny. I became a Baha'i in 1972 while an undergraduate at Northwestern University, and was already committed to the academic life at that time. I was, of course, somewhat nervous about whether it was good to join an organized religion, given the miserable experience thinking people have had with them. But I was constantly reassured, by the Baha'i scriptures themselves, by `Abdul-Baha's talks (which are now increasingly being tossed out of the Canon by the fundamentalists) and letters, by members of my local community, by members of the National Spiritual Assembly like Firuz

Kazemzadeh and Dan Jordan, and ultimately in correspondence by the Universal House of Justice itself that there was no contradiction between the life of the intellect and spiritual life in the Baha'i faith!

The Universal House of Justice even once wrote me that they preferred to maintain literature Review because they found the Roman Catholic system of maintaining an index of forbidden books distasteful! (And now they are assiduously developing an index of forbidden books that cannot be carried by Baha'i publishing trusts.)

For them now to characterize all academic writing about religion as in its essence "materialist" is for them to renege on all those promises that were made me and others all along the line. They are also contradicting Shoghi Effendi's clear advice that Baha'is major in subjects like Comparative Religions and History at university! Make no mistake. They are not concerned here with *real* materialism, such as that of Marx or Democritus or Milton Friedman. They view *all* academic writing about religion, including by phenomenologists and sympathetic ethnographers, as "materialist." Writing that would be dismissed by real materialists as fluffy and "culturalist" would nevertheless be seen by our dear brothers in Haifa as "materialist." This is because they have what can only be described as a fundamentalist mindset, and feel about academic approaches to religion rather as Pat Robertson, Jerry Falwell, and Ayatollah Khamenei do.

I think they have a right to their point of view on this matter. I simply insist on my right (and the right of others) to differ with them here. The Baha'i faith, if it is to be truly all-embracing, has to have place in it for Western intellectuals committed to human rights and freedom of thought. `Abdul-Baha promised us there would be a place for us at His table, and now we are being expelled from His House by bouncers in business suits, and told to hit the road. This would not be so bad--religions after all change over time--except that the Universal House of Justice simply has no standing to pronounce on Interpretive matters like *academic methodology.* Methodology is in any case a complex issue that takes years of high-powered graduate study to master, something none of the present members has done with regard to the humanities or social sciences. But *it is not even their sphere of authority*! By criminalizing the work of all the Baha'i academics in university Religion and History departments in the West, they are making themselves, and the Faith, look ridiculous. And they are unwittingly breaking the Covenant `Abdul-Baha made with thinking people, promising us that this sort of thing would not happen in this dispensation.

>Although the reality of God's continuous relationship with His creation >and His intervention in human life and history are the very essence of >the teachings of the Founders of the revealed religions, dogmatic >materialism today insists that even the nature of religion itself can >be adequately understood only through the use of an academic >methodology designed to ignore the truths that make religion what it
>is.

I once heard Hand of the Cause John Robarts give a talk. Robarts had been an insurance salesman, and had something of the tent preacher about him. His stories were about how the uncertain and discouraged young insurance salesman finally got committed to his job and went out and sold a million dollars worth of insurance. Or about how a crucial sale was about to be lost because he seemed to have missed his plane, but when he prayed mightily, it turned out that another plane was available. Why was this? Because, of course, God is ever-present, and if you ask him with sufficient fervor, and He is so inclined, he will conjure up an airplane for you. Frankly, I was appalled at this superstitious mindset, which is the same one displayed in this letter.

Of course, the Abrahamic scriptures, including the Baha'i ones, do have a discourse of divine intervention in human affairs. But how do we know that this discourse is not symbolic? If Jesus says he is a door, does that mean he has a doorknob in his navel? So many things are acknowledged as symbolic in the Baha'i scriptures--Satan, prophecies, angels, jinn, even our images of God. How could it be proved that divine intervention is not a trope intended to produce certain spiritual effects, such as spiritual reassurance?

You can call me a dogmatic materialist all you like, but I guarantee you that an insurance salesman's prayers have no effect whatsoever on the airline industry's schedules. God doesn't work by breaking the physical laws that He himself decreed! Whatever happened to the unity of science and religion, which was supposed to be such a key Baha'i principle? What *scientist* believes the world is so topsy-turvy that airplanes are being conjured in and out of existence by the prayers of insurance salesmen?

The phrase "dogmatic materialism" is intended to mislead and draw attention away from the real dogmatism here, which is the dogmatism of a theological fundamentalism. We have to inhabit a magical world of faeries, angel feathers, and acabadababra airplanes or we can't be good Baha'is. I think it is rather sad that relatively educated persons such as our dear brothers on the Universal House of Justice are, as late as the eve of the 21st century, and in complete contradiction to basic Baha'i principle, imprisoned in such superstitions. But they are welcome to have any theology they like. They are not welcome to try to impose their theology on innocent, thinking Baha'is. They are not a theological institution. They have no authority to Interpret Baha'i scripture. They should be off somewhere making laws that would better humankind instead of parroting the fading line of the Jerry Falwells and other fundamentalist preachers.

Finally, I am afraid that none of the members of the Universal House of Justice has the slightest idea of the methodological underpinnings of current academic methodology in the humanities and human sciences in Western universities. These underpinnings are very seldom properly characterized as "materialist," and a colleague who gave a paper in my department based on a vulgar materialism of the sort in vogue 30 years ago among Althusserians would be laughed out of the building. They are, in short, simply poorly informed, as well as trespassing into areas over which they have been given no authority whatsoever by Baha'i texts. It is painful for me to see such honored persons, the trustees of such an exalted Institution, humiliate themselves with this outburst of vehement ignorance. But we must be reminded that they are doing the best they can, mutilated and challenged by the absence of a living Guardian, and must forgive them their sortie into Monty Python-like caricature.

>In general, the strategy being pursued has been to avoid direct attacks >on the Faith's Central Figures.

Well, I haven't attacked any of the Faith's Central Figures because I admire and believe in them all, though I admire Baha'u'llah most of all. I am afraid He doesn't get much attention in the current Baha'i Faith. I on the other hand am the only living Baha'i who so much as bothered to write a book wholly about him, to spend years reading thousands of pages of his works. There isn't any strategy at work here. I criticize God all the time for the Holocaust. If I were annoyed at the Holy Figures I wouldn't hesitate to say so.

>The effort, rather, has been to sow the seeds of doubt among believers >about the Faith's teachings and institutions by appealing to unexamined >prejudices that Baha'is may have unconsciously absorbed from non-Baha'i
>society.

Actually, I think Baha'i conservatives and fundamentalists, who want to abrogate the unity of science and religion, are the ones who have imbibed prejudices from their Shi'ite and Christian fundamentalist backgrounds.

>In defiance of the clear interpretation of 'Abdul-Baha and the >Guardian, for example, Baha'u'llah's limiting of membership on the >Universal House of Justice to men is misrepresented as merely a >"temporary measure" subject to eventual revision if sufficient pressure >is brought to bear.

Baha'u'llah never limited membership of the Universal House of Justice to men, and I would very much like to see such a quote. He calls members of *all* houses of justice, local and universal, "rijal," which could mean "men" but could also simply mean "notables." Despite his clear reference to rijal-i buyut-i `adliyyih (men of the houses of justice), by which he *must* have meant local houses of justice because of the plural, `Abdul-Baha and Shoghi Effendi both let women onto local houses of justice. This matter is unclear, and the Universal House of Justice may eventually decide that women can in fact serve on that body. The present, seventh House of Justice do not like this possibility, but they cannot forestall the legislative decisions of its successors, as we have seen from explicit holy texts. To make it illegal to say that women may eventually serve is mad, and exceeds their authority.

>Similarly, Shoghi Effendi's explanation of Baha'u'llah's vision of the >future Baha'i World Commonwealth that will unite spiritual and civil >authority is dismissed in favour of the assertion that the modern >political concept of "separation of church and state" is somehow one >that Baha'u'llah intended as a basic principle of the World Order He >has founded.

In Persian, Shoghi Effendi called the Commonwealth "spiritual." He explicitly said that Baha'i institutions are not to allow their bodies to supersede the machinery of the civil state. Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha wrote extensively about the need for religious leaders to avoid intervening in the affairs of the civil state. A small group of Baha'i theocrats, including Horace Holley, Mason Remey, and David Hoffman, attempted for decades to reverse this central Baha'i teaching. Hoffman met opposition to this idea from Hugh Chance, David Ruhe and Charles Wolcott, but gradually moved his men into position at the International Teaching Center and succeeded in getting them elected to the Universal House of Justice (as well as bringing over Ian Semple to his side). Now the theocrats on the Universal House of Justice, whose vision of society differs very little from that of Ayatollah Khomeini if you substitute the Baha'i institutions for the Shi`ite clergy, wish not only to reverse the Baha'i scriptures but to make their somewhat odd views an unchallengeable Baha'i dogma to which all Baha'is must assent.

Moreover, why is it that they use "modern" as an insult? The Baha'i faith arose in the modern era (`asr-i jadid). Previous Baha'i leaders and thinkers were proud of this fact. That the separation of religion and state is "modern" does not make it bad. It is an 18th century idea that Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha took up to fight the influence of the clergy of their day and to ensure that their own religion did not ever descend into the medieval quagmire of theocracy and Inquisition. In any case, this is a matter of Interpretation, and the House of Justice has no standing to promulgate a dogma about the issue, more especially one that contradicts key writings of Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha! See in particular `Abdul-Baha's *Treatise on Leadership*, which the Baha'i authorities in Iran have long suppressed:

<https://h-net2.msu.edu/~bahai/trans/vol2/absiyasi.htm>

>Particularly subtle is an attempt to suggest that the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar >should evolve into a seat of quasi-doctrinal authority, parallel to and >essentially independent of the Local House of Justice, which would >permit various interests to insinuate themselves into the direction of >the life processes of the Cause.

Baha'u'llah urged that a Mashriqu'l-Adhkar be built in every town and city. `Abdul-Baha was extremely eloquent and urgent about the need for the Baha'is to build houses of worship in every locality. Shoghi Effendi admitted that the faith could not be whole until the Mashriq and its dependencies were widely established and fully functioning. The Universal House of Justice has intervened to contradict these pronouncements of Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha, and actually to persecute Baha'is who wish to build local houses of worship! Yet Baha'u'llah was quite clear that the Universal House of Justice is *not* to interfere in matters of worship (`ibadat) or the commandments in revealed texts. Here, as elsewhere, they are attempting to exceed their authority and are damaging the Cause of God by stunting its spiritual growth. Apparently, this policy derives from a desire to ensure that all monetary resources in the faith go to Haifa, which seems to me awfully selfish.

>Typically, when misrepresentations of the kind described are >challenged, the reaction of those behind the campaign has been to claim >that their civil rights are being threatened, an assertion that is of >course meaningless in the light of the purely voluntary nature of >Baha'i membership.

Nobody minds his or her interpretation of the Baha'i texts being "challenged," since all we have are our individual and non-authoritative opinions, after all. But "challenge" is being used as a euphemism here.

Sincere Baha'is who have never broken a Baha'i law and who have dedicated their lives to serving the Faith are being threatened by persons (many of whom don't know much about the Baha'i scriptures and have lived all their lives in comfortable suburbs) with being *shunned*, which is in Baha'i terms a form of "social death." And why have they been so threatened? Because they have speculated that women might serve on the Universal House of Justice, because they have suggested that the Baha'i institutions may not in fact be Khomeinist in nature, because they yearn to see local houses of worship built? These are their capital crimes. How ridiculous. How absurd. How pitiful. To build an Inquisition on such trifles.

As for the truly horrifying idea that Baha'is have *no* human rights in their own religion, I fear I must go beyond simple consultation here to outright denunciation. This is monstrous. Baha'u'llah suffered from lack of due process at the hands of the Ottoman state (headed by the Muslim Caliph, the equivalent of the Universal House of Justice, divinely sanctioned and unchallengeable in his society). He openly condemned this lack of justice. `Abdul-Baha spoke of the need for rights and due process. Human rights are at the core of the Baha'i scriptures! And yet now we hear that Baha'is have no human rights. They have no freedom to declare their views or express their conscience. They may, like Michael McKenny, be tossed about spiritually like so many sacks of potatoes by our brothers in Haifa.

As for the idea that the reason Baha'is have no human rights with regard to their own administrative institutions is that the Baha'i faith is a voluntary organization, this conclusion is simply illogical. We could by the same token say that residence in a particular country is voluntary. So, Iranian Baha'is cannot be seen to have their human rights abused by the ayatollahs, because after all they can simply move to Pakistan or Turkey. They are not required to remain in Iran. Under this logic there can be *no* human rights abuses anywhere by anyone. All victims of human rights abuse have the choice of leaving their situation.

But let me just assure you that my belief in Baha'u'llah is not "voluntary" in the way my membership in the local public library is. It is wrought up with the core of my being, and I could not abandon it without feeling warped and inauthentic (I know: I tried, for what I thought was the good of the Faith). I think this is even more true for those born into the religion. To say that I may have my human rights abused by the Baha'i authorities, and be subjected to threats, censorship, and even social death, because I could theoretically renounce the faith that is at the core of my being, is to abandon all Baha'i principle and to descend into a medieval sort of Inquisition. I cannot tell you how I weep at the idea of our beloved Baha'i faith, the shining hope of a new Age, being so warped as to come to mirror the Spanish Inquisition, with psychological and cult-like techniques of intimidation substituted for the rack.

>Much emphasis is placed by them also on academic freedom, their view of >which proves, on examination, to be merely freedom on their part to >pervert scholarly discourse to the promotion of their own ideological >agenda, while seeking to exclude from discussion features of the Baha'i >Faith that are central to the Writings of its Founders.

Academic freedom is the freedom to explore, to seek the truth no matter where it leads, even to make mistakes. You can't decide beforehand what is a perversion and what is a breakthrough. As for an ideological agenda, the 7th House of Justice not only has a rather elaborated one, but it is one that flies in the face of basic Baha'i scripture and principle. The real reason they are so afraid of academia is that by its rigor and method of checking sources and viewing them in context, it inevitably challenges the Khomeinization of the Baha'i faith in which they are privily engaged.

But we need not worry. There are thousands of universities in the world. My own university has a population of half the entire US Baha'i community. A little liberal arts college with 2,000 students has a population equivalent to the Baha'i community of France or Germany. The Baha'i administration is a big frog in a **very** small pond. It cannot in fact suppress intellectual life. It has picked a fight with thinking people the world over, and it is not a fight that any religious organization has won in the long run. The Vatican finally gave up the fight with Vatican II in 1965 and has finally apologized to Galileo. Future Houses of Justice will apologize for the Great Purge of 1996.

>The effect of continued exposure to such insincerity about matters >vital to humanity's well-being is spiritually corrosive. When we >encounter minds that are closed and hearts that are darkened by evident >malice, Baha'u'llah urges that we leave such persons to God and turn >our attention to the opportunities which multiply daily for the >promotion of the truths which He teaches.

Actually, I don't think Baha'u'llah says any such thing. I recall him saying that at Ridvan all creation was made ritually pure, and calling upon us to associate with fragrance and fellowship with all human beings. Our dear brothers in Haifa must have a different copy of the Most Holy Book than the one I possess. And their phraseology here opens the question of what we should do when we encounter insincerity, duplicity, a cult-like mindset, and hearts darkened with malice among incumbents in the Baha'i institutions.

I think we have to send our love out to them as individuals, but we also have a responsibility to speak out against the harm they may inflict, with their methods of backroom intimidation and manipulation, upon individual adherents. We have to be vigilant against their electioneering, their forcing out of the faith anyone who is vocal and open-minded, their anti-intellectual prejudices. And, who knows? Eventually they may themselves see how contrary to the spirit of the Faith their actions and words are, and may develop that sense of shame that Baha'u'llah says only a few of us are born with. That cannot be our concern.

As Baha'is, our central task is clear: to build up an ever-advancing **civilization** (which Shoghi Effendi indicates would have academic studies of religion as one of its components), to serve humankind, to work for an inclusive global community that has a place for conservatives and liberals, fundamentalists and academics, black and white, male and female, urbanite and tribesman. I say this despite the fact that the current leaders of the Baha'i World Faith are attempting to exclude a very large and significant proportion of humanity from the faith (including me!), in order to pursue an extremely narrow and partisan vision of it.

The one thing they have gotten right is that the give and take between the fundamentalist leadership and the Baha'i intellectuals has already had, and increasingly will have, a galvanizing and salutary effect on the community, and from this dialectic both sides will ultimately move closer toward the real Baha'i faith, which we children of the twilight can only dimly imagine.

I wish our dear brothers on the Universal House of Justice well, and pray for them that they will find Baha'u'llah in their hearts, and will find a way to forsake the persecutorial and somewhat paranoid view they have of any Baha'i who does not see things the way they do. I pray most of all that they abandon their forays into theology and inquisitions, and return to their proper function of legislation and advancing the interests of humankind.

Sincerely

Juan R. I. Cole Professor Department of History University of Michigan

**--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrc@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrc@umich.edu/bahai.htm>
Buy *Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i***

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Charter of Privileges Granted by William Penn, esq. to the Inhabitants of Pennsylvania and Territories,
October 28, 1701 (1)

<https://www.yale.edu/lawweb/avalon/states/pa07.htm>

"BECAUSE no People can be truly happy, though under the greatest Enjoyment of Civil Liberties, if abridged of the Freedom of their Consciences, as to their Religious Profession and Worship: And Almighty God being the only Lord of Conscience, Father of Lights and Spirits; and the Author as well as Object of all divine Knowledge, Faith and Worship, who only cloth enlighten the Minds, and persuade and convince the Understandings of People, I do hereby grant and declare, That no Person or Persons, inhabiting in this Province or Territories, who shall confess and acknowledge One almighty God, the Creator, Upholder and Ruler of the World; and profess him or themselves obliged to live quietly under the Civil Government, shall be in any Case molested or prejudiced, in his or their Person or Estate, because of his or their conscientious Persuasion or Practice, nor be compelled to frequent or maintain any religious Worship, Place or Ministry, contrary to his or their Mind, or to do or super any other Act or Thing, contrary to their religious Persuasion."

See the links on my genealogy website and Liberty Bell

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From the talisman archive for April 1996.

The members of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States of America involved are #1 Henderson #2 Judge James Nelson

From jrcole@umich.edu Fri Apr 12 14:50:37 1996

Date: Thu, 11 Apr 1996 18:32:19 -0400 (EDT)

From: Juan R Cole

To: Rick Schaut

Cc: "'talisman@indiana.edu'"

Subject: RE: criticism of NSA policies

Rick:

I appreciate your measured response, and find myself in agreement with much of what you say.

I brought the matter up only as an example. But for the record I have evidence that at least two NSA members were very intimately involved in supporting the Travel Agency monopoly that they set up. Moreover, if they did in fact step over the line and break the law by using threats of spiritual sanctions to reduce business competition, this would be a serious matter. People have gone to jail for analogous infractions, and public officials have resigned or been forced to resign over them. The NSA actions also may have cost Baha'i travel agents and their customers money, and subjected them to spiritual duress, which would be an arbitrary use of power.

I enclose, so that others can judge for themselves, some passages from a transcript of a taped conversation between two NSA members and a Baha'i travel agent that took place the summer before the World Congress. Since

I am only interested in the rights and wrongs in an abstract way, I have not included the names of the principals.

Cheers Juan Cole, History, Univ. of Michigan

NSA Member #1: We're calling, Mr. X, about your package offered for the World Congress. We have some concerns about it. The National Spiritual

Assembly has asked X and me to consult with you--

Baha'i Travel Agent: --O.K.

NSA Member # 1: --about it and tell you what we think and make a few suggestions.

Baha'i Travel Agent: Sure.

NSA Member # 1: First of all, we're concerned that there were some misrepresentations made in your brochure or what looks like from the copy I've got--

Baha'i TA: The recent one we sent out about our package? Hm hm.

NSA Member # 1: And there are some incomplete and inaccuracies stated in yours compared to what you will be able to deliver at a guaranteed price . . . [expresses concern about Baha'i Travel Agent's past refusal to accept credit cards when arranging pilgrimages to Haifa, which has sometimes left Baha'is unable actually to go, and left the NSA to pay for their tickets) . . . We have a bit of concern that people are going to go for price only and neglect the essentials that you don't mention that they're going to get if they take the Logistics Office package. We are concerned that you are not going to be in a position to deliver them the airfares at the rate that you say. We will be, because we're locked into a no-lose situation. That is, if the fares go down, we get the down, if they go up, we get the guarantee. And . . .

Baha'i Travel Agent: The same thing is true here.

NSA Member # 1: We--You can do that?

Baha'i Travel Agent: I work directly through US Air. Uh huh.

NSA Member # 1: All right, then: I want you not to say, then, and you are directed not to say that if airfare prices increase substantially we will have to pass on the increase to the clients.

Baha'i Travel Agent: All right--we've sent out a second letter. This was done while I was in Europe . . . I've made some corrections because of that. And we do not say--we say we do guarantee it . . .

NSA Member # 1: Then we want you to spell out completely in your brochure that you do not offer transportation from the airport to the airport or between Jacob Javits Center and the hotel.

Baha'i Travel Agent: O.k. . . . It does say that . . . [reads new brochure, which mentions that taxis can be taken to the Jacob Javitz center and that it is walking distance in good weather]

NSA Member # 1: We want you to list the current price from the hotels to Javits and back . . .

Baha'i Travel Agent: I'm not through, yet, sir . . .

NSA Member # 1: I'm doing this as we go through, because I tell you this, when we get through we are going to publish in the American Baha'i a direct comparison--

Baha'i Travel Agent: Hm, hm.

NSA Member # 1: And I want your comparison to agree with ours.

Baha'i Travel Agent: How can you do that with a business?

NSA Member # 1: We are not getting you out of business. We are simply comparing--

Baha'i Travel Agent: Oh, I know that sir. I didn't say that. I said, how can you require that of a business? We're just, like, representing, any other business.

NSA Member # 1: You don't have to do it, sir.

Baha'i Travel Agent: Oh, O.K.

NSA Member # 1: But I tell you, you will be in some peril if you don't.

[What is going on here is that the NSA has discovered that its Logistics Office prices are very high and can be easily undercut by Baha'i travel agents. This puts in doubt whether they can arrange enough reservations to receive the $50,000 in free suites from the official travel agency. The first tack it takes is that these are fly by night operations that don't guarantee the airfares. But this does not prove true. Then they want to push the idea that the competing packages are not full service, and don't include taxi fare (as if that could account for a $300 difference). At this point, the travel agent begins to realize that the NSA Logistics Office is trying to *compete* with him and trying to put conditions on how he can compete with it. He realizes that this is an anti-Trust violation, and questions how the NSA can place conditions on economic competitors. The NSA member, aware of the fine line he is treading, denies he is trying to prevent a competitor from doing business. The travel agent presses the point that NSA actions could nevertheless be perceived as attempting to place conditions on an economic competitor, which is still illegal. The NSA member realizes where this is going, and backs down. "You don't have to do it, sir."]

The travel agent is relieved. Then the NSA member appears to lose his temper. "But I tell you you will be in some peril if you don't," he adds. At this point I think he has stepped over the line into an illegal anti-trust violation. He is attempting to browbeat a competitor with the NSA Logistics Office, and to put conditions on the nature of the competition between them.)

Baha'i Travel Agent: . . . We've had a number of people contact us and all we've tried to do is provide people who say they just cannot go with a way they can go. And we're not trying in any way to cut into your program, because we only have space for 550 . . . And all we're trying to do is help those like the ones in South Carolina, whole assemblies, that just say they could not go unless they had the less price.

NSA Member # 1: You don't think our package includes the lesser price?

Baha'i Travel Agent: No, sir.

[NSA member # 2 alleges that the only safe way to have the World Congress travel accommodations taken care of is to have one Travel Agency handle everyone; and he intimates that the Universal House of Justice wanted the NSA to do it that way, though he says this in an ambiguous manner).

NSA Member # 2: . . . One of our urgent concerns is that your material creates the impression you can provide a lower price. That is false. As you know, our materials indicate that the friends are guaranteed the lowest available price from any source at they time they travel . . . Your materials suggest that you can beat our prices. In fact, that is not true. One of the things the National Assembly wants you to address is the perception that you have created deliberately through your materials that you provide a lower cost. This suggests that the Institution has cheated the friends . . .

[In fact, virtually any travel agent could have gotten a Baha'i a better price than than most Logistics Office packages afforded. This NSA member is either wholly uninformed or is being, uh, disingenuous. His suggestion that offering a lower price is forbidden because it makes the NSA look like it is cheating the friends is outrageous; it is an attempt to bully this individual into not offering competing, lower packages. Again, I think these statements border on illegality under anti-trust laws.)

[This conversation went on for some time more, with much browbeating of the poor travel agent, and a final plea for him to withdraw his competing package, on the grounds that he could simply not provide a better price than did the Logistics Office. It is hard not to conclude that all parties here knew that the travel agent could in fact substantially undercut Logistics Office prices, but that putting things this way was a polite cover for bullying a competitor.\}

Please note that I don't think the NSA members were personally profiting from the arrangements that had been made. I think their concerns are as they repeatedly stated them. They liked the idea of a centralized Travel Agency with a standardized package that cut down on the likelihood of out-of-town Baha'is wandering around New York (one caller inquired about camping facilities in New Jersey from the Logistics Office or their Travel Agent, and were told that there *were none!* When a complaint was lodged, Wilmette replied that they hadn't wanted people camping out). The official Travel Agency was offering the sweetener of $50,000 in free rooms if a certain number of Baha'is used them, and the NSA for some reason was fixated on getting this bonus (which, it is true, benefitted the Fund in a small way, not individuals). And since the NSA had made this unwise and untrue claim that their package was guaranteed the cheapest, they minded that being demonstrated to be untrue (were they afraid they might become responsible for the difference, themselves? Or just that someone would think they were taking profits or a kickback? There is no evidence of the latter).

The fact remains that their solution to these problems, of bullying Baha'i Travel Agents (there were others) into cancelling competing reservations was at the least unethical and an arbitrary use of the spiritual authority they have; and was possibly even illegal. Along with their earlier bullying of the Dialogue editors, and their recent attempt to coerce the speech of one of our Talismanians, all this amounts to a worrisome *pattern* of behavior which I myself have difficulty seeing as very Baha'i-like. The naivete of the general run of Baha'is and their refusal to accept that any irregularities could occur in Wilmette by virtue of divine grace have perhaps deprived the NSA of useful community feedback on these sorts of problem.

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Psalm 35

[1] Plead my cause, O LORD, with them that strive with me: fight against them that fight against me.

[2] Take hold of shield and buckler, and stand up for mine help.

[3] Draw out also the spear, and stop the way against them that persecute me: say unto my soul, I am thy salvation.

[4] Let them be confounded and put to shame that seek after my soul: let them be turned back and brought to confusion that devise my hurt.

[5] Let them be as chaff before the wind: and let the angel of the LORD chase them.

[6] Let their way be dark and slippery: and let the angel of the LORD persecute them.

[7] For without cause have they hid for me their net in a pit, which without cause they have digged for my soul.

[8] Let destruction come upon him at unawares; and let his net that he hath hid catch himself: into that very destruction let him fall.

[9] And my soul shall be joyful in the LORD: it shall rejoice in his salvation.

[10] All my bones shall say, LORD, who is like unto thee, which deliverest the poor from him that is too strong for him, yea, the poor and the needy from him that spoileth him?

[11] False witnesses did rise up; they laid to my charge things that I knew not.

[12] They rewarded me evil for good to the spoiling of my soul.

[13] But as for me, when they were sick, my clothing was sackcloth: I humbled my soul with fasting; and my prayer returned into mine own bosom.

[14] I behaved myself as though he had been my friend or brother: I bowed down heavily, as one that mourneth for his mother.

[15] But in mine adversity they rejoiced, and gathered themselves together:

yea, the abjects gathered themselves together against me, and I knew it not;

they did tear me, and ceased not:

[16] With hypocritical mockers in feasts, they gnashed upon me with their teeth.

[17] Lord, how long wilt thou look on? rescue my soul from their destructions, my darling from the lions.

[18] I will give thee thanks in the great congregation: I will praise thee among much people.

[19] Let not them that are mine enemies wrongfully rejoice over me: neither let them wink with the eye that hate me without a cause.

[20] For they speak not peace: but they devise deceitful matters against them that are quiet in the land.

[21] Yea, they opened their mouth wide against me, and said, Aha, aha, our eye hath seen it.

[22] This thou hast seen, O LORD: keep not silence: O Lord, be not far from me.

[23] Stir up thyself, and awake to my judgment, even unto my cause, my God and my Lord.

[24] Judge me, O LORD my God, according to thy righteousness; and let them not rejoice over me.

[25] Let them not say in their hearts, Ah, so would we have it: let them not say, We have swallowed him up.

[26] Let them be ashamed and brought to confusion together that rejoice at mine hurt: let them be clothed with shame and dishonour that magnify themselves against me.

[27] Let them shout for joy, and be glad, that favour my righteous cause:

yea, let them say continually, Let the LORD be magnified, which hath pleasure in the prosperity of his servant.

[28] And my tongue shall speak of thy righteousness and of thy praise all the day long.

[https://www.hti.umich.edu/cgi/k/kjv/kjv-idx?
type=DIV1&byte=2190116](https://www.hti.umich.edu/cgi/k/kjv/kjv-idx?type=DIV1&byte=2190116)

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Those wishing to have their names added to this petition may do so by posting to talk.religion.bahai or emailing me privately prior to Naw-Ruz at f_glaysher@hotmail.com For those afraid of using their real names, pseudonyms, marked as such, will be permitted on the petition. Non-Bahais may also sign this Petition.

Please feel free to repost this Petition on any and all Bahai newsgroups and mailing lists.

-----

The undersigned request that the Universal House of Justice reassess the state of affairs within the Baha'i Faith, as pertains to freedom of conscience and belief, the review of thoughts and ideas, and all matters pertaining to the silencing of individuals since at least the early 1970s; the undersigned request that the Universal House of Justice chart a new course for Baha'is congruent with the Teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha on these matters, preferably by Ridvan 2001; the undersigned request that significant personnel changes be made, where necessary, to reform and restore trust and confidence in Baha'i Institutions; the undersigned request that evidence be forthcoming commensurate with the seriousness of the prevailing situation within Baha'i Communities around the globe.

The undersigned draw sustenance from the guidance of such Writings as the following:

-----

**-

"The light of men is Justice. Quench it not with the contrary winds of oppression and tyranny." --Baha'u'llah

---

-

"The shining spark of truth cometh forth only after the clash of differing opinions." --Abdul-Baha

---

-

"These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world. Moreover, if interrogation of conscience, which is one of the private possessions of the heart and the soul, take place in this world, what further recompense remains for man in the court of divine justice at the day of general resurrection? Convictions and ideas are within the scope of the comprehension of the King of kings, not of kings; and soul and conscience are between the fingers of control of the Lord of hearts, not of [His] servants."
--Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

---

-

"This is a goodly temple and congregation, for--praise be to God!--this is a house of worship [Central Congregational Church in Brooklyn on 16 June 1912] wherein conscientious opinion has free sway. Every religion and every religious aspiration may be freely voiced and expressed here. Just as in the world of politics there is need for free thought, likewise in the world of religion there should be the right of unrestricted individual belief. Consider what a vast difference exists between modern democracy and the old forms of despotism. Under an autocratic government the opinions of men are not free, and development is stifled, whereas in a democracy, because thought and speech are not restricted, the greatest progress is witnessed. It is likewise true in the world of religion. When freedom of conscience, liberty of thought and right of speech prevail--that is to say, when every man according to his own idealization may give expression to his beliefs--development and growth are inevitable.

Therefore, this is a blessed church because its pulpit is open to every religion, the ideals of which may be set forth with openness and freedom."

--Abdul-Baha, The Promulgation of Universal Peace, 197.

---

-

"Let us also remember that at the very root of the Cause lies the principle of the undoubted right of the individual to self-expression, his freedom to declare his conscience and set forth his views."

--Shoghi Effendi, Baha'i Administration, 63-64.

---

-

The undersigned petition the Universal House of Justice:

FG

Nima Hazini

Dermod Ryder <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Ray McIntyre former bahai New Zealand

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Reposts

---

Why I Don't Respond to Fundamentalists 4/2001 FG

Why I Crosspost to Three Newsgroups 4/2001

A Bahai in \*Perfectly\* Good Standing 11/2001

"Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
11/2001

soc.religion.bahai - Brief Quotations Documenting Censorship
alt.religion.bahai & talk.religion.bahai FAQ (Frequently Asked Questions)

Bahai Attacks & BullyingI Fall & Spring 1999

Bahai Threats of Lawsuits Spring 1999

Censorship on AOL Late 1998-1999 (Also See AOL Censorship Menu)

Discussion Agenda for Talk.Religion.Bahai (Topics Bahais never discuss)

False Membership Statistics on Encyclopedia Britannica
1/11/2000

Continuing Harassment 1/31/2000

uhj LIES to United Nations & US Government June 2000

Bahais at United Nations Millennium Forum & Summit June 2000

Roll Call of Victims 11/2001

The Charade of Dialogue and Consultation 10/3/03

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Alison Marshall - "How the Baha'i administration behaves"

---

After reading Alison Marshall's discussion of review in the Baha'i Faith, consider also Steven Scholl's "A Crisis of Faith," which covers other significant issues, as do many other articles available through the Homepage:
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Scholl.htm>

---

From: "Ron House" <house@usq.edu.au>
Subject: Review as censorship
Date: Tuesday, March 28, 2000 5:34 AM

The attached articles were posted by Alison Marshall to Talisman, and I post them here with her permission.

**--

Ron House                    house@usq.edu.au

Never fear the truth.

----- Part 1 -----

In early 1998, I was approached by the editors of the Baha'i Studies Review (ABS-ESE) and asked to write a review of two volumes of The Baha'i World. I spent the next several months reading the volumes and putting together the review. I approached the exercise in much the same way as I do when my company is asked to review publications for organisations. The review passed without comment the first vetting process, in which the item is read by a group of peer reviewers, and was then sent to the association's institutional panel for review. Its members had a number of difficulties with the review. The editors made various changes to the text in order to accommodate the panel's concerns, but the panel was nevertheless unable to come to a decision and so the editors appealed to the UK NSA for a final decision. The NSA sent the review to the House of Justice, who decided that it would be "inadvisable" to publish the review because of its

generally critical tone.

I have posted the book review in a second e-mail message. The message
I
relieved from the secretary of the ABS ESE states:

**--

As you might have guessed with our long delay in getting back to you, we have had many discussions with the UK Bahá'í reviewing panel about your book review. Unfortunately, the piece did not pass institutional review.
The
UK reviewing panel was unable to make a decision. They referred the matter to the UK NSA, who, in turn, sought advice from the Universal House of Justice.

In a letter to the National Spiritual Assembly dated 22 August 1999, the Department of the Secretariat replied that the publication of your review was considered inadvisable, because of the generally critical tone.

Since then, the executive committee of the Association for Bahá'í Studies-ESE has further reflected on the implications of this decision.
The committee is aware that Bahá'í scholarship is a developing field and striking the right tone and balance when critically reviewing any publication is one of its more difficult challenges.

**---

Although the letter says that the issue is a general one of criticising any publication, we need only open any issue of the Baha'i Studies Review to find book reviews equally as critical about publications not produced by the World Centre. This decision shows just how sensitive the House of Justice is to criticism of its own publications. The review is critical, yes, but it is constructive, containing practical suggestions as to how the publication might be improved. In my work, I am *paid* by companies to give them this sort of feedback.

To me, this decision is a good example of how review acts as censorship.
Baha'i review is used by the Baha'i administration to further its own agenda. This agenda is focussed on creating and maintaining a particular public image, which can be gleaned from The Baha'i Worlds themselves.
The administration will not tolerate any speech that might blemish that carefully crafted persona. The Baha's Studies Associations are not independent of the Baha'i organisation and therefore cannot publish any material contrary to these purposes.

As we can see from the above letter, the Baha'i administration assumes the right to define "scholarship" for its members and to set it within very narrow parameters, placing emphasis on intangibles like tone. This decision highlights the fact that those parameters are used to serve the purposes of the administration, but are masked here as objective criteria for acceptable scholarship.

Alison

----- Part 2 -----

"The Bahá'í World" 1992-93 and 1993-94
Published by the Bahá'í World Centre
Reviewed by Alison Marshall

In her essay on the efforts of the Bahá'í community to realise equality between the sexes, Ann Boyles tells us that "Bahá'ís see their community life as a workshop rather than as a perfect model..." (1993-94 p. 273). After reading these two volumes, I cannot point to anything in them that would prove this statement true. The books are largely filled with public relations material, and their portrayal of the community is sterile and shallow.

Purpose and audience
**-----

Beginning with the holy year in 1992, the World Centre has started a new, annual, series of The Bahá'í World. In an effort to return to Shoghi Effendi's original purpose, "to disclose to others something of the significance of the world-wide movement called into being by the Message of Bahá'u'lláh" (1992-93 p. 7), the World Centre has redesigned the volumes for non-Bahá'í readers (1992-93 p. 8), who are described as serious researchers and general students (back cover). The stated purpose seems to be twofold: firstly, to be a yearbook that reproduces major statements and provides statistical data and information on the Faith's activities; and secondly, to "offer readers general information on the Bahá'í Faith, its concerns, and its teachings" (1993-94 p. 1).

Content and organisation
**-----

The 1993-94 volume has an accessible structure, with the content organised into the following categories (in this order):

- "Introduction to the Bahá'í Community", containing chapters on Bahá'u'lláh, Shoghi Effendi and the community.
- "Writings and Messages", containing excerpts from the sacred writings and an overview of House of Justice messages.
- "Events 1993-94", containing chapters on events such as international convention and the conference of Bahá'í counsellors.
- "Essays and Statements", containing essays on topics such as postmodernism, The Kitab-i-Aqdas, and statements from the Bahá'í International Community.
- "Information and Resources", containing obituaries, statistics, a directory, a short list of new publications, a Bahá'í reading list and a glossary.

The 1992-93 volume is similar in content type, but is not as well organised. It appears more as a collection of various pieces of writing - some written for the volume, others not - and lacks an overall framework to bring it together. Topics are not categorised, and the result is a list of contents in no apparent order and with no indication as to the kind of information the reader is to expect. For example, the chapter

"Bahá'u'lláh", which on its face could be just about anything, is a reproduction of a statement by the Bahá'í International Community, written for the holy year and not for this volume and its audience. One chapter is titled "The Bahá'í Community Today", which is not informative given that this is surely the topic to be covered by the book as a whole. It consists of a five-page piece focusing on the expansion of the community and the spread of its teachings. It is placed near the end of the book, and is laid out differently from the rest of the text, indicating that it may be a quote from somewhere. But there is no indication as to its author, purpose and audience.

There is just one significant oversight in the organisation of the 1993-94 volume. The chapter "Bahá'í Sacred Writings" contains two sections of quotes, headed "Writings of Bahá'u'lláh" and "Writings of 'Abdul-Baha". Unfortunately, the quotes have no quote marks and no references. There is sufficient context for non-Bahá'í readers to work out that they are reading actual quotes from the writings, but confusion sets in when you read on to the next chapter, which is headed "From the Universal House of Justice".

You immediately assume you are getting quotes from the House of Justice.

However, the chapter starts with "The Universal House of Justice was ordained..." and immediately you ask yourself, is this the House of Justice talking about itself in the third person? Second page in, you are told that "This section of The Bahá'í World features excerpts from a selection of major letters" (p. 40), so it begins to dawn on you that the author is not the House of Justice as the title implies. In fact, the chapter is a short piece with an introduction on how the House of Justice communicates with the community and a summary of what the House of Justice wrote for the 1993-94 year, with indented quotes.

Dealing with two purposes

-----
As stated earlier, the purposes of the volumes are to be a yearbook and to give general information about the Faith.

A yearbook is an annual publication that updates information on a given subject. However, in order to fulfil the second purpose of giving general information about the Faith, the publications also contain a great deal of information that has nothing to do with the current year. This dissipates their focus and leaves the reader wondering what is going to come next.

For example, both articles about the Mount Carmel projects (1993-94 pp. 67-69) begin with pages of background before detailing progress for the year (1992-93 pp. 169-175).

The same problem also reveals itself on a micro level, within sections of articles. In the section "Year in Review" (1993-94 p. 128), the Houses of Worship section starts with an explanation of what Houses of Worship are, what Bahá'ís do in them and how many there are, before discussing Houses of Worship for the year. And in the middle of an article on social and economic development, there is a paragraph that outlines assembly functions and explains the election process at all levels of the administrative order (1992-93 p. 234).

I recommend the editors commit themselves to making The Bahá'í World a yearbook. This would mean putting all the yearbook-related information first- House of Justice statements, events, statistics - and all background information into appendices - explanations of Bahá'í administration and teachings, quotes from the writings, and information on matters such as the persecution of the Bahá'ís in Iran. The editors should definitely resist the urge to put the sacred writings first just because Bahá'ís like it that way! And they should also resist putting information together just because it is about the same topic. Information should be grouped according to time not subject; so, for example, the article on what's currently happening in Iran would come in the yearbook section, and then the reader can be referred to the appendices and other publications for further information.

The 1993-94 volume contains a glossary that explains and gives background on some basic Bahá'í terms such as "Universal House of Justice". Using a glossary stops the information in the main part of the publication from being cluttered with background detail. Unfortunately, this has not been heeded by the various authors of the volume, and the reader is given unnecessarily repeated explanations such as: "Every five years, a three-stage process culminates in the election by the Bahá'ís of the world of the supreme governing council of their community, the Universal House of Justice" (p. 51); "... immediately following the Seventh International Bahá'í Convention - the occasion every five years for the election of the Universal House of Justice..." (p. 60); "Members of the Universal House of Justice, the international governing body of the worldwide Bahá'í community..." (p. 79).

Impressing the audience

-----
The publications assume that a non-Bahá'í audience is not interested in detail. The World Centre's review of the first series of The Bahá'í World concluded that the series was a "detailed record" that resulted from the tendency of the writers and editors to provide an "exhaustive treatment" of community activities. These, it argues, were of intense interest to Bahá'ís, many of whom were personally involved in the projects, but not to the general reader (1992-93 pp. 9-10).

The result for the new series is a run of articles that give uninteresting descriptions of events supported by very little detail. In the 1993-94 volume, the section "Year in Review" is 50 pages long and made up of separate sections each focusing on a specific event, area of service or topic. With little to relieve the tedium, most follow a formula: a description of what happened, where it happened and who was there (those considered important), with a brief description of what was discussed. To take one paragraph at random: "Five Bahá'í singers and musicians were among those who performed for the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting held in Cyprus in October. Alex Zografov directed the musical opening, Vic Salvo played the piano, and three members of the Zografov family sang in the choir. The performance moved many of the forty-eight leaders of Commonwealth Nations so greatly that some of them commented on it in their speeches" (p. 121). Be honest. Could you cope with that for 50 pages?

The article on the "Conference of Bahá'í Counsellors" tells us that: "Issues concerning questions about the Faith raised by interested members of the public and attacks launched by opponents, the role of the Teaching Centre in encouraging systematic study of the Faith, the production and dissemination of Bahá'í literature, and the flow of pioneers and travelling teachers were also discussed" (1993-94 p. 66). No more detail is provided; there is no attempt to describe, much less analyse, what was discussed, and no attempt to clarify why the House of Justice considered the event "highly significant". The reader is left to wonder what could be meant by such phrases as "attacks launched by opponents".

Besides being uninteresting, I am at a loss to see how this information is of use to a 'serious scholar'. Beyond the general documenting of events for the year, the statistics, the obituaries and basic reference material, I suggest that the most telling aspect of the publications is what they don't say. Where is the heart and soul of the community? I could find almost nothing that reflected the community's humanity - people with foibles, people who make mistakes, people who are passionate.

Contrast this with the more than 100 pages devoted to the persecutions of the Bahá'ís in Iran in The Bahá'í World 1979-83. Although some of it would be excluded if the selection was restricted, as suggested, to material relating to the relevant years, most of what is included is relevant. As discovered in the review of the old series, the pages reveal a careful and loving attention to detail, with all sorts of useful material: photographs of those killed, personal accounts of persecution, reproductions of key documentation, maps, and exhaustive detail in the text. I cannot understand why this kind of information "will have a diminished importance in the eyes of general readers" (1992-93 p. 10). It is precisely this kind of detail that makes the publication useful and interesting. Although the editors state that their intention was to retain the positive aspects characteristic of the old series (1992-93 p. 12), I cannot see any evidence of this; for example, the obituaries have been reduced from the short biographies of the earlier series to a few cursory remarks.

There is one important exception. The article by William Collins, "The Bahá'í Faith in the Eyes of the World: What the Print Media Report About the Bahá'í Faith" is interesting and informative, being crammed full of actual examples and detail. It has been put together by someone who knows the subject well and is able to analyse it and make intelligent comments about it. He describes the trends in the media's coverage of the Faith, explains events that sparked changes, and isolates themes that the media has taken up about the community. The article even mentions, albeit briefly, possible *challenges* for the Bahá'ís with regard to its relationship with the media (1992-93 p. 167). Another article in the same volume that held my interest was "The Case of the Bahá'í Minority in Iran", by Douglas Martin. It was informative, and written in a style that kept the story moving.

Language and style

**-----
The volumes are verbose, with an overuse of passive sentences and nominal phrases, and have an impersonal, dry PR quality:

"Among these are the aspiration that development activities will contribute to a rehabilitation of human society and will eliminate extremes of poverty and wealth, a belief that a desire to serve others is ultimately the most outstanding motivation for participation in development activities, and the conviction that high standards of morality can and should be intentionally cultivated by every person." (1992-93 p. 231)

At some difficult points, unsupported generalisations fill the gaps:

"One of the principle [sic] teachings of Bahá'u'lláh is the equality of the sexes, and throughout its brief history, the Bahá'í community has achieved an extraordinary record in this area." (1993-94 p. 83)

In some sections, the authors are clearly writing for an external audience of policy-makers or academics and use language that they think would be usual in these circles, without themselves mastering or perhaps understanding it. The results are verbose, giving the appearance of analysis, without the substance:

"The development activities of the Bahá'í community express a well-articulated alternative paradigm of development, of interest in its unusual approaches to the dilemmas of sustainability, of meaningful project design, and equitable North/South interaction." (1992-93 p. 229)

Other sections are written without any apparent thought for an external audience; preachy, but preaching only to the converted:

"They [the letters of the House of Justice] show how the supreme elected institution ordained by Bahá'u'lláh in His writings functions, protecting the Bahá'í community from persecution and division, applying the Bahá'í teachings for the current situation, guiding the Bahá'í community in its course of development, and sharing news of both crisis and victory in the Bahá'í world." (1993-94 p. 47)

Essays and statements

**-----
As mentioned earlier, the publications contain essays and statements. In keeping with the purpose of The Bahá'í World as a yearbook, I think that essays should be included only if they are linked to some event that occurs during the year and needs extended comment. For example, the essay on The Kitab-i-Aqdas in the 1992-93 issue is justified, given that the release of that book during the year was a big event for the community. On the other hand, the essay on The Kitab-i-Aqdas included in the subsequent issue has nothing to do with the 1993-94 year. Worse, it is 47 pages long and, along with other essays, placed in the middle of the issue, breaking up the flow of information for the year.

Apart from this, I see no reason to include essays. The role of The Bahá'í World is to report what the Bahá'ís are doing in scholarship, not enter the arena of scholarship itself. It is striking how little space is actually devoted to Bahá'í scholarship: the 1992-93 volume makes no reference to it whatsoever, and the 1993-94 volume devotes just three pages to it.

With regard to statements, if a particularly important statement comes out for the year, there may be reason to include it as an appendix. Otherwise, I recommend listing the statements for the year - perhaps with summaries - and providing references or contact details for those wanting copies.

Conclusion

**-----
I recommend that the editors of The Bahá'í World focus on producing a yearbook that describes and analyses in detail the events of the year, with references to sources where readers can obtain further information. All background information on the Faith and any statements that must be included belong in appendices.

The editors should revisit the whole issue of content, bearing in mind that the 'human' element of our experience is attractive to readers, who will be looking for glimpses of themselves in the pages - evidence of people on real spiritual journeys, not reports of administrative meetings and events involving famous people.

I strongly advise the editors to abandon the impersonal, self-congratulating language in favour of a personal, straightforward tone and style.

---

Homepage

---

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Respecting the Conscience of Man.... June 27, 2000 - FG

In his conclusion, which would never have passed the system of censorship, "Bahai review," that the UHJ imposes on all publications brought out under its tight control, Professor Cole, of the Department of History at the University of Michigan, quite accurately identifies the distortions that have been wreaked upon Baha'u'llah's Teachings:

"Some contemporary leaders of the Baha'i Faith have given answers increasingly similar to those of fundamentalists, stressing scriptural literalism, patriarchy, theocracy, censorship, intellectual intolerance, and denying key democratic values. While the values of the nineteenth-century Baha'i movement, which was far more tolerant, continue to exist as a minority view, by the late 1990s a different set of emphases prevailed." (196)

Cole himself and many others have suffered at the hands of the fundamentalists who have taken control of the religion:

"The rise of academic Baha'i scholarship has caused tension in the community, whose present-day leadership tends to be fundamentalist and antiliberal in orientation, and this has led to pressure on a number of prominent academics to resign or dissociate themselves from the movement." (201)

These same forces of fundamentalist orthodoxy are evident on talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai on Usenet for impartial viewers to witness. They will be evident to all perceptive observers of whatever forum Bahais may be trying to control and influence. Both my and Cole's websites provide essential documentation along these lines. It should be noted that the Universal House of Justice has actively worked through the BCCA (Bahai Computer and Communications Association) to suppress all links to websites with other than its own "comprehensive" point of view on such major portals as Yahoo.com, Excite.com, and other search engines. The UHJ has gone even further by advising Bahais to remove any link whatsoever to Professor Cole's website.

As a Bahai since 1976, I myself have always found especially repulsive the manner in which Bahai fundamentalists attempt to manipulate the institutions and leaders of government, the United Nations, and public opinion, while pretending to values they deride in private or at Bahai-only meetings.

Ultimately, it is the Bahai Universal House of Justice that is responsible for the perversion and corruption of such clear and elevating teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha as the following:

"These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world." Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

The UHJ is also in the end responsible for inciting Bahai fanatics and fundamentalists to attack other Bahais and non-Bahais merely for their views expressed on and off line in free forums of public discussion.

Professor Cole's Modernity and the Millennium will remain, for many years to come, the most important book available on the Baha'i Faith. His discussion of its historical development within the intellectual milieu of progressive 19th Century thought is particularly brilliant and insightful.

Reviewed at Amazon.com - *Modernity and the Millennium*

---

Juan R.I. Cole. Modernity and the Millennium, Reviewed by Sen McGlinn, Otago University, New Zealand. Published by H-Bahai (July, 1998)

<https://www.h-net.org/reviews/showrev.cgi?path=17941900618943>

---

Review by Denis MacEoin, published in Times Literary Supplement, 1999:

Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith in the Nineteenth-Century Middle East

Author: Juan R. I. Cole

Published by: Columbia University Press, New York, 1998. 264 pp.

New prophet, new law

Our perception of the Middle East and Islam being what it is, it's not very surprising that most Westerners think of the region as hopelessly unreformed, as, perhaps, beyond reform, in a way that is not thought true of, say, non-Muslim Africa or Latin America. Faced with Saudi conservatism, or the Taliban at work in Afghanistan, the average onlooker may well be forgiven the judgment, however sweeping.

There is no question but that, in recent years, Islamic revivalism has embraced a "back to basics" ethic that manifests itself most notoriously in public floggings, the enforced veiling of women, or calls (as in Pakistan) for the universal implementation of shar'ia law. Yet, go back a century or so, to Turkey or Iran or Palestine and an equally astonishing picture presents itself: one of both religious and secular reformism on a breathtaking scale.

In country after country during the second half of the last century and the first decades of this, Muslims demanded and achieved reforms, that, in the nature of things, encompassed both religion and State. Everything had to be modelled on the expanding, successful West, of course, and very little was considered sacrosanct. Reform affected law, education women's rights, minority rights, and even the character of the Islamic State itself (as in the agitation that led to the new Iranian constitution of 1906).

Juan R. I. Cole's elegantly presented study brings the period and its reformers back on to centre stage, while doing so through an unfamiliar medium: the reformism of a new, post-Islamic religion, the Bahai faith, which exists today as a widespread and rapidly growing new religious movement. This is not as perverse as it may seem. Baha'ism ranks very high indeed in the hate list of modern Muslims, sandwiched somewhere between Salman Rushdie and Zionism. The reason is simple: despite the smallness of its numbers, Baha'ism represents the ultimate threat to Islam; it is a movement that abrogates Islamic law and puts a new prophet and a new law in its place.

This has all sorts of resonances today, but in the last century (Baha'ism developed through the 1860s, 70s and 80s) it was heady stuff. Secular reformers had already seen the inevitability of abolishing Islamic law, while their clerical opponents perceived a future devoted to rearguard actions in defence of the faith.

The Baha'i prophet, Baha' Allah (1817-92), stands out as a moderate figure in this debate, abrogating Islam while insisting on the primacy of religion within the State. Cole presents the prophet's teachings in an original and accurate manner, demonstrating for the first time in many years the liberalism and even radicalism that exemplified the new creed, and tracing connections with reforms in Istanbul, Tehran and elsewhere. Modern Baha'is have tarnished that picture by a heavy-handed conservative interpretation of Baha' Allah and his ideas, and it is refreshing to see someone of Cole's stature rescue both from their smothering embrace.

It is a pity, however, that Professor Cole didn't spend a little more time discussing the Azali Babis. The Babis were a militant sect that preceded the Baha'is, and the Azalis were and are its only surviving splinter group, and great rivals of the Baha'is at one time. Although their numbers were tiny, many Azalis played an important part in the Iranian constitutional revolution. The Baha'is, on the other hand, were conspicuous by their absence. Yet Babism is backward-looking, mystical, conservative and crippled by some of the most impractical laws in religious history whereas Baha'ism is in principle liberal, forward-looking, delighted by modernity and eager for social improvement. There is an anomaly here that the present work only goes part of the way to explaining.

But even a partial explanation is much more than we have had before. Above all, Cole is to be congratulated for his forthrightness in treating Baha Allah, the main focus of his research, not as a god, but as a man and an articulate exponent of human rights and reformist principles. If, in future, we are to see a realistic biography of the Baha'i leader, it will be along these lines, rather than those of the hagiographies which have, until now, dominated the field.

See, Juan Cole's comments regarding Denis MacEoin

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/MacEoinRev.htm>

---

Modernity and Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith in the Nineteenth-Century Middle East

by Juan R.I. Cole

(New York, Columbia University Press, 1997) 264 pp. $47.50 cloth $19.50 paper

review by Barbara D. Metcalf

review published in Journal of Interdisciplinary History 30:3 (2000), pages 566-568

<https://bahai-library.org/reviews/cole.modernity.html>

Cole's book illuminates significant aspects of modernity in the Middle East, as well as the early history of the Baha'i millenarian movement led by Baha'u'llah, the nineteenth-century Iranian prophet. Cole's careful work as an archival historian is informed by the theoretical work of historical sociology. But its high quality depends on yet another discipline, namely, "area studies," which has given him excellent command of the languages and the cultural traditions of the area.

Cole's research design places a definition of modernity at the center of his project. Drawing on theorists that include Jürgen Habermas, Anthony Giddens, Eric Hobsbawm, Michel Foucault, Alain Touraine, Max Weber, and Victor Turner, he identifies five critical themes that are central to modernity and that, surprisingly, elucidate his case study: the relationship of religion to the state; the move from political absolutism to some form of democratic or representative government; the rise of an international system of nation-states characterized by internal and external violence; the phenomenon of nationalism, with its illusion of homogeneity and relatedness; and, finally, the challenge to patriarchy through women's movements and feminism. The sources for the study [End Page 566] include such Arabic, Turkish, and Persian texts as histories, letters, reports, and the writings of both founders and followers. Cole also draws on a vast background literature in such fields as history, literature, and religious studies.

Mirza Husayn 'Ali Nuri (1817-1892), the founder of the Baha'i faith, built on the protests of Sayyid 'Ali Muhammad Shirazi (1819-1850), his predecessor, who had attacked aristocratic oppression in Qajar Iran and supported interest on loans, more freedom of movement for women, and restrictions on both European merchants and on the official clergy. Known as "the Bab," he was executed and his followers suppressed. Nuri, scion of a magnate family, joined the Babi religion, taking the name by which he was later known, Baha'u'llah ("glory of God"). Exiled to Baghdad in 1853, and subsequently to Edirne and Akka, he built his own following, adding to the earlier Babi themes those of Sufi ethics and ecstatic worship, as well as the claim of being the successor promised by the Bab.

Ironically, Baha'u'llah's evolving political ideas were close to those of Ottoman reformers in accepting a fundamental separation between religion and state. In due course, he was to create democratic governing institutions for his followers, the "houses of justice," at every level of his community. He fully supported religious freedom while simultaneously criticizing Enlightenment deism, opposition to organized religion, and unfettered science. 'Abdu' l-Baha, his eldest son, further articulated these political teachings. His tens of thousands of followers in Iran clearly played a role in the ferment for constitutional reform during the first decade of the century--a role hitherto undocumented. Baha'u'llah favored the creation of a union of nations as a way of eliminating war, as well as the establishment of a single world language. Cole situates Baha'u'llah's teachings in the context of French "peace thought" and notes the similarity in social milieu of the early Baha'i followers--largely merchants, skilled urban workers, less influential clergy, and many activist women--and the followers of Saint-Simon (137). Baha'i have differed in their interpretations of the founder's teachings in relation to women, but at the least he articulated a position that gave higher status and privileges to women than was common in the Islamic law and custom of his day.

One contribution of Cole's work is his exploration of the issues of religious transformation and modernity in the context of predominantly Muslim societies, given Euro-American assumptions that virtually equate Islam with anti-modernism. Cole, in contrast, reviews the ambiguities and variations that make it impossible to accept that simplistic view. He also shows the simultaneity of many material developments in the Middle East and in Europe, as well as the patterns of intellectual responses common to modernity throughout both areas. Following Giddens' discussion of European movements against the "dark side" of modernity, Cole places Baha'u'llah among the "utopian realists" whose critiques of the power of industrialized warfare, xenophobic nationalism, [End Page 567] colonialism, materialism, and exploitative capitalism seem ever more prescient.<sup>1</sup> To explore an interpretation of movements like the Baha'i as utopian, rather than reactionary and antimodern, is in itself an important contribution of this study. It is surprising that Cole makes no reference to the broadly similar Ahmadiyya movement, which originated in colonial India. The Ahmadis have been denied status as Muslims, which they have sought; the Baha'i, by contrast, have insisted on identity as a separate religion. Neither strategy has helped: In Iran, about 200 Baha'i have been executed since the revolution (144).

In his conclusion, Cole notes that the Baha'i community in recent years has come to emphasize literalism, patriarchy, theocracy, and censorship--far less tolerant values than those of their founder. This "radical reorientation" (194), which resonates with the positions of "fundamentalist" movements elsewhere, further counters easy assumptions of essentialism in relation to Middle Eastern religious movements--an argument effectively made in the study as a whole.

Note

1. Giddens, The Consequences of Modernity (Stanford, 1990).
https://muse.jhu.edu/journals/journal\_of\_interdisciplinary\_history/v030/30.3metcalf\_b.html
-

American Historical Review

VOLUME 105 NUMBER 3 June 2000

Review by Merlin Schwartz, p. 1049

Juan R. I. Cole. Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith in the Nineteenth-Century Middle East. New York: Columbia University Press. 1998. Pp. xi, 254. Cloth $47.50, paper $19.50.

In this carefully researched and perceptive work, Juan R. I. Cole proposes to look at the Western, Enlightenment idea of modernity through "new eyes": that is, through the eyes of Baha'ism, particularly those of the leadership of the movement during the formative period of its history. The basis for Cole's selection of Baha'ism as the lens through which to view the idea of modernity is nowhere spelled out explicitly, perhaps because his reasons are largely implicit in his analysis of the encounter between the two.

Baha'ism arose in the Middle East and remained socially and, to some extent, spiritually close to its historical roots; at the same time, its religious character, and especially its millenarian stance, enabled it to distance itself from its religious past and to view that past indeed, the whole of the past in a critical light. Baha'ism saw itself as the culmination of the earlier monotheistic traditions, both as fulfillment and as corrective. At least in terms of its own self-understanding, early Baha'ism represents an orientation that is neither Eastern nor Western. In the analysis and critical assessment of modernity, Baha'ism does indeed offer interesting possibilities and perspectives.

Cole's examination of the Western notion of modernity focuses on a number of key issues, among them: religious freedom and the relationship of religion to the state; political absolutism and democracy; nationalism and the state; and patriarchy and gender relations. Cole devotes an entire chapter to a discussion of each of these complex issues. He insists on viewing Baha'ism, especially during its formative period, as a tradition in flux or, one might say, as a set of general principles and values that had to be fleshed out, refined, and adjusted in response both to changing conditions and to the perspectives of other intellectual and spiritual traditions. This seems clearly to have been the view of the early leaders of the movement, including Baha'ullah himself. Within the context of these qualifications, Baha'ism did come to define its position vis-a-vis the critical issues posed by Enlightenment modernity. On a number of the principles to which Enlightenment modernity was committed, Baha'ism declared itself in essential agreement: for example, on the question of the separation of "church" and state, the primacy of the individual conscience, gender equality, and the rule of law.

But if Baha'ism did come to endorse many of the characteristic ideas and values of modernity, Baha'ism did find some aspects of modernity, especially some of the larger historical consequences that followed, or that seemed to follow, from its implementation profoundly troubling. The idea of an autonomous reason, and what Baha'ism saw as the repressive potential of a reason freed from the constraints of a transcendental frame of reference, raised serious questions at both the theoretical and practical levels. The industrialization of war and the enlarged destructive capacity of the modern army, all developed within the framework of modernity, had led to violence and death on a scale without precedent in the history of humankind. These and other reservations, articulated repeatedly in the early literature of the movement, led Baha'is increasingly to reject modernism's emphasis on the primacy of reason and its secularism its Jacobin tendencies and to call for the integration of a religious dimension into the framework of Enlightenment modernism. Baha'ism insisted that only a religious dimension is capable of providing the kind of constraints that the secularist and rationalist aspects of modernist doctrines need to protect them against excess a concern dramatically underscored by the events of the modern period. To the degree that Cole endorses this Baha'i emphasis on the importance of a religious dimension, some readers will undoubtedly see the present work as in part an apologia for religion. Whether one agrees with the position articulated in this work or not, one must concede that Cole has raised a set of issues that demand careful, critical attention.

This reflective and insightful work is based on an impressive array of primary (in some cases unpublished) sources, not to mention a very large body of secondary, interpretative studies, as will be seen from the notes and the bibliography at the end of the work. It is an important study that will commend itself especially to those who are concerned with modernist doctrine, Baha'i responses to that doctrine, and the implications of both for a fuller understanding of important facets of Middle Eastern history, especially during the last decades of the nineteenth century.

Merlin Swartz
Boston University

---

The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith in Middle Eastern Modernity by Juan Cole

<https://www.isim.nl/newsletter/2/regional/1.html>

Middle Eastern religion is seldom mentioned in the same breath with modernism, at least in the West. However, the Baha'i faith, which originated in nineteenth-century Iran, poses key conundrums to our understanding of the relationship between modernity and religion in the global South.

Modernity was conceived in binary oppositions, between superstition and reason, absolutism and liberty, nation and Other, civilized and barbarian, and male and female. Proponents of modernity, as Edward Said demonstrated in his masterful Orientalism,<sup>1</sup> managed to range a number of such oppositions together, coding reason, liberty, nation, civilization and maleness as European, whereas both Europe's medieval ('immature') past and Europe's Oriental Others, especially Islam, were painted as possessing the opposite and inferior characteristics. European modernity tended to hide from itself its own darker traits, including chauvinist hatreds, industrialized warfare, racism, colonialism and male chauvinism, and the degree to which the modern form of these phenomena was inextricably intertwined with the entire modernist project.

From a postmodern point of view, modernity has lacked a sense of ambiguity and irony, and suffers from limiting its typologies to mere binary oppositions, when in fact social phenomena come in three's, four's, and even higher ordinals, not just in two's. North Atlantic modernists have also privileged the European experience of modernity in ways that seem peculiar to anyone who knows something about world history. Anthony Giddens in The Consequences of Modernity (Stanford, 1990), argues that modernity is not a static matter of binary oppositions, but is rather dialectical. Movements against absolutism give rise not only to parliamentary regimes, but also to national security states that appear to many citizens to deprive them of liberties instead of bestowing them, thus generating oppositional grassroots movements campaigning for democracy (as opposed to elitist Liberalism) and for workers' rights. That is, he challenges modernists' insistence that the contenders in political battles can be neatly divided into 'reactionaries' and 'progressives'. Giddens gives the name 'utopian realist' to the movements, such as those of workers, women, peace groups and others, that challenge the industrial, militant nation-states of bourgeois modernity.

Islam's encounter with nineteenth-century modernity produced not only reactionary, revivalist, millenarian, liberal and fundamentalist responses, as some have argued, but in the form of the Baha'i faith it produced a mixture of millenarianism, liberalism and utopian realism that later turned sharply toward a sort of fundamentalism. The latter turn has tended to obscure the original emphases of the religion's founder, which can only be recovered through reading his voluminous letters in their nineteenth-century political and cultural context.

The Baha'i faith developed out of the esoteric, kabbalistic Shaykhi movement of Shicite Islam, founded by Shaykh Ahmad al-Ahsa'i (1753-1826), and out of the apocalyptic and messianic Babi movement, founded by cAli Muhammad Shirazi, the 'Bab' or door to the divine, in 1844, which racked Iran with religious ferment and turmoil, leading to the Bab's execution in 1850 and a retaliatory attempt on the life of Nasiru'd-Din Shah by radical Babis in 1852, and thence to a nation-wide pogrom against the new religion.<sup>2</sup> Out of this maelstrom emerged an entirely different sort of messianic movement, the Baha'i faith, founded in Baghdad in 1863 by Mirza Husayn cAli Nuri, Baha'u'llah (1817-1892).

Baha'u'llah, a high notable born in Tehran whose father had been a provincial governor married into the royal family, had emerged after the Bab's execution as a prominent Babi leader, though his more radical younger half-brother, Mirza Yahya Subh-i Azal, was more widely recognized as the vicar of the Bab in the 1850s and early 1860s. Baha'u'llah was exiled first to Ottoman Baghdad (1853), then to Istanbul (1863), Edirne (1863-1868) and finally in 1868 to Akka on the coast of Ottoman Syria, where he lived until his death. In 1867 he had broken decisively with Azal, proclaiming himself the messianic successor of the Bab and founding a new religion, the Baha'i faith. Partly due to his exiles to the Ottoman Empire, which was more directly imbricated in European modernity than Qajar Iran, Baha'u'llah turned Babism from a millenarian protest movement into one that mixed modernist and utopian realist themes. He expressed approval of some aspects of modernity, whereby he critiqued the absolutist Ottoman and Qajar states, including a call for parliamentary democracy, some separation of religion and state, a guarantee of freedom of conscience and expression, greater rights for women, and an end to arbitrary decrees, which should be replaced by tribunals. At the same time, however, he critiqued nineteenth-century modernity itself, condemning chauvinist nationalism (whether religious, linguistic or ethnic in character), European colonialism, industrialized warfare paid for by high taxes on the poor, the anarchy of international relations based upon the absolute sovereignty of nation-states (which he wished to curb through international peace conferences), and what he thought of as over-developed civilization, by which he appears to have meant materialism, pollution and massively destructive weaponry.

Baha'u'llah's mixture of rationalization (e.g. parliamentary institutions and due process), appeal to human rights, and yet his communitarian emphasis on the creation of a new, revealed missionary religion, prefigured some of the convergences between the old Right and Left that French sociologist Alain Touraine perceives as characteristic of the turn of the twentieth century. In a fascinating about-face, the later Baha'i faith's leaders turned increasingly to the Right, condemning multi-party democracy as factious and plutocratic, advocating theocracy, and curbing individual freedom of conscience and expression within the community. This right wing shell has preserved the utopian realist core of Baha'u'llah's own emphases, however, creating a unique sectarian community that has remained tiny in the literate world, in part because of its strict controls on discourse, but which has had some success missionizing in India and elsewhere in the global South. The Babi-Bahai movements underwent an odyssey from militancy in the 1840s to pacifist, liberal globalism under Baha'u'llah and thence in the twentieth century to two contending emphases: a liberal stream that maintains a universalist and tolerant outlook and a conservative one that dreams of theocratic domination and insistence on scriptural literalism. The movement thus defies any easy teleology of modernity, and in many ways parallels the major reformist intellectual currents of modern Iran's Shicite majority.

Juan R. I. Cole is Professor of Middle Eastern and South Asian History at the University of Michigan, USA. He is author of Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith in the Nineteenth Century Middle East. New York: Columbia University Press.

Notes

1. New York: Vintage, 1978.
2. Abbas Amanat (1989), Resurrection and Renewal: The Making of the Babi Movement in Iran, 1844-1850. Cornell: Cornell University Press.

-----
This Page: 2/Regional/1.html
Last Updated: Wednesday, March 17, 1999

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

A Selection of Comments by FG on the poet Robert Hayden

For a more nuanced understanding of Robert Hayden's work, see my essay "Robert Hayden in the Morning Time" in my book *The Grove of the Eumenides: Essays on Literature, Criticism, and Culture*. Earthrise Press, 2007. ISBN-13: 9780967042183. Pages, 247-265.

Re-Centering: The Turning of the Tide and Robert Hayden (web page also has links to other Hayden information)
https://fglaysher.com/Recentering\_turning\_of\_the\_tide\_%20and\_Robert\_Hayden.html

Robert Hayden also discussed in: *Letters from the American Desert: Signposts of a Journey, A Vision*. ISBN: 9780967042114..Hardcover. Preface. Earthrise Press, 2008. 172 pages.

See also Re: Abuse of Robert Hayden by Bahais

FG

UseNet: alt.religion.bahai

From - Wed Jul 09 07:13:41 1997

Chris wrote:

>

> In a message which I read on alt.religion.bahai, FG

> <FG@hotmail.com> wrote

> >Trash, is what "Bahai" inspired art is in the Bahai Faith.... The > >Bahai Faith stands irrevocably opposed to art beyond the > >kindergarten stage.... beyond the age of innocence when children > >begin to develop a mind and conscience of their own....

>

> Ok, Fred, so you do not like 'Baha'i' art, of whatever discipline as it > is at this time. That is your right and I won't argue with you as to a > certain extent I am in agreement with you. But, what sort of art do you > like?

Art that is alive, experiencing, questioning, and confronting the fullness of the human condition.... Those things aren't allowed in the Bahai Faith.... There are "moderators" and third-rate "administrators" who know better....

Do you dislike all the music, paintings, dance etc. that has been > created and interpreted by Baha'i artists of all disciplines?

Just about.... The only two artists, who happened to be Bahai, I can genuinely feel any respect for would be the painter Mark Tobey and the poet Robert Hayden. After that it's Bahai old maid sentimentality.... You're thinking above primarily about the performing arts, less threatening historically to fascists of every stripe, religious or other....

>[snip]

One must, as Horace said, delight and teach, but "pleasure" is a very modern word.... "Uplift" is a Bahai conception, among some, not always appropriate to art. It leads to maudlin, nauseating sentimentality.... The pathetic efforts of dilettantes, really.... Tragedy transpires on a more profound level of the human psyche than the usual Bahai mind can even remotely understand, especially the Iranian one, given the narrow range literature was always limited to in that culture....

>

> It is my hope that one day Baha'i composers will match the grandeur of > these works that move me, but, like you, I fear we have a long way to > go.

Given the present stifling atmosphere in the Bahai Faith, a thousand years, at best....

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Friday, September 26, 1997 7:38 AM
To: SRB
Subject: Re: evil in Bahai Writings

I suggest a more profitable passage by Abdul-Baha on evil is his discussion in Chapter 30 of Some Answered Questions, "Adam and Eve." Instead of theorizing ideally, as he does in "The Non-existence of Evil," he confronts the reality that "in the human world light and darkness, good and evil, exist as opposite conditions" (123). Analogously, he observes, "This attachment of the soul and spirit to the human world, which is sin . . . is always in the midst of, and at enmity with, the spirits and the descendants of Adam." To my mind, this is a much more profound Vision of Evil than the one usually perceived, a mature one, one capable of bringing in the masses of humanity, unlike the more maudlin conception.... Lest anyone misunderstand, Abdul-Baha states unequivocally, "That enmity continues and endures" (124).

I think of Robert Hayden's "Alas, there is no Eden without its Serpent."

A dark and horrifying vision of human evil....

--
FG
UseNet: alt.religion.bahai

--
March 31, 1997

The Universal House of Justice of the Bahais of the World
Haifa, Israel

Dear Members of the Universal House of Justice:

After careful reflection and prayer for the past few days, I've decided that open public discussion and knowledge are more important than my own status as a Bahai.

I have been a Bahai for more than twenty years, since 1976. I became a Bahai by reading almost every single Bahai book published at the time. Given my background as a Catholic and poet, I was deeply moved by the beauty and profundity of the Bahai Writings. As a young person, I spent two months travel teaching throughout Michigan with several other youthful, innocent Bahais. Like many, I have sacrificed financially to contribute to the Bahai Faith. I pioneered for a year and a half in Japan, for two years on an American Indian reservation, and have travel taught in China. The spiritual profundity of the Bahai vision, as reflected in the work of the African-American poet Robert Hayden, inspired me to study at the University of Michigan under him and to spend considerable time and labor editing his collected poems and prose for Liveright and the University of Michigan Press. I have published two essays in the Bahai magazine World Order and spent more time than I can remember at Bahai summer camps, workshops, and deepenings. Throughout all my varied Bahai experience, I have loved the Figures and Teachings of the Faith even as the conviction has grown that all information and discussion in the Bahai Faith is subtly manipulated, controlled, and distorted for the "good of the Faith." There seems to be a pervasive, rigid control of all thought, ideas, and information that calls into question the motives of the individuals in power in the Bahai Administration.

As a published writer and former college and university instructor of rhetoric and literature for over ten years, I believe the whole process of "review" has become a complete farce and disgrace to the Bahai Faith and is suggestive of the worst censorship under the most repressive regimes, religious or secular, of historical experience. If one truly wishes to understand why many Bahais, both highly educated and others, leave the Bahai Faith or become "inactive" and withdraw into silence and uninvolvedness with the religion, one need only to look objectively at what seems to be the oppressive and coercive methods of people in the Bahai Administration itself to find the answer.

My experiencing of these same methods of censorship and distortion on soc.religion.bahai proved to be the last intolerable straw. My attempt to form an unmoderated newsgroup on the Internet that no one could manipulate and censor has a long experience of Bahai tyranny in the background. The resorting to deceit and back-channel communication by the moderators of soc.religion.bahai and others naively believing they're working for the benefit of the Bahai Faith by campaigning for 691 unethical NO votes on talk.religion.bahai further proves the pervasive acceptance of disreputable tactics by Bahais in their attempt to maintain a stranglehold over all thought and discussion.

Recently, more than ever, I've often recalled the words to me in private several times of Robert Hayden, the only Bahai to be appointed Consultant in Poetry to the Library of Congress: "Why I continue to have anything to do with the Bahai Faith, I do not know, I do not know." I myself no longer know.

I suppose I hope that the oppressive, coercive methods that have come to be accepted and justified in the Bahai Administration, demonstrated for instance in the crushing of the magazine Dialogue, the incidents surrounding the Bahai Encyclopedia, the listserv Talisman I, and the continually crude, unreadable propaganda vehicle of the American Bahai, might yet be put aside in favor of the beautiful vision of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha for freedom of religious conscience and belief and a humane, tolerant universalism. I fear that all too often the religious totalitarianism of Baha'u'llah's fanatical homeland has seeped into every nook and cranny of His religion, smothering out the free light of the human soul and hamstringing His Administration.

It was with the bitterest of feelings that I observed some time ago the Bahai exhibition, a deceitful propaganda event really, on freedom of religious conscience and belief sponsored by the National Spiritual Assembly in the rotunda of the Capitol in Washington, D.C., so far in reality from the truth was it, so misled, trusting, and uninformed were the Congressmen of my country....

If censorship is allowed in the Bahai Faith, I would like to know what passages of the Bahai Writings support it and what are the "rules," if you will, of Bahai censorship. It seems to me that censorship pervades the Bahai Faith so thoroughly that some Bahais regularly use it as a method of intimidation and silencing of anyone with an unconventional opinion by accusing the individual of being a covenant breaker. This tactic was used against me by at least three Bahais during the discussion period for talk.religion.bahai and tacitly condoned by the moderators and others.

I include, at the end, a threatening, coercive email message I received on March 27, 1997, from Mr. Hoda Mahmoudi, Auxiliary Board Member for Michigan, at a crucial juncture of the discussion and voting for talk.religion.bahai and would like an explanation of his motives.

I, and perhaps the rest of the world, would greatly appreciate evidence that there are not now nine ayatollahs residing in Israel on Mt Carmel.

Respectfully,

FG

From - Thu Nov 21 08:44:02 1996

Cheryll & Wade Schuette wrote:

>
> Are you the same person who edited Robert Hayden's _Collected Poems_ ?
> I haven't read the work, although now I will do so, but it was my wife > who recently reorganized and cataloged the library at the Hayden House > in Ann Arbor. Cheryll says that there are numerous manuscripts which > neither she nor the daughter know how to handle, piled in the basement, > and wonders if you have any suggestions.
>

Yes, I am. I'd suggest contacting the University of Michigan's special collections librarians. Ask them if they're interested in acquiring any of the manuscripts. They were at one time. Mrs. Hayden had considered making a bequest of the bulk of her husband's papers there but then decided on the Baha'i Archives. I helped box most of his papers and took them to Wilmette. I'm surprised to hear there are "numerous manuscripts." A few, yes.

> >From your postings I see a person deeply committed to the Baha'i Faith > and an unmet desire to focus attention on communication structures and > processes which have potential instabilities that suggest a need for > analysis and, perhaps, re-engineering from basic principles.

More objective than I could muster but basically perhaps true. I don't believe we can re-engineer the human heart....

> Please let me know if you might be interested in participating in such > a discussion.

I'm not a technician. I'd don't know if I'd have anything significant to add give your approach. If you're open to someone from the humanities, sure.

> Best regards,
> Wade Schuette
> Ann Arbor, MI

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]

Sent: Wednesday, April 19, 2000 5:52 PM

Subject: Abuse of Robert Hayden by Baha'is

Thirteen Member & Viewer Relations
450 West 33rd Street
New York, NY 10001
membership@thirteen.org <membership@thirteen.org>
cc: web@thirteen.org <web@thirteen.org>

To Whom It May Concern:

I have misgivings about the link to the Bahá'í Faith's website on the Lesson about Robert Hayden at <https://www.wnet.org/foolingwithwords/lesson2.html>

As the editor of both his Collected Poems and his Collected Essays, I am well aware of his regard for the Baha'i Teachings. However, I believe his membership in the Baha'i Faith are often misused by my fellow Baha'is who are fundamentalists and are only interested in USING his religious beliefs for proselytizing.

During the last several years there have been many abuses by Baha'is of the human rights of numerous Americans--a potential that Hayden himself was highly aware of but which is never acknowledged by such Baha'is as Mr. Peter Murphy.

I suggest you look at the many incidents of Baha'i suppression of conscience on my website or on Professor Juan Cole's site, especially his essay below:
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/1999/jssr/bhjssr.htm>

I hope you will consider removing the link to the Baha'i site.

FG

www.FG.com

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Patrick Henry[SMTP:patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com]
Sent: Saturday, January 08, 2000 11:16 AM Subject: Re: slander and bullying by so called liberals

As the editor of Robert Hayden's Collected Prose (U of Michigan Press) and his Collected Poems (Liveright, imprint of W. W. Norton), I'm not at all unfamiliar with Black racists attacking and maligning me, not to mention changing through their insidious racism the course of my life on a number of occasions, but invariably because I am white....

Jamal's comments reflect the typical shallowness of radical thinking in America and in the Bahai faith. It was of course uhj member Glenford Mitchell who was a supporter of Malcolm X's brand of violent race relations, editing a magazine full of racist rubbish and resentment, and who has apparently taken the same tactics with him to contribute to the Stalinization of the uhj.

Let me recommend again David Horowitz's recently published Hating Whitey and Other Progressive Causes and Ward Connerly's forthcoming book against Black racism and race preferences that will be released in February for Black History Month, for those truly interested in history, not racist romantic fantasy and embitterment.... Since I'm mentioning Blacks with some real intelligence, one truly interested in these matters shouldn't miss Keith . Richburg's courageous Out of America: A Black Man Confronts Africa.

Jamal's comments represent quite well the pathetically low level to which the uhj and Henderson have allowed Baha'u'llah's commanding vision of human oneness to be banalized and perverted. His comments also reveal that in the Bahai faith the search for "The shining spark of truth" that "cometh forth only after the clash of differing opinions" has been replaced by self-righteous "race rhetoric," as Hayden called it on one occasion....

Only a free and open forum, beginning with the ending of "review" and following the Teaching of Baha'u'llah Himself in this regard, can permit the much-needed exchange of views exploring what it really means to be a human being in this day and age, instead of a caricature of someone's leftist to marxist, racist thinking....

--

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
Into the Ruins: <https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0967042127/>

From: BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing[SMTP:patrick_henry@liberty.com]
Sent: Monday, November 05, 2001 9:37 AM Subject: Re: Maxwell Baha'i School - Welcome to the religious cult school from hell

Randy,

I'm not sure what that slur is supposed to mean. This person, like the majority of bahais, in and out of the administration, haven't a clue about what Robert Hayden actually thought and said about the bahai faith and its fascist elements. His views are available for those who are intelligent enough to seek them out. Antinomies too deep for philistines....

Even putting the philistinism aside, it's evident that those lackeys in charge of monitoring, as was recently mentioned, talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai, don't have a clue either, so little do they understand the intellectual and spiritual issues involved. Rigid minds find complexity and ambivalence too formidable for consideration.

To them one question should always be asked, the crux of the issue: More than eighty years after its institution, has the "temporary measure" of "review" been lifted yet by the uhj?

Elsewhere I spell these issues out more fully, in literary terms, more deeply, I would hope, than can be done in work-a-day prose. I suggest the non-bahai read the reflections below and then ponder why the bahai fundamentalists are so desperate to discredit me and other voices of conscience, as is further documented on my website:

<https://fglaysia.com/bahaicensorship/Antinomies.htm>

<https://fglaysia.com/bahaicensorship/LettersAmD1989-1994.htm>

"These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty there secrets of the contingent world. Moreover, if interrogation of conscience, which is one of the private of produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the possessions of the heart and the soul, take place in this world, what further recompense remains for man in the court of divine justice at the day of general resurrection? Convictions and ideas are within the scope of the comprehension of the King of kings, not of kings; and soul and conscience are between the fingers of control of the Lord of hearts, not of [His] servants." --Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

"Lunar prescence, / foredoomed, already dying...." --Robert Hayden

Nothing could prove it more than the conduct of the uhj during the last decade, betrayers of Abdul-Baha's own Words above....

--

FG

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: FG <>

Subject: Response to Sharaf's Honest Questions

To: irfan@umich.edu,talisman@umich.edu,bahai-faith@bccca.org

In article <19970216042501.XAA23903@ladder01.news.aol.com>, sharaf94@aol.com (Sharaf94) wrote:

>

> I really do not understand the opposition to an unmoderated discussion of > the Baha'i Faith. I prefer not to pass by what I say to any censor, and I > do not believe the principles of Baha'i consultation support the concept > of having anyone approve what is stated before announcing it to the group.

>

> I wonder if there is not a hidden agenda by the Baha'is here? Is it > really fear of opposition voices that motivates the naysayers?

>

> Is this Baha'i unity? squelch the dissenting voices?

In all sincerity, God bless you. Either you're one of the most heroic souls in the Bahai Faith today or . . . I don't know what! You're stating exactly how I feel. WHAT is the big deal? How can any thoughtful person watching this spectacle not think there must be a "hidden agenda"? That's precisely what I thought last November when I experienced the arbitrary manner in which the moderators of soc.religion.bahai censored messages.... It is, in my opinion, contrary to Bahai consultation, unless consultation is meant to be a fascist suppression of all views at the least variance with prevailing sentiment among most Bahais.... When in the history of the world have MOST people ever been in the right? Do we lack all historical perspective and humility so badly we can not cautiously weigh our own use of power? These things have concerned me all along, and my posts all demonstrate that for anyone who wants to pull them up to look at them....

I'm not trying to destroy the Bahai Faith. I've been a member of it since 1976; I've sacrificed and taught the Faith in two countries, Japan and the USA; I studied with and edited the collected poems and prose of the poet Robert Hayden partly because as a Bahai I had a deep respect for the vision he evokes in his work; I homefront pioneered on an American Indian reservation for two years, with much sacrifice to myself and family; as a writer myself, I've published and written more than a dozen essays and books that I've tried in to confront the complexity of social and religious history in the modern world from a serious Bahai perspective, in terms of my own conscience.... and so on. I have not tried to destroy the Bahai Faith. I would like to see it do what it has not: spread and flourish.

Sadly, "squelching" seems the only way many in this religion seem to be able to choose when confronted with someone who does not babble back to them their own opinion....

If I'm honest about the subtle thoughts that have passed through my mind, watching one Bahai event or another, I would have to say it has often seemed the "unity" is a fraud tacked together with the glue and tape of oppression and coercion.... Nothing that has happened lately with soc.religion.bahai has led me to think otherwise, including its lowering now of an iron, electronic curtain.

--

FG

From: FG@hotmail.com[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, March 25, 2002 7:17 AM Subject: Re: Robert Hayden

Dear Ms. Murray:

The quotation comes from a letter written to me in 1979 or 1980. A copy should exist at the Baha'i archives in Wilmette.

I'm pleased to hear of your interest in Hayden. His work has been grossly underappreciated and studied in my view. I wish you well in your work and hope you can help remedied those shortcomings.

Thank you for your good words on my editing his prose and poems. There were many difficult editorial decisions that had to be made on both books that perhaps only someone like yourself who has studied the variants and sources can begin to understand. My overriding purpose was to create readable texts that would help his reputation to continue to grow, not repositories of every scrap, something Bob and I had often discussed. It is my experience that the complexity of his work is very far beyond the various current levels of understanding within Baha'i circles.

If you're unfamiliar with it, my essay "Recentering" on Hayden may be found on my website at <https://fglaysher.com/Recentering.htm>
Best wishes,

FG

www.FG.com

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 1999 1:21 PM Subject: Re: An apology to Fred

jrc@umich.edu wrote in message <79sbme$o16$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>...
>

>I mean, I'd be glad to be a Baha'i. But not at the price >of my personal integrity.

Pretty much the way I feel too.... Given all the lies and deceit and "hikmat" and hiding behind contemptible lackeys, I don't know why I don't resign too....

I recall the words of Robert Hayden to me so many times:
"Why I continue to have anything to do with Bahais,
I do not know. I do not know."

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
alt.religion.bahai, and AOL: Keyword Bahai, Message Boards

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Sunday, February 21, 1999 10:35 PM Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience

jrcole wrote in message <7a1lco$d2n$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>...

That this is my reading is one reason that I met the threats against >me with publicity, since it was clear that people were being bullied this way
>all the time and it was being gotten away with precisely because those >bullied covered it up or fell silent, making it easy for the next person to >be victimized. I decided that this behavior was cult-like and needed to be >challenged. And I am quite convinced that my speaking out has prevented a >whole string of further victims from being silenced or sanctioned.

This is my hope with talk.religion.bahai too....

>And don't worry, ultimately it is good for the community to have an outsider >gadfly like me. It only got to the point where administrators thought they >could get away with dictating permitted speech to major academics because >everyone was being too nice to and compliant with these bullies, who got more >and more arrogant. They've scaled back, now, and the community will benefit.

Robert Hayden used to refer to them as THAT CROWD....
Most apropos. The man never expressed anything but contempt for them behind their backs.... complaining to me once he had given them too much too easily. I often recall that when I hear of another attempt to exploit his career
by THAT CROWD....

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
alt.religion.bahai, and AOL: Keyword Bahai, Message Boards

From: Patrick Henry[SMTP:patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com]
Sent: Friday, May 21, 1999 2:08 PM
Subject: Re: Stealing Bahai Chairman

K. Paul Johnson <pjohnson@vlinsvr.vsla.edu> wrote in message news:37458326.0@vlinsvr...

Here's what I think I understand: it was > right and necessary for the Administrative Order spokesman to say > what he did, but wrong and unnecessary for critics of the AO to > try to figure out what is really going on behind the smokescreen > of vague character assassination.

Character assassination is the way the Bahai AO always operates. Where else do you think the fundamentalists on soc.religion.bahai and here learn it?

>
> Is that it?
>

> PJ
>
> PS-- Needless to say I don't support Fred's characterization of > the matter, which is further character assassination.

Nelson obviously got caught STEALING money from a dead widow's estate. How's that character assassination?

Incidentally, anyone wishing to understand Henderson should read Robert Hayden's poem "Witch Doctor," which W. H. Auden thought highly of. It perfectly captures the dynamics of Henderson's personality as I witnessed his performance once at an annual convention in about 1990 or so.

--

Patrick Henry
"Give me liberty or give me death."
Visit The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:

From: Patrick Henry[SMTP:patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com]
Sent: Sunday, June 27, 1999 6:42 AM
Subject: Re: Hooper Dunbar and Austin Powers

Regarding:

Glenford Mitchell, a Jamaican-born journalist > and civil rights campaigner who had emigrated to the US, became > secretary of the US NSA after Ruhe, and was elected to the House from > that position in 1983.

His past may not be as unblemished as some would like others to think. I believe he may have actually been a supporter and propagandist for the Malcom X school of racial understanding. He was apparently the editor of a radical journal along such lines at one point.

I have a vivid memory of his cutting a very poor figure at a memorial dinner for Robert Hayden in 1980....

--

Patrick Henry, "Give me liberty or give me death!"
The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
Into the Ruins: <https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0967042127/>

From: jrc@umich.edu &lt;jrc@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Baha'i Scriptures and Universal Declaration of Human Rights
Date: Monday, April 26, 1999 8:13 PM

Thanks so much for the kind words, Fred. I hope you will also do some writing, on things like Robert Hayden's spirituality (I know it is far more complex than the biographies allow).

It is true that a subcommittee of the Universal House of Justice composed of Farzam Arbab, Douglas Martin and Ian Semple had the counselors of the International Teaching Center accuse me of 'making statements contrary to the Covenant' in April 1996, just because they did not like my email postings. As a result, I was confused for two and a half years. After all, I had not in my own mind contravened "the Covenant" in any way. I mean, had I claimed to be the 17th Guardian? No! Had I claimed to be able to do more than express my personal and non-authoritative opinion about the meaning of Baha'i scripture? No! Had I made any unreasonable demands on the UHJ? No! At that very time, the UHJ had asked me and I had agreed to help with the retranslation of *Some Answered Questions*! I had offered them, and they had accepted, my provisional translations of the Tablets. What weird sort of dealings did they have with people, to essentially employ them on the one hand but to horsewhip them on the other? I'm afraid I thought that the only sort of persons went about behind the scenes threatening college professors with being shunned unless they fell silent were wild-eyed cultists, and I'm afraid that is still my opinion of Farzam Arbab, Doug Martin, Ian Semple,

Fred Schechter, Monajjem, Stephen Birkland et al. Unfortunately, there are lots of nooks and crannies in the Baha'i administration where cultists can hide out and abuse adherents.

However, I worked my way through things, and found my faith in Baha'u'llah once more, even if I have become convinced by my dealings with them that the Universal House of Justice has in fact been mutilated by the absence of a living Guardian, just as he predicted would happen. But this 'mutilation' can be a good thing, too. I think the reason we don't have a Guardian is because God decided human beings needed to grow up and stand on their own two feet. This maturity of humankind, which Baha'u'llah proclaims when he talks of the "advent of Universal Reason"; among "the people," is incompatible with having someone interpret our scriptures for us authoritatively. So, we have been left with a purely legislative body (the UHJ), and everyone is now free to express their conscience and proclaim their views about Baha'i theology and social principles.

Because the UHJ has been, unfortunately, mutilated by the absence of a living Guardian, they have no one, as Shoghi Effendi explicitly predicted, to tell them when they are straying from their proper legislative functions into matters where they have no scriptural or constitutional authority (like the email messages of Baha'i professors or those of Baha'i fiction writers like Michael McKenny). I fear I have concluded that the *only* force that can in some ways repair the damage of the mutilation, the only prosthesis that can allow the House of Justice to walk normally again, is Baha'i Public Opinion and the consensus of the believers. And that is why I speak out and will continue to speak out every time the Baha'i administration contravenes the Universal Declaration of Human Rights with regard to its own adherents, given the close fit between the ideals of that document and those of Baha'u'llah and the other holy figures.

So, you see, in the end I haven't been 'driven out' of anything. I am a Baha'i, just like any other Baha'i, a believer in Baha'u'llah. Whether others wish to recognize and acknowledge that, and whether they wish to backbite me or listen to others backbite an innocent person, is completely irrelevant to the facts.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

From: &lt;nima_hazini@my-deja.com&gt;
Subject: Re: Abuse of Robert Hayden by Bahais
Date: Sunday, May 07, 2000 9:28 AM; rlittle95@my-deja.com wrote
Were Mr. Hayden alive today, who would he choose to edit his work? I think he would choose an individual who shares his love for Baha'u'llah, an individual who strives to be like 'Abdul-Baha', in addition to the normal professional qualifications.
As much as Fred pisses me off at times, like recently, when he says that Hayden distanced himself from the current Baha'i organization, I believe him. Why? Because Fred knew and worked with this man and probably had access to a side of the man that you people who wish to claim (and misappropriate) him for your own sectarian motivated ends simply do not. That makes a difference. Having read a little Hayden myself (yes, Fred, I bought your book!) and detecting a liberal and open-minded spirit in him, I doubt very much he would have looked upon what is currently going on inside the Baha'i organization with anything but disdain. He would have been simply appalled, to say the least, as any other reasonable thinking human being with a conscience would. All you people wish to do with Hayden is to garner PR for yourselves. You care not one iota as to what the man truly represented. Shame on you for misappropriating the name of departed in such fashion!

Nima

From: FG &lt;FG@hotmail.com&gt;
Subject: To UHJ #6 (Juan Cole: Protest to Islamic Authorities
Date: Saturday, December 13, 1997 8:26 AM

Dear Members of the Universal House of Justice:

I ask you to consider this forwarded message, from some of today's most widely recognized writers of international stature, including one Nobel laureate. The oppressive atmosphere that has developed in the Bahai Faith during recent memory, as Dr. Juan Cole suggests here, and others have testified elsewhere, seems appallingly reminiscent of that in present day Iran.</pre>

As a published poet and literary critic, having edited the poems and prose of Robert Hayden, I deeply feel the irony and poignancy of this critique and comparison. Indeed, it was the initial conviction, born of 21 years of membership in the Bahai Faith, that no real artistic work of worth could ever be written in the present Bahai environment that has compelled me to sacrifice myself, my membership in the Bahai Faith, if need be, to help create an unmoderated forum on Usenet.

I beg you again with all my heart and soul to give evidence to the world that the Bahai Faith lives up to its own teachings on human rights and free speech and respects the conscience with which God has endowed humankind.

--

FG

UseNet: alt.religion.bahai

The RFD for talk.religion.bahai can be found on news.groups,

---

Re-Centering: The Turning of the Tide and Robert Hayden 1983

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Original Message -----

From: "Rod" <kashani@tpg.com.au>

Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai

Sent: Sunday, October 05, 2003 10:05 PM

Subject: Re: Alison Marshall's account of her legal battle

Susan Maneck <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20031005194201.07857.00000370@mb-m11.aol.com...

> > But the monetary cost to the NSA ($NZ56,000), the admissions it > > has had to make in its submissions to the court, and the judge's > > rejection of key arguments it was making, means that I personally > > treat the result as a victory.

**>

HARK! WHO GOES THERE!

> So you are proud of the fact you cost the NSA a lot of money.

I believe the point would be that it was an avoidable waste of the Friends hard earned and contributed. Had there been any fair due process the outlay would have been avoided. The expense is also a portent for the future...for no civilised organisation can afford to expect to wait until it is "running a country" (Susan) before it implements basic justice procedures within.

Snip

>. The judge did not reject the 'spiritual' nature of these determinations,

He did not have the opportunity given the case (on technicality) fell outside the courts jurisdiction. But we, none the less,

are granted the opportunity to see the "nature of these determinations" and there is nothing
"spiritual" about them.
One only has to read the NZ/NSA's submission to the court to observe the farcical and abhorrent nature of their 'non case'.
Any defence of such a document is an embarrassment to the Baha'i Faith and would constitute the very worst kind of blind apologetics.

> etc. He simply noted that if there were something > non-spiritual involved, such as a job, then that argument would not stand.

In the circumstances what the judge noted is of little consequence...what is noteworthy and of concern is the revelation of Baha'i AO procedures and mindset contained in their very own submission. Who cares what the judge thinks when it is so starkly revealed what the AO thinks? Not bloody many of us will come up against the NZ courts but most of us have and will continue to come in contact with the AO and its "all-embracing way".

Sure puts a whole new slant on Institutes and Deepenings....everybody gets to sit there and hum "Who could it be now"?

> Removing people from the rolls in the manner in which Alison was removed is an > extremely rare occurrence anyhow.

With any semblance of fair due process 'all' such occurrences would be far far less likely. Nor is the issue at hand confined to removal from rolls, one must look to the prevalence of loss of voting rights and similar sanctions and realise that they are based on exactly the same make it up as you go along-"at the discretion of the

Baha'i administrative body to act as it sees fit" procedural vacuum.

Snip

> The best thing which came out of this suit it is that it recognises the > ultimate and incontrovertible authority of the Universal House of Justice
in > these matters

By revealing that the NZ/NSA did not follow the UHJ's instructions?-
"but NSA had not even arranged to meet with us before the UHJ instructed the NSA to disenrol me".

>and sets a precedence making it unlikely there will be more cases
> in the future.

That's a probability...this 'precedent' will greatly diminish the credibility of the Baha'i community as one that holds any regard for justice...let alone holds it as Best Beloved.

The Monty Python absurdities of the NZ/NSA court submission are unprecedented.

> You wouldn't be trying subtle means to shut me up would you?

Heaven forbid! We love to stand back and watch someone dig a hole... especially when it is a septic pit or a grave for a long dead and useless argument.

> After all, what these documents show is that the House of Justice told the > truth to begin with.

What these documents show is that the AO would go to desperate comic lengths to cover, conceal and excuse a lamentable and abhorrent absence of any fair due process. No sane adult with a passing interest in justice provision can read the NSA's court submission and not laugh, cry and shake their head in dismay. It is an abhorrent, stupid and nasty bit of work....to call it 'spiritual' is to piss on all things Holly.

> It is only by changing words like 'counsel' to 'warn' that you can argue they > weren't telling the truth.

That does not appear necessary-
"When I saw that the NSA had told six local assemblies that I had been counselled, giving the impression that I had at the very least been contacted about the administration's concerns". Alison.

Whatever whichway you run the Newspeak semantic obfuscation's Susan you are left with "efforts" that 'preceded the issue/concern and "subtle ways" that are unrecognisable to the justice seeking eye.

"There can be no comparison with the terminology used in legal proceedings in the community at large" NZ/NSA

Due Process, Fair Hearing, Prior Notification, Justice....not in the Baha'i lexicon.

"My accusers never confronted me; I came to find out later that the National Spiritual Assembly and other Administrative bodies had used members of the Local Spiritual Assembly and the community as "informants".

The concept of due process is foreign in the Baha'i Faith."

Dennis James Rogers

"there is no necessity for giving 'direct notice' to the individual. Similarly, the concept of a 'case to be heard' is foreign to the Baha'i administration" NZ/NSA

"Comrade Stalin did not give any clear directive. This is what a person does when they don't want to leave a clear trail".
Leningrad Nurse.

Could someone please hit post reply so that this missive may penetrate Susans plasticine killfile armour against reality.

Rod.

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Roll Call of Victims, Roll Call of Honor

---

The many victims of the fundamentalists among my fellow bahais include Indiana University Professors Linda and John Walbridge, editor Stephen Scholl, other editors of the censored Dialogue magazine, the Bahai Encyclopedia editors who resigned in protest, David Langness, author of "A Modest Proposal," Professor Juan Cole of the History Department of the University of Michigan, fantasy writer Michael McKenny, Nima Hazini of Australia, Paul Dodenhoff, who in protest resigned his position as an Assistant to the Auxiliary Board, Alison Marshall for writing a critique of bahai publishing and censorship, Deborah Buckhorn, and Anthony A. Lee, Editor of Kalimat Press, and perhaps David Kelly....

Deborah Buckhorn, New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for

FRAUD & LIBEL 3/2/2001:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/NMLawsuit.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/NMLawsuitResponse.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/NMLawsuitAttorney.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/AmicusC.htm>

I urge the perceptive reader seeking to understand the bahai faith to consider the experience and views of the people mentioned above.

Many other people speak for themselves elsewhere on this website,

AOL, Usenet, and wherever freedom of speech, in or out of cyberspace, is unconstrained by fanatics among my fellow bahais.

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Scholarship worthy of the name cannot be done without confronting the Bahai history to which Ruth White, Julie Chanler, and Mirza Ahmad Sohrab testify.

Ruth White, Excerpts, Bibliography

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Ruth%20White.htm>

Dr. C. (Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress *Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha. 1930.

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CAMitchell\_Report.htm

Ruth White Collection, Library of Congress, 1930

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/RWhiteLibC.htm>

Download All Documents Deposited by Ruth White at the Library of Congress in one PDF:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteLCDocs.pdf>

"That is to say, the writing does not agree with the hypothesis that it was all written by one person."

"A minute comparison of the authenticated writing with the writing on every page of the alleged will . . . has failed to detect in any part of the will the characteristics of the writing of Abdu'l-Baha, as shown in the authenticated specimens."

Dr. C. \(Charles\) Ainsworth Mitchell was the handwriting expert at the British Museum who judged the purported will of Abdul-Baha to be a fraud. Ruth White placed Dr. Mitchell's signed Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha with the Library of Congress in 1930. Click to view a certified copy.

Like other authors of dissident books by early Baha'is on H-NET Bahai, Ruth White is also slandered to discredit her views, while other key pages are suppressed by the State and Federally funded website. Bibliography of her books at the bottom of this page. (White and Sohrab's books were entirely deleted from H-Net Bahai on apparently June 9, 2007.)

Bibliography

White, Ruth. Abdul Baha and the Promised Age. xv, 224. New York: Ruth White (Also New York: J. J. Little and Ives), 1927.

White, Ruth. The Bahai Religion and Its Enemy, the Bahai Organization. 233. Rutland, Vt.: The Tuttle Co., 1929.

White, Ruth. Is the Bahai Organization the Enemy of the Bahai Religion?: An Appendix to Abdul Baha and the Promised Age. 22. New York: White, 1929.
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteOEBr.pdf>

White, Ruth. Abdul Baha's Alleged Will is Fraudulent: An Appendix to The Bahai Religion and Its Enemy, the Bahai Organization. 21. Rutland, Vt.: The Tuttle Co., 1930.

White, Ruth. Correspondence Between the High Commissioner of Palestine and Ruth White, Concerning the Alleged Will and Testament of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas. 11. Los Angeles, Calif.: White, 1932. (See Ruth White Collection, Library of Congress, 1930)
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/RWhiteLibC.htm> Download all Library of Congress Documents
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteLCDocs.pdf>

White, Ruth. Bahai Leads Out of the Labyrinth. 259. New York: Universal Publishing Co., 1944. (pages 257, 258, 259 restored)
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteBLOL.pdf>

White, Ruth. Abdul Baha's Questioned Will and Testament. 129. Beverly Hills: White, 1946. (Pages 18,20, 32, 50 restored.)
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteABQWT.pdf>

---

Ruth White. Abdul Baha's Questioned Will and Testament. Beverly Hills: White, 1946. Download entire book with the four pages deleted from the H-Bahai version restored:
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/White20ABQWT.pdf>

"The scientific indications are that the will of Abdul-Baha is not genuine. Also, from the spiritual viewpoint, there are overwhelming indications that it is not genuine, as it contradicts the teachings of both Baha'u'llah and of Abdul-Baha. But whether the alleged will of Abdul-Baha is authentic or spurious, the results of the administration of Shoghi Effendi and the National Spiritual Assembly of Baha'is stand as an historical indictment against them. They no more represent the Bahai Religion than the bigots of the dark ages of Christianity" (11-12).

"One of these actions is the trade marking of the name "Baha'i" in 1928. This is the same as if one sect within Christianity had tried to trade mark the name "Christian." In their application for the trade mark they described themselves as the "National Spiritual Assembly of Baha'is of the United States and Canada, a common-law corporation, organized and operated under declaration of trust and doing business at . . . " This trademark was later pronounced invalid by the court when the Assembly instituted two law-suits, during 1941, against two well-known Bahais, to prevent them, or anyone else, from spreading the Bahai teachings except through their organization. Of course the Assembly lost both suits and they were severely reprimanded by Judge Valente, who reminded them of the Bill of Rights, and pointed out that each one has a right to practice his religion unmolested by others.

"The Assembly of Baha'is use the assets that Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha built up by preaching some of their principles from the platform. But in private, after a person has joined the Assembly, that person is faced with the alternative of complying with the narrow, bigoted edicts of Shoghi Effendi and the Assembly, or of being excommunicated.

"This book is a challenge to them to prove, if they can, not only whether the will of Abdul-Baha is genuine, and the authority which they claim to derive from it is legitimate, but also whether their administration of their assumed authority is in the spirit of the teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha" (12-13).

DELETED from H-Bahai version [emphasizes true religion respects the individual and democracy]:

be expressed the other way about. Religion always stands for the freedom of the individual and for democracy. When the principles of religion, as given by Great Teachers who appear in different eras are applied, the application increases the freedom of the individual and increases the genius of the race by developing the intuitional or super-consciousness of man.

On the other hand, the dictators, with their regimentation of individuals, are always anti-God in their tendencies, and are an evidence of loss of faith. The State takes the place of God, and through loss of faith the development of the super-consciousness is more or less retarded, thereby conducing to a moronic condition of the race.

The pro-Gods, who are vitalists and who believe that life is ruled by a beneficent Design, should become more fully aware of the definite cleavage between their ideology of democracy and that of the anti-God communists, who believe in the mechanistic conception of life, and that life is based on and governed by chance. They must become more fully aware of the priceless heritage of faith — more completely united on the most important point of every religion that ever existed — faith in God. Unless they do, they cannot circumvent the united efforts of the anti-Gods to undermine their faith. For the communists are fully aware that the quickest way to establish their form of government is to lessen faith in God.

I mention communism as the great menace, for out of it stems all other forms of totalitarianism. Within this frame of pro-Gods and anti-Gods there are many gradations of belief and unbelief. Innumerable people who think they have faith in God believe in Him only as a theory without any vital influence in their lives; they was a reflection of my inner poverty of spirit. I was unhappy, poor, unsuccessful. But when Abdul Baha revived my faith in God, life became for me a glorious adventure, enriched on all the planes. This enrichment came to me through the awakening of my intuitional nature, which enabled me to see beneath the surface of things and to act wisely in all aspects of life. This gift is open to anyone who really lives according to the principles of religion, and it always enriches us and contributes to the enrichment of the race. It is the next great step forward in spiritual, mental and moral evolution. Only by taking this step can we keep pace with the material evolution on which we have concentrated too much attention. Belief in the supernatural aspect of religion, together with the application of its principles, is the formula for attaining this super-consciousness. To ignore this belief in the supernatural is to rob religion of its vital power — the part that revives the genius of the race.

DELETED from H-Bahai version [emphasizes the spiritual impact of Abdul-Baha on White:

If our attitude toward scientific discoveries had been as skeptical as most people's attitude is toward the discovery of the supernatural aspect of religion, we would have been largely deprived of our modern inventions, such as radio and television. The development and discovery of the spiritual counterpart of radio and television is of infinite importance today, especially as our material development is now so far ahead of our spiritual unfoldment that it threatens our destruction.

Dr. Alexis Carrel says:

Mystical activity has been banished from most religions. Even its meaning has been forgotten. Such ignorance is probably responsible for the decadence of the churches. The strength of religion depends

"For in the hands of Shoghi Effendi, and The National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States and Canada, the great universal Bahai Cause has been changed into a narrow bigoted sect and many of the tactics of the dark ages have been revived. This is what has happened to the religion that many leading thinkers of the day believe is the remedy for this age" (26).

"Neither [Abdul-Baha] nor Baha'u'llah had given the slightest intimation that they intended to appoint an hereditary guardianship. In fact everything that they had said or spoken indicated the opposite intention.

"I also did a great deal of recollecting of events that had happened during our two visits to the home of Abdul-Baha, where I had an opportunity to see him in relation to his family and his "in-laws." The deductions that I made confirmed what Abdul-Baha had so often said--that the spiritual relationship was the real kinship, and not the physical. For his family, with the exception of his wife and sister, were the average types with a strong bent toward organized religion, whereas Abdul-Baha was universal, "super-racial and undogmatic." The world was his family. His loving care for his universal family was evident throughout his life, but at no time was it more evident than during the first world war and directly after it. He personally supervised vast agricultural projects at Tiberias and Adassieh, and he rationed and distributed the products that he cultivated, thereby saving thousands from starvation" (28-29).

"It is important for those who are interested in the Bahai Religion to free themselves from the idea that the family of Abdul-Baha is a "Holy Family." In fact his family, and "in-laws," with the exception of his wife and sister, were somewhat materialistic, and viewed the religion more or less as a little family affair with a strong bent toward organization. For years they have indoctrinated, more or less, the pilgrims who visited the home of Abdul-Baha, myself included, with this conception of religion. This partly nullified the great universal teachings. The result was that when Abdul-Baha passed from this world in November, 1921, some of his family, who had laid the ground-work for organization through these pilgrims while he was alive, hastened to establish it more firmly when he died. All this resulted in making the Bahai Movement, under the dictatorship of Shoghi Effendi, an organization which for narrowness and bigotry has no parallel in history except in the dark ages" (31).

DELETED from H-Bahai version [ Abdul-Baha emphasizes that "Hands of the Cause" "is only a verbal expression" and that He definitely did not intend to "Appoint" anyone versus a theocracy:

and loving kindness. Everyone is drawn to them through their praiseworthy attributes, and pleasing qualities, and all the faces are illumined by the lights of their virtues and integrity. In this movement there is no title to be given to anyone; no See to be inherited by any person. 'The Hands of the Cause' are the Hands of Truth. Therefore, whosoever is the promoter and the servant of the Word of God he is the hand of Truth. By the 'hands of God' certain definite meanings are connoted. It is not only a verbal expression. Whosoever is more humble in the Cause of God, he is more confirmed; and whosoever is more evanescent, he is more favored."

It is inconceivable that Abdul Baha would have made this public declaration and also the following two statements if at that very time a will existed appointing a successor endowed with all the powers of a pope:

"There are no officers in this Cause. I do not and have not "Appointed" anyone to perform any special service, but I encourage everyone to engage in the service of the Kingdom. The foundation of this Cause is pure spiritual democracy and not a theocracy."

STAR OF THE WEST; page 116. August 20, 1917.

"In answer to a question as to whether or not there would be any clergy in the Bahai Cause, Abdul Baha said: 'No. In this movement there will never be any paid ministers, no appointed clergy, no bishops, no cardinals, no popes, no ceremonies. A clergyman, assuming that he is ordained to his ministry, may think that he knows more about God than anyone else, whereas the humble man in his congrega- tion may know more about God than he does. The

"Not until three years had elapsed after the alleged will had been read in 1922, were copies of it finally distributed, and then only to "old and recognized believers." I was among those who received a copy. But my stand continued to be one of "watchful waiting." This stand on my part caused me no embarrassment, inasmuch as I had never been a member of the Bahai organization, (Spiritual Assemblies of the Bahais). I knew that belonging to them meant conforming to the group repression and being shorn of the universal attitude which Abdul-Baha said is the essence of the Bahai Cause" (40).

"In May 1926 the National Spiritual Assembly of Bahais incorporated the Bahai Cause, made the alleged will part of the by-laws, and proclaimed it an article of faith that Shoghi Effendi as the Guardian of the Bahai Cause must be obeyed in all things. The alleged will had never been examined by handwriting experts. by the powers granted in the alleged will, the Guardian collected large sums of money, and sent out various pleas for this purpose" (40).

"As Mr. Mountford Mills was one of the "well known Baha'is" who had gone to Palestine shortly after the passing of Abdul-Baha, I wrote to him asking him to give me what information he could concerning the alleged will. Mr. Mills, by the way, drew up the by-laws of the Bahai Cause, than which nothing could be more un-Bahai. although he is an exceptionally fine man, that did not interfere with his blindness. Just after he had drawn these by -laws, my husband and I had an interview with him, in which he said that the had recently finished reading 'Christianity Past and Present' by Charles Guignebert, and that if he had read it before drafting those by-laws the history of the Bahai Cause would have been different. In other words Mr. Mills deeply regretted his action" (45).

DELETED from H-Bahai version [Of these four excisions from the H-Bahai copy of White's book, this one is the most incriminating. In it she emphasizes that Abdul-Baha always maintained that Bahais should require his signature for verification of the authenticity of his Tablets and pronouncements, which would have applied all the more to something as important as a purported will and testament. She also quotes on the previous page Abdul-Baha applying this injunction even to Shoghi Effendi and his brother Ruhi]:

apply to his alleged will, for it gave Shoghi Effendi authority totally out of keeping with Bahai principles.

The fact that Shoghi Effendi was specified in the letter of Abdul Baha just quoted, was portentous of what has happened. It was a prophetic warning foreshadowing just what has taken place.

I learned at this meeting with the Assembly that the photographs of the alleged will, which I had requested three months prior to this meeting, had not even been sent for. Therefore the next day, before the members of the Spiritual Assembly adjourned, I sent a letter to them by special delivery in which I urged that they cable to Mr. Allen McDaniel, who was then in Haifa, and request him to bring back the photographs when he returned.

In response to this letter Mr. Holly wrote that the photographs had been sent for.

"Dr. Mitchell not only spent months examining the enlarged specimens submitted to him, but he examined minutely every line of the ten photographs of the alleged will, and his conclusion is that it is not written throughout by the same person. This fact, in addition to others, indicates that the will is spurious, especially if we bear in mind that Shoghi Effendi, and the Spiritual Assembly of Bahai's, assert that every word of it is written in the hand of Abdul-Baha. Also if we bear in mind that it is undated and unwitnessed, and that it contradicts the teachings that both Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha gave during their lifetimes--that the Bahai Cause is a spiritual democracy and not a theocracy. The appointment of an hereditary guardianship contradicts this" (69).

"Dr. Mitchell's report also shows that none of the handwriting of the alleged will is the same as the authentic specimens of Abdul-Baha's handwriting that were submitted to him" (69).

"Most persons are unaware of the fact that handwriting experts use modern inventions that measure the slants, the spaces, and the tremors of writing so accurately that it makes the difference between two specimens of different writing overwhelmingly apparent, when these are enlarged, even though one of the specimens may be so clever a forgery of the other as to appear identical to the naked eye" (69-70).

"Those Bahais who assert that they are familiar with the handwriting of Abdul-Baha, and have compared it with the writing of the will, and have found them identical, reveal the fact that they are either totally unaware of the science used by the best handwriting experts, or else fear has prompted them to assert their belief in the authenticity of the will--fear of being excommunicated if they so much as question the document. This science that the best handwriting experts use is so mathematically accurate that any number of experts using these modern inventions will arrive at the same results" (70).

"I have already referred to the extreme care that Abdul-Baha showed in regard to letters purporting to be from him, sent or brought to this country. The following instance shows that he was even more careful to make certain that any Tablet or document of his relating to important public matters was properly translated and authenticated before it was sent out. He wrote a Tablet to the Secretary of the Court for Durable Peace, at the Hague, on December 17, 1919, and he considered it necessary to have four men translate it. These four men were Shoghi Effendi (Rabbani), Dr. Zia M. Bagdadi, Mirza Lotfullah Hakim, and Dr. J. E. Esselmont. This Tablet was signed Abdul-Baha Abbas, and was published in the Star of the West (Bahai Magazine), August 1, 1920, with the four names of the translators and witnesses."

"The quadruple witnessing of this Tablet, written two years before Abdul-Baha passed from this world, make it evident that he did not consider Shoghi Effendi careful enough, or efficient enough, to translate the Table to the Court of Durable Peace without the help of three other men. Is it likely, then, that at this very time and authentic will of Abdul-Baha's, of infinitely greater importance than this Tablet to the Hague, should lay hidden in the earth, undated and unwitnessed, in which this same Shoghi Effendi was appointed sole guardian of the Bahai Cause, with more potential power and wealth than asking and pope combined? And that later this same will was translated by the one person only, the beneficiary himself--Shoghi Effendi. Is this in accordance with Abdul-Baha's super-carefulness?" (70-71).

"Abdul Baha said that if an angel from heaven comes down and tries to change the teachings of Baha'u'llah, do not believe him. Shoghi Effendi has changed them by pronouncements and actions which are in direct contradiction to Bahai teachings--above all he has changed the very character and fundamental principle of the Cause by putting a theocracy, which the founders said it was not [boldface in original], in place of the spiritual democracy which they said, over and over again, it is. The following instances show what acceptance of the alleged will has done to the blind followers of its rules."

"Mr. Horace Holley, as spokesman for Shoghi Effendi, made this statement in 1925: 'The individual conscience must be subordinated to the decisions of the elected Spiritual Assembly.'" [boldface in original]

"This statement strikes at the very foundation of the Bahai Cause, as one of its cardinal teachings is that man must have freedom of conscience. Among dozens of instances that could be given of Abdul-Baha's statements on this subject is the following: '... the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected . . . '" (73-74).

"We can see from the foregoing that Abdul-Baha emphasized the necessity of man's being able to exercise freedom of conscience, as Baha'u'llah did" (75).

"During the lifetime of Abdu'l Baha the attempts of the National Spiritual Assembly of Baha'is to organize the Bahai Religion were held in abeyance, but after he passed from this world, under the dictates of Shoghi Effendi, they swung it into an organization the like of which has not been seen since the dark ages. They tried to exercise the power over the Bahai world that Baha'u'llah said would be vested in the SUPREME TRIBUNAL of the future world governments. In order to enforce this power they excommunicated those who would not accept their pronouncements, and twice the members of the National Assembly sued at law in order to try and prevent other Bahaies from promulgating the religion which they held in common; but, fortunately, they lost both these suits. Judge Valente, reprimanding them, reminded them of the Bill of Rights, which grants freedom to every man to practice his religion unmolested. All of this the reader can learn in the ensuing pages" (76).

[Ruth White quotes Abdul-Baha]: "The worst enemies of the Cause are in the Cause and mention the Name of God. We need not fear the enemies on the outside for such can be easily dealt with. But the enemies who call themselves Friends and who persistently violate every fundamental law of Love and Unity are difficult to deal with in this Day. . . ."

"This last paragraph applies overwhelmingly to the activities of Shoghi Effendi, and the National Spiritual Assembly of Baha'is. They have violated the principles of brotherhood and unity because of their inversions of the Bahai teachings. These inversions are all the more tragic of this particular time when the world has been made receptive, through much suffering, to the great universal principles of the Bahai Religion. Two prophecies of Baha'u'llah have been so accurately fulfilled--the discovery of Atomic Power, and the embryonic Supreme Tribunal as manifested in the United Nations Organization that we would do well to consider the third--the possible destruction of our planet unless we circumvent this threatened fate by a balanced spiritual civilization" (84-85).

"This matter of freedom of conscience is the most important part of the Bahai Teachings. God has given man free-will, and no earthly priestcraft nor dictatorship must interfere with man's using that free-will in matters of faith and the inner relationship between the soul and God. This is the meaning of the spiritual democracy of which Abdul-Baha so often speaks--religion percolating through all the affairs of our daily life, and an ideal political government coming into existence as the result of the change of man's nature and belief."

"This is just the twist that the present leaders of the Bahai organization have tried to give to the Universal Message of Baha'u'llah."

"There are many other wholly un-Bahai edicts that Shoghi Effendi and the National Spiritual Assembly of Bahais have issued beside these two that follow: ". . . the individual conscience must be subordinated to the decisions of the Spiritual Assembly, ... and: '. . . individual Bahai effort without due consultation is foredoomed to failure" (87-88).

"Everyone of these edicts are inversions of the Bahai Teachings, as given to the world by the Founders of the Cause."

"In saying that recognized Bahais must not vote in any election based on a party system Shoghi Effendi and his hierarchy have set up what might be considered a government within each government in every country where there are enough of his followers. Over that government he is supreme dictator. His subjects must pay taxes to him (tithes) and he forbids his followers to vote on national and civic affairs. All his edicts no matter how unpatriotic, or how much in violation of the universal principles of the Bahai Religion, must be obeyed under threat of excommunication."

"This revival of excommunication is a horrible inversion of the Bahai teachings--the Revelation for which Baha'u'llah suffered imprisonment for twenty-five years, and Abdu'l-Baha for forty years--the Cause for which twenty thousand martyrs sacrificed their lives to establish freedom of conscience and to unite all mankind regardless of religion, race or country. The idea of excommunication is impossible in the world envisaged by Baha'u'llah" (89-90).

"Whether the alleged will of Abdul Baha is authentic or spurious, the results of the administration of Shoghi Effendi and the National Spiritual Assembly of Baha'is stand as an historical indictment against them. [Boldface in original] They no more represent the Bahai Religion than the bigots of the dark ages of Christianity.

"We had the dark ages because the bigots of that era got control of Christ's teachings and tortured all those who did not comply with their interpretation. Shoghi Effendi, and the National Spiritual Assembly of Baha'is, cannot in this day resort to physical torture to enforce their will, but they have resorted to mental torture by blackmailing with excommunication all those who do not comply with their inverted teachings" (100).

DOWNLOAD in one file the images on this page:

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/White,\_OEBR.pdf

(Bibliography at bottom)

IS THE BAHAI ORGANIZATION
THE ENEMY
OF THE
BAHAI RELIGION?

AN APPENDIX TO ABDUL BAHÁ
AND THE PROMISED AGE

RUTH WHITE
P. O. BOX 379
GRAND CENTRAL STATION
NEW YORK CITY

COPYRIGHT BY RUTH WHITE.
JANUARY, 1929.

©ClA A 6598

Printed in the United States of America by
J. J. LITTLE AND IVES COMPANY, NEW YORK

APPENDIX TO ABDUL BAHA AND THE PROMISED AGE

Seven years have elapsed since the passing of Abdul Baha and it is with mingled feelings of regret, as well as from a sense of duty, that I add this chapter to my book.

Two months after the death of Abdul Baha his sister sent the following cablegram to this country:

January 16, 1922

Haifa, Wilhelmit, N. Y.

In will, Shoughi Effendi appointed Guardian of the Cause and Head of House of Justice.

(Signed) GREATEST HOLY LEAF.

A typewritten translation of the alleged will arrived in America four weeks later and was read by Mr. Horace Holley to a gathering of Bahais.

The appointment of a successor came as a thunderbolt out of a clear sky to all the Bahais, as Abdul Baha had given no hint that he intended to appoint a successor. On the contrary, he said that after him the power of the Bahai Cause was to vest in what will be known as Houses of Justice. Among many instances that could be cited is the following, published in the official magazine of the Bahai organization. The Star of the West, November 23, 1913, p. 238:

In case of difference, Abdul Baha must be consulted. . . . After Abdul Baha whenever the Universal House of Justice is organized it will ward off differences.

Commenting on the above the editors of The Star of the West, in a footnote of the December 31, 1913, issue express in the following the belief current among the Bahais during the lifetime of Abdul Baha:

The cycle of Baha'o'llah extends for one thousand or thousands of years from 1844 A.D.; but it is unique in that the "Most Great Characteristic" of the New Covenant is the appointment of a Center, which is now in the person of Abdul Baha, and after him shall be vested in the Universal House of Justice for a period of one thousand or thousands of years.

At the time the document was read I neither accepted it nor rejected it. I felt that if it were true the results of the administration of Shoghi Effendi would be one of the strongest proofs of its authenticity. If it were not true, then time and circumstances would eventually cause the truth to become known.

This stand on my part caused me no embarrassment inasmuch as I had never belonged to the Bahai organization (Spiritual Assemblies). For from my personal contact with Abdul Baha, as well as from all of his teachings, and those of Baha'o'llah, I realized that one of their chief aims was to eradicate the clan consciousness from man, and bring him into the universal consciousness, and not as the Bahais were doing into an organization, or a box. In primitive times the clan idea, or organization, was the great achievement. For man was so lacking in the consciousness of the oneness of mankind that he had to be educated into so simple an organization as the family life. Little by little he was led to broaden his conception from family to tribe and from tribe to country. But that which was a splendid thing and very necessary at one stage in the life of an individual, or a race, becomes not only unnecessary at a later stage but harmful as well. For in exact accordance as people increase in numbers in these different boxes, or organizations, do they use the force of numbers to impose their will upon the rest of the race. So that today we witness the same old primitive warfare of tribe against tribe, only as it is now called organization, and is conducted on a larger scale, we lose sight of the fact that the principle is the same as that which governed the primitive races. And this was the martyrdom of Abdul Baha. He spoke for the maturity of the age and hoped his followers would catch a glimpse of that maturity, and not be content with the effete methods of the past.

Now while I do not mean to imply that I understand this maturity, yet I do know that only as we function on the universal plane do we catch glimpses of it. The many tests that befall us blur these glimpses, if we succumb to them. But with each test that we overcome the Truth grows clearer. One of the tests that beset me, just after I had become interested in the Bahai Cause, was an offer to travel as a paid teacher in order to promulgate the Bahai Message. But I refused this offer, because I knew that the door of further spiritual enlightenment would close unless I kept my religion inviolate from money, and love of leadership, as Abdul Baha had cautioned his followers to do.*

These were my convictions when I visited Abdul Baha at Haifa, Palestine, in 1920. Therefore, one day when he very opportunely spoke of certain conditions existing in America among the Bahais, I mentioned to him that I had never belonged to the Bahai organization (Spiritual Assemblies). His face beamed with happiness as he replied:

Good, very good. The organization that the Bahais have among themselves has nothing to do with the teachings of Baha'o'llah. The teachings of Baha'o'llah are universal and cannot be confined to a sect.

This same thought runs through all the writings of Baha'o'llah and of Abdul Baha. It is expressed in many different ways, ranging from the above, and the following unequivocal statement: "The Bahai Religion is not an organization. You can never organize the Bahai Cause," to the less obvious way of saying the same thing. For instance, Abdul Baha says that it will be impossible to create any schism in the Bahai Religion. The Bahais have interpreted this as meaning that two Bahai organizations cannot be formed when, as a matter of fact, both Baha'o'llah and Abdul Baha show that no organization can be formed. The moment a person joins the Bahai organization he is following a "particular meeting of unity" which Abdul Baha in the following says he should not do:

O friends! It is the wish of Abdul Baha that the friends may establish general unity and not a particular meeting of unity. You must have great consideration of this fact, for while during past cycles such events were, in the beginning, a means of harmony, they became in the end the cause of trouble.

* See page 208 on tests.

But to return to the subject of the alleged will of Abdul Baha. Although the document had been read at a meeting of Bahais in February, 1922, at which I was present, yet it was not until three years later, in February, 1925, that typewritten copies of the document were distributed only among "old and recognized believers" with the permission of Shoghi Effendi. I was presented with a copy.

The reason that the will had come as such a complete surprise was because Abdul Baha not only had given no hint that he intended to appoint a successor but he declared himself in unmistakable terms against such a policy. The following was spoken at a Persian meeting and was recorded by his secretary, Mirza Ahmad Sohrab, July 19, 1913. This was five or six years after the appointment of a successor was supposed to have been made:

The Blessed Perfection * has upturned the root of the tree of superstition and religious offices. In the Past the ambitious leaders of religions have been the cause of the retrogression and ignorance of a nation. In this Cause there are no religious titles, no ceremonies of ordination. One is not respected simply because he wears a peculiar dress or carries a religious title, or has inherited it from the Fathers. No! These are not the marks of distinction. On the other hand, those SANCTIFIED souls, the signs of their divine sanctity and spirituality become apparent in the hearts of others. People are unconsciously attracted to them through their pure morality, their justice and loving kindness. Everyone is drawn to them through their praiseworthy attributes, and pleasing qualities, and all the faces are illumined by the light of their virtues and integrity. In this movement there is no title to be given to anyone; no See to be inherited by any person. "The Hands of the Cause" are the Hands of Truth. Therefore Whosoever is the promoter and the servant of the Word of God he is the hand of Truth. By the "hands of God" certain definite meanings are connoted. It is not only a verbal expression. Whosoever is more humble in the Cause of God he is more confirmed, and whosoever is more evanescent, he is more favored.

And again Abdul Baha says:

"There are no officers in this Cause. I do not and have not 'Appointed' anyone to perform any special service, but I encourage everyone to engage in the service of the Kingdom. The foundation of this Cause is pure spiritual democracy and not a theocracy."

* Baha'o'llah.

From the Diary of Ahmad Sohrab.

The keynote of the teachings of Baha'o'llah and of Abdul Baha is freedom of conscience and freedom from the clan conception of life. Therefore the appointment of a successor, endowed with all the powers of a pope, to whom all must turn in obedience, means a reversal of all that they taught during their lifetimes. For instance in "A Traveller's Narrative," edited and translated from the Persian by Professor Edward G. Browne, there is a summary of Baha'o'llah's teachings on the freedom of conscience, part of which is as follows:

. . . the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of creation, and manifestation of the hidden verities of the contingent world. . . . So in the world of existence two persons unanimous in all grades (of thought) and all beliefs cannot be found. "The ways unto God are as the number of the breaths of (His) creatures," is a mysterious truth. . . .

Every line of the teachings of Baha'o'llah and of Abdul Baha breaths forth this spirit of freedom. Then what a shock to come in contact with the mutilations to which the leaders of the Bahai organization have subjected these teachings, such as the following by Mr. Horace Holley, who is the paid secretary and leader of the Spiritual Assembly:

. . . the individual conscience must be subordinated to the decisions of the Spiritual Assembly, . . .

P. 55, Bahai Year Book, 1926, Vol. I.

Could inversion of the teachings of Baha'o'llah and of Abdul Baha go further than this: To organize the religion which these founders said could not be organized—to have paid officials and teachers in the religion which the founders said must be kept free from paid officials—and finally, to cap the climax, to have one of the paid officials declare, that the individual conscience must be subordinated to the Spiritual Assembly!

In order to understand how the leaders of the Bahai organization came to see the Bahai Religion in this inverted manner, it will be necessary to show that they have confused two aspects of the teachings of Baha'o'llah and of Abdul Baha, as meaning the same thing. One aspect is the path of personal attainment which Baha'o'llah describes with great beauty in "The Seven Valleys." Abdul Baha confirms this path of personal attainment as being the only sign of real faith. That is, we can be Bahais only through deeds and not through words. To assist in promulgating the Cause, wherever there are nine believers, an assembly may be established. The members of these assemblies are counseled to correspond with the members of the other assemblies all over the world, in order to promote international good-will. But Abdul Baha shows in the following that even these assemblies are not necessary:

Regarding the Spiritual Assembly (Board of Consultation, Working Committee, House of Spirituality), this is not the House of Justice. It is a purely Spiritual Assembly, and belongs to spiritual matters, and that is, to teach the Cause of God, and diffuse the fragrance of God.

If the believers arise in the accomplishment of this work, the existence of the Spiritual Assembly will not become absolutely necessary or obligatory. The aim is to teach the Cause of God and spread the fragrance of God. In California they have no Board, but the teaching of the Cause is being done.

Instructions of Abdul Baha, November 1, to the members of the spiritual meeting.

. . . How I was pleased with the friends in California! They said: "We do not want a committee of consultation, lest we fall into the thought of leadership and superiority, and become the cause of dissension; . . . we are serving according to our capacity, and have no thought or aim except the spreading of the fragrances of God."

Diary of Mirza Mahmood, November, 1912.

The Cause of God is like unto a college. . . . The students must show the results of their study in their deportment and deeds, otherwise they have wasted their lives. Now the friends must so live and conduct themselves as to bring greater glory and results to the Religion of God. To them the Cause of God must be dynamic force, transforming the lives of men, and not a question of meetings, committees, futile discussions, unnecessary debates, and political wire-pulling.

Extract from Ahmad's Diary. Lake Tiberias, Syria, May 6, 1914

Furthermore Abdul Baha says that the ideal assembly is the attainment to the spiritual condition that the disciples of Christ experienced when they gathered together after his crucifixion.

Only as mankind succeeds in putting the principles of the first aspect into practice will the second aspect come into existence. This deals with the government of the future state. That is, when the majority of the peoples of the world become Bahais through deeds, they will naturally want to vote for the laws which Baha'o'llah and Abdul Baha have outlined for the economic readjustment of the affairs of the world. This is as follows: In each country of the world there will be established, by universal vote, what will be known as Houses of Justice. These will take the place of our senates and parliaments of the world. From the members there will be established a Universal House of Justice. One of the ordinances of the House of Justice will be the Laws of Inheritance:

. . . seven classes inherit--children, wives, fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and teachers. In the absence of one or more of these classes, the share which would belong to them goes to the "House of Justice" (Beytul-Adt) to be expended on the poor, the fatherless and widows, or on useful public works. . . .*

See The Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1889, pp. 948-949.

Another ordinance of the House of Justice will be the law of Huquq. This is similar to our present income-tax laws, and these two laws will help equalize the wealth of the world so that there will no longer be the extremes of wealth and poverty. But Abdul Baha makes it very clear that this will take place only by the vote of the majority of the peoples of the world. The people naturally will obey these Houses of Justice in the same way that we obey our governments today (or should obey). Abdul Baha says:

. . . The House of Justice will be appointed by the people. It must be obeyed because it is the Law of God expressed through the people by their own will and voice.

. . . It is the centre of true government and must be obeyed in all things. It is the Law of God embodied in the people, reflecting * Professor E. G. Browne had several Mss. of the Lawh-i-Akdas of Baha'o'llah in Persian and this is his translation and summary of one of these laws.

His Will and their need and desire; not blindly following command.

Ten Days in the Light of Acca, p. 24.

And again in "The Light of the World," pp. 102-103:

Each state, for instance New York, will have one House of Justice. The cities (of that state) will be under that House of Justice. The nations will choose directly the International House of Justice and everything will be in its hands. For instance, Syria will have a House of Justice. The people will elect it. Then this House of Justice of Syria (as a state under the Turkish Empire) will elect the House of Justice of Constantinople. Then Constantinople, London, Paris, Washington and so on will elect the International House of Justice.

All during the lifetimes of Baha'o'llah and Abdul Baha the words "Beytul-Adt," which literally mean "House of the Just," were translated as meaning just what they mean—House of Justice. But since the death of Abdul Baha these words have been mistranslated as meaning "Spiritual Assembly." That is by substituting the words "Spiritual Assembly" for "House of Justice" it makes the writings of Baha'o'llah and of Abdul Baha read as if they meant that the Spiritual Assemblies should be obeyed, instead of which they mean that we should obey the future state when it is called "House of Justice," exactly as we are commanded to obey our governments today. Also in the alleged will the tax, which will be one of the ordinances of the future government, and which is to be paid to the House of Justice, is to be paid to Shoghi Effendi.

These inversions and others have taken place so gradually that many of the Bahais are unconscious of the extent of these inversions. It is therefore a constant source of wonder, that, for some unaccountable reason to themselves, intelligent people shy off when they try to persuade them to come into their organization, or box. They have, therefore, resorted to indirect methods of propaganda, and they have organized "World Unity Conferences" and a magazine called World Unity and a World Unity Foundation. Shoghi Effendi wrote to the Assemblies in 1926 as follows:

In connection with the World Unity Conferences, . . . as to the policy that should be adopted with regard to these conferences and other Bahai activities in general, . . . the National Spiritual Assemblies should . . . resort to the twofold method of directly and indirectly winning the enlightened public to the unqualified acceptance of the Bahai Faith. The one method would assume an open, decisive and challenging tone. The other, . . . would be progressive and cautious. . . .

Bahai Administration by Shoghi Effendi, pp. 114-115.

The World Unity Conferences are held in all the large cities, but no mention is made from the platform that it is a Bahai activity. The Bahais flock to these meetings to do what they call "follow-up work" among those who evidence any interest. Then the process begins of trying to achieve the impossible. That is, these teachers who do "follow-up work" try to interest those who have just heard universal principles propounded from the platform, to accept the inverted conception of these principles, and join their organization and become clan conscious. Mr. Horace Holley, is one of the leaders of the Bahai organization, and yet as one of the leaders of World Unity Conferences, and as managing editor of World Unity Magazine he represents himself as a modernist. And for promulgating these irreconcilable viewpoints he receives a salary from both sides of the organization.

The Bahais do not call their activities "organization" because they know that the founders of the Bahai Religion said it could not be organized. Therefore, Shoghi Effendi and the Bahais have tried to side-step this issue by calling their activities "Bahai Administration." This despite the fact that since the death of Abdul Baha they have incorporated the Bahai Religion, and have even made it an article of faith that unless one belongs to their corporation, and subordinates one's conscience to it one is not to be considered a Bahai. Some of the activities of their corporation are: collecting funds to build the Bahai Temple—financing their paid officials, and their Green Acre Summer School—delivering lectures at their headquarters 119 West 57th Street, and in other large cities—publishing The Bahai Magazine, as well as their indirect activities flourishing under World Unity Conferences.

In December, 1925, the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of the United States and Canada issued a pamphlet, "A Plan of Unified Action to Spread the Bahai Cause." The object of this plan was to make a drive to raise $400,000, as the following quotations show:

The objects of the plan are, in brief, to unify the efforts and enlarge the numbers of the Cause in North America, penetrate the consciousness of the public with the spirit of Baha'o'llah, and, by the end of three years at most, accumulate, in response to the request of Shoghi Effendi, a fund of $400,000 to construct the first unit of the superstructure of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar * at Wilmette, Illinois.

. . . It is the fixed and unalterable intention of the National Spiritual Assembly to so administer the affairs of the Cause, and so assist the friends, that the amount specified by the Guardian (Shoghi Effendi)—$400,000—can be gathered together by December 31, 1928. . . .

To carry this plan steadily forward to a successful conclusion means that contributions must average nine dollars per month from every confirmed American Baha'i beginning January, 1926, and continued uninterruptedly until December, 1928.

At the end of the three-year period the condition of the Fund will be laid before the Guardian of the Cause. . . .

One of the pamphlets and a letter soliciting contributions to this fund, were mailed to me. Without remembering at the time that both Baha'o'llah and Abdul Baha had forbidden soliciting, or begging in any form, I made several contributions. Shortly after this I realized that such policies, and others that the leaders of the Bahai organization were advocating, were contrary to the principles of the Bahai Religion, one of which was that it should be kept inviolate from money and other worldly considerations, such as paid officials, and paid teachers. And it was because I saw that under the administration of Shoghi Effendi the Bahai teachings had not only become more and more inverted, but more and more commercialized that I at last demanded of the National Spiritual Assembly that they send for photographic copies of the alleged will, and have this document examined by the best handwriting expert. I based my demand on the fact that the Bahai organization had asked me to subscribe to this fund, and that I had donated to it, without knowledge at the time that the will had not been legally authenticated. In this demand that I made on December 3, 1927, to the nine following members of the Spiritual Assembly: Mr. Horace Holley, Mr. Roy * Bahai Temple.

C. Wilhelm, Mr. Alfred Lunt, Mr. Allen McDaniel, Mr. Carl Scheffler, Mr. Louis Gregory, Mrs. Amelia Collins, Mrs. May Maxwell, and Mrs. Florence Morton, I also called their attention to the many warnings Abdul Baha had given the Bahais not to accept Tablets purporting to be his which gave authority to any person, such as in the following:

. . . be most careful and attentive that it is in my writing and my signature, that they may not be counterfeits.

Four weeks later, on December 31, I received a reply from Mr. Holley, part of which is as follows:

Cable Address
Bahai, New York.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHÁ'IS OF THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA

Office of the Secretary
129 EAST TENTH STREET
NEW YORK CITY

December 31, 1927.

My Dear Mrs. White:

Although you have indicated several points on which you desire explanation or comment, we feel that your letter raises only one fundamental question, namely, the validity of the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Baha. Since this Will appoints a Guardian to administer the administrative affairs of the Cause, and since the Guardian has approved the matters you question, it of course follows that those who really desire to conform to the wishes and instructions of 'Abdu'l-Baha will accept His instructions concerning administrative affairs as soon as they know what these instructions are.

We can, therefore, give you full assurance that the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Baha, a copy of which was sent you over two years ago, is a document written by Him in His own hand, the validity of which has been established by a number of well-known Baha'is from different countries who inspected the original at Haifa.

Apart from this entirely convincing proof, it is a matter of interesting historical record that, when the custody of one of the Bahai'í tombs at Haifa was questioned after the departure of 'Abdu'l-Baha the final decision lay in the hands of the representative of the British Government administering Palestine under the mandate of the League of Nations, and after full investigation he restored the keys of the Tomb to the Guardian appointed in the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

As no photographic copies of this document exist in this country, we are unable to meet your request for such a copy. In view of the fact that the world-wide Baha'i community naturally most concerned with establishing the completeness and accuracy of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's final instruction to His followers, has been satisfied with the verbal accuracy of His Will and Testament; and in view also of the fact that the highest civil authorities of Palestine have also accepted the Guardian as the administrative head of the Baha'i Cause, we know that you may rest assured that obedience to 'Abdu'l-Bahá at this time means obedience to the Guardian appointed by Him in all matters pertaining to the Baha'i Cause."

(Signed) HORACE HOLLEY, Secretary.

This letter was wholly unsatisfactory because Mr. Holley and the National Spiritual Assembly had evaded answering the question at issue, which was that they had no legal, or spiritual, right to represent the Bahais, inasmuch as they based their authority on an unauthenticated will in disobedience to the commands of the maker of the alleged will. Furthermore, the "representative of the British Government" had not had the will authenticated legally as no direct property was involved and no one had contested it to the point of insisting upon this being done.

As Mr. Mountford Mills was one of the "well known Baha'is" who had gone to Palestine shortly after the passing of Abdul Baha, I wrote to him asking him to give me what information he could concerning the alleged will. He answered as follows:

THE HARVARD CLUB

27 WEST 44th ST.
NEW YORK CITY

January 19th, 1928.

Dear Mrs. White,

I have your letter of yesterday and have also received the copies of your earlier letters to the National Spiritual Assembly and to Mr. Holley, all bearing upon the question whether the Will accepted by the National Spiritual Assembly as Abdu'l Baha's Last Testament is really so. Needless to say, I am glad to give you any information I can relating to the matter.

Answering more specifically the questions in your letter to me, I have seen the Will.

It is written entirely in the Master's own hand.

It is signed by him.

Its parts written before the Master's seal was stolen from him in this country are sealed.

It is not dated, but its approximate date appears from its contents.

It has not been probated in the sense that we use the word, as there is no provision under the laws of Islam for such a proceeding. It has, however, been officially recognized by the British Government, the Mandatory Power now governing Palestine.

I hope these answers will satisfy the doubts that have arisen in your mind concerning the authenticity of the Will. Please let me know. I have enjoyed exceptional opportunities to learn the facts about it and do not hesitate to assure you that the document of which copies have been circulated among the Bahais in this country is the Last Will and Testament of Abdu'l Baha and embodies his final and most sacred message to his followers.

Sincerely Yours,

(Signed) MOUNTFORD MILLS.

Then upon further questioning he wrote again as follows:

THE HARVARD CLUB

27 WEST 44th ST.

January 22nd, 1928.

Dear Mrs. White,

I have your letter of yesterday.

As I wrote in my last letter, the formal standards in executing wills here required by our laws cannot be applied to the Will of Abdu'l Baha. Viewing it through the eye of our custom so far as possible, however, we should consider its three parts as forming his main Will to which two codicils had been added, all three parts being his Last Will and Testament. This is the view I took when writing you. It also seems beyond question that this was the Master's own intention. The three parts were filed together in one place by him, with the evident intent that they should be read together as one document.

Answering your specific questions,

All three sections are signed by Abdu'l Baha.

The first two sections are sealed.

All three sections are in the handwriting of Abdu'l Baha.

The Master's seal was stolen during his visit to this country in 1912.

The first two sections were thus obviously written before 1912, the last section after his return to Palestine in 1913. A closer approximation to the exact dates can be drawn from events referred to in the separate sections, but I have not this data with me here. As explained above, following our occidental terminology, there is but one Will with two codicils, the three parts having been written at different dates.

The commands of Abdu'l Baha which you quote concerning the identification of letters alleged to have been written by him were given out with special reference to Orientals who might come to this country and mingle with the Friends with the purpose of creating differences among them, and it has always been supposed that the commands were given with particular reference to Dr. —, who, as you know, did come here shortly afterwards. That these instructions could not have been intended to apply in full detail to all of the Master's writings is clearly shown by the innumerable Tablets sent to us that were almost never written in his own hand beyond the signature. However, I agree with you entirely that he would wish even more strongly that anyone feeling that he had reasonable grounds to doubt the authenticity of so gravely important a document as his Will should take every reasonable precaution to be sure.

Sincerely,

(Signed) MOUNTFORD MILLS.

In response to other letters that I wrote to the National Spiritual Assembly, reiterating my demand that they send for photographs of the alleged will, and have it examined by handwriting experts, I received a reply from Mr. Holley, asking me to meet the members of the Spiritual Assembly. I accepted this invitation and met them on February 25, 1928. The object of the meeting on their part was, apparently, to try to make me believe that I should accept this document on faith, or on verbal and circumstantial evidence. I, on my part, tried to make them realize that to accept it in this manner was disobedience to the commands of Abdul Baha such as the following which, though it sounds severe, yet was necessary inasmuch as Mohammed Ali and his colleagues were continually trying to undermine the teachings of Abdul Baha:

Any Persian, . . . (who comes to America) . . . even if it is Shoghi Effendi, or Rouhi Effendi (the two grandsons of Abdul Baha) the friends must demand of him before anything else, his credential letter, written in my handwriting, or signed with my signature.

(Signed) ABDUL BAHÁ ABBAS.

From Star of the West, October 16, 1915.

They contended, just as Mr. Mills had in his letter to me, that this referred to a certain relative of Abdul Baha's. I maintained that it referred to anyone, and that it made no difference whether a person brought a letter or document, or sent one, purporting to be Abdul Baha's which gave him authority, this command applied equally to either case, and that it applied overwhelmingly in the case of his alleged will. For this gave Shoghi Effendi more potential authority than a king or a pope. At this meeting I learned that the photographs of the alleged will, which I had requested three months prior to this meeting, had not even been sent for.

The next day, before the meeting adjourned, I sent the members of the Spiritual Assembly, a letter by special delivery demanding that they cable to Mr. Allen McDaniel, who was then in Haifa, and request him to bring back the photographs when he returned. In response to this letter Mr. Holley wrote that the photographs had been sent for.

But on April 25, as I had received no assurance to numerous inquiries I had made that the photographs had even been started on the way, and hearing that photographs of this document existed in London, I sailed for England for the twofold purpose of securing this document, and also to observe the effects of the administration of the Bahai Cause under Shoghi Effendi. Due to a very fortunate combination of circumstances that had happened several years earlier, I succeeded in obtaining the photographs of the alleged will.

In England, as well as in Germany, I found that the administration of Shoghi Effendi had brought chaos to the Bahai Cause. Lady Blomfield, whom I met on several occasions, said that there was practically no longer a Bahai Cause in England, and she had come to the conclusion that the Bahai Cause cannot be organized. She had asked Abdul Baha in 1911 if he approved of the Houses of Spirituality (the organized groups of Bahais also called Spiritual Assemblies). He replied as follows:

If you had lived in the time of His Holiness the Christ which would you have chosen to be—one of his disciples, or a member of the Council of Trent?

She replied:

Without question I would have chosen to be one of His disciples. But if by my presence I could have leavened and helped the Council of Trent, then I would have chosen to be one of them.

Lady Blomfield now perceives that the latter choice would have been a mistake, for she tried to leaven the Bahai organization and found it an impossible task.

I returned to America on May 29 with the much coveted document. On that very day Mr. Holley also wrote to me that the photographs of the will were at his office, and invited me to inspect them, which, needless to say, I was glad to do. He informed me that neither he nor the National Spiritual Assembly intended to have the will examined by experts, as they were perfectly certain that it was valid. With this final refusal of the Spiritual Assembly to comply with the wishes of Abdul Baha, I knew that his prophecy had indeed come true. He said that when the final test came to America there might not be two Bahais left. This, then, had been the great test—they had tried to build on a foundation of disobedience; they had violated the Covenant, which could result in one thing and one thing only—disaster to themselves individual and disaster to their organization.

I had also taken this matter up with Mrs. Mary Handford Ford, who is the leader of the other faction in the Bahai organization. For there are two decided factions in the Bahai organization. One faction is represented by the leaders of the National Spiritual Assembly, the chief of which is Mr. Holley. It is the sectarian, dogmatic group which by garbling, or at any rate acquiescing to the garbling, of the texts of Baha'o'llah and of Abdul Baha, has led the public to believe that the obedience which Baha'o'llah and Abdul Baha said mankind must give to the future government, means obedience to the leaders of the Bahai organization. The other faction, of which Mrs. Ford is the leader, does not go in for such extreme organization. Therefore, I had more hope that she and her group would see that to accept the appointment of Shoghi Effendi, based on an unauthenticated will, was spiritually and legally wrong and my disappointment was keen when she failed to do so.

After I had been to Mr. Holley's office and examined the photographs of the alleged will, I wrote to him and the Spiritual Assembly asking them if they would permit me to use their photographs as their copies were clearer than those I possessed. I also asked them if they would secure for me photographs of several Tablets known to be in the handwriting of Abdul Baha. Nearly six weeks later, on June 13, I received a letter from Mr. Holley with the photographs, but no mention of my request regarding the Tablets.

My next step was to try to secure the services of the greatest handwriting expert in the land, and I finally selected one who is conceded to be so. Due to the fact that he was working on a book, shortly to be published, he could not undertake the work before January, if then; but he gave me some valuable advice, that the document should be examined from three different angles: First, from the spiritual point of view. Does the alleged will agree with the teachings, and the intent, that the maker held during his lifetime, or does it contradict them? Secondly, from the literary point of view. Is it written in the style of Abdul Baha; Thirdly, from the scientific point of view—submit it to the scrutiny of the best handwriting experts.

I decided to undertake the examination of it from the spiritual point of view. My two main reasons for believing it to be invalid are, because it contradicts the teachings of Baha'o'llah and of Abdul Baha, and also because, under the administration of Shoghi Effendi, the Bahai teachings have become completely inverted and commercialized. $9,806.00 was sent to Shoghi Effendi in ten weeks, from November 30, 1925 to February 8, 1926.

Every incident that has happened in connection with this affair convinces me that the real enemy of the Bahai Religion is the Bahai organization. It was not mere chance that the Bahai organization was founded by Dr. I. G. Kheiralla and Mirza Assad'ullah,* the two arch enemies of Abdul Baha, and it has continued ever since as the enemy of the Bahai Religion. Not of course as the open or avowed enemy, because such an enemy is never effective; but the enemy, nevertheless, which, while purporting to represent Baha'o'llah and Abdul Baha in words, are their bitterest enemy in policies. For although the Bahais have long since repudiated

* Assad'ullah organized the first Spiritual Assembly, which was called The House of Spirituality, at Chicago in 1901.

Dr. Kheiralla and Mirza Assad'ullah personally (they had to as both of these men, shortly after they had organized assemblies, became the open enemy of Abdul Baha, and allied themselves with Mohammed Ali) yet they never repudiated the inverted interpretation that these two men gave to the Bahai Religion. This has prevailed ever since.

I do not mean to imply that the leaders of the Bahai organization are conscious enemies of the Bahai Religion, any more than the bigots of the dark ages were the conscious enemies of Christianity. For like those same bigots, these modern-day bigots shout the loudest that they are the only true representatives of the religion they claim to represent. It was the policies of the bigots of the dark ages that were the enemies of Christianity, exactly as the policies of the Bahai organization are the enemies of the Bahai Religion today. In both instances the underlying idea of their respective organizations were the same—that the individual conscience must be subordinated to the leaders of their organization, and in both cases they gave to the world the inverted idea of the religion they claimed to represent; for Christianity taught the freedom of conscience, just as the Bahai Religion reiterates it today.

I now believe that it would make little difference to the leaders of the Bahai organization whether the will proved to be valid or invalid, for they would continue to follow their present policies just the same. Except that in case it proved to be invalid they would merely repudiate Shoghi Effendi personally, just as they had repudiated Dr. Kheiralla and Mirza Assad'ullah, while still retaining their policies. It also occurred to me that perhaps the most effective means of precipitating matters that will lead to the legal examination of the alleged will was to send the following letter to the High Commissioner of Jerusalem:

To His Excellency
The High Commissioner of Palestine,
Jerusalem, Palestine.

Your Excellency:

I wish to consult you about a matter of international importance, which is as follows:

Sir Abdul Baha Abbas of Haifa, Palestine, and his illustrious Father, Baha'o'llah, the founders of the Bahai Religion, have adherents in all the great countries of the world. Eight weeks after the death of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, in November, 1921, his sister sent cablegrams to the Bahais of the world announcing that Sir Abdul Baha Abbas had left a will in which he appointed Shoghi Effendi (his oldest grandson) his successor. The powers granted to Shoghi Effendi in this alleged will, endows him with as much potential power as a king or a pope. For a tax is to be paid to him by all the Bahais of the world, and this as well as other things in the alleged will, is contrary to everything that Sir Abdul Baha Abbas taught during his lifetime.

In December, 1925, the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of the United States and Canada distributed pamphlets, the object of which was to collect funds, as the following extract will show:

The objects of the plan are, in brief, to unify the efforts and enlarge the numbers of the Cause in North America, penetrate the consciousness of the public with the spirit of Baha'ollah, and, by the end of three years at most, accumulate, in response to the request of Shoghi Effendi, a fund of $400,000 to construct the first unit of the superstructure of the Mashriqu'l-Adhka * at Wilmette, Illinois.

I subscribed to this fund, as the enclosed photostats of the checks will show, without knowledge at the time that this document had not been legally examined by handwriting experts. I understand that no one contested it to the extent of insisting upon this being done. It is very significant that Mohammed Ali, the half brother of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, did not insist upon this being done, for the following reasons:

When Baha'ollah died, in 1892, he left a will appointing Sir Abdul Baha Abbas his successor. This infuriated Mohammed Ali to such an extent that he interpolated an epistle of Baha'ollah's, in order to nullify the influence of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, and claim the succession for himself. This interpolation was made public by Badi'ullah, in a pamphlet called "An Epistle to the Bahai World," in which he confessed that he had witnessed Mohammed Ali's interpolation. After this public confession the influence of Mohammed Ali was broken. But in all the years that have intervened since 1892, Mohammed Ali has been secretly working to gain control of the Bahai Religion. The alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas is a recital of the plotting of Mohammed Ali, in order that the Bahais would not follow Mohammed Ali after the death of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas. Therefore, Mohammed Ali knowing that he could not be the successor himself may have, in collusion with other members of the family of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, interpolated into this authentic document the appointment of Shoghi Effendi. The motive for this is very obvious, for the appointment of a successor of any member of the family of Sir

* Bahai Temple.

Abdul Baha Abbas endowed them with as much potential power as the family of a king or of a pope. For if there had been no appointment, the family of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas would have been penniless. The thing that gives credence to these suppositions is the fact that the alleged will contradicts the teachings of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, inasmuch as the appointment of a continual line of successors, to whom a tax must be paid, is contrary to everything that he taught during his lifetime.

May I ask you (if it comes under your jurisdiction) to have the alleged will examined by handwriting experts, and with especial care the parts relating to the appointment of Shoghi Effendi? If it does not come under your jurisdiction then will you please delegate it to the proper official;

Mr. Mountford Mills, a Bahai who went to Haifa to inspect the alleged will shortly after the death of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, wrote to me as follows, in answer to questions I asked concerning it:

It has, however, been officially recognized by the British Government, the Mandatory Power now governing Palestine.

May I ask you also, as a special favor, if you will give me the report dealing with this recognition by the British Government. The enclosed check is for this report. I shall be glad to send you another check for any other necessary expenses.

This request is made in the interest of universal peace, which Baha'o'llah and Sir Abdul Baha Abbas worked so hard to establish, and because I believe their work is being nullified under the powers granted in the alleged will.

I shall be deeply grateful if you will look into these matters.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) RUTH WHITE.

This letter has been dispatched. In a later edition of this book I shall give the details of this affair as they unfold. It is with much regret that due to the fact that the leaders of the Bahai organization refused to do their duty, legally and spiritually, that the unpleasant task devolved upon me of doing it for them. Also in the doing of it their policies, and actions, became so clear to me that I felt this history should be published, inasmuch as it is a problem that affects the present as well as the future welfare of humanity. This chapter is a preliminary effort to rescue from the chaos of the Bahai organization the universal religion that Baha'o'llah and Abdul Baha gave to the world.

Bibliography

Ruth White. Abdul Baha and the Promised Age. xv, 224. New York: Ruth White (Also New York: J. J. Little and Ives), 1927.

Ruth White. The Bahai Religion and Its Enemy, the Bahai Organization. 233. Rutland, Vt.: The Tuttle Co., 1929.

Ruth White. Is the Bahai Organization the Enemy of the Bahai Religion?: An Appendix to Abdul Baha and the Promised Age. 22. New York: White, 1929. DOWNLOAD in one file the images on this page:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteOEBR.pdf>

Ruth White. Abdul Baha's Alleged Will is Fraudulent: An Appendix to The Bahai Religion and Its Enemy, the Bahai Organization. 21. Rutland, Vt.: The Tuttle Co., 1930.

Ruth White. Correspondence Between the High Commissioner of Palestine and Ruth White, Concerning the Alleged Will and Testament of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas. 11. Los Angeles, Calif.: White, 1932. (See Ruth White Collection, Library of Congress, 1930)

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/RWhiteLibC.htm>

Ruth White. Bahai Leads Out of the Labyrinth. 259. New York: Universal Publishing Co., 1944. (pages 257, 258, 259 restored)

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteBLOL.pdf>

Ruth White. Abdul Baha's Questioned Will and Testament. 129. Beverly Hills: White, 1946. (Pages 18,20, 32, 50 restored.)

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteABQWT.pdf>

H-Bahai:

Ruth White. Abdul Baha's Questioned Will and Testament. Beverly Hills: Ruth White, 1946. (Pages 18,20, 32, 50 missing from the H-Bahai version.) Notice H-Bahai went so far as to claim page QWT50 was blank in order to conceal Ruth White's comments.

-----. Bahai Leads Out of the Labyrinth. New York: Universal Publishing Company, 1944. (pages 257, 258, 259 missing from H-Baha version.)

-----. Is the Bahai Organization the Enemy of the Bahai Religion? An appendix to Abdul Baha and the Promised Age. New York: J.J. Little and Ives Co., January 1929.

COMPARE:

Excerpts from Mirza Ahmad Sohrab's Broken Silence: The Story of Today's Struggle for Religious Freedom. New York: Universal Publishing, 1942.

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/SohrabEx.htm>

Also see US District Court of Northern Illinois rules against Haifan Baha'is - April 23, 2008

Amici curiae, Reform Bahai Faith

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USDistrictCourt07.htm>

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

The books of Ruth White and Mirza Ahmad Sohrab are available on this website.

Scholarship worthy of the name on the Bahai Cause cannot be done without confronting the history to which they testify.

Ruth White Collection, Library of Congress, 1930

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/RWhiteLibC.htm>

Ruth White, Excerpts, Bibliography

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Ruth%20White.htm>

Dr. C. (Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress

Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha. 1930.

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CAMitchell\_Report.htm

Download All Documents Deposited by Ruth White at the Library of Congress in one PDF:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteLCDocs.pdf>

Together with Dr. Mitchell's Report available at the link above, these documents constitute the entire collection that Ruth White deposited with the Library of Congress in 1930. Bibliography of Ruth White's books at the bottom of this page.

LC Control No.: mm 81000871

Type of Material: Archival Manuscript Material (Collection)

Personal Name: ?Abdul-Baha', 1844-1921.

Main Title: Collection regarding the will of ?Abdul-Baha', 1930-1932.

Description: 9 items.

Biographical/Historical Data:

Religious leader.

Summary: Correspondence and reports by Ainsworth C. Mitchell and Ruth White concerning the authenticity of a copy of the will of ?Abdul-Baha'. Correspondents include the assistant of Effendi Shoghi, officials of the government of Palestine, and Ruth White.

Notes: MSS871

Forms part of: Miscellaneous Manuscripts collection.

Acquisition Source:

Gift, Ruth White, 1930-1932.

Additional Formats:

Positive photocopies and handwritten and type written transcripts.

Subjects: ?Abd ul-Baha' ibn Baha' Ulla'h, 1844-1921.

Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-

Shoghi, Effendi--Correspondence.

White, Ruth.

White, Ruth--Correspondence.

Palestine. Chief Secretary's Office--Correspondence.

Bahai Faith.

Religious leaders. ictoamc

Local Shelving No.:

MMC

Repository: Library of Congress Manuscript Division Washington, D.C.

CALL NUMBER: MMC

-- Request in: Manuscript Reading Room (Madison, LM101)

=====

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS ONLINE CATALOG

Library of Congress

101 Independence Ave., SE

SO-25208

2/9/2007

Contact

Ship To

FREDERICK GLAYSHER

| Account   |                                                                                                                               | Terms       | Due Date  | Account Rep                  |      | Schedule Date      |                        |
|-----------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|-----------|------------------------------|------|--------------------|------------------------|
| 708288    |                                                                                                                               | CREDIT CARD | 2/9/2007  | Denise King                  |      | 2/9/2007           |                        |
| Quotation |                                                                                                                               | PO #        | Reference | Ship VIA                     |      | Page               | Printed                |
| SQ-21289  |                                                                                                                               |             |           | FedEx 2 Day Freight          |      | 1                  | 2/23/20072:35:34PM |
| L Item    | Description                                                                                                                   | Order       | Ship      | Price                        | UM   | Discount           | Amount                 |
| 14001     | Photocopy, research & process fee                                                                                             | 1           |           | $14.00                      | item |                    | $14.00                |
| 2         | Papers of Abdu'l-Baha, 00871                                                                                                  |             |           |                              |      |                    |                        |
| 3         | Manuscript Division                                                                                                           |             |           |                              |      |                    |                        |
|           | Miscellaneous Manuscripts Colletion                                                                                           |             |           |                              |      |                    |                        |
|           | Copy entire contents of collection; alsocopy and certify C. Ainsworth Mitchell'scomplete report on will of Abdul-Baha |             |           |                              |      |                    |                        |
| 4         |                                                                                                                               | 30          |           | $0.50                       | exp  |                    | $15.00                |
| 54033     | Photocopy-B&W per exposure.                                                                                                   |             |           |                              |      |                    |                        |
| 6         |                                                                                                                               | 1           |           | $44.00                      | pag  |                    | $44.00                |
| 78020     | Certification Fee-Copy                                                                                                        |             |           |                              |      |                    |                        |
| 8         |                                                                                                                               | 1           |           | $12.00                      | EA   |                    | $12.00                |
| 98320     | S&H US up to 40.00                                                                                                            |             |           |                              |      |                    |                        |
|           |                                                                                                                               |             |           | Tax Details                  |      | Taxable            |                        |
|           |                                                                                                                               |             |           | EXEMPT $0.000               |      | $0.00             |                        |
|           |                                                                                                                               |             |           | Payment Details              |      |                    |                        |
|           |                                                                                                                               |             |           | 2/23/2007 V 24U4BIV4 $71.00 |      | Total Tax $0.00   |                        |
|           |                                                                                                                               |             |           | 2/9/2007 V 24U3ST3F $14.00  |      | Exempt $85.00     |                        |
|           |                                                                                                                               |             |           |                              |      | Total $85.00      |                        |
|           |                                                                                                                               |             |           |                              |      | Paid $85.00       |                        |
|           |                                                                                                                               |             |           |                              |      | Balance $0.00     |                        |
|           |                                                                                                                               |             |           |                              |      | Dep. Avail $85.00 |                        |

MISCELLANEOUS MANUSCRIPTS COLLECTION

'Abdu'l-Bahá, 1844-1921

Ac 3959
and add 1

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
MANUSCRIPT DIVISION
MISCELLANEOUS MANUSCRIPTS COLLECTION DATA SHEET

in part photo (pos) see trans (hand)
" (type)

Gift, Mrs. H. Lawrence White, 1930+1932

MAIN ENTRY WITH BIRTH & DEATH DATES

ITEMS

|       |   |    |   |                                                              |            |   |
|-------|---|----|---|--------------------------------------------------------------|------------|---|
| 00871 | A | 01 | L | ABDUL BAHÁ 9-11-81ABD-UL-BAHÁ ISEN BAHÁ ULLÁH; 1844-1921 | Collection | 9 |
|-------|---|----|---|--------------------------------------------------------------|------------|---|

X ref 85464
MR-1 8-31-81
in part 8-31-81
cancelled 9-11-81

|   |       |     |
|---|-------|-----|
| C | 0215A | MMC |
|---|-------|-----|

RELIGIOUS LEADER

EFFENDI, ABBÁS See Abdul Bahá
ABBÁS EFFENDI
BAHÁ, ABDUL

INDEX ENTRIES:

MITCHELL, C. AINSWORTH 1930 JE 3 Report on the Writing shown on the photographs of the alleged widow Abdul Bahá photocopy 4 PGS.
WILL

WHITE, Ruth (Mrs. H. Lawrence White) 1930 JE 2 re Mitchell report Transmitted note excerpt; hand trans ALS 1 PG

PALESTINE, GOVERNMENT of 1930 No 27-1931 JE 10 to Ruth White 4 Ltrs. photos
3 4 PGS

RABBANÍ, H. 1931 JL 10 TO E. E. KUBE photocopy
SHOGHI EFFENDI note 4 PGS

AFKAN, Rumi 1931 De 1 to Mrs. CARROLL
Shoghi note 4 PGS
Sweet photocopy

MR-1 12-31-81 cancelled 9-11-81

No one could possibly write a line such as that of the Master so as to be able to make the forgery. The spirit of the Master runs through every word of it & clearly shows that its author was inspired by God.

In closing may I assure you of Shoghi Effendi's loving greetings &
best wishes.

Yours ever sincerely,

Ruh-i-ffuan

With the assurance of my loving prayers for you at the Holy Shrine, your true brother,
Shoghi

EX 2912 244 17

Persian Colony,
Haifa, Palestine
1-12-1931

Dear Mrs. Smith:

Shoghi Effendi wishes me to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated Nov. 5th 1931. Shoghi Effendi does not attribute much importance to those who deny the authenticity of the Will because their attitude is not due to a desire to seek the truth, but merely oppose & bring doubts to others. From the very start his relegation shall last to the spirit of the Master who is always vigilant to protect his Cause against the inroads of its enemies. And thanks

• the governor in the office of the latter. The expert compared the original Will with the handwriting of the Master which Mrs. White had sent him as authentic samples. He said that they are both written by the same person & that the person who had decided otherwise does not know what he is speaking about. The expert was an Englishman who knew nothing of the Báb or the Bábí's & was absolutely impartial. I think the High Commissioner sent to Mrs. White the result of his findings but she preferred to keep quiet about it.

The whole trouble is that Mrs. White & her sympathisers are animated with the wrong spirit, a spirit of hatred rather than impartial seeking.

God the Master has helped him & made their opposition a cause of success for his Faith, rather than a danger to it.

About five or six months ago Mrs. White - who is at the head of ~~such~~ this movement to set the Master's Will aside - wrote the High Commissioner in Palestine on the subject & asked him to find about the authenticity of the document. The High Commissioner wrote to the governor of Haifa & sent the government expert to verify the hand-writing. Shoghi Effendi was written on the subject & asked to send the Will to the government. He sent me with the will & the expert studied it before me.

to either the Will or the distribution of the Guardianship, but to the personnel of the National Assembly & the manner it is functioning.

The future will surely reveal not only the truth but also will testify in a manner that none can question the wisdom of the verdicts embodied in so precious & momentous a document.

With the assurance of Shoghi Effendi's prayers for your spiritual advancement & the removal of every doubt that may still perplex your mind.

Yours Sincerely,

H. Rabban

read & approved

Shoghi

AC 3959 add 1

(To Mr E. E. Khazgi)

July 10th, 1931

Dear Baba's Brother,

I am directed by Shoghi Effendi to inform you of the receipt of your letter dated June 12th, 1931.

Your whole letter centers around the authenticity of 'Abdu'l-Baha's Will, a thing which no one in the Orient among the believers & the enemies of the Cause has thought to challenge.

Shoghi Effendi has felt it below his dignity to subject so sacred a document to a scientific expert examination so long as no serious doubt has been entertained by any considerable number of believers throughout the world.

Shoghi Effendi<sup>3</sup> never felt the need, nor does he feel it at present, in spite of your letter, to expatiate upon such matters. The very progress of the Cause, the extension of the Administration, will in themselves constitute the surest evidences of the authenticity of the Will as well as of the soundness of all its provisions.

He wishes you, therefore, not to indulge in premature & party considerations which can bring in their wake nothing but disillusionment & regret.

Even in Germany where a certain number of believers have fallen the dupe to Mr. White's foolish assertions, a few among them have expressed themselves as having been misled in this matter. They have plainly stated that their objections have not been directed

It might<sup>2</sup> interest you to know, however, that the Will in its entirety has been closely examined by experts appointed by the Palestine government authorities. Not even the slightest objection or the faintest doubt has been expressed concerning its authenticity by them.

'Abdul-Bab' has never stated that the House of Justice would be the only body that would administer the affairs of the Cause after Him. In fact He has in a Tablet revealed to Persian believers who had questioned Him about this point stated plainly that this was "a hidden secret concealed within the shell of the Cause" & that its significance would surely be revealed in the future.

Rec. July 30th '31
C.E.K.

Mr. E. E. Kluge

4728 Virginia Ave

CAF 3959 24 1J

Tel. Add. "CHIEFSEC, JERUSALEM"

Any reply should be addressed to
THE CHIEF SECRETARY,
GOVERNMENT OFFICES,
JERUSALEM.

and should quote

No. 1232/29

SECRETARIAT,
GOVERNMENT OFFICES,
JERUSALEM.

25th
November, 1930.

Madam,

I am directed to refer to your letter of the 7th October regarding the will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas and to ask that I may be furnished with the document <sup>or a photograph of it,</sup> purporting to be the will, which you caused to be examined by Dr.C.Ainsworth Mitchell.

Steps will then be taken, if possible, to compare that with the original will which is in Palestine.

I am,
Madam,
Your obedient servant,

CHIEF SECRETARY.

Mrs. H. Lawrence White,
Butler Hall,
88 Morningside Drive,
New York City,
U.S.A.

FK 3939 add U

Tel. Add. "CHIEFSEC, JERUSALEM"

Any reply should be addressed to
THE CHIEF SECRETARY,
GOVERNMENT OFFICES,
JERUSALEM.

and should quote

No. 1232/29.

SECRETARIAT,
GOVERNMENT OFFICES,
JERUSALEM.

72 January, 1931.

Madam,

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 12th December, enclosing photographs of the alleged will of the late Sir Abdul Baha Abbas.

2. I have also to thank you for the copy of your book "The Bahai Religion , and its enemy the Bahai 'rganisation" which accompanied it.

3. I shall not fail to inform you of the result of the comparison of the alleged will with the original document.

I am, Madam,

Your obedient servant,

CHIEF SECRETARY.

Mrs. H. Lawrence White,
88 Morningside Drive,
New York City.

[AC3959 261]

Government of Palestine

*In case of reply
please quote the date of this letter
and the following*

No. Y/58/31.

Chief Secretary's Office,

Jerusalem,

Palestine.

Registered

10 D
July, 1931.

Madam,

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 5th June, on the subject of the will of the late Sir Abdel Baha Abbas, and to say that the Government do not feel disposed to take any further administrative actions in the matter.

I am,

Madam,

Your obedient Servant,

Kukhi Abdulhadi

for CHIEF SECRETARY.

Mrs. H. Lawrence White,
Butler Hall
88 Morningside Drive
New York, City,
U.S.A.

EAC 9959 add 17

Government of Palestine

*In case of reply
please quote the date of this letter
and the following*

No. Y/58/31.

*Chief Secretary's Office,
Jerusalem,*

Palestine.

1931
May, 1931.

Madam,

In continuation of my letter No. 1232/29 of the 7th of January, 1931, on the subject of the will of the late Sir Abdel Baha Abbas, I am directed to inform you that Mr. Afnan Shoghi Effendi Rabbani permitted a comparison to be made between the document which is reported to be the original will of the deceased and the photographs which you have produced.

Such examination revealed that the photographs appeared to be authentic reproductions of the document produced as the will of the deceased.

I am,

Madam,

Your obedient servant,

Rich. Shoghi Effendi
for ACTING CHIEF SECRETARY.

Mrs. H. Lawrence White
Butler Hall
88 Morningside Drive
New York City
U.S.A.

Partial Copy of letter in As. Dir.:

September 2, 1930.

A photostat copy of a "Report on the Writing shown on the photographs of the alleged will of Abdul Baha." The report is by Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell of 85, Eddleston Square, London, England, and who is the editor of "The Analyst."

This is an important historical document concerning the Bahai Religion. I therefore wish you to place it on file in your library. Please file it under "Bahai Religion" or "Bahai Literature", and also under "Abdul Baha", otherwise researchers of the Bahai Religion, would not find it.

- signed Ruth White

( Mrs. H. Lawrence White,
Butler Hall,
88 Morningside Drive,
New York City

Correspondence between the High Commissioner of Palestine and Ruth White, regarding the alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas.

By Ruth White
March, 1932.

In a previous pamphlet, "Abdul Baha's Alleged Will is Fraudulent" I published a letter that I had written to the High Commissioner of Palestine on Dec. 31, 1928, asking him to investigate my charges that the alleged will of Abdul Baha is fraudulent. This request for an investigation seems to have troubled the minds of the adherents of Shoghi Effendi, since the following appeared in "The Baha'i News Letter," no. 31, for April 1929.

"Instructions concerning Attitude Towards Those Attacking Cause.

"A copy of the pamphlet published by Mrs. Ruth White was sent to Shoghi Effendi in January. This matter is taken up by the Guardian in his letter to the National Spiritual Assembly recently reprinted (as recorded in summary of last Assembly meeting), but the following words written in a briefer letter on February 27, 1929 are instructive: 'I have in a letter addressed to the National Assembly set forth my views regarding the contents of Mrs. White's pamphlet; I have thus far received no intimation from the Palestine authorities, and have no reason to believe that they will consider it worthy of their consideration. The friends, however should avoid hurting her feelings and should abstain from provocation. Her case will suffer the fate which has met Dyar's opposition in 'Reality', and should be totally disregarded by the believers...'"

A sincere man in Shoghi's position should gladly have accepted my challenge for an investigation. Any man confident of the justice of his case would, in fact, have courted and insisted upon an impartial and judicial examination of the alleged will and of all the facts bearing on his claim to Guardianship. Shoghi Effendi however, it can be seen, was congratulating himself that there was no likelihood of the Palestine authorities considering the question. He shunned a test of the alleged will and of his claims. And I have every reason to believe that his advice to his followers not to hurt my feelings at that time was with a view to prevent me from pursuing the matter further.

In reply to my letter to the High Commissioner I received a letter from His Excellency written through his chief secretary and dated February 6, 1929 to the effect that any information I wished to obtain must be obtained privately and that I would be well advised to employ an advocate in Palestine. This letter was, of course, a great disappointment to me. Not until two years later did it occur to me that I could cite an instance which would prove indubitably that the fraud was one under the jurisdiction of the Palestine authorities and that then the British Government would have to take notice. In other words, in my first letter I had cited only the fact that Shoghi Effendi was collecting money from the Bahais of America based on the authority granted in an alleged will of Abdul Baha. In my next letter to the High Commissioner, written October 7, 1930, I brought the fraud forward as operating right in Palestine. And because of this fact, on account of the collection of money having taken place in Palestine I received a different response from the High Commissioner. The following are the letters that have passed between us.

To His Excellency
The High Commissioner of Palestine
Jerusalem, Palestine.

Your Excellency:

As a victim of a fraud, which is being perpetrated under the Mandatory Power now governing Palestine, I wish to make a complaint against Shoghi Effendi, of the Persian Colony, at Haifa Palestine.

Shoghi Effendi is collecting money from the people of the various nations of the world under the powers granted him in an alleged will which he claims is the will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, and in which he is appointed successor of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas. I base my assertion that a fraud is being perpetrated by Shoghi Effendi on the following facts:

About three months after the death of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, in November 1921, typewritten copies of an English translation of a document were sent to England, America, and other countries, which Shoghi Effendi alleged is the will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, appointing him his successor. This alleged will is undated, unwitnessed, unprobated, and unstamped by the Government. It also contradicts the intent that its alleged maker held during his lifetime. For the alleged will commands people to obey Shoghi Effendi as if he were God, and to pay a tax to him. This is the motive of the fraud--money and power.

I have submitted the photographs of the alleged will to Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, the renowned English handwriting expert; and editor of The Analyst, at 85 Eccleston Square London, S.W.1. and his report shows that this document is fraudulent. No part of it was written by Abdul Baha, although Shoghi Effendi, and the family of Sir Abdul Baha assert that every word of its ten pages was written by Sir Abdul Baha. Shoghi Effendi ignored my request for permission to send a handwriting expert to Haifa to examine the original document.

Aside from my having contributed to various Bahai activities in America I also sent $200. to Palestine, in response to a solicitation from Shoghi Effendi, which he made through The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of the U.S. and Canada, urging them to send money to him to buy land on Mount Carmel, in order to protect the Tomb of the Báb. No financial statement was ever given to me regarding the purchase of this land, although I have requested an account of it. I enclose photostat copies of the appeal, and the receipt, for contributions to this fund, also two letters of acknowledgment of my contribution. I also enclose a photostat copy of Dr. Mitchell's report.

I am not making this complaint merely because of the money I have contributed, as this is small compared to the expense that I have incurred in collecting evidence against Shoghi Effendi. But I am making this complaint in order to protect the public from a fraud, and a movement, which under Shoghi Effendi has become far more subversive than that of Bolshevism. For Shoghi Effendi aims to become world dictator, and he is establishing enemy states within each state, and collecting taxes from the people of these enemy states. All this is contrary to the teachings of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas whose successor he claims to be.

Will you please investigate these charges, and upon verifying Dr. Mitchell's report take such steps as lies within your jurisprudence to prohibit Shoghi Effendi from perpetrating the fraud that he is the successor of Sir Abdul Baha.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Ruth White.

-----
Tel. Add. "CHIEFSEC, JERUSALEM"

Any reply should be addressed to
The Chief Secretary,
Government Offices,
Jerusalem
and should quote
No. 1232/29

SECRETARIAT,
GOVERNMENT OFFICES,
JERUSALEM.

25th November, 1930.

Madam,

I am directed to refer to your letter of the 7th October regarding the will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas and to ask that I may be furnished with the document purporting to be the will, or a photograph of it, which you caused to be examined by Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell.

Steps will then be taken, if possible, to compare that with the original will which is in Palestine.

I am,
Madam,
Your obedient servant,

(Signed) Max Norock

Mrs. H. Lawrence White,
Butler Hall, 88 Morningside Drive,
New York City, U.S.A.

CHIEF SECRETARY.

-----
To the Chief Secretary
Government Offices
Jerusalem

December 12, 1930

Dear Sir:

Thank you for your letter of November 25, 1930, 1232/29. It gives me great pleasure to send you the photographs of the alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas which I herewith enclose. These photographs are copies of a set of photographs which Mr. Horace Holley lent me. Mr. Holley is the secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha's of the United States and Canada, and this organization officially represents Shoghi Effendi, the alleged successor of Sir Abdul Baha. I also enclose two samples of the authentic writing of Sir Abdul Baha. One sample is a photograph made from the Book of the Unitarian Church at Montclair, New Jersey, in which book he wrote directly after he delivered a sermon at the church on May 12th, 1912. The other sample is a photograph made from the Bible at the City Temple, London, in which book he also wrote directly after he had finished delivering a sermon there in 1911. One cannot be certain of any writings purporting to be those of Sir Abdul Baha except those secured from church records, and other public books in which he wrote. For almost all of his later letters were written by his secretaries, and many of these secretaries were related to him, hence they are interested parties, as all of Abdul Baha's family share in the tax that is derived from the powers granted in this alleged will.

If you will pardon me for digressing a little I would like to recount to you an incident that occurred while I was in London last May and June, having the alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha examined by Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, which made me certain that a Higher Power was guiding this affair. Two years prior to this I had tried to get in touch with the British Analyst of Palestine (as I thought at that time that he was the proper official to address regarding the investigating of the alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha) and I was assured by one of the officials at the British Embassy, here in New York City, that there was no British Analyst in Palestine. Then what was my astonishment one night in London, while at a meeting of distinguished scientists, to meet Mr. Gerald Baker, who I learned had been the Analyst there for Great Britain about nine years. I thereupon recounted to him the incident and asked him if he would go to Dr. Mitchell's office and see the enlarged photographs of the alleged will, as well as the authentic samples of Sir Abdul Baha's writings. This he did. I am sure that he will be glad to tell you what he has heard personally from Dr. Mitchell.

Under separate cover I am sending you a copy of my book, "The Bahai Religion and Its Enemy the Bahai Organization." Between pages 165 and 200 you will find the printed reproduction of the alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha, and the English translation of its complete text. Also a sample of his authentic writing.

If I can do anything further to assist you, please call upon me as I shall be only too happy to help you in any way I can.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) Ruth White

P.S. Between pages 178 and 184 of my book you will find the appointment of Shoghi Effendi.

Tel. Add. "CHIEFSEC, JERUSALEM"
Any reply should be addressed to
The Chief Secretary
Government Offices,
Jerusalem.
and should quote
No. 1232/29

SECRETARIAT,
GOVERNMENT OFFICES,
JERUSALEM.

7th January, 1931.

Madam: I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 12th December, enclosing photographs of the alleged will of the late Sir Abdul Baha Abbas.

2. I have also to thank you for the copy of your book "The Bahai Religion, and its enemy the Bahai Organisation" which accompanied it.
3. I shall not fail to inform you of the result of the comparison of the alleged will with the original document.

I am, Madam,
Your Obedient Servant,

(Signed) Max Norock

CHIEF SECRETARY.

Mrs. H. Lawrence White,
88 Morningside Drive,
New York City.

-----
GOVERNMENT OF PALESTINE

In case of reply please quote the date of this letter and the following
No. Y/58/31.

Chief Secretary's Office
Jerusalem,
Palestine.

19th May, 1931.

Madam,

In continuation of my letter No. 1232/29 of the 7th of January, 1931, on the subject of the will of the late Sir Abdel Baha Abbas, I am directed to inform you that Mr. Afnan Shoghi Effendi Rabbani permitted a comparison to be made between the document which is reported to be the original will of the deceased and the photographs which you have produced.

Such examination revealed that the photographs appeared to be authentic reproductions of the document produced as the will of the deceased.

I am,
Madam,
Your obedient servant,

(Signed) Ruhi Abdulhady

for ACTING CHIEF SECRETARY.

Mrs. H. Lawrence White
Butler Hall, 88 Morningside Drive
New York City, U.S.A.

-----
To His Excellency
The High Commissioner of Jerusalem
Palestine.

June 5th, 1931

Your Excellency:

Thank you for your letter of May 19th, Y/58/31, sent through your secretary.

I am glad that the first step has been accomplished, and that you have compared the photographs I sent you of the alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas with the original document purporting to be his will, and found that the photographs are reproductions of it. Thank you for taking this very necessary step. But you of course are aware that my request for an investigation was not in order to ascertain whether the photographs I sent you were copies of this purported document, for I never doubted that they were. My request was for you to ascertain whether the document is authentic or fraudulent. When Dr. Mitchell examined the enlarged photographs of the alleged will he said that he had done all he could with photographs, and that the next step should be for an expert to examine the original alleged will at Haifa in order to ascertain many points that can be ascertained only through an examination of an original document, as for instance--the chemical analysis of the ink, its age, and evidences of erasures, and also evidences of paper having been pieced together, and many other points familiar to a handwriting expert.

After Dr. Mitchell told me this I sent Shoghi Effendi Rabbani a registered letter asking him to grant me permission to send a handwriting expert to Haifa and have the original examined. But to this he did not reply, nor did I expect him to, inasmuch as he has done everything to prevent an investigation. Yet he has not hesitated to collect money from me and other Bahais under the powers granted in this alleged will.

I most respectfully repeat my request to you that inasmuch as I am one of the victims of this fraud, and inasmuch as this fraud is continuing to be perpetrated internationally upon the public, and great sums of money collected under the powers granted in this alleged will, that you have the original alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas examined by a handwriting expert and report your finding to me. Your report that the photographs examined by the handwriting expert to whom I submitted these (Dr. Mitchell) have been verified as accurate reproductions of the original document, in conjunction with the report of Dr. Mitchell make a prima facie case of fraud against those who have used this alleged will as a basis of soliciting money from the public, and you will hence recognize the necessity of further action on your part.

You already have Dr. Mitchell's report which shows that his examination of the photographs of this alleged will proves it to be fraudulent. You also have photostats of the receipts showing that I contributed to this Bahai Fund (from which Shoghi Effendi receives his tax). And at the time I contributed to this fund it was without knowledge that the alleged will had not been fully authenticated. Therefore as all indications are overwhelmingly in favour of the belief that this alleged will, which was undated, unwitnessed, unprobated and unstamped by the government, is fraudulent, and especially as this belief is backed up by the report of Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell showing it to be fraudulent, I am confident that you will take the final step and have the document examined and make a report so that these victims may no longer be defrauded by Shoghi Effendi Rabbani, who claims to be the successor of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, and that restitution may be made to me, and to many others, from whom large sums have been obtained under false pretences.

A report coming from the British Government would have an overwhelming effect in putting a stop to the fraud and thereby His Majesty's Representatives would live up to the wonderful reputation they have established all over the world for rectifying injustices.

I have great hope in the British Government, as I have lived many years in England, and am conversant with the fact that they do not pigeon-hole such matters as is often done in the United States. My confidence in the British Government's sense of justice also made me select Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell as the handwriting expert to examine this alleged will.

Please let me know what action you take in the matter, and please send your report by registered mail.

With many thanks for your prompt attention to this matter, I am

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Ruth White

-----

GOVERNMENT OF PALESTINE

In case of reply please quote the date of this letter and the following
No. Y/58/31.

Chief Secretary's Office,
Jerusalem,
Palestine.

(Registered)

10th July, 1931.

Madam,

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 5th June, on the subject of the will of the late Sir Abdel Baha Abbas, and to say that the Government do not feel disposed to take any further administrative actions in the matter.

I am,
Madam,
Your obedient servant,

(Signed) Ruhi Abdulhady
for CHIEF SECRETARY.

Mrs. H. Lawrence White,
Butler Hall, 88 Morningside Drive,
New York City, U.S.A.

-----

The reader will note that the High Commissioner, in his letter of November 25th asks for photographs of the alleged will in order to compare these photographs with the document from which they had been photographed! This letter astonished me as well as disappointed me as it so evidently evaded the thing I had asked for. I never doubted, nor did anyone else, that the photographs which I had received through Shoghi Effendi were photographs of the alleged will. There could have been no motive in his sending over photographs of something else and saying that they were photographs of this document.

What I had asked for, and what Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, the expert in London, had said should be done, was for experts to go to Haifa and make a long and careful study of the original alleged will in order to ascertain many things that cannot be ascertained from a photograph such as, for instance, the chemical analysis of the ink and its age, water marks on the paper and the age of this paper, evidences of erasures, or of the piecing together of paper and many other things familiar to handwriting experts. This would have required weeks, and perhaps months of careful research by experts, and yet Ruhi confesses that so brief a time was consumed, in looking over the photographs, that he waited in the office while this was being done. And now, in order to deceive the Bahais, Shoghi Effendi pretends that the comparison of the photographs of the alleged will with the document from which they had been photographed is an authentication of the alleged will!

At first the statements emanating from Shoghi Effendi were worded very cautiously though clearly intended to mislead. Thus in a letter written through his secretary to Mr. E. E. Kluge of Chicago, dated July 10, 1931, he says:

"It might interest you to know, however, that the Will in its entirety has been closely examined by experts appointed by the Palestine Government authorities. Not even the slightest objection or the faintest doubt has been expressed concerning its authenticity by them."

Here the implication is made that the alleged will was examined by the authorities with a view to ascertain whether or not it was authentic and that the result was that nothing could be discovered that impugned its authenticity. How far this is from the truth can be seen from the correspondence between the Palestine Secretariat and myself previously given here.

Those who begin to deceive by the implication of their words are likely soon to proceed to plain prevarication, and it is hard to regard as anything else another letter from Shoghi Effendi dated December 1, 1931 to Mrs. Carroll Smith of Dallas, Texas. Mrs. Smith wrote to Shoghi and stated that it had been reported to her that an official comparison had been made of the will with documents known positively to be in the handwriting of Abdul Baha, and she ends the letter as follows:

"Please tell me if such an official comparison really has been made and let the believers know that as a result the Palestine Government certified that the Will was in the Master's handwriting and was genuine.."

To this Shoghi Effendi replied through his secretary, Ruhi Afnan, in a letter part of which is as follows:

"About five or six months ago Mrs. White -- who is at the head of this movement to set the Master's Will aside -- wrote the High Commissioner in Palestine on the subject and asked him to find about the authenticity of the document. The High Commissioner wrote to the Governor of Haifa and sent the Government expert to verify the handwriting. Shoghi Effendi was written on the subject and asked to send the Will to the Government. He sent me with the Will and the expert studied it before me and the governor in the office of the latter. The expert compared the original Will with the handwriting of the Master which Mrs. White has sent him as authentic samples. He said that they were both written by the same person, and that the person who had decided otherwise does not know what he is speaking about. The Expert was an Englishman who knows nothing of the Cause or the Baha'is' and was absolutely impartial. I think the High Commissioner sent to Mrs. White the result of his findings but she preferred to keep quiet about it."

This statement of Shoghi Effendi asserts that "The expert compared the original Will with the handwriting of Abdul Baha which Mrs. White had sent him as authentic samples." This absolutely conflicts with the statement of the High Commissioner in his letter dated May 19, 1931 that "the photographs appeared to be genuine reproductions of the document produced as the will of the deceased." As Shoghi Effendi's statement stands it means that the photographs of the two samples of the authentic writings of Abdul Baha which I had procured from two Bibles, in two different churches, one in America and one in England, were duplicates of a will which had been written in the Orient and buried under ground years before! This as the reader can see is not only sheer nonsense but was written with intent to deceive.

I wish to call the attention of the reader to another point also. Shoghi Effendi wrote to Mr. Kluge that experts examined the will. Later he wrote to Mrs. Smith that only one expert examined the will--an Englishman. The extracts from these two letters are as follows:

"...the Will in its entirety has been closely examined by experts.... not even the slightest objection or the faintest doubt has been expressed concerning its authenticity by them."

Six months later he wrote to Mrs. Smith through his secretary as follows:

"The High Commissioner wrote to the governor of Haifa and sent the Government expert to verify the handwriting... the expert studied it before me and the governor in the office of the latter. The expert compared the original Will... He said that they were both written by the same person...The expert was an Englishman..."

After the final statement of the High Commissioner in his letter of May 19th, the reader will note that I again urged him in my letter of June 5th to make the examination I had asked for, and his last letter to me, dated July 10th shows that the Government would not take the actions I had asked for, as the following statement shows:

"I am directed ... to say that the Government do not feel disposed to take any further administrative actions in the matter."

The "further administrative actions" I had asked for was an examination of the alleged will by experts which would have required weeks and perhaps months of careful work. If the Government really had had the alleged will examined by experts, and had made a definite report showing whether it was spurious or authentic, then as that was all I had asked for there would have been no sense in their replying that, "The Government do not feel disposed to take any further administrative actions in the matter."

Furthermore if there had been any authentication of the document wouldn't Shoghi Effendi have been only too eager to have blazoned this to the Bahai world, considering that for four years I had publicly challenged him with the fact that this document was spurious? Wouldn't he have gloried in publishing such a report in all the Bahai publications thereby trying to prove me wrong? But this he did not do. He has kept silent on the subject, except where he could not do otherwise in the two letters already cited. For in these two letters of Mr. Kluge and Mrs. Smith, ~~xxxxxx~~ he was asked point blank whether there had been an official authentication of the alleged will, and he therefore was placed in the embarrassing position which necessitated a reply. His policy has been, and still is to keep quiet, and caution the Bahais to keep as quiet as possible about the matter, hoping that by so doing it will die. But it will not die. What will die is the papistry that Shoghi Effendi and his coterie have set up. For in this enlightened age it is impossible for the people to revert to this mediaeval institution; especially as it is wholly irreconcilable with the Bahai teachings. The reader may ascertain for himself the truth of the statement that the papist group is rapidly diminishing by looking in THE WORLD ALMANAC for 1931 on page 391. There he will find that in 1916 the number of Bahais in the United States and Canada was listed as 2,884. But since this group became papists under Shoghi Effendi their numbers have diminished to 1,247 under his "Guardianship." On the other hand all the groups who have rejected Shoghi

(Continued on page 10)

Effendi are rapidly increasing, with the result that the largest number of Bahais are in the ranks of those who are no longer under this papist domination.

There are three attitudes of mind among the Bahais today toward the alleged will of Abdul Baha. First there is the attitude of this papist group, known under the names of "Spiritual Assemblies", "Local Assemblies" and "National Spiritual Assemblies of Baha'is". The members of this group accept Shoghi Effendi as the "Guardian" whom they believe they are commanded to obey as if he were God, likewise feeling under the obligation to pay a tax to him, according to the directions given in the alleged will.

The second attitude of mind is that of certain dissident Bahais who although they have thrown off the authority of Shoghi Effendi still nominally accept as authentic the alleged will of Abdul Baha on which this authority is based. This attitude is not a very consistent one, for a Bahai who believes that Abdul Baha bequeathed the powers of "Guardian" to Shoghi and yet refuses to follow the latter is disobeying what he thinks are the commands of Abdul Baha. It is setting a harmful example to future generations to violate deliberately what one believes to be an important teaching of Abdul Baha. However I am confident that the Power which has guided these Bahais in breaking away from the Papistry of Haifa will lead them further in the right path and that they will ultimately completely reject this so-called Will.

The third attitude toward the alleged will is the right one because it is following the course that Abdul Baha told us to take -- to reject any document or letters, purporting to be his, which grants any authority to anyone unless it is proved beyond the question of a doubt that they are his. Therefore, as not only did this alleged will grant Shoghi Effendi more potential authority than a king and pope combined but moreover the application of it nullifies the teachings of both Baha'o'llah and Abdul Baha, all those who remain true to the Bahai Teachings must reject it as it has never been proved authentic but on the contrary has already been shown to be spurious.

The papal group claimed that a successor or "Guardian" would keep the Bahais united. Far from this having proved true it has brought intense inharmony among the Bahais and chaos to the Cause. Their position is utterly unlogical. That is why we have the astounding spectacle of this group promulgating any number of conflicting principles, without being in the least aware that they are conflicting. For instance they purport to promulgate the principles of Baha'o'llah and of Abdul Baha, the foremost of which was to free all religions from sectarianism, and at the same time they promulgate Shoghi's ideas of a super-sectarian cult more dogmatic and narrower than any other in existence.

The attempt to pervert the Bahai Movement by subjecting it to Organization domination is a parallel to the corruption of primitive Christianity by ecclesiasticism. Recently in trying to ascertain on what authority Christianity was able to establish a papistry new light came to me on this matter. Christ said, after Peter had divined His station: "Blessed art thou, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee but my Father which is in Heaven...thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my Church." The meaning of this verse seems to have wholly escaped Christians. Christ meant that Peter's inner guidance had revealed to him the station of Christ, and on this spiritual principle of innate knowledge would the church of Christ be built. Not on an outer church or organization confined to bricks and stones but on an inner Church founded on the right of freedom of conscience of every individual. The necessity of freedom of conscience in religion was emphasized by Baha'o'llah and Abdul Baha and they laid great stress on inner guidance which is another aspect of it.

But there is this satisfaction about the whole matter. The officials of the British Government took these steps in order to secure all the information possible from me and to keep this information on file for use in the future should the emergency arise, and through the data I have put at their disposal they are in a position at any time to take decisive action against Shoghi and his organization should he and his adherents ever become powerful. But they will not become powerful, as already shown his organization is rapidly decreasing in numbers, for no movement founded on fraud can succeed.

(Photostat copies of the ~~five~~ letters of the High Commissioner of Palestine, and the two letters of Shoghi Effendi written through his secretary, have been placed on file at the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.)

If the reader would like a more detailed history of this subject, the following books by the author, published by The TUTTLE COMPANY, RUTLAND, VERMONT, are recommended:

|                                                           |        |
|-----------------------------------------------------------|--------|
| The Bahai Religion and Its Enemy the Bahai Organization - | $2.00 |
| The Alleged Will of Abdul Baha is Fraudulent. (Pamphlet)- | .25    |
| Abdul Baha and The Promised Age. - - - - -                | 2.00   |

Those who feel they cannot afford these books may obtain them at half price (except the pamphlet) by writing direct to the author:

Mrs. H. Lawrence White
102 White Building
Utica, New York.

"That is to say, the writing does not agree with the hypothesis that it was all written by one person."

"A minute comparison of the authenticated writing with the writing on every page of the alleged will . . . has failed to detect in any part of the will the characteristics of the writing of Abdul-Baha, as shown in the authenticated specimens." -- Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, 1930.

The attempts to discredit Dr. Mitchell and Ruth White have relied on, for over 75 years, slander and ad hominem and are no more convincing now than they have ever been. Note the attempt to shift, from his conclusion and call for an examination of the original, to the man himself. Classic ad hominem.

I ask the reader to reflect on the fact that Dr. Mitchell remains one of the most respected forensic researchers of the 20th century and is still quoted and cited by academics and legal experts. His professional integrity is beyond question as is and was his ability to assess the authenticity of the purported will itself. As the document curator for the British Museum, Dr. Mitchell used techniques and methods still widely used and recognized, whether or not one has a command of the language being scrutinized. Knowledge of a language in and of itself has never been the essential for handwriting experts, and informed people know that to be a fact. Those who seek to conceal the act of forgery hope to confuse the uninformed about what is involved. See the link below to one of his books available online.

Ruth White placed Dr. Mitchell's signed Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha with the Library of Congress in 1930. Certified copy below.

A bibliography of Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's extensive published work is easily available from the Library of Congress catalog or WorldCat.

Or see professional genealogist Will Johnson's webpage on Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell

Download All Documents Deposited by Ruth White at the Library of Congress in one PDF

Dr. Mitchell was singularly qualified to judge the authenticity of the purported will of Abdul-Baha:

"In England, C. Ainsworth Mitchell was a public analyst interested primarily in questioned documents and the chemistry of inks during the early twentieth century" (25). FROM Introduction to Forensic Sciences. William G. Eckert. Published 1997 CRC Press. Legal Reference / Law Profession. 390 pages. ISBN: 0849381010. The authenticity of my quotation may be verified by Previewing the book and selecting page 25. On Amazon.com: ISBN: 0849381010

NOTE WELL: In 1997, decades after his Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha in 1930, Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's reputation in the field of "questioned documents" continues to command the respect of colleagues, generations later, capable of evaluating his abilities and of educating new students of forensic science.

"Documents And Their Scientific Examination" (1920) Author: C. Ainsworth Mitchell, Date 1920. (can be downloaded in full)

Professional genealogist Will Johnson to a fundamentalist Baha'i who dismissed Dr. Mitchell:

From: "wjhonson" wjhonson@aol.com

Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai

Sent: Saturday, April 21, 2007 10:36 PM

Subject: Re: 4-20-07 - Ruth White. Abdul Baha's Questioned Will and Testament.

>

> That's a bit disengenuous to his memory. Charles Ainsworth Mitchell > wrote several books in which he details pencil, ink, writing styles, > etc. It wasn't a hobby, he was a professional in this type of > analysis.

Dr. C. (Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha. 1930.

---

All Documents Deposited by Ruth White at the Library of Congress in one PDF

[All documents in the PDF file typed and reordered, below, mostly by date, for ease of comprehension.]

Correspondence between the High Commissioner of Palestine and Ruth White, regarding the alleged Will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas.

By Ruth White March, 1932.

In a previous pamphlet, "Abdul Baha's Alleged Will is Fraudulent" I published a letter that I had written to the High commissioner of Palestine on Dec. 31, 1928, asking him to investigate my charges that the alleged will of Abdul Baha is fraudulent. This request for an investigation seems to have troubled the minds of the adherents of Shoghi Effendi, since the following appeared in "The Baha'i News Letter," no. 31, for April 1929.

"Instructions concerning Attitude Towards Those Attacking Cause.

"A copy of the pamphlet published by Mrs. Ruth White was sent to Shoghi Effendi in January. This matter is taken up by the Guardian in his letter to the National Spiritual Assembly recently reprinted (as recorded in summary of last Assembly meeting), but the following words written in a briefer letter on February 27, 1929 are instructive: 'I have in a letter addressed to the National Assembly set forth my views regarding the contents of Mrs. White's pamphlet, I have thus far received no intimation from the Palestine authorities, and have no reason to believe that they will consider it worthy of their consideration. The friends, however should avoid hurting her feelings and should abstain from provocation. Her case will suffer the fate which has met Dyar's opposition in 'Reality', and should be totally disregarded by the believers..."

A sincere man in Shoghi's position should gladly have accepted my challenge for an investigation. Any man confident of the justice of his case would, in fact, have courted and insisted upon an impartial and judicial examination of the alleged will and of all the facts bearing on his claim to Guardianship. Shoghi Effendi however, it can be seen, was congratulating himself that there was no likelihood of the Palestine authorities considering the question. He shunned a test of the alleged will and of his claims. And I have every reason to believe that his advice to his followers not to hurt my feelings at that time was with a view to prevent me from pursuing the matter further.

In reply to my letter to the High Commissioner I received a letter from His Excellency written through his chief secretary and dated February 6, 1929 to the effect that any information I wished to obtain must be obtained privately and that I would be well advised to employ an advocate in Palestine. This letter was, of course, a great disappointment to me. Not until two years later did it occur to me that I could cite an instance which would prove indubitably that the fraud was one under the jurisdiction of the Palestine authorities and that then the British Government would have to take notice. In other words, in my first letter I had cited only the fact that Shoghi Effendi was collecting money from the Bahais of America based on the authority granted in an alleged will of Abdul Baha. In my next letter to the High Commissioner, written 7, 1930, I brought the fraud forward as operating right in Palestine. And because of this fact, on account of the collection of money having taken place in Palestine I received a different response from the High Commissioner. The following are the letters that have passed between us.

To His Excellency
The High Commissioner of Palestine
Jerusalem, Palestine.
October 7, 1930

Your Excellency:

As a victim of a fraud, which is being perpetrated under the Mandatory Power now governing Palestine, I wish to make a complaint against Shoghi Effendi, of the Persian Colony, at Haifa Palestine.

Shoghi Effendi is collecting money from the people of the various nations of the world under the powers granted him in an alleged will which he claims is the will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas. I base my assertion that a fraud is being perpetrated by Shoghi Effendi on the following facts:

About three months after the death of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, in November 1921, typewritten copies of an English translation of a document were sent to England, America, and other countries, which Shoghi Effendi alleged is the will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, appointing him his successor. This alleged will is undated, unwitnessed, unprobated, and unstamped by the Government. It also contradicts the intent that its alleged maker held during his lifetime. For the alleged will commands people to obey Shoghi Effendi as if he were God, and to pay a tax to him. This is the motive of the fraud—money and power.

I have submitted the photographs of the alleged will to Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, the renowned English handwriting expert; and editor of The Analyst, at 85 Eccleston Square London, S.W.1. and his report shows that this document is fraudulent. No part of it was written by Abdul Baha, although Shoghi Effendi, and the family of Sir Abdul Baha assert that every word of its ten pages was written by Sir Abdul Baha. Shoghi Effendi ignored my request for permission to send a handwriting expert to Haifa to examine the original document.

Aside from my having contributed to various Bahai activities in America I also sent $200 to Palestine, in response to a solicitation from Shoghi Effendi, which he made through The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of the U.S. and Canada, urging them to send money to him to buy land on Mount Carmel, in order to protect the Tomb of the Bab. No financial statement was ever given to me regarding the purchase of this land, although I have requested an account of it. I enclose photostat copies of the appeal, and the receipt, for contributions to this fund, also two letters of acknowledgment of my contribution. I also enclose a photostat copy of Dr. Mitchell's report.

I am not making this complaint merely because of the money I have contributed, as this is small compared to the expense that I have incurred in collecting evidence against Shoghi Effendi. But I am making this complaint in order to protect the public from a fraud, and a movement, which under Shoghi Effendi has become far more subversive than that of Bolshevism. For Shoghi Effendi aims to become world dictator, and he is establishing enemy states within each state, and collecting taxes from the people of these enemy states. All this is contrary to the teachings of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas whose successor he claims to be.

Will you please investigate these charges, and upon verifying Dr. Mitchell's report take such steps as lies within your jurisprudence to prohibit Shoghi Effendi from perpetrating the fraud that he is the successor of Sir Abdul Baha.

Yours very truly, (Signed) Ruth White.

---

[Letter No. 1, facsimile and quoted by White] [Reordered by date]

Tel. Add. "CHIEFSEC, JERUSALEM"
Any reply should be addressed to
THE CHIEF SECRETARY, GOVERNMENT OFFICES,
JERUSALEM. and should quote No. 1232/29

SECRETARIAT,
GOVERNMENT OFFICES,

JERUSALEM.

25TH November, 1930.

Madam,

I am directed to refer to your letter of the 7th October regarding the will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas and to ask that I may be furnished with the document purporting to be the will, or a photograph of it, which you caused to be examined by Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell.

Steps will then be taken, if possible, to compare that with the original will which is in Palestine.

I am, Madam, Your obedient servant, CHIEF SECRETARY

(Signed) Max Norock

Mrs. H. Lawrence White, Butler Hall, 88 Morningside Drive, New York City, U.S.A.

---

To the Chief Secretary Government Offices
Jerusalem
December 12, 1930

Dear Sir:

Thank you for your letter of November 25, 1930, 1232/29. It gives me great pleasure to send you the photographs of the alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas which I herewith enclose. These photographs are copies of a set of photographs which Mr. Horace Holley lent me. Mr. Holley is the secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha's of the United States and Canada, and this organization officially represents Shoghi Effendi, the alleged successor of Air Abdul Baha. I also enclose two samples of the authentic writing of Sir Abdul Baha. One sample is a photograph made from the Book of the Unitarian Church at Montclair, New Jersey, in which book he wrote directly after he delivered a sermon at the church on May 12th, 1912. The other sample is a photograph made from the Bible at the City Temple, London, in which book he also wrote directly after he had finished delivering a sermon there in 1911. One cannot be certain of any writings purporting to be those of Sir Abdul Baha except those secured from church records, and other public books in which he wrote. For almost all of his later letters were written by his secretaries, and many of these secretaries were related to him, hence they are interested parties, as all of Abdul Baha's family share in the tax that is derived from the powers granted in this alleged will.

If you will pardon me for digressing a little I would like to recount to you an incident that occurred while I was in London last May and June, having the alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha examined by Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, which made me certain that a Higher Power was guiding this affair. Two years prior to this I had tried to get in touch with the British Analyst of Palestine (as I thought at that time that he was the proper official to address regarding the investigating of the alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha) and I was assured by one of the officials at the British Embassy, here in New York City, that there was no British analyst in Palestine. Then what was my astonishment one night in London, while at a meeting of distinguished scientists, to meet Mr. Gerald Baker, who I learned had been the Analyst there for Great Britain about nine years. I thereupon recounted to him the incident and asked him if he would go to Dr. Mitchell's office and see the enlarged photographs of the alleged will, as well as the authentic samples of Sir Abdul Baha's writings. This he did. I am sure that he will be glad to tell you what he has heard personally from Dr. Mitchell.

Under separate cover I am sending you a copy of my book, "The Bahai Religion and Its Enemy the Bahai Organization." Between pages 165 and 200 you will find the printed reproduction of the alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha, and the English translation of its complete text. Also a sample of his authentic writing.

If I can do anything further to assist you, please call upon me as I shall be only too happy to help you in any way I can.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) Ruth White

P.S. Between pages 178 and 184 of my book you will find the appointment of Shoghi Effendi.

---

[Letter No. 2, facsimile and quoted by White]

Tel. Add. "CHIEFSEC, JERUSALEM"

Any reply should be addressed to
THE CHIEF SECRETARY, GOVERNMENT OFFICES,
JERUSALEM. and should quote No. 1232/29

SECRETARIAT,
GOVERNMENT OFFICES,
JERUSALEM.

7th January, 1931.

Madam,

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 12th December, enclosing photographs of the alleged will of the late Sir Abdul Baha Abbas.

2. I have also to thank you for the copy of your book "The Bahai Religion, and its enemy the Bahai Organisation" which accompanied it.

3. I shall not fail to inform you of the result of the comparison of the alleged will with the original document.

I am, Madam, Your obedient servant, CHIEF SECRETARY.

(Signed) Max Norock

Mrs. H. Lawrence White, Butler Hall, 88 Morningside Drive, New York City, U.S.A.

[Letter No. 4, facsimile and quoted by White]

Government of Palestine

In case of reply please quote the date of this letter and the following
No. Y/58/31.

Chief Secretary's Office, Jerusalem, Palestine
Registered
19th May, 1931.

Madam,

In continuation of my letter No. 1232/29 of the 7th of January, 1931, on the subject of the will of the late Sir Abdel Baha Abbas, I am directed to inform you that Mr. Afnan Shoghi Effendi Rabbani permitted a comparison to be made between the document which is reported to be the original will of the deceased and the photographs which you have produced.

Such examination revealed that the photographs appeared to be authentic reproductions of the document produced as the will of the deceased.

I am, Madam, Your obedient Servant, for ACTING CHEIF SECRETARY.

(Signed) Ruhi Abdulhady

Mrs. H. Lawrence White, Butler Hall, 88 Morningside Drive, New York City, U.S.A.

To His Excellency
The High Commissioner of Jerusalem
Palestine.
June 5th, 1931

Your Excellency:

Thank you for your letter of May 19th, Y/58/31, sent through your secretary.

I am glad that the first step has been accomplished, and that you have compared the photographs I sent yuo of the alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas with the original document purporting to be his will, and found that the photographs are reproductions of it. Thank you for taking this very necessary step. But you of course are aware that my request for an investigation was not in order to ascertain whether the photographs I sent you were copies of this purported document, for I never doubted that they were. My request was for you to ascertain whether the document is authentic or fraudulent. When Dr. Mitchell examined the enlarged photographs of the alleged will he said that he had done all he could with photographs, and that the next step should be for an expert to examine the original alleged will at Haifa in order to ascertain many points that can be ascertained only through an examination of an original document, as for instance--the chemical analysis of the ink, its age, and evidences of erasures, and also evidences of paper having been pieced together, and many other points familiar to a handwriting expert.

After Dr. Mitchell told me this I sent Shoghi Effendi Rabbani a registered letter asking him to grant me permission to send a handwriting expert to Haifa and have the original examined. But to this he did not reply, nor did I expect him to, inasmuch as he has done everything to prevent an investigation. Yet he has not hesitated to collect money from me and other Bahais under the powers granted in this alleged will.

I most respectfully repeat my request to you that inasmuch as I am one of the victims of this fraud, and inasmuch as this fraud is continuing to be perpetrated internationally upon the public, and great sums of money collected under the powers granted in this alleged will, that you have the original alleged will of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas examined by a handwriting expert and report your finding to me. Your report that the photographs examined by the handwriting expert to whom I submitted these (Dr. Mitchell) have been verified as accurate reproductions of the original document, in conjunction with the report of Dr. Mithcell make a prima facie case of fraud agains those who have used this alleged will as a basis of soliciting money from the public, and you will hence recognize the necessity of further action on your part.

You already have Dr. Mitchell's report which shows that his examination of the photographs of this alleged will proves it to be fraudulent. You also have photostats of the receipts showing that I contributed to this Bahai Fund (from which Shoghi Effendi receives his tax). And at the time I contributed to this fund it was without knowledge that the alleged will had not been fully authenticated. Therefore as all indications are overwhelmingly in favour of the belief that this alleged will, which was undated, unwitnessed, unprobated and unstamped by the government, is fraudulent, and especially as this belief is backed up by the report of Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell showing it to be fraudulent, I am confident that you will take the final step and have the document examined and make a report so that these victims may no longer be defrauded by Shoghi Effendi Rabanni, who claims to be the successor of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas, and that restitution may be made to me, and to many others, from whom large sums have been obtained under the false pretences.

A report coming from the British Government would have an overwhelming effect in putting a stop to the fraud and thereby His Majesty's Representatives would live up to the wonderful reputation they have established all over the world for rectifying injustices.

I have great hope in the British Government, as I have lived many years in England, and am conversant with the fact that they do not pigeon-hole such matters as is often done in the United States. My confidence in the British Government's sense of justice also made me select Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell as the handwriting expert to examine this alleged will.

Please let me know what action you take in the matter, and please send your report by registered mail.

With many thanks for your prompt attention to this matter, I am

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Ruth White

---

[Letter No. 3, facsimile and quoted by White]

Government of Palestine

In case of reply please quote the date of this letter and the following
No. Y/58/31.

Chief Secretary's Office, Jerusalem, Palestine
Registered
10th July, 1931.

Madam,

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 5th June, on the subject of the will of the late Sir Abdel Baha Abbas, and to say that the Government do not feel disposed to take any further administrative actions in the matter.

I am, Madam, Your obedient Servant, for CHIEF SECRETARY

(Signed) Ruhi Abdulhady

Mrs. H. Lawrence White, Butler Hall, 88 Morningside Drive, New York City, U.S.A.

---

The reader will note that the High Commissioner, in his letter of November 25th asks for photographs of the alleged will in order to compare these photographs with the document from which they had been photographed! This letter astonished me as well as disappointed me as it so evidently evaded the thing I had asked for. I never doubted, nor did anyone else, that the photographs which I had received through Shoghi Effendi were photographs of the alleged will. There could have been no motive in his sending over photographs of something else and saying that they were photographs of this document.

What I had asked for, and what Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, the expert in London, had said should be done, was for experts to go to Haifa and make a long and careful study of the original alleged will in order to ascertain many things that cannot be ascertained from a photograph such as, for instance, the chemical analysis of the ink and its age, water marks on the paper and the age of this paper, evidences of erasures, or of the piecing together of paper and many other things familiar to handwriting experts. This would have required weeks, and perhaps months of careful research by experts, and yet Ruhi confesses that so brief a time was consumed, in looking over the photographs, that he waited in the office while this was being done. And now, in order to deceive the Bahais, Shoghi Effendi pretends that the comparison of the photographs of the alleged will with the document from which they had been photographed is an authentication of the alleged will!

At first the statements emanating from Shoghi Effendi were worded very cautiously though clearly intended to mislead. Thus in a letter written through his secretary to Mr. E. E. Kluge of Chicago, dated July 10, 1931, he says:

"It might interest you to know, however, that the Will in its entirety has been closely examined by experts appointed by the Palestine government authorities. Note even the slightest objection or the faintest doubt has been expressed concerning its authenticity by them."

Here the implication is made that the alleged will was examined by the authorities with a view to ascertain whether or not it was authentic and that the result was that nothing could be discovered that impugned its authenticity. How far this is from the truth can be seen from the correspondence between the Palestine Secretariat and myself previously given here.

Those who begin to deceive by the implication of their words are likely soon to proceed to plain prevarication, and it is hard to regard as anything else another letter from Shoghi Effendi dated December 1, 1931 to Mrs. Carroll Smith of Dallas, Texas. Mrs. Smith wrote to Shoghi and stated that it had been reported to her that an official comparison had been made of the will with documents known positively to be in the handwriting of Abdul Baha, and she ends the letter as follows:

"Please tell me if such an official comparison really has been made and let the believers know that as a result the Palestine Government certified that the Will was in the Master's handwriting and was genuine.."

To this Shoghi Effendi replied through his secretary, Ruhi Afnan, in a letter part of which is as follows:

"About five or six months ago Mrs. White—who is at the heart of this movement to set the Master's Will aside—wrote the High Commissioner in Palestine on the subject and asked him to find about the authenticity of the document. The High Commissioner wrote to the governor of Haifa & sent the government expert to verify the hand-writing. Shoghi Effendi was written on the subject. Asked to send the Will to the government, he sent me with the will & the expert studied it before me & the governor in the office of the latter. The expert compared the original Will with the handwriting of the Master which Mrs. White had sent him as authentic samples. He said that they are both written by the same person & that the person who had decided otherwise does not know what he is speaking about. The expert was an Englishman who knew nothing of the Cause or the Baha'is & was absolutely impartial. I think the High Commissioner sent to Mrs. White the result of his findings but she preferred to keep quiet about it."

This statement of Shoghi Effendi asserts that "The expert compared the original Will with the handwriting of Abdul Baha which Mrs. White had sent him as authentic samples." This absolutely conflicts with the statement of the High Commissioner in his letter dated May 19, 1931 that "the photographs appeared to be genuine reproductions of the document produced as the Will of the deceased." As Soghi [sic] Effendi's statement stands it means that the photographs of the two samples of the authentic writings of Abdul Baha which I had procured from two Bibles, in two different churches one in America and one in England, were duplicates of a Will which had been written in the Orient and buried under ground years before! This as the reader can see is not only sheer nonsense but was written with intent to deceive.

I wish to call the attention of the reader to another point also. Shoghi Effendi wrote Mr. Kluge that experts examined the Will. Later he wrote to Mrs. Smith that only one expert examined the Will--an Englishman. The extracts from these two letters are as follows:

"...the Will in its entirety has been closely examined by experts appointed by the Palestine government authorities. Not even the slightest objection or the faintest doubt has been expressed concerning its authenticity by them."

Six months later he wrote to Mrs. Smith through his secretary as follows:

"The High Commissioner wrote to the governor of Haifa & sent the government expert to verify the hand-writing... the expert studied it before me & the governor in the office of the latter. The expert compared the original Will... with the handwriting of the Master which Mrs. White had sent him as authentic samples. He said that they are both written by the same person... The expert was an Englishman..."

After the final statement of the High Commissioner in his letter of May 19th, the reader will note that I again urged him in my letter of June 5th to make the examination I had asked for, and his last letter to me, dated July 10th shows that the Government would not take the actions I had asked for, as the following statement shows:

"I am directed... to say that the Government do not feel disposed to take any further administrative actions in the matter."

The "further administrative actions" I had asked for was an examination of the alleged will by experts which would have required weeks and perhaps months of careful work. If the Government really had had the alleged will examined by experts, and had made a definite report showing whether it was spurious or authentic, then as that was all I had asked for there would have been no sense in their replying that, "The government do not feel disposed to take any further administrative actions in the matter."

Furthermore if there had been any authentication of the document wouldn't Shoghi Effendi have been only too eager to have blazoned this to the Bahai World, considering that for four years I had publicly challenged him with the fact that this document was spurious? Wouldn't he have gloried in publishing such a report in all the Bahai publications thereby trying to prove me wrong? But this he did not do. He has kept silent on the subject, except where he could not do otherwise in the two letters already cited. For in these two letters of Mr. Kluge and Mrs. Smith, he has asked point blank whether there had been an official authentication of the alleged Will, and he therefore was placed in the embarrassing position which necessitated a reply. His policy has been, and still is to keep quiet, and caution the Bahais to keep as quiet as possible about the matter, hoping that by so doing it will die. But it will not die. What will die is the papistry that Shoghi Effendi and his coterie have set up. For in this enlightened age it is impossible for the people to revert to this mediaeval institution, especially as it is wholly irreconcilable with the Bahai teachings. The reader may ascertain for himself the truth of the statement that the papist group is rapidly diminishing by looking in THE WORLD ALMANAC for 1931 on page 391. There he will find that in 1916 the number of Bahais in the United States and Canada was listed as 2,884. But since this group became papists under Shoghi Effendi their numbers have diminished to 1,247 under his "Guardianship." On the other hand all the groups who have rejected Shoghi Effendi are rapidly increasing, with the result that the largest number of Baha'is are in the ranks of those who are no longer under this papist domination. [Note White indicates there were multiple Bahai groups who rejected Shoghi Effendi.]

There are three attitudes of mind among the Bahais today toward the alleged will of Abdul Baha. First there is the attitude of this papist group, known under the names of "Spiritual Assemblies", "Local Assemblies" and "National Spiritual Assemblies of Baha'is". The members of this group accept Shoghi Effendi as the "Guardian" whom they believe they are commanded to obey as if he were God, likewise feeling under the obligation to pay a tax to him, according to the directions given in the alleged will.

The second attitude of mind is that of certain dissident Bahais who although they have thrown off the authority of Shoghi Effendi still nominally accept as authentic the alleged will of Abdul Baha on which this authority is based. This attitude is not a very consistent one, for a Bahai who believes that Abdul Baha bequeathed the powers of "Guardian" to Shoghi and yet refuses to follow the latter is disobeying what he thinks are the commands of Abdul Baha. It is setting a harmful example to future generations to violate deliberately what one believes to be an important teaching of Abdul Baha. However I am confident that the Power which has guided these Bahais in breaking away from the Papistry of Haifa will lead them further in the right path and that they will ultimately completely reject this so-called Will.

The third attitude toward the alleged will is the right one because it is following the course that Abdul Baha told us to take--to reject any document or letters, purporting to be his, which grants any authority to anyone unless it is proved beyond the question of a doubt that they are his. Therefore, as not only did this alleged will grant Shoghi Effendi more potential authority than a king and pope combined but moreover the application of it nullifies the teaching of both Baha'o'llah and Abdul Baha, all those who remain true to the Bahai Teachings must reject it as it has never been proved authentic but on the contrary has already been shown to be spurious.

The papal group claimed that a successor or "Guardian" would keep the Bahais united. Far from this having proved true it has brought intense inharmony among the Bahais and chaos to the Cause. Their position is utterly unlogical. That is why we have the astounding spectacle of this group promulgating any number of conflicting principles, without being in the least aware that they are conflicting. For instance they purport to promulgate the principles of Baha'o'llah and of Abdul Baha, the foremost of which was to free all religions from sectarianism, and at the same time they promulgate Shoghi's ideas of a super-sectarian cult more dogmatic and narrower than any other in existence.

The attempt to pervert the Bahai Movement by subjecting it to Organization domination is a parallel to the corruption of primitive Christianity by ecclesiasticism. Recently in trying to ascertain on what authority Christianity was able to establish a papistry new light came to me on this matter. Christ said, after Peter had divined His station: "Blessed art thou, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee but my Father which is in Heaven...thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my Church." The meaning of this verse seems to have wholly escaped Christians. Christ meant that Peter's inner guidance had revealed to him the station of Christ, and on this spiritual principle of innate knowledge would the church of Christ be built. Not on an outer church or organization confined to bricks and stones but on an inner Church founded on the right of freedom of conscience of every individual. The necessity of freedom of conscience in religion was emphasized by Baha'o'llah and Abdul Baha and they laid great stress on inner guidance which is another aspect of it.

But there is this satisfaction about the whole matter. The officials of the British Government took these steps in order to secure all the information possible from me and to keep this information on file for use in the future should the emergency arise, and through the data I have put at their disposal they are in a position at any time to take decisive action against Shoghi and his organization should he and his adherents ever become powerful. But they will not become powerful, as already shown his organization is rapidly decreasing in numbers, for no movement founded on fraud can succeed.

(Photostat copies of the four letters of the High Commissioner of Palestine, and the two letters of Shoghi Effendi written through his secretary, have been placed on file at the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.)

If the reader would like a more detailed history of this subject, the following books by the author, published by The TUTTLE COMPANY, RUTLAND, VERMONT, are recommended:

The Bahai Religion and Its Enemy the Bahai Organization - $2.00

The Alleged Will of Abdul Baha is Fraudulent. (Pamphlet) - .25

Abdul Baha and The Promised Age. 2.00

Those who feel they cannot afford these books may obtain them at half price (except the pamphlet) by writing direct to the author:

Mrs. H. Lawrence White
102 White Building
Utica, New York.

[ See also the following two books online,

Ruth White, Bahai Leads Out of the Labyrinth. Universal Publishing Company, 1944. 259 pages. (pages 257, 258, 259 restored)

Ruth White. Abdul Baha's Questioned Will and Testament. Beverly Hills: White, 1946. ]

In the Documents Deposited by Ruth White at the Library of Congress, immediately following Dr. Mitchell's Report, the following two letters appear, signed by Shoghi Effendi:

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
MANUSCRIPT DIVISION
MISCELLANEOUS MANUSCRIPTS COLLECTION DATA SHEET
Gift, Mrs. H. Lawrence White, 1930 & 1932, [etc.]

Rabbani, H. 1931 J110 to E. E. Kluge photocopy
Shoghi Effendi note 4 pgs

Afnan, Ruhi 1931 Dec 1 to Mrs Carroll Smith photocopy
Shoghi note 4 pgs

[Letter No. 1]

Persian Colony,
Haifa, Palestine 1-12-1931

Dear Mrs. Smith:

Shoghi Effendi wishes me to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated Nov. 5th 1931. Shoghi Effendi does not attribute much importance to those who deny the authenticity of the Will because their attitude is not due to a desire to seek the truth, but merely oppose and bring doubts to others. From the very start, he relegated that task to the spirit of the Master who is always vigilant to protect His Cause against the inroads of its enemies. And thank God the Master has helped him and made their opposition a cause of success for His Faith, rather than a danger to its existence.

About five or six months ago Mrs. White—who is at the heart of this movement to set the Master's Will aside—wrote the High Commissioner in Palestine on the subject and asked him to find about the authenticity of the document. The High Commissioner wrote to the governor of Haifa & sent the government expert to verify the hand-writing. Shoghi Effendi was written on the subject. Asked to send the Will to the government, he sent me with the will & the expert studied it before me & the governor in the office of the latter. The expert compared the original Will with the handwriting of the Master which Mrs. White had sent him as authentic samples. He said that they are both written by the same person & that the person who had decided otherwise does not know what he is speaking about. The expert was an Englishman who knew nothing of the Cause or the Baha'is & was absolutely impartial. I think the High Commissioner sent to Mrs. White the result of his findings but she preferred to keep quiet about it.

The whole trouble is that Mrs. White & her sympathisers are animated with the wrong spirit, a spirit of hatred rather than impartial seeking.

No one could possibly write a will such as that of the Master so as to be able to make the forgery. The spirit of the Master runs through every word of it & clearly shows that its author was inspired by God.

In closing may I assure you of Shoghi Effendi's loving greetings & best wishes.

Yours ever sincerely,
Ruhi Afnan

With the assurance of my loving prayers for you at the holy shrines, your true brother, Shoghi

[Letter No. 2]

(To Mr E. E. Kluge)

July 10th, 1931

Dear Baha'i Brother,

I am directed by Shoghi Effendi to inform you of the receipt of your letter dated June 12th, 1931.

Your whole letter centers around the authenticity of 'Abdu'l-Baha's Will, a thing which no one in the Orient among the believers & the enemies of the Cause has thought to challenge.

Shoghi Effendi has felt it below his dignity to subject so sacred a document to a scientific expert examination so long as no serious doubt has been entertained by any considerable number of believers throughout the world.

2

It might interest you to know, however, that the Will in its entirety has been closely examined by experts appointed by the Palestine government authorities. Not even the slightest objection or the faintest doubt has been expressed concerning its authenticity by them.

'Abdu'l-Baha has even stated that the House of Justice would be the only [only underlined] body that would administer the affairs of the Cause after Him. The fact He has in a Tablet revealed to Persian believers who had questioned Him about this point stated plainly that this was "a hidden secret concealed within the shell of the Cause" & that its significance would surely be revealed in the future.

3

Shoghi Effendi never felt the need, nor does he feel it at present, in spite of your letter, to expatiate upon such matters. The very progress of the Cause, the extension of the Administration, will in themselves constitute the surest evidences of the authenticity of the Will as well as of the soundness of all its provisions.

He wishes you, therefore, not to indulge in premature & hasty considerations which can bring in their wake nothing but disillusionment & regret.

Even in Germany where a certain number of believers have fallen the dupe to Mrs. White's foolish assertions, a few among them have expressed themselves as having been misled in this matter. They have plainly stated that their objections have not been directed to either the Will or the institution of the Guardianship but to the personnel of the National Assembly & the manner it is functioning.

The future will surely reveal not only the truth but also will testify in a manner that none can question the wisdom of the verities enshrined in so priceless & momentous a document.

With the assurance of Shoghi Effendi's prayers for your spiritual advancement & the removal of every doubt that may still perplex your mind.

Yours sincerely,
H. Rabbani

read & approved
Shoghi

---

Partial Copy of Letter in Ac. Div.:

September 2, 1930.

A photostat copy of a "Report on the Writing shown on the photographs of the alleged will of Abdul Baha." The report is by Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell of 85, Eccleston Square, London, England, and who is the editor of "The Analyst."

This is an important historical document concerning the Bahai Religion. I therefore wish you to place it on file in your library. Please file it under "Bahai Religion" or "Bahai Literature," and also under "Abdul Baha," otherwise researchers of the Bahai Religion would not find it.

Signed Ruth White (Mrs. H. Lawrence White, Butler Hall, 88 Morningside Drive, New York Cit

---

Dr. C. (Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha. 1930.

All Documents Deposited by Ruth White at the Library of Congress in one PDF

See the Ruth White webpage.

Professional genealogist Will Johnson's webpage, Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell

Compare: Abdul-Baha's authentic 1912 Covenant

Ruth White

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Ruth%20White.htm>

Dr. C. (Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress
Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha.* 1930.

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CAMitchell\_Report.htm

Bibliography

White, Ruth. Abdul Baha and the Promised Age. xv, 224. New York: Ruth White (Also New York: J. J. Little and Ives), 1927.

White, Ruth. The Bahai Religion and Its Enemy, the Bahai Organization. 233. Rutland, Vt.: The Tuttle Co., 1929.

White, Ruth. Is the Bahai Organization the Enemy of the Bahai Religion?: An Appendix to Abdul Baha and the Promised Age. 22. New York: White, 1929. <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteOEBr.pdf>

White, Ruth. Abdul Baha's Alleged Will is Fraudulent: An Appendix to The Bahai Religion and Its Enemy, the Bahai Organization. 21. Rutland, Vt.: The Tuttle Co., 1930.

White, Ruth. Correspondence Between the High Commissioner of Palestine and Ruth White, Concerning the Alleged Will and Testament of Sir Abdul Baha Abbas. 11. Los Angeles, Calif.: White, 1932. (See Ruth White Collection, Library of Congress, 1930) <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/RWhiteLibC.htm>

White, Ruth. Bahai Leads Out of the Labyrinth. 259. New York: Universal Publishing Co., 1944. (pages 257, 258, 259 restored) <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteBLOL.pdf>

White, Ruth. Abdul Baha's Questioned Will and Testament. 129. Beverly Hills: White, 1946. (Pages 18,20, 32, 50 restored.) <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteABQWT.pdf>

H-Bahai (At times, a highly unreliable source, especially in regard to dissident Bahais.)

White, Ruth. Abdul Baha's Questioned Will and Testament. Beverly Hills: Ruth White, 1946. (Pages 18,20, 32, 50 missing from the H-Bahai version.) Notice H-Bahai went so far as to claim page QWT50 was blank in order to conceal Ruth White's comments.

----- . Bahai Leads Out of the Labyrinth. New York: Universal Publishing Company, 1944. (pages 257, 258, 259 missing from H-Baha version.)

----- . Is the Bahai Organization the Enemy of the Bahai Religion? An appendix to Abdul Baha and the Promised Age. New York: J.J. Little and Ives Co., January 1929.

COMPARE:

Excerpts from Mirza Ahmad Sohrab's Broken Silence: The Story of Today's Struggle for Religious Freedom. New York: Universal Publishing, 1942.
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/SohrabEx.htm>

Also see US District Court of Northern Illinois rules against Haifan Baha'is - April 23, 2008
Amici curiae, Reform Bahai Faith
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USDistrictCourt07.htm>

Download All Documents Deposited by Ruth White at the Library of Congress in one PDF:
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteLCDocs.pdf>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Dermod Ryder

---

Selected Messages for 2002

---

Selected Messages for 2001

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Dermod Ryder

---

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: A Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing
Date: Saturday, July 14, 2001 10:26 PM

"Brian Walker" <bwalker@net-yan.com> wrote in message news:fed84403.0107140239.1a15cf7c@posting.google.com...
Hi Brian,

**>

> but you are surely not serious? No way can any one or any group be > scared of our poor little Fred. He is totally forgettable, any > relevance any of his ideas possibly having now being far outweighed by > the crass idiocy of his unutterably cretinous netbehaviour.

Fred's was the first unofficial site I came across on the Internet.
Reading it was my first confirmation that aberrant behaviour in the AO here was, in fact, almost universal in practice - it was not a purely UK phenomenon. His site is regarded as negative and essentially evil by the AO as a result.

I'm afraid the AO is not only scared of Fred - it is positively incontinent at the thought or prospect of anybody (even me) standing up to it! It adopts the position of not alienating anybody who is likely to cause trouble - lots of threats but only to those who will knuckle under them.
That's why the recent threats to declare certain people CBs are so much hot air - more to encourage the faithful than intimidate the "enemies."

Names were put "on the street" to gauge the reaction if the AO were
to formally declare a fresh batch of CBs. In light of the reaction I don't expect any declarations - the lads know that hell will open up for them, if they do it, in quarters where they are trying to establish their credibility as good guys. The same fear means that whatever they, you or I think of Fred, under no circumstances will they formally notify him of his expulsion.
I am indeed surprised that they allow this topic to come up as regularly as it does - it only serves to emphasise the old lack of intestinal fortitude that permeates all levels of the AO.

>
> Now you, you big bad foul-reeking Fenian (do I go too far?) are > another matter altogether.

Give you Orange B***** an inch and you'll try to take a mile - down the Garvaghy Road! A useful way of telling people that despite the differences between Fenian and Prod in Northern Ireland, there are many of us who are tolerant and both advocate and practice mutual respect - never mind taking the piss out of and slagging each other!! One can never go too far
with that aim in mind!

As ever,

Dermod

>
> All the best,
>
> Brian
>
> PS - just back on net ... lots happening, not all of it good. Cheers
> all!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: A Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing
Date: Saturday, July 14, 2001 10:45 PM

"seegar" <calrow@optonline.net> wrote in message news:3b4e60dc.23453769@news-server.optonline.net...

Dear Ceegar,

Irrespective of my opinion of Fred, which is of no relevance whatsoever, my position on his standing is clear and concise: -

If he has been expelled, he is the first person who should have been informed of this fact. If this has not been done, nobody else should be receiving information about his standing - full stop, period!

Enjoy that Ceegar!

Dermod.

PS. Personally I still prefer a fag with a mug of black Joe!

> On Thu, 12 Jul 2001 23:26:31 +0100, "Dermod Ryder" > <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote:
>
> >Not until the gomers at Wilmette have the manners, courtesy and intestinal > >fortitude to tell Fred that they have expelled him. Talk about the essence > >of sensitivity and confidentiality. The world and his son can write to the > >gomers and get information about Fred's membership status, yet Fred has been > >told nothing officially.

 > >
 > >Sounds exactly like the AO and tends to support what I wrote earlier that > >these people are incredibly stupid.
 >
 > Dear Dermot,
 >
 > You insist and plead with everyone to look at Fred as a pathetic victim. OK, let's look at this sterling example of victimhood. He insists that he is a "Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing" How does he > support this postulate of legitimacy. Well, he drones it into our skulls over and over that:
 >
 > >On Sat, 7 Jul 2001 06:26:45 -0400, "BIGS - Bahai In *Perfectly* Good Standing" <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote:
 > >Despite the slander of many fundamentalists among my > >fellow bahais, I have been a member of the bahai faith since > >1976. My ID Card may be found on my main bahai page.
 >
 > Fred conditions his membership based on his Bahai ID Card which he > posts on his "Main" bahai page. Maybe Fred ought to post on his website the back of the ID card that reads "This card is the property of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of the United states with whom rests final decision as to its validity."
 >
 > Do you really believe that Fred believes that the Administrative Order > wouldn't have any thing to say about his continual maligning of the institutions of the Faith if he were still an enrolled Bahai? Do you think they might want to consult with him? No, according to Fred the > "UHJ or it's underlings" etc. never say so much as "how do you do".
 > Do you think Fred is intelligent enough to know that there might be something amiss? I think he is, but not enough to know how foolish he > makes himself look to the intelligent who can see through his silly charade.
 >
 > Consider his campaign of advertizing and posting the details of the actions taken by the Administrative Order regarding former Bahais on > his website. His own postings spell out administrative actions that have been taken for behavior. Do you think he reads his own posts? I > assume so, however he is either in denial living in a fantasy world thinking he is a "Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing" or he is hoping > that your a sucker waiting to be taken. Dermot, I am sorry, you have > been taken as a sucker evidenced by your parroting and preaching > Fred's Dogma. Don't expect us all to be this slow on the uptake.

>
> >
> >Sorry to upset your day,
>
> Hey Dermond don't be sorry. You haven't upset me a bit. I'm having a > good day. I have my good days and my bad days. But today I feel good.
> Hope you're having a swell day yourself.
>
> >Ceegar!
> >
> That's "seegar" cause I always like to smoke a Don Diego with a cup of > espresso first thing in the morning. Some consider it a filthy habit > but I'm a work in progress sinner-hey if George Burns lived to a > hundred smoking 15 El Productos a day I feel one in the morning won't > put me in the bone yard anytime soon:)
>
> Peace and Love,
>
> Chris

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: A Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing
Date: Friday, July 20, 2001 3:23 PM

"Roger Reini" <roger@rreini.com> wrote in message news:IDJYO541sMsqUSmxeU9kiv9xqyuc@4ax.com...

>
> Then there is a difference of opinion between you and the US
National > Center regarding your status in the US Baha'i community. You believe > you should still be regarded as a member in good standing. The US > National Center and/or the US National Spiritual Assembly disagree, as > they removed your name from the rolls 2 years ago.
>
> Given the nature of your posts and communications here over the last > several years, I am not surprised by National's decision. But here is > an opportunity to clear up your status. If you feel that you were > unjustly removed from the rolls, then by all means plead your case
to > the National Spiritual Assembly.

There is certainly a "difference of opinion" because it would appear
that the NSA has told everybody that it has removed Fred from the membership
lists .... everybody that is except Fred!

Far be it from me to suggest that he should have been the first to be informed of this action - after all, I do appreciate that this is the NSA
we are talking about and making a bollix of a situation is its very purpose in existence. Now why should Fred plead his case when he has not been officially told that he has been removed from the lists? Surely if the NSA had any honour at all it would summon up the courage to tell him what it had done and apologise for the fact that it has told every other person about its action but not the one directly affected!

I realise that the concepts of honour, decency and honesty come hard to any Bahai institution but they really are going to have to try harder if they expect to garner any respect from other than the dedicated but small band of weary apologists.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk>
Subject: Re: BIGS Bunch
Date: Monday, April 02, 2001 8:32 PM

"Charles" <lmno@mindspring.com> wrote in message news:3AC8C68E.19FCC2AA@mindspring.com...
> Hello. Those of us in the "BIGS bunch" seem to waste a lotta time > here. I have lurked around for the last year or two and see the same > things pop up from the disaffected bunch. and i apologize for using the > BIGS term....

Why apologise for using a term that everybody recognises?

>
> Have "we" ever tried ignoring this ng? What would happen if we just did > not interact anymore, and left "them" to their own accord?
>
> I say "we" in parenthesis because in no way am I a representative of the > Blessed Administrative Order, and do not represent them in any shape or > fashion.... yet also realize that the mere posting of this will be > construed as some sort of "going for the jugular" or "not addressing > the issue" etc. (Ever time I address the issue, it is categorically > ignored by the ones that accuse me of not addressing it!) This recent > spat on the NM complaint is a case in point. Absolutely zero progress
> in terms of any "change" from the non-BIGS bunch.

What do you expect? Has it ever occurred to you that there just might be some merit in the NM case - that things are not rosy down New Mexico way? You know until you guys come out into the real world and show some propensity for rational discourse, nothing is going to change. Until you start to realise that your Blessed AO does make mistakes and is not prepared to rectify them because it has no reason so to do with unquestioning adherents like you and yours, the BF is going nowhere fast. Your Blessed AO has a lot of explaining to do about things it has done and things it has not done. At its core is a concept of free and unfettered consultation.

How can that be when there is no free communication, when all Bahai publications are
"reviewed" as to what they can print?

>

> So I wonder if "we" stopped interacting, if this would no longer be any > fun for those that fought so hard to get a non-moderated ng? "Our" > responses, no matter how well thought out and presented, have no effect.

Oh! To see a well thought out and presented case from you people -
that would be good. Or even to see a line of enquiry - something like,
"Does anybody know WHAT is happening in New Mexico? or "Hell! Have things got this bad that we are being taken to Court?" or perhaps and even better
"Has
anybody any ideas how to sort this mess out - is there any way this thing can be stopped from going to Court?" Nothing like that just an expectation that the world will bow down before your half baked arguments and total astonishment that it doesn't! Have you ever addressed the point of why it is that these people have left your Faith that most of them once belonged to? Have you ever let it dawn upon you that the AO may not be doing its job properly, that it might by its petty mindedness be driving out a lot of people who, if left alone to do their own thing might be an asset to your
Faith?

In this day and age the onus is on you to think for yourself based on your own toil in investigating what is truth and what isn't. On the bottom line
the only argument advanced on this topic by AO apologists has been
that the BF cannot be sued in a Court of law to make it adhere to its own rules
and the rules imposed by the civil law. It is a specious argument that will not convince anybody with but a modicum of knowledge. Now why do you think it should impress the disaffected bunch - amongst whom are some of the greatest scholars of the BF, discarded and booted out by ignoranmuses? Why should it change when not one argument advanced by the AO apologists stands up to scrutiny?

But you trot away off to a cloud cuckoo land where all is well in the BF despite falling membership and periodic financial crises. When people don't care they don't pay. And you trot away off to Peter Khan's land where the emphasis is on putting marble into Haifa rather than the Light of God into the hearts and minds of the world. You know the foundations of the New World Order have already been built in the world and construction is moving along without Bahais being involved or indeed even recognising that it is happening. The Revelation has moved on and left you to your safe fora on the Internet and marble on the mountain.

Enjoy them!

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk>

Subject: Re: BIGS Bunch

Date: Tuesday, April 03, 2001 3:53 AM

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:9abou601rhh@news1.newsguy.com...

> Well, sort of. All of the questions that Mr. Ryder suggests are a little > premature at the moment. All we have is the complaint. In that sense, > Charles is absolutely right, and, frankly, I don't quite understand Mr.

> Ryder's chastising some of us for deciding to take a wait and see attitude > with respect to what might or might not need to be done in Albuquerque.

>

> The only issues that can be reasonably discussed, at this point, are the > legal issues that would apply to the allegations raised in the complaint.

> If Mr. Ryder thinks that these issues ought not be discussed, then one > wonders why Mr. Ryder has spent so much time participating in that > discussion.

The legal issues cannot be fruitfully discussed here simply because nobody here has the inside track on the issues, evidence and the manoeuvres going on off centre stage. This is not a Legal forum - it is a Bahai one. The issues that could fruitfully be discussed are those arising from this case that, if applied, would tend towards a better dissemination of the BF

and the actual arrival of entry by troops rather than its forecast imminence - forecasts started in 1485, I think!

What could also be discussed is not the prospects of either side winning this case in the Courts but the underlying situation that has led to this Complaint being filed. What has gone wrong in this community?
Why? What action could have been taken to avoid it in the first place? Given that such action was not successful, what can be done now to resolve the situation and what lessons can be learned and applied for the future?

Of course if you just want to deny the legitimacy of the Court's jurisdiction in this matter and take yourselves off TRB - fine by me.
As one who would like to see the adminocentric faith implode and self destruct,
I rejoice in the tactical manoeuvring towards that objective.

You're all doing a grand job!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Toppling the Baha'i Faith, or Saving It?
Date: Saturday, April 21, 2001 5:03 AM

"GS Goldberg" <ssgt_goldberg@webtv.net> wrote in message news:11383-3AE0E6FD-196@storefull-168.iap.bryant.webtv.net...
> Is there anyone here actively trying to discredit and ultimately disband
> the Baha'i faith (other than Mr. Mahdi, I guess)? What exactly are > those of you trying to achieve when you attack the Faith, its teachings > or its principals? Many Baha'is I know consider talk.religion.bahai
and > alt.religion.bahai nothing more than slanderous poison. I'd like to > know exactly where the contributors to this discussion group are coming > from and what is your objective.

I cannot speak for other than myself on this one - not for those I count as "liberals" for want of a better definition and certainly not for those who appear as "fundamentalists".

You are quite correct in stating that many Bahais regard these fora as "slanderous poison" and I would guess that few either know in detail
or comprehend the issues that have been raised here and are/were the subject of the discourse. You see a lot of "liberals" believe that the expulsion of Alison Marshall and Michael McKenny, without due prior consultation, was an act of fascist terrorism. They think that the New Mexico law suit is long overdue as the national institutions either ignore or connive in the type of alleged corruption that is at its heart. They view the suppression of "Dialogue", the mendacious denunciation of "A Modest Proposal" and the purging of liberals from the Faith as being contrary to its principles. They see a Faith that numerically is in decline and therefore not fulfilling its mission. They observe Bahais acquiescing in this decline, unconcerned about it, perhaps even secretly encouraging it to better further their ambitions to attain rank within the administrative order.

They see apologists arise not with answers but with cant - those who say that such things CANNOT happen within the Faith as they are not SUPPOSED to happen within the Faith and nary a one sees or wishes to see the fallacy inherent in this stance.

And therein lies the rub - a religion at whose core is CONSULTATION and investigation of truth performs neither. Bahais don't know and don't want to know the liberal argument because they prefer the comfort of ignorance; the fear that knowledge or acceptance of its veracity will undermine their faith in the administrative order, whose very word they have been told is infallible.

But the Faith is not the AO - the AO exists to serve it, not be the object thereof. The real Faith doesn't need an AO - it has to do with the heart and the actions of the individual. The real Faith is inclusivist, not doctrinaire. You can talk in terms of Unity in Diversity and think that if you have many racial groups included you have diversity. That is only and the easiest form of unity in diversity. The real thing is reconciling, accepting and tolerating people of vastly differing belief systems. How do you get Jew and Arab to co-exist peacefully in the Middle East, Serb and Muslim in the Balkans, Catholic and Protestant in Northern Ireland? You do it through a long arduous process of fostering acceptance, mutual respect, tolerance, mediation and conflict resolution. This involves, inter alia, bringing contending parties to the table for consultation on their differences. You cannot change or undo those differences but you can lead people to a lessening of fear, a building of respect and confidence and a living together, if not in love then at least in peace.

There is no consultation within the BF - it throws the liberals out and so they gather here and other places and put their argument, often (and why not?) in a robust fashion.

I can't say whether it will result in a saving of the BF or not - I can however say that if you want to save the BF (and that decision lies with the Bahais alone), certain things will have to change - like the attitude which expels rather than reconciles. Personally I think it is of little consequence whether the BF is saved or not - for truth is that the Revelation lives in the world, belongs to the world (and not the BF) and is slowly being worked through.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: I have nothing to do with the election of the UHJ (was: something else)
Date: Thursday, April 26, 2001 4:20 AM

"Pat Kohli" <kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net> wrote in message news:3AE792F3.BB033F6A@ameritel.net...

Hi Pat,

> Personally, I find shunning much better than relaying nasty dreams, or claiming > that 'Abdu'l Baha wrote bad things about Baha'is, etc. and so on. Shunning > shows more toleration than blind hatred. When I read the "GUESS WHO SAID THIS > ABOUT BAHAI'S" message I thought to myself, this was an utterly marvelous world > where MrMahdi might have brought in a friend who can read 'Abdu'l Baha, spell
> "Baha'i" and insult us, rather than just read the propaganda, tell us it is > "bahai" and all quite thoroughly refuted. If MrMahdi shunned us, his blind > hatred wouldn't be so visible, would it?

Don't feel hatred for Mahdi - feel sorry for him that he is a blind, nasty, bigoted eedjit of the first order. But never shun him because, who knows but that one day another brain cell may start to function and he will come to realise that his diatribe of hatred is not good for either his physical or spiritual well-being. That can only happen if discourse, no matter how rancorous, is continued.

I have been the object of semi-official shunning by the AO in this little part of the world. It has been initiated by fear - fear that I might spread some erroneous teachings to some or all of any BIGS I might come into contact with. I am flattered that the scions of the AO think that I know enough about the BF to be able to render some informed discourse thereon, which might convert others to my way of thinking. I am impressed that they regard "little old me" as a threat to their rigidly imposed views and doctrines. I am honoured that some BIGS have told me that I'm not the proto-CB they had been warned to expect. But mostly I "is over the moon" that such blind hatred is purveyed by the New World Order (sick) - what a grand reassurance that things ain't going to chance if these loonies ever get into any position of responsibility.

> My mother used to say that when you have nothing nice to say, say nothing.
> Shunning is an extension of this.

Shunning is the ultimate act of hatred and an attempt to force one's POV on another. You really want to read up about Captain Boycott and the (later) Irish War of Independence in which shunning played a pivotal role.

When somebody is told to divorce a spouse because that spouse has adopted a different belief system, that is an act of violence against a family and a perversion of the Unity espoused in the BF. Gathering together, in Unity, a load of prats who already agree with each other is dead easy - gathering in a unity, people who not only don't agree with each other but are prepared to kill to prove the point, is a trifle more difficult. Sorry to disagree with your mother but Abdul Baha said that we were to make friends of our enemies not just say nothing about them.

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Albuquerque - some corroboration
Date: Saturday, April 28, 2001 5:42 AM

"Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au> wrote in message news:3aea8e33.0@news.acay.com.au...

> Pat,
> And how is this corroboration for the lawsuit being currently exploited by > wannabee internet lawyers? Are you expecting this to be entered in this > court case or is it just for our interest?

> Mark

Elderberry,

Who knows? Wouldn't it be fun if this account were to turn up in evidence along with a dozen more like it? That would be some laxative!

Aren't the allegations in the lawsuit corroborated by this account to greater or lesser extent? The Plaintiff alleged that an individual referred to himself as the voice of God and here's another account which says that the individual referred to himself as the voice of God? Isn't that corroboration or in Bahaispeak is it just two enemies of the Faith saying things that BIGS don't like? Duh!

Like I said to Herr Schaut - you gomers would be much better off putting the house in order rather than coming here and elsewhere making inane comments about this case. That it has been filed in Court is indisputable - what should worry you is whether or not there are more of them coming down the line.

Of course if any of you had a working brain between the ears (or indeed in any other part of the anatomy) you'd keep quiet here and devote your efforts to terrorising anybody else who would have the unmitigated gall to take the blessed AO to Court. Or maybe that explains the absence of Herr Schaut and his ilk. Duuuuh!

> "Pat Kohli" <kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net> wrote in message > news:3AE9FE24.CBD9DB5B@ameritel.net...
> > Allahu Abha!
> >
> > Some weeks back, shortly after this story broke, there was some interest > > in getting additional anecdotes about the Albuquerque LSA. At the time, > > I didn't see much details, just generalization. Recently, I did find > > some details on another forum. I am reposting here, without the authors > > expressed written consent - my thinking is that if/when they find out I > > did this, they can claim it for themselves, ignore it, or complain to > > the US Navy and get an apology. In the mean time, I'd like to think > > that a few questions are answered. I did try to blank out some personal > > details to try to maintain some possible anonymity.

> >
> > Blessings!
> > - Pat
> > kohli@ameritel.net
>
> -----
> -----
> >
> > Since Albuquerque has been in the Baha'i headlines lately, allow me to > > reminisce a little about some of my own experiences in perhaps one of > > the most dysfunctional and loonier local Baha'i communities in the > > world.
> >
> > I came to the Albuquerque Baha'i community in 1989 _____ and it was > > as a result of my own experiences with the Albuquerque Baha'i community > > which began the process of finally turning me off the religion > > completely. Interestingly it was with those same cast of characters > > mentioned in Yorgos Marinakis' complaint that I went through my own > > travails.
> >
> > My first encounter with the LSA of Albuquerque was in early Spring > > 1991. I was a spectator in an anti-war rally outside of Zimmerman > > library on the campus of UNM (University of New Mexico), > > _____, a few days before the beginning of the Gulf War. To > > make a long story short, it seems one of the local Baha'is (or an > > employee of Channel 41 where Victory works, I never found out who) had > > spotted me and another Baha'i there and reported both of us to Kambiz > > Victory (the self proclaimed "voice of God" in the deposition). Within a > > few days after the rally I recieved a phone call from an Assembly member > > informing me in curt fashion that I had participated in a "partisan > > political rally" and so therefore was in violation of Baha'i law.
When I > > met with the LSA, a string of unsubstantiated charges and accusations > > were hurled right and left by the LSA about my "political activities" > > and how they were damaging to the Faith, etc. No amount of pleading with > > them did any good, and one Assembly member even went so far as to state > > that he believed that Baha'u'llah himself would > > support Operation Desert Storm, encouraged the big stick policy where > > international affairs were concerned, and as such so should all Baha'is > > without exception (regardless of whether they believed in the justness

> > or injustice of the war and the fight for America's Mid East petroleum > > interests). _____ This passed.

> >

> > A few short months later I had borrowed William Miller's *The Baha'i > > Faith: Its History and Teachings* from the library and one of the > > Baha'is had found out about it and reported me to the Assembly.

Victory

> > called me shortly thereafter and asked if I might come over to his house > > and bring the book with me. The meeting was friendly and cordial, at the > > end of which

> > Victory made a personal request that after I was finished with the book

> > if I could please make photocopies of the pictures of the Bab and > > Baha'u'llah for him. About a week later I recieved a highly inflammatory > > letter from the LSA among other things accusing me of having made > > photocopies of the pictures in the book and distributing them all over

> > New Mexico, and also expressing alarm at the state of my soul for > > reading a book "by a covenant breaker" (note:- Miller was never a Baha'i > > in the first place, but a Presbyterian Missionary who spent something > > like 30 years in Iran, and who culled some of his sources for the book > > from one Jalal Azal, a descendent of Mirza Yahya Nuri Subh Azal). The > > Assembly then called and asked to meet with me. The meeting with the LSA > > - attended also by _____ in my defense - was an inquisition.

> > Among other things, the Assembly demanded I surrender the book to them > > immediately. I refused. When I pointed out that it was Mr. Kambiz

> > Victory who had asked that I make a personal photocopy of the pictures > > of Baha'u'llah and the Bab for him, he denied it. The meeting ended with > > me sticking to my guns and without any mutually satisfactory resolution.

> > I returned the book to the library the next day but ordered a copy of my > > own from the university bookstore. A week later I recieved another, even > > more inflammatory, letter from the LSA threatening me with future > > sanctions should I ever behave so disrespectfully towards the LSA and > > its demands ever again. I told myself that Kambiz Victory and the > > Albuquerque LSA can go lump it, and from thereon I decided to go > > inactive, only occasionally attending Feast, and that due more to

> > _____.

> >

> > The next year and a half I mostly sat on the sidelines and watched. I > > witnessed an Assembly that became increasingly more authoritarian and > > paranoid in its modus operandi. It encouraged believers to spy on other > > believers for actual or perceived infringements of Baha'i law, > > particularly of unmarried couples living together or people who made the > > slightest criticism of the Assembly. I constantly heard malicious > > backbiting about other believers the Assembly did not like and had > > blacklisted - Deborah Buchhorn being one of them - and even witnessed > > once when at Feast during the consultation portion when the chairman of > > the Assembly ran across the room and forcefully pulled a microphone out > > of a believers hand and called an immediate halt to consultation as the > > believer was about to criticize one > > of the LSA's policies.
 > >
 > > In the late summer of 1992 a close friend of mine and of another local > > Baha'i's, due to our friendship and fellowship with her, decided to > > become a Baha'i herself. At the time when she declared, I was not in the > > United States, since I was _____. However, I came back to > > find that just as soon as she had declared, she was totally turned off > > by the LSA and the Baha'is of Albuquerque. Now this friend owned a huge > > two storey house off the campus of UNM with 8 rooms several of which she > > rented out for extra income in order to keep up with her mortgage. There > > were men and women living in the house - _____ - but there was > > absolutely no hanky-panky whatsoever going on among the people there > > _____ were mostly friends and also because most of the people > > living there were serious spiritual practioners of one sort or another.
 > > Besides _____ had Tibetan Buddhists, a Sufi and a Hindu > > devotee of Abi Da/Da Free John and her young son. Immediately after she > > declared, after being welcomed to the Baha'i community, the LSA informed > > her that she was in violation of Baha'i law for cohabitating. Any and > > all explanations fell on deaf ears - showing how far in the gutter the > > mind of the LSA actually was - so she fell inactive shortly thereafter > > and not long after that resigned from the Baha'i faith. She was badly > > backbitten by some, a few of the more looney local Baha'is even claimed > > she held "wild swingers parties and orgies at her home." The question is > > how would they have known unless they themselves had attended these > > "wild swingers parties"!

> >
> > The departure of my friend from the Baha'i faith was testimony to a > > greater problem in the Albuquerque Baha'i community, and obviously of > > the Baha'i community worldwide, and what I have come to call the > > "revolving door phenomenon." I remember that at one point there were > > something like 400 Baha'is on the rolls in Albuquerque during election > > time. Out of that many people, I can honestly say that maybe 30 to 50 > > people (maximum) ever came to Feast or that I had ever saw at any one > > time. From a community of 400 people maybe 40 people ever voted for the > > LSA each Ridvan. People would just leave as soon as they came in, and I > > would sometimes run into people on Campus who would inform me they had > > once been Baha'is but had since moved on, yet never bothered to tell the > > LSA or the local Baha'is about it. One family, however, I do remember > > simply came and donated every single one of their Baha'i books back to > > the Albuquerque community. It was there way of saying "later...see ya > > wouldn't wanna be ya"!
> >
> > In late 1993, a particularly obnoxious Muslim Iranian student at UNM, > > who was once a Revolutionary Guard in Iran (paasdaar) and who later > > turned out to have had ties to the Intelligence services of the > > government of the Islamic Republic of Iran (he would regularly spy and > > report on the activities of the Iranian students (non-Baha'i and Baha'i > > alike) at the university), without getting into the specific details, > > threatened me and another Iranian at the International Center of the > > University of New Mexico. This individual had had numerous complaints > > made about him by some female international students, two of whom he had > > apparently assaulted sexually (he was later deported from the United > > States). I went and filed a report with the UNM Police who charged him > > and had him temporarily expelled from the university. Because a series > > of complaints and a threat had been made on the Campus of the > > university, the University and the City had enough to try him for > > disorderly conduct, so I became the city's witness against this > > individual. The LSA found out about the situation and demanded that I > > drop the case arguing that it would adversely affect the Baha'is in > > Iran. When I told them it was not my case to drop and that I was

 the > > City's witness, they would have none of it. I then recieved an > > accusatory letter from the LSA to that effect, full of bogus guilt trips > > and the like, but as usual I discarded their ridiculous advice, > > especially this one which was making a plea to allow a guilty man
 to > > walk scott free. A few weeks later Mr. Kambiz Victory and I had a heated > > telephone conversation, where Victory ordered me to "drop the case" and > > follow the LSA's "instructions" or else! When I informed him that > > neither he nor the LSA had any jurisdiction in the matter, he got even > > more irate, and informed me I had problems with the covenant. I told him
 > > he was out of line to tell me anything to that effect, and, besides, > > just who the hell did he think he was. His reponse, as the one to Ms.
 > > Debrah Buchhorn, was "I am God in this city and whatever I say is His > > word."
 > >
 > > There is much, much more one could relate about Albuquerque
 and the > > cultlike reality and atmosphere of the Baha'is and the LSA, but I'll > > leave it at that for now.
 > >
 > >
 > >
 >
 >

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
 Subject: Censorship on SRB
 Date: Sunday, April 29, 2001 10:50 AM

<multiman@aros.net> wrote in message news:3aeb2a39.4524705@news.aros.net...
 > I will probably never get posted on that newsgroup being by their > preverse definition a "CB" but it is interesting to note that when I > go to the newsgroups alt.religion.bahai and talk. religin.bahai have > 10 or 13 new posts in half a day, while in 3 days I came across 2 > whole posts on this moderated group, guess most bahais on it dont have > much to say after "I agree".

Sorry guys, you are mistaken - it isn't censorship on SRB. Actually they have all either gone AWOL or have fallen asleep or maybe off the cliff
 in which case, we ought to call the Coastguard to fish them out of the water.
 Mind you that would waken them up!

I think that they have all gone to sleep - after all, sitting at the control desk just waiting for posts, with precious few appearing and those that do, interminably boring, would send any sane individual off to the land of nod.

No inference, of any kind whatsoever, however, should be drawn from that statement as to the sanity or otherwise of anybody on SRB.

Now for the evidence of this assertion - I sent the following post and haven't heard a word since, not a cheep.

----- Original Message -----

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

Sent: Tuesday, April 24, 2001 10:38 AM

Subject: Re: Opening of terraces on mount Carmel, web broadcast?

**>

> "Sizwe Cawe" <Cawe@getafix.utr.ac.za> wrote in message

> news:bo9YYB.A.XWE.hSB56@bounty.bcca.org...

> > Allah'u'Abha

**> >

> > The opening of the terraces will be broadcast live on the internet.

**>

> I understand edited highlights are to be shown on The Truman Show on

Irish

> Television.

**>

> As ever,

**>

> Dermod.

**>

It's not as if it is a complicated message or anything like that, so - WAKEN UP LADS! AT ONCE!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Subject: Re: Re: From the attorney

Date: Friday, June 01, 2001 8:10 PM

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:9f954g01ko8@enews1.news guy.com...

> > > While being pedantic, you manage to prove my point. Thank you.

**>

> > And what point is that?

**>

> It should be obvious.

**>

> > > That certainly explains how you've managed to fail to address the whole > > > issue regarding the Lemon test.

>
> > Au contraire
>
> You did, indeed, point out that the statutes under which organizations might > incorporate themselves pass the Lemon test. We aren't talking about > statutes, however. We're talking about applying the Lemon test to the > actions of the court itself.

How do you apply a test regarding the applicability of statutes, to the actions of the Court which is charged with applying that test in cases involving the religious corporations?

> If you think the Lemon test ought not apply to actions of the court itself, > then I suggest you take a look at Serbian Orthodox Diocese.

A matter of doctrine!

>
> I will, again, ask the question you have yet to answer: how might the court > determine whether or not any of the alleged acts constitute fraud without > interpreting Baha'i Writings?

US Courts do not intervene in cases involving doctrine unless said doctrines are contrary to law - e.g. polygamy in the Mormon case. FYI, fraud is a criminal act, the proving of which before a Court does not involve Bahai Writings.

The Declaration of Trust of incorporated assemblies is not a part of the Writings. It constitutes a statement of the aims and objects of the Assembly, the methods it will use to achieve them (which are generally within the required definitions to secure tax exemption status) and the rules whereby it will conduct its business. I understand these rules must conform to aspects of the Statute law if the Corporation is to be registered. They become thereby a Covenant between the Assembly, its members AND the State which grants corporate status and the benefits derived therefrom. The State and the members have a legitimate interest in ensuring that corporations abide by the terms of the Covenant - for Covenant Breaking is indeed a spiritual disease as well as being contrary to the Civil Law, in this instance.

It is my understanding, that of the Plaintiff and her Attorney and probably many on this list, that this is a civil suit as to the proper implementation of civil and not religious law. You seem to think differently - that First Amendment protection extends to all aspects of this Assembly's business and that it can do as it pleases because the Courts would have to interpret Bahai law to review any of its actions and are constitutionally barred from so doing. Why then did the Court move against the Mormon Church on the matter of church doctrine of polygamy? Surely the Mormon Church was entitled to First Amendment protection on this?

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: A Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing
Date: Monday, July 09, 2001 10:38 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20010709222546.11556.00006469@ng-fc1.aol.com...
> >If Fred has been expelled > >how is it that he has not been told of this by the NSA?
>
> And for the umpteenth time Fred was not informed of his removal from the rolls > because he told the Institutions he would consider any attempt to contact him > as a harrassment. So they accomodated his wishes.

Or they are shit scared of him. Seems as good, if not better, an explanation than this!

Once again we have a lack of due process of any kind other than that which appeals to the comfort of the AO. Proves what I've always believed - kick a bully in the ass and his shirt tail won't touch in his haste to get away.

So unless Fred stops posting his claim OR the AO has the manners to tell him that he is out (which decision he could appeal) we're just going to have this old favourite crop up again and again. Of course that he might appeal such a decision to the House might be a powerful motive not to notify him that he has been fired ....

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: A Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing
Date: Thursday, July 12, 2001 6:26 PM

"seegar" <calrow@optonline.net> wrote in message news:3b4cdb7e.2200312@news-server.optonline.net...
> Well Fred, looks like it's about time to take down that bogus ID

Card

> on your website don't you think?

Not until the gomers at Wilmette have the manners, courtesy and intestinal fortitude to tell Fred that they have expelled him. Talk about the essence of sensitivity and confidentiality. The world and his son can write to the gomers and get information about Fred's membership status, yet Fred has been told nothing officially.

Sounds exactly like the AO and tends to support what I wrote earlier that these people are incredibly stupid.

Sorry to upset your day, Ceegar!

>

> >On Sat, 7 Jul 2001 06:26:45 -0400, "BIGS - Bahai In *Perfectly* Good Standing" <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote:

>

> >Despite the slander of many fundamentalists among my > >fellow bahais, I have been a member of the bahai faith since > >1976. My ID Card may be found on my main bahai page.

>

>

> >On 11 Jul 2001 11:51:05 -0700, bighappymonkey@yahoo.com (Dave Fiorito)
wrote:

>

> >>bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA (Michael McKenny) wrote in
message
news:<9iho1l$72v$1@freenet9.carleton.ca>...

> >>

> >>> If there is anything in writing stating that Fred has been > >>> disenrolled from the Baha'i Faith, let that be produced...

> >>

> >>Michael - here it is:

> >>

> >>Subject: Status of Fredrick Glaysher

> >>

> >>

> >>To: Mr. David Fiorito

> >>

> >>Dear Baha'i Friend,

> >>

> >>In response to your inquiry about the status of Mr. Fredrick Glaysher,

> >>the records of the Baha'i National Center reflect that Mr.
Glaysher's

> >>name was removed from the membership rolls in February 1999, and he is > >>not considered to be a member of the Baha'i Faith.

> >>

> >>With loving Baha'i greetings,

> >>

> >>***** * *****

> >>For the Office of the Secretary
>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> Subject: Re: bahai - After over five years of observing the tactics of bahai fundamentalists,
Date: Tuesday, September 18, 2001 4:42 PM

"Patrick Bateman" <aaaaaaaaaaa@prodigy.net> wrote in message news:oBNp7.40800$jy6.1755982977@newssvr15.news.prodigy.com...
> Funny..however all religions have fundamentalists, and frankly, the Bahai
> fundamentalist in comparision is quite tame.

My dear Patrick,

How true! Your typical Bahai fundamentalist is quite tame in comparison to your extreme Muslim fundamentalist but I have no doubt that, in time, this balance will be redressed. When they have reached beyond this current embryonic stage and attained maturity, your average Bahai fundamentalist will be every bit as proficient, if not more so, than any fundamentalist currently in play. After all are not Bahais expected to excel in all things especially fundamentalism?

On current trends they should be every bit as nasty to the next Manifestation as other fundamentalists are to their Manifestation today.

As ever,

Dermod.

>
>
> > 1. Always smear and attack the individual.
>
> 1. Physically smearing and attacking the individual.
>
>
> > 2. Lure into supposed discussion then cut the jugular.
>
> 2. Lures Bahai's into supposed police station for "questioning", then > promptly cuts the jugular vein.
>
>
> > 3. Work together to create the perception for non-bahais > > that the individual is unbalanced, aberrant, etc....
>
> Works together with other Muslims to show Bahai's, or whatever other > minority religion that they are non-believers and force them to recant

their > beliefs.(See revolution)
>
>
> > 4. Change or ignore the subject.
>
> I don't know if I can satirize this statement because there is nothing > really that wrong with it.
>
>
> > 5. Shift to the past and argue over who said what, when, where, > > how, etc....
>
> Shift to the past by growing out hair, creating an oppressed society, > mocking women and making them useless in society by not allowing them to go > to school, etc. etc. etc.
>
>
>
>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: something Fred posted on Beliefnet
Date: Tuesday, September 18, 2001 6:03 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0109181342.305d46cc@posting.google.com...
Dave,

> How does any of this constitute > "hounding" or even come close to an act of terror on the scale of
the > events of September 11th?

Lived with terrorism this thirty years past, none of which, fortunately,
was on a scale comparable with the events of 11 September. It was and is still terrorism however! It need not involve killing to be terrorism - it just has to be the threat of violence or some other measure designed to terrorise
a individual or society into accepting a circumstance or set of values
that it would not otherwise accept. Something like threatening a BIGs with being declared a Covenant Breaker, with all of the social penalties that entails,
because he doesn't toe the party line.

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: something Fred posted on Beliefnet
Date: Wednesday, September 19, 2001 4:27 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0109190629.2f671fa1@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message news:<9o8jqd$bnmsa$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...
>
> > Something like threatening a BIGs with being declared a Covenant Breaker, > > with all of the social penalties that entails, because he doesn't toe the > > party line.
>
>
> Dermod,
>
> Have I ever done that? No. So I'll ask again - how have I ever > "terrorized" Fred - or anyone for that matter. Is there anything - > even in _that_ post - That was a threat? Hardly. So apart from > pointing out the fact that Fred is not, as he claims, a Baha'i in good > standing and getting hyper angry at him once (for which I have > apologized) what have I ever done that constituted "terrorism"?

Firstly I did not accuse you of threatening to call anybody a CB. So I could conclude the tone of your post above is an attempt to intimidate me into withdrawing what I said. That is a form of terrorism. But I won't accuse you of terrorism - just note that control of the temper is a must for any form of reasoned discourse. BTW I can understand why many Americans are upset this past week - without wishing to seem arrogant, I've been through this same type of experience on many occasions many years ago. I know it and know how to cope with and overcome it. You get on with your normal life for that is the greatest spurning you can give the terrorist - the knowledge that he has not succeeded in terrorising you.

Fred is not the most liked or admired person on TRB - BIGS just don't like and really get their knickers in a knot over him. I have to ask why this is? It's not because of nastiness - after all nobody tackled me for telling Evensong to "fuck off" or giving the same message to Miss Maddy - it was actually a toss-up as to which of them would be told to "fuck off" but Evensong won because he is obnoxious whilst Maddy is just a buffoon. But then everybody knows that Evensong and Maddy are nasty arseholes and therefore, nobody cares if they are told where to go, by me or anybody else.

But all of you BIGS really give Fred the "Hate Week" treatment - these past few days have seen threats of litigation, something, incidentally of which I thought there was general agreement that it was a subject to which none would stoop. And then Eureka! I realised why Fred gets the treatment he does - his spamming and his website are a threat to the AO, a clear and present danger, for Fred has painstakingly not only assembled the evidence of the canker within but he constantly publicises it to the extent that he really gets up noses and AO noses at that! Worst of all, however is that Fred is uncontrollable - he's a true mad dog in your eyes and you don't know how to deal with him.

Now BIGS idolise the love bomb technique but never use it on Fred for he's immune. He knows the system intimately and he knows how to counteract with pithy comments advising you all to pith off!

I basically agree with him that the AO terrorises people - terror is more than bombs or kamikaze aircraft. A whispered aside in the right circumstances can instil terror (like a threat to be made a CB) - most ethnic cleansing is carried out by a piece of "good" advice to the effect that one would be better off NOT living in this neighbourhood, from a gentleman who is known or assumed to have the "right connections" to ensure the advice is heeded. Twenty years ago the AO tried that particular threatening tactic on with me and were told where they could stick it! Others can also testify to that including Dennis Rogers whose experiences were posted on TRB recently. And you guys hate Fred for this, for his continued exposing of the sewer that the AO has become. Of course you all hate Juan, Alison, Michael, Nima etc as well and for the same reason and give them the same treatment but somewhat reduced for they don't post as much as Fred who is just a real pain in the butt for doing what he does so well!

Fred is an avid counter terrorist and he's good at it as the whimpering from the BIGS proves!

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: relevant quotes
Date: Wednesday, September 19, 2001 5:17 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0109190605.306997cb@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message news:<9o8ele$bbpb4$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...
> > My dear fellow,
> >
> > Can you learn to differentiate between "stern criticism" and "attacks"?
>
> Calling Baha'is terrorists and accusing the UHJ of murder is "stern criticism"? I call them attacks.

Actually I think that noting that the AO is not adverse to using intimidatory tactics (terrorism by a nicer turn of phrase) is not unjustified. It can also be noted that the AO had "motive" for terminating Daniel Jordan in that he was apparently homosexual, a condition that is anathema to it. Is it the case that making observations to this effect is an attack? I don't think so!
>
> > Those who criticise do not necessarily attack.
>
> Karen and Juan criticize - Fred attacks.

In your opinion but perhaps Karen's "criticism" is more effective than Fred's "attacks"; on the other hand it may be that one complements the other
>
> > Criticism is largely justified as a means of having grievances redressed - > > attack is an attempt to destroy.
>
> Consultation is the method given by Baha'u'llah as the means to address grievances. Criticism was, for the most part, condemned.

Tell that to Alison! And before you get on your high horse - the onus of initiating consultation rests on the institution that decided to expel her without giving any notice beforehand. It's antics like this that makes the AO appear the total little shits they really are!

>
> > If you cannot or choose not to distinguish between them, you'll > > never be able to distinguish between your friends and your foes!
>
> As long as people silently approve of Fred's actions he will be seen > as being allied with folks like you, Karen, Juan, et al.

A hell of a sight better than being aligned with Semple, Khan and the rest of the vipers together with their toadies and brown nosed devotees.

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: relevant quotes
Date: Friday, September 21, 2001 5:12 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0109200720.1ce9af6b@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message news:<9ob5h1$c3drb$2@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...

>
> > Actually I think that noting that the AO is not adverse to using > > intimidatory tactics (terrorism by a nicer turn of phrase) is not > > unjustified.
>
> Terrorism has a specific political meaning - causing fear in others > either intentionally or unintentionally in not terrorism. Otherwise > they would have to arrest Stephen King.

So threatening to have somebody declared a CB is NOT intimidation and not terrorism therefore. The essence of terrorism is that it is the use or threat of use of violence so as to achieve an objective. The AO threatens dissidents with the tag of CB so as to shut them up. That's terrorism!

> > It can also be noted that the AO had "motive" for terminating > > Daniel Jordan in that he was apparently homosexual, a condition that is > > anathema to it. Is it the case that making observations to this effect is > > an attack? I don't think so!
>
>
> Sure it is. The homosexuality is not a cause for murder. There is > nothing in this world that justifies homicide of any kind - with the > exception of self defence where your life is being threatened. So yes > saying the AO had a motive because Dan Jordan might have been gay is > an attack. See Nima's comment on that subject.

Saying that the AO had a motive is not an attack - it is a statement of fact. If the said person were homosexual and given that that condition is sternly condemned within the AO then it has motive for removing the person from the scene. That is not the same as accusing it of doing so. I believe the Aqdas justifies homicide by way of capital punishment which is hardly self defence.

> > > Those who criticise do not necessarily attack.
> > >
> > > Karen and Juan critisize - Fred attacks.
> > >
> > In your opinion but perhaps Karen's "criticism" is more effective than > > Fred's "attacks"; on the other hand it may be that one complements the other

>

> My opinion is not the issue. Objectively speaking the pattern and > timing of Fred's comments makes them attacks. He crafts his messages > in such a way to evoke anger in his audience. Those are attacks.

On the contrary - Fred's "anger" reflects more of his concern, sorrow
and frustration at the prevailing conditions and a desire to rectify them.
You, like the AO, cannot see this because the AO is perfect! I think the anger that emerges from the AO is more the result of the correctness of what Fred says than anything else - it is the typical anger of the guilty!

>

> > > Consultation is the method given by Baha'u'llah as the means
to > > > address grievances. Criticism was, for the most part, condemned.

> >

> > Tell that to Alison! And before you get on your high horse - the onus
of

> > initiating consultation rests on the institution that decided to expel her > > without giving any notice beforehand. It's antics like this that makes

the

> > AO appear the total little shits they really are!

>

> It is her responsibility to appeal. The UHJ made their decision under > the assurance that Alison had been made aware of their concerns.

Now

> the ball is in her court.

Has the House told you that? Because it has never told Alison. In Haifa and the AO the right hand knoweth not what the left hand is doing!
Nothing
unusual in that!

> > > > If you cannot or choose not to distinguish between them, you'll > > > > never be able to distinguish between your friends and your foes!

> > >

> > > As long as people silently approve of Fred's actions he will be seen

> > > as being allied with folks like you, Karen, Juan, et al.

> >

> > A hell of a sight better than being aligned with Semple, Khan and the rest > > of the vipers together with their toadies and brown nosed devotees.

>
> I am not aligned with Mr. Kahn or Mr. Semple - I am aligned with
the > Universal House of Justice.

Of which they are members!

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: losin yr bahai cool
Date: Sunday, September 23, 2001 8:51 PM

Poor old Night Shadow can't stand the heat so he's away off with Reini to indulge in self congratulatory praise as to how they endured the vacuous on TRB and failed to conquer. As to his point that those who are critical should suspend that activity and, instead, work to expand the numbers in the BF - there's more than enough evidence to show that when good people join and refuse to go along with the cant, trying instead to effect reform,
they are ostracised, vilified and cast out as rejects. To further confuse dear
Chas - been there, done that, got totally pissed off and pissed off as a result.

As I have always said, the proof of any pudding being in the eating thereof - if all was well with the AO, millions would be in line to join.
They are not! Does this persuade our fundie friends to even seriously consider that there is a need to reform the AO in a bid to make it more attractive? Their only reaction is to view the bearers of criticism as "evil." That's why they are going nowhere fast.

Farewell Night Shadow, farewell Roger - we will miss you! We miss headaches too!

"NightShadow" <seals_jay@hotmail.com> wrote in message news:3ba9c5b8.77960428@news...
> You know.. I think Charles has the right idea- and I believe I'm going > to follow suit. I'm sick and fucking tired of people bitching and > moaning about things they feel they've been denied. I'm tired of > coming here and watching people defame, attack, criticise, devalue, > demoralize, compare, deny, repudiate and distort the Baha'i Faith-
all > in the name of "justice" or free expression.
>
> Something Abdul-Baha said in SAQ (I won't quote it word for word > because I'm too tired to go searching through the book right now).
To > paraphrase, he spelled out the non-existence of evil. Evil is a > negative. Good is a positive. If you have good, you've got > *something*. Evil is a negative, therefore something is *taken away.*
> Fear is the absence of courage, hate is the absence of love, > impatience is the absence of patience- you get the idea. This a > physical world, a world of substance, ergo, a world of positivity and > existence, since to "exist" means to have substance. Evil is, > therefore, non-existent.

 >
 > Since evil takes away, then that means it *absorbs* goodness but gives > nothing back. Like the color black simply absorbs light. A black hole > absorbs *anything*. A vacuum absorbs air. It radiates nothing, puts > out nothing, produces nothing. People can acknowledge "evil" and > inspire within themselves fear, hatred, loathing, doubt, > uncertainty... negative emotions in general, but "evil" hasn't acted > upon them so much as they have acted upon themselves- they have given > up something within themselves and reduced their moral/spiritual > fiber. They have lost a part of themselves, but taken in nothing. To be > evil is a great loss indeed.
 >
 > "Evil" people do nothing but destroy and take away, they suck up
 and > sap the life out of everything that is good around them. They abhor > goodness (much in the same way that nature abhors a vacuum).
 You can > not apply justice to people who are evil- it is a pointless effort > because they will only absorb it and grow stronger as you put more > into them.
 >
 > Justice is a goodness, it is the "best beloved of God." To throw away
 > justice on evil is a waste of time and effort- and of God's good > grace. Justice is not to attack back or kill or destroy. What happened
 > last week was an atrocious thing and it was an incredible example
 of > evil. Going after the people who committed or planned those acts,
 with > an intent to destroy them, is not justice- it is vengeance.
 >
 > Justice, in regards to 9/11/01, would be to rebuild. To be *positive*.
 > To take responsibility for the things the US has done in other > countries that are less than noble. As much attention as we, > Americans, focus on New York right now, we should be moving to rebuild > the cities we have been bombing and the countries we have been > attacking for whatever reason- with absolute relentlessness and good > will. THAT is justice. THAT would be *positive* and productive.
 THAT > would be "turning the other cheek."
 >
 > I have seen many people attacking the Faith, guised in "informing
 the > public" or "seeking answers" or whatever else. I'm sick of it. Their > actions are not just- they are lashing out in an effort to harm a > religious body that, from their perspective, has harmed them. They > feel that, since the Baha'i Faith's AO isn't being just, they are > justified in attacking it- two wrongs do not make a right. It is not > justice they seek; it is revenge, couched in debate and exposure.

>
> If they were truly just then they would do nothing but sing the > praises of the Baha'i Faith, noting the good things that are within it > and drawing as many people to it so that whatever flaws it has can be > remedied by qualified people. Instead, they scream from the rooftops,
> "No justice can be found in the Baha'i Faith" "The Baha'is are little > better than terrorists" "The Baha'i AO lies constantly" "The Baha'i > Faith is rife with censorship" "The Baha'i Faith condones the death
of > so-and-so individual" and much more. I'm fucking sick and tired of
it.
> Many of you people have no intention of doing a whit of good within
or
> TO the Faith- you would rather spend more time bitching about a > problem than getting off your ass and bringing people into the Faith > that can help resolve the problems. You would rather pick and poke
and > prod and split hairs and argue and debate.
>
> If you don't like the Faith so fucking much why don't you get off
your > ass and help it out? Why don't you get involved with your communities > and effect change? Why don't you stop whining and support it-flaws > and all. The flaws will never change as long as people are constantly > told to stay away from it. If you want it to change, then DO something > about it instead of defacing it.
>
> The Baha'i Faith is a thing of beauty. It was created to unify people > and raise them up to a higher form of spiritual understanding. It was > not created over night and it will continue to grow- imagine how much > faster it could grow and develop in all the right directions with you > helping it instead of damaging it.
>
> I love the Baha'i Faith ardently. I look to it as a constant source of > guidance and support. I look to the teachings of the Blessed Beauty > and weep at the injustices it is enduring at your hands. It does > nothing, in this world of substance, to harm or molest you while you > continue to try and destroy it. I see the majority of this newsgroup > as sick, petulant, arrogant people enjoying nothing more than beating > up something beautiful that refuses to attack back. Every attack
you > make against the Faith, every time you "expose" another flaw within > the body of it, I see another bruise, welt and scar creep across the > face of this inestimable beauty that is the Baha'i Faith... and it > makes me want to cry at the cruelty of it.
>
> I'm no longer coming here. I came here in the hopes of answering > questions that promote the Faith and instead I find myself defending > it or defending myself. I know my limits and mine are reached with > this newsgroup.

>
> I have no intention of suing Fred- never did. He'll probably ignore it > anyway- so be it. I had hoped my threat to sue for his clear slander > would give him some perspective on what he's doing to himself and > others. I pray that he DOES mature soon- as do I pray that all of you > do, as well as myself. I am not perfect. I am human. I will make > mistakes and I will harm people- but I will never do so with malice
in > mind or at heart.
>
> No. Instead, I will simply leave you people alone to whine while you > attempt to kill the one thing I would gladly die for.
>
> Good-bye.
>
> Allah'u'abha!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: something Fred posted on Beliefnet
Date: Monday, September 24, 2001 2:28 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0109200703.42b05993@posting.google.com...
Dave

>
> I am sorry that you have to live with terrorism day in and day out.
> But with all due respect your analysis of Fred as anti-AO hero is > about as accurate as the characterisation of bin laden as a hero of > Islam.

I have lived with terrorism, have known terrorists, read about them
and tried to understand their psychology and modus operandi.

>
> I do not fear Fred. The AO does not fear Fred. I have sent seekers > to his website and they have always come back to me saying that this > guy has a big chip on his shoulder and is obviously out to smear the > Baha'is. His website is not a collection of evidence. Have you ever > seen the film 12 Angry Men? Fred is like the juror who goes on a > racist tirade and all of the other jurors turn away. He no longer is > taken seriously because of the obvious bias and spite he shows.
That > is what Fred's site is all about and folks see right through it.
>
> People get pissed at Fred because he claims to be a Baha'i and them > proceeds to insult the Faith in the most venomous way possible.

First mistake - Fred does not insult the Faith. He is after the AO like
the rest of the critics. Apart from Miss Maddy, who on this forum attacks
the essence of the BF? What is criticised and attacked at times is the excesses of the AO and the way it seeks to pervert the BF.

I will grant you that Fred's continued spamming can get a bit tedious but his Website is a collection of evidence which stands to the total shame of the AO. Have you ever asked yourself why Fred calls himself a Bahai yet conducts warfare against the AO? Why does Juan have the site he has? Why has he left the AO and written works critical of it? Why did the AO spy on Nima? Why can the AO not include these guys and a lot like them? It's dead easy to turn around and explain it away as evil on their part. The hard bit is figuring out what the AO did that forced these guys out and motivated them to offer resistance. That's your problem!

>

> I got angry at him because the events of September 11th make all > other acts of terrorism ever perpetrated look like minor events - > sidebars of history. I do not wish to diminish the effects of > terrorism in Northern Ireland but what we have just witnessed makes > the troubles look tame.

In scope - yes but in nature, no! There is no difference between the WTC and the car bomb in Omagh other than the number of casualties. Both were undertaken by persons consumed with hatred who had utter and callous disregard for the lives and safety of others. The magnitude of the WTC was certainly greater than any other single act of terrorism yet carried out but terrorism, whether it leaves one or 6,000 dead, is terrorism. Last night a family was terrorised in Northern Ireland - a shotgun was fired at their house. This is the third night of terror - the first resulted in a brick thrown through a window, the second was a pipe bomb and the third has resulted in one person injured with shotgun pellets in the back of his head and shoulder. Today those people know they are "required" to leave their home and live elsewhere.

Is there any real difference between this type of terrorism and an official of the AO threatening somebody with CB hood because his e-mail messages are "covenantally challenging?"

>

> Close to 6000 killed scores more injured and even more traumatized.
> <SNIP>>
> And you and Fred compare all of that to what the Baha'is do? Come on.

- > Leave your hate for Baha'is aside for a moment and look at what you
- > are saying and ask yourself if you are thinking any clearer than the
- > Islamist school masters in Afghanistan who have taught their students
- > that the events of Sept. 11th were a "satanic Jewish conspiracy to
- > turn America against Islam and the Arab brotherhood".

And you ask yourself if fundamentalist Bahai attitudes that would dearly love to eliminate dissent and is willing to adopt any necessary steps so to do from threatening people with being declared CBs to expelling them, are any different! For a person who has been many years in the Bahai community - CB hood is a death sentence. To compell or seek to compell his compliance with AO attitudes is therefore an act of terrorism. End of story - Dave! If an organisation attempts to further its aims by intimidating its adherents or others, it is in no different in nature to the organisation that bombed the WTC. That's the uncomfortable truth!

BTW the AO is no different than any other religion you care to name - they all work or have worked on intimidation and terror throughout the ages. That's the joy of the secular society - it has put these nascent embryonic and mature terrorist organisations in their proper place - well away from government.

> You and Fred sound like those mullahs.

And you sound like an ABM or a Counsellor! Pot ...Kettle ... Black!

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: What is going on here?
Date: Saturday, September 29, 2001 9:01 PM

"Nima Alavi" <s349269@student.uq.edu.au> wrote in message news:9p28ju$4er$1@bunyip.cc.uq.edu.au...
> What is wrong with all you people > Settle down!
> Remeber this?
> "If religion happends to be the cause of Disunity, Seperation or Hatred it > better it not be there at all" > WHY???? Because the whole purpose of religion is UNITY!!!! So stop fighting > with each other!

Who's fighting? All I see is a crowd of AO types, incapable of acknowledging that their beloved AO is far from perfect, and unable to do anything to rectify that state of affairs.

Besides which isn't JUSTICE the aim and object and if it is, you will have UNITY pursuing it. If you ain't got the UNITY it's because you ain't got the JUSTICE but some folks are prepared to fight for that rather than seek to suppress it in the name of a so-called unity which is not conformity to mediocrity.

**>
> Nima ALAVI
>
>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: B Questions about the Bahai faith.
Date: Saturday, September 29, 2001 8:54 PM

"Roger Reini" <roger@rreini.com> wrote in message
news:3BB5C342.2FAEB2@rreini.com...
> At last, someone who is asking legitimate questions about the
Baha'i
> Faith. There haven't been many here lately.

And we all thought you had gone, whereas, in reality, you're a sneaky bugger
who spouts porky pies about leaving but smarms back again when he thinks there's an impressionable "seeker" about who can be impressed by cant.

The man is certainly posing legitimate questions - of the kind you like.
But what happens if he starts to pose legitimate questions of the kind
you don't like - the sort of things Curious has asked, amongst others?
What happens if he poses the questions about corruption within the Bahai Administrative Order that Fred has put, Nima has put, Juan has put?
What happens if he asks why a law suit was filed in New Mexico after the National Assembly had ignored the issues therein for nigh on two years? What happens if he asks why Alison and Michael were expelled contrary to all established procedures within civilised societies? Shall we witness another moonlight flight with accompanying mumble about how these are not legitimate questions?

**>
> BUSHBADEE wrote:
> >
> > I am interested in the Bahai faith.

> >
> > I have a few questions that I would hope some one of that faith would answere.
> >
> > I would appreciate if they would email me the answeres to the address
below.
> >
> > 1 Does the Bahai faith accept the Koran?
>
> Yes, we accept that the Qur'an was revealed by God to Muhammad, that it > is the Word of God. We accept the Torah and the Gospel too. We also > have our own holy writings, which were revealed by our Founders, > Baha'u'llah and the Bab, as well as the writings of 'Abdul-Baha, > Baha'u'llah's eldest son and the Center of His Covenant.
>
> >
> > 2 Why do Muslems seem to have such a special hate for those of the Bahai
faith.
>
> Prejudice born of ignorance, IMHO. The clerics cannot accept the notion > of a new Prophet or Messenger after Muhammad. Baha'u'llah taught that > the Day of Judgment was actually the advent of a new Messenger
(or > Manifestation of God, to use the Baha'i term), and that all alive at > that time would be tested.
>
> >
> > 3What is the relationship between the Bahai faith and Israel.
> > I understand that the Bahai faith is alive and thriving in Israel.
>
> The Baha'i World Center is located in Israel, that is true. That is > because Baha'u'llah, His family and many of His followers were exiled
> there in 1868. At the time, it was a province of the Ottoman empire.
> So the presence of the Baha'is in the area predates by some 80 years the > founding of the State of Israel.
>
> Other than the staff at the World Center in Haifa, there is no Baha'i > community in Israel. Baha'u'llah ordered the believers not to teach
in > the Holy Land; His injunction is still obeyed today.
>
> >
> > Thank you.
>
> You're welcome.
>
> > .
> > .
> > I DO NOT FOLLOW MANY OF THESE NEWS GROUPS
> > To answer me address mail to > > Bushbadee@aol.com

>
> Posted and e-mailed.
>
> Roger (roger@rreini.com)

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: What is going on here?
Date: Monday, October 01, 2001 9:04 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0110010903.20d95c5d@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
news:<9p5ucb$gv1pd$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...

>
> > Who's fighting? All I see is a crowd of AO types, incapable of > > acknowledging that their beloved AO is far from perfect, and unable to do > > anything to rectify that state of affairs.
>
> The AO is far from perfect and we are working to make it better.

Without much success - a lot of talk but no action as events in New Mexico
prove.

>
> > Besides which isn't JUSTICE the aim and object and if it is, you will have > > UNITY pursuing it. If you ain't got the UNITY it's because you ain't got > > the JUSTICE but some folks are prepared to fight for that rather than seek > > to suppress it in the name of a so-called unity which is not conformity
to > > mediocrity.
>
> Justice is made manifest in the laws of Baha'u'llah. One of those > laws as Nima A. points out is unity and a prohibition against conflict > and contention.

Unity is not conformity - unity can encompass differences of opinion
and their expression. Conformity or rather, the attempt to impose it and deny thereby, freedom of expression, inevitably leads to conflict and contention.

>
> Baha'u'llah gave us a mechanism for conflict resolution - consultation
> combined with obedience to the guidance of our elected bodies.
>
> So we have Baha'u'llah's laws and we have the mechanism in place

for > resolving our conflicts. I would say that justice therefore exists > within the Baha'i community.

You haven't resolved the conflict surrounding Alison - your mechanisms didn't work and she was thrown out. Now as a non member of the Bahai community, how can she go back to them for resolution of the conflict. I thought all of this consultation was supposed to take place before the event - I thought if the House or the NSA were going to expel somebody that they would actually meet and consult with them, in person and not through lackeys, before throwing them out.

>
> As for not fighting - many of us here have differing opinions. That > is ok. Discussing those opinions is ok. The insults are not ok. I > am in complete agreement on that point.

The so called insults are a part of the exchange - part of the tradition of robust debate!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Monday, October 01, 2001 8:56 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0110010814.162fb9e4@posting.google.com...

> "BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing"
<patrick_henry@liberty.com>
wrote in message news:<9p79aa$gp743$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de>...

> > "I'm glad you acknowledge the terrorized state of the U.S.
> > Baha'i community. Now, does or does not Haifa endorse the > > state of affairs and support those responsible for it?"
> > K. Paul Johnson, full text at > > <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Johnson5.htm>
>
> Please define terrorism and show us concrete examples of the > "terrorized state of the U.S. Baha'i community.

So you do not regard "midnight visits" by officialdom threatening impending nomination as a Covenant Breaker, with consequent social ostracisation by friends and family, as intimidation or terror. You do not include spying on individuals, advising that they be spied on and kept away from "youth" as similar. Good to have that clarification!

> For other readers please note that neither Fred nor the source he > quoted are a part of the Baha'i community in the U.S. and their > ability to observe it is nearly non-existent.

But they once were and report on what they found during that time.
Current
ability to observe upon the community may be limited in as much as it is run as a secret organisation and quasi police state, where informers are sanctionned in some way.

Dermod.

>
> Cheers,
>
> Dave

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Tuesday, October 02, 2001 5:29 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0110020624.2fd8ca90@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
news:<9pb8fm$hupga$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...

> Counselors counsel others. Sometimes they may need to tell someone > that they are in danger of crossing that line. Baha'u'llah Himself > revealed the punishment for breaking the Covenant.
>
> I for one would want to know if I were in danger of crossing that > line.

And who defines that line in a religion which encourages freedom of conscience, of thought, of expression - sorry, that was Abdul Baha and your AO types don't like him at all? Furthermore fore knowledge of being on the brink does not equate with the receipt of a letter, out of the blue, telling one that one is out on one's ear for unspecified offences. Let us also recollect recent correspondence from the House of Horrors about "spiritually corrosive" ex -Bahais, coupled with a bit of kite flying nominating certain ex-Bahais for the sanctified title of CB hood. That has, of course, been forgotten now - certain people issued very clear advice as to what would happen if the House dared to attempt to cast its evil acts on anybody numbered among the elect of ex-Bahais.

>
> In fact if people were declared to be Covenant breakers without being > warned you would be writing that Baha'is terrorize people by NOT > telling them they are in danger of being declared to be a Covenant > breaker.

It all depends on whether or not a consultative process has been followed properly. Firstly if charges of heresy are to be laid then they must be laid in writing or in such form together with evidence to allow of the accused presenting his defence or explanation. One does not visit in the dead of night laying allegations of covenant breaking nor does one expel people without first seeking explanation. And no crap about appeal processes either! When actions precede consultative process it is apparent that guilt is determined and cannot be undetermined.

> > You do not include spying on individuals, advising that they be spied on and > > kept away from "youth" as similar. Good to have that clarification!
>
> Baha'u'llah instructed LSA's to be watchful. We humans took it the > wrong way. We made a big deal out of it and did not do it the best > way possible. But clearly, categorically, and emphatically it is not > terrorism.

So what is it - this spying, this stalking of individuals who are not Bahais any more? The Cold War was fought by spies as is the current US sponsored operation against bin Laden. When you spy on people who are no longer members of your community you infringe their privacy which is an act of aggression and an act of terror designed to force those people to exercise themselves in accordance with your wishes.

>
> > > For other readers please note that neither Fred nor the source he > > > quoted are a part of the Baha'i community in the U.S. and their > > > ability to observe it is nearly non-existent.
> >
> > But they once were and report on what they found during that time.
Current
> > ability to observe upon the community may be limited in as much as it is run > > as a secret organisation and quasi police state, where informers are > > sanctioned in some way.
>
> No Dermot - they can't observe the community because they choose to to > be a part of it. They have opted out. They do not socialize with > Baha'is, they do not attend events with Baha'is. They have no idea > what the pulse of the community truly is. No one is keeping them out
> - they are doing that by themselves.

I have direct and indirect contacts deep within the Bahai community who keep me well informed as to what is going on. Indeed I have information about some events before the community even knows about them. One does not have to be a member of an organisation to know a great deal about it - intelligence gathered from a number of sources, collated and analysed soon reveals results. And when some of that intelligence comes from areas close to the leadership you begin to suss exactly what is going on - even if you don't reveal all of what you know.

After all the dear lady and Dr. Mork "received" intelligence from Zuhur - their mistake was to divulge that fact and totally misinterpret what they got. Did they really think they were getting sensitive information from a list which everybody thereon knew was penetrated by their agent(s). That the AO or its proponents indulge in such intelligence gathering is a sign that they regard themselves as being at war - that people on Zuhur indulge in "terrorist" attacks on them, justifying their "counter terrorist" operations. The similarity between this and US reaction to the WTC bombing is marked.

> Your "evidence" of Baha'i "terrorism" is extremely weak. You have > stretched the definition of "terrorism" so far that it has become > absolutely meaningless. Your examples that support that weak > definition are even weaker.

With all due respect, Dave, your experience of terrorism is one horrific atrocity a fortnight ago. I have lived with it for many years - I have seen families intimidated out of their homes with polite and seemingly well meaning phrases. Sometimes it is unspoken, just a rap on the door. If the family doesn't leave - a stone through the window, a pipe bomb against a door, shotgun blast through a window etc etc until the message gets across loud and clear without a word being spoken. You don't understand the subtleties of terror for you have never seen them. Imagine how you would feel if you got a letter tomorrow morning telling you that your status as a BIGS has been cancelled on orders from Haifa. Of course you don't deserve it - you have broken no rules that you know of; you haven't done anything wrong! Nobody has told you that your behaviour has been questioned! So go ahead - imagine it! And now you know or think you know what Alison felt -

now you see Bahai terror at work!

Did you know, Dave, that people actually phoned my wife, in the aftermath of that letter from the House of Horrors, fearing that I was to be one of those honoured by the House? That they felt the need to do that is, whether you like it or not, evidence of fear and terror induced by that letter. Terror is subtle - it is a means of forcing compliance and often in a way that is utterly deniable. Nobody has claimed responsibility for the WTC bombing just as here a number of atrocities have not been claimed by one side or the other. That deniability is an integral part of the terror process.

> There is no pattern of terrorism in the Baha'i community. You may > wish that there were. It would legitimize your rejection of the > Faith. Unfortunately your characterization of Baha'i "terrorists" is > flat out wrong.

Because you fail to perceive it; because you're not on the receiving end, doesn't mean that it isn't there. The AO indulges itself in dirty missions behind enemy lines. Its victims perceive that as terrorism - an effort to subvert them, to force them into line with AO policy.

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Wednesday, October 03, 2001 4:52 AM

"Timothy Casey" <worloq@iprimus.com.au> wrote in message
news:3bbaaa1c$1@news.iprimus.com.au...
> Given that terrorism entails random bombings and massacres such as are so > characteristic of IRA and Orangemen and bloodthirsty fanatics - This claim > has caused me some confusion. Are you saying that Baha'is are busy chucking > bombs and firing on crowds of people, and hijacking planes? If so, where
are > the arrests and investigations on these hot leads you have?

Timothy,

You're making the mistake of only seeing terrorism in its most violent manifestation. For the terrorist the real objective is in the knock on effects of the outrage. For example- all of the major bombing outrages here have been accompanied by series of bomb scares, designed to cause disruption and fear. Another tactic is the random phone call to a store or factory - the person who answers the phone is told that the caller represents a major paramilitary operation and is "advising" that it is going to kill all of the Catholics/Protestants who are employed by that store or factory. Some warped people take vicarious delight in such tactics and justify them in the name of the "cause" to which they are affiliated. Can you imagine the effect such a call has on the recipient - the fear that is generated?

Outrages generate fear - threats of further outrages generate even more fear. A number of telephone calls can close a city down for a day especially in the wake of a major outrage; attacks on the minority community, whence sprang the terrorists, increase, driving that community into the hands of the terrorists for "protection."

Compare that to the Bahai community - regular CB/liberal (to the average BIGS there is no significant difference - both generate fear and loathing) contacts being reported generates fear, expulsions justify that fear, driving the community to "attack" those who threaten it. To somebody like me that has lived in a society dominated (at times) by terrorists, the situation within the Bahai community is so similar that I fail to understand why the BIGS cannot see it and rise up against it, for in their hands, ultimately is the solution. It's a situation that is slowly destroying the Bahai community both in its own eyes and in the eyes of the world. Because the peoples of the world generally prefer moderation, one liberal/dissident Bahai counter-terrorist can do a lot of damage.

The solution is apparent but it is one rejected by the powers that be. They think that they can win their war by "military means" - that they can drive out and/or subdue the voices of opposition. I can assure them that this is not the case. These types of conflict can only be stopped and resolved by negotiation and compromise. As there is no sign of this within the AO (typical terrorists are extremely dedicated to the "Cause" and brook no compromise) the conflict goes on and on and will go on and on.

This is one thing that interests me about the AO and amuses me immensely. An integral part of the most progressive religion in the world which preaches consultation as a means of practising conflict resolution, asserts its "authority" to such an extent that it refuses to negotiate with those it perceives as enemies. Yet throughout the world the only progress that is being made in conflict resolution is when the parties are dragged to the table and persuaded or forced to negotiate an end to their differences. The House of Horrors rejects all such process preferring to attempt terror tactics to keep the community in line. That succeeds up to a point - the point where recruitment staggers and slows then goes into negative growth, the point where the sinews of war (i.e. finance) starts to dry up, the point where its apologists begin to get shell shocked and waver in its defence as their inherent contradictions emerge.

The Internet gave a voice to many oppressed BIGS - some paid the price for their views by being expelled or otherwise made subject to terror tactics. But as is always the case in conflict when the reasonable (those who are most open to compromise and negotiation) are terrorised, they become marginalised and cast out in favour of the warrior class, whose sole aim is destruction. They will not destroy the BF but they will wreak immense damage to the extent that it will never achieve its mission objective because it does not deserve to. Not for nothing were the BIGS warned that the real enemies are those within for they are the best trained and armed - he who understands best not his own cause but that of his enemy is best placed to secure victory.

Consider the cost of this conflict, which, like most, is not at all necessary were the principles of toleration to be practised. The progressive is always derided - as a result no progressive will ever mouth his opinions without being aware that he is in for a rough ride. He knows and accepts that - as a result he is a tough foe not given to easy surrender. Oppose him and he will fight back with ten times the force of his opponent for he is truly dedicated to what he believes in. The AO can't win this one yet, perversely, it can't lose it either so what is at stake is the amount of damage that the conflict will cause and the undoubted fact that the AO is so perverse that it will not seek to resolve matters other than through violence. Or, to put it another way - you saw the damage a few terrorists wrought in N.Y. and Washington - now equate that to the damage done day and daily to the BF by a mere handful of posters to the

Internet
who are merely telling the truth and seeking tolerance rather than bigotry.

Terrorism never wins, the extremists are buried by history for the meek do inherit the earth. In future decades Bahais will look back at this conflict and wonder why it was ever fought, for the principles espoused by
the liberals will win through, as they always do and will be enshrined.
The more perspicacious will damn the current AO for allowing and indulging in a conflict that could have been but was not resolved until a time when massive damage had been done from which the BF has not recovered.

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: B Questions about the Bahai faith.
Date: Monday, October 01, 2001 4:26 AM

"Matt Menge" <mspmeng@msn.com> wrote in message news:dc19cfc5.0109301736.198508c3@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
news:<9p5u0k$g749f$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...
> > "Roger Reini" <roger@rreini.com> wrote in message
> > news:3BB5C342.2FAEB2@rreini.com...
> > > At last, someone who is asking legitimate questions about the
Baha'i
> > > Faith. There haven't been many here lately.
> >
> > And we all thought you had gone, whereas, in reality, you're a sneaky bugger
> > who spouts porky pies about leaving but smarms back again when he thinks > > there's an impressionable "seeker" about who can be impressed by cant.
> >
>
> So he's indecisive. What's your problem with Roger anyways?

He's a pompous asshole?

**>
> > The man is certainly posing legitimate questions - of the kind you like.
> > But what happens if he starts to pose legitimate questions of the kind
you > > don't like - the sort of things Curious has asked, amongst others?
What > > happens if he poses the questions about corruption within the Bahai

> > Administrative Order that Fred has put, Nima has put, Juan has put?
 What > > happens if he asks why a law suit was filed in New Mexico after the National Assembly had ignored the issues therein for nigh on two years?
 What happens
 > > if he asks why Alison and Michael were expelled contrary to all established > > procedures within civilised societies? Shall we witness another moonlight > > flight with accompanying mumble about how these are not legitimate > > questions?
 >
 > Well for one thing this shouldn't effect Bushbadee right away because > people like Nima, Juan, Allison and Michael were all prominent and > influential people within the Faith. What are you trying to do, scare > him off?

I'm not responsible for other people's decisions. There is however a proclivity on the part of BIGS, when a "seeker" is observed on the Internet, to divert said seeker from the open forums into "safer" ones, where he can be removed from the arguments of the evil ones who oppose the blessed AO. I just like eople to be offered the option of seeing this tactic, that if they wish to investigate the BF, they can the chance to see the warts as well. That's why the open fora are invaluable - an opportunity to avoid brainwashing or love bombing.

>
 > Second, these issues have never been ignored. On the contrary they > have been debated to death. As for myself, I realize that our > administration is not perfect, but I would hardly call it corrupt.

That's your opinion, which you are entitled to.

I have a sneaking feeling that Bushbadee is less interested inthe AO wrangling that in the fact that the BF accepts the Quran in its entirety. Might there be an undercurrent that they could set aside their own Writings in favour of aspects of the Quran just as some fundamentalist Christians disregard the New Testament in favour of the "blood and guts" of the Old.

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
 Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM - Testimonies re US bahai community
 Date: Wednesday, October 03, 2001 6:58 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0110030746.c915de1@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message news:<9pen5e$ibu17$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...
>
>
> > Compare that to the Bahai community - regular CB/liberal (to the average > > BIGS there is no significant difference -
>
> Bull. That is flat out wrong. Good to see you have picked up some of > the skills of terrorism. Demonize the opposition it makes your > arguemnt more convincing.

No it is not! That it is pointed out that Alison is NOT a CB is indicative of the attitude that that's the way it is - if they're not official CBs they ought to be. Geez, Dave, I've been called one myself!

BTW I don't demonise anybody - I call things as I see them!

**>
> > It's a situation that is slowly destroying the > > Bahai community both in its own eyes and in the eyes of the world.
>
> Bull. Show me clearly that the few events (and few they are) add up > to a campaign of terror. Heck most of the Baha'is don't even know > about it. How can you terrorize a population if they never even hear > about it?

I did not state that the entire Bahai community is terrorised - fact is, that individuals who step outside certain boundaries, as defined by the AO, mark well, will be subject to terror tactics to induce their falling into line OR leaving the community. Many Bahais do know about and determine to ignore it - like most folks they like their comfortable existence untroubled by controversey which might dent their illusions. But the general overall morbidity of the Community in terms of numbers indicates that all is not well. I don't attribute this to the terror tactics but to the overwhelming introspection caused by the need to protect the Faith and that need is often met by terror tactics when there is a clear and present danger to the interests of the AO.

You don't need to terrorise a community - you only take action against those who are perceived as a danger and then isolate them from the community by demonising them, as in the denunciation of Dialogue and A Modest Proposal.

The little lambs follow suit - but, if any step out of line, they get their asses kicked.

**>

> > The solution is apparent but it is one rejected by the powers that be.

They

> > think that they can win their war by "military means"

**>

> Bull. The AO listens when what is being said actually fits within the > Covenant.

Yup! - THEIR definition of the Covenant after set aside of Abdul Baha's statements on freedom of speech etc.

**>

> > - that they can drive > > out and/or subdue the voices of opposition. I can assure them that this is > > not the case. These types of conflict can only be stopped and resolved

by

> > negotiation and compromise. As there is no sign of this within the AO

> > (typical terrorists are extremely dedicated to the "Cause" and brook no

> > compromise) the conflict goes on and on and will go on and on.

**>

> How can anyone compromise the Word of God? You can't.

We're not talking about the Word of God - we're talking about the systemic corruption of religion to suit the power lust of its leaders, as has been,
is and always will be the way with certain religious leaders. The Quran doesn't allow of suicide missions according to many interpretations but some believe that they lead to Paradise. You, like I, call it corruption of the Scriptures. But they don't! So why should Bahaism be exempt from corruption, especially given that there is no authoritative interpreter anymore. What would a living Guardian say about the impasse between the liberals who advocate free unfettered speech and the AO types who want to limit it?

<SNIP>

> > The Internet gave a voice to many oppressed BIGS

**>

> Many = 4 maybe 5? Out of 7 million. Oh that's right - you need to > attack that number to make your "side" look bigger than it is.

Let's start - the Walbridges, Juan, Steve Scholl, Nima, Karen etc etc -
all driven out. How many more are there who just quietly disappeared?
I know quite a number of BIGS who have just disappeared here - the local news rag

notes that the community is less than 300, exactly what it was 20 years ago but the membership serial numbers have gone from 9010 to nearly 17,000. That is of course the UK total - but the community there is what it was 20 years ago - under 6,000. Either way you look at it, 6000 Bahais have disappeared over those years and that's not including those who are on the rolls and shouldn't be because they have disappeared but not told anybody!

>
> > - some paid the price for > > their views by being expelled or otherwise made subject to terror tactics.
>
> Again some = 2 or 3?

Two is two too many! One is one too many!

> > But as is always the case in conflict when the reasonable (those who are > > most open to compromise and negotiation) are terrorised, they become > > marginalised and cast out in favour of the warrior class, whose sole aim is > > destruction.
>
> Wrong. Some folks who came into conflict with the AO and resolved > their differences are some very well respected Baha'is.

I'm referring to those who have NOT resolved the dispute.

> You know Dermod you are really good at exaggeration. There is not > terrorism in the Baha'i Faith. There are laws and punishment for > breaking laws - Baha'u'llah gave us that.

Is there a law against discussion via E-mail in the Aqdas? So what "laws" did they break? Why were the Dialogue editors castigated for something they didn't publish, that was still under review? Was it perhaps because they were seen as nasty bastards who threatened the cushy jobs held by certain people in the AO?

>Your notion of the Baha'i > Faith is to be tolerant of those who would tear down Baha'u'llah's > laws in favor of their own personal view. You would have an elite > academic class lead - and dictate what is right and wrong. Me - I > want to stick to Baha'u'llah. That is where this community is going.
> You simply have no idea. Your out of touch.

I don't give two fiddlers' farts who leads the BF - personally I'm done with it as I am with any and all organised religion. What I care about is justice and what I hate is the hypocrisy that rides roughshod over sensitive souls in the name of a God most of these buggers couldn't recognise if they met Him in person. Your BF which has a powerful, beautiful and attractive philosophy has been ruined by the megalomaniacs and bigots who run it!

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Thursday, October 04, 2001 7:34 PM

"Timothy Casey" <worloq@iprimus.com.au> wrote in message news:3bbbd5cd@news.iprimus.com.au...

>
> "Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message > news:f0853486.0110030746.c915de1@posting.google.com...
>
>
> [SNIP a great rebuttal]
>
>
> >
> > You know Dermod you are really good at exaggeration. There is not > > terrorism in the Baha'i Faith. There are laws and punishment for > > breaking laws - Baha'u'llah gave us that. Your notion of the Baha'i
> > Faith is to be tolerant of those who would tear down Baha'u'llah's > > laws in favor of their own personal view. You would have an elite > > academic class lead - and dictate what is right and wrong. Me - I > > want to stick to Baha'u'llah. That is where this community is going.
> > You simply have no idea. Your out of touch.
>
> Let's start with "elite class of academics". No such animal, Dave.
Academics > live at the bottom of the food chain. Always have, always will. Who would > listen to the voice of reason when idle fancies and vain imaginings packaged > in glossy magazines delivered by the most charismatic sales people money
can > buy, are so much more attractive?
>
> Now, as to the "Internal Resistance" > Academic????????????????????
>
> I agree with all your non-personal comments Dave, > but these jokers "academic"? Give us a break! I know we are supposed to be > kind to people, but I think that perhaps you go too far calling them, > "academic". :^)

>
> Most of them would not last two seconds if they carried on like this in a > genuine academic society - they would be expelled, permanently.
Who wants
to > be plagued by members who have a problem with the collective choice of the > society as a whole?
>
> Academics are not quite so tolerant as Baha'is.

I have no doubt this particular epistle shall cause great peals of merriment to erupt from Professor Walbridge, Professor Cole, Dr. Walbridge, all
of whom hold tenure at respected Universities in posts of some academic significance, whose works and papers are often cited in Bahai academia of the respectable and not so respectable kind.

For your information, human progress has always come from people "who have a problem with the collective choice of the society as a whole". That holds true for advances in religious thinking as it does in the arts and sciences.

With a viewpoint like this prevalent in the community, small wonder that the BF is advancing in a diametrically opposed direction to that which would lead it to be of any interest or significance to the seething masses!
Would
it therefore be true to note that Bahais "have a problem with the collective choice of the society as a whole" which is totally indifferent to their message and that they should quietly go away?

> Anyway, that is just my narrow-minded view of things.

Indeed it is - "narrow", that is!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Friday, October 05, 2001 6:18 AM

Hi Ron,

"Ron House" <house@usq.edu.au> wrote in message news:3BBD1586.470602DA@usq.edu.au...

> Dermod Ryder wrote: some things.
>
> Sorry Dermod, much as I usually applaud your principled comments, I > cannot possibly agree with any comparisons whatsoever between the Baha'i
> administration and the terrorists. There is a universe of difference > between those who try to frighten someone with a threat of being > shunned, and those who murder 6,000 innocents. Conflation of terms, > levelling of differences, loss of meaning of words, is a primary part

of > the doublespeak that is increasingly making it impossible to get honest > information across to people nowadays.

The motivation is the same, the methodology is the same, the aims
and objectives are as one - an endeavour to frighten, intimidate or terrorise a person into complying with an objective. I do not and never have equated the scale or magnitude. As they say - murder is murder is murder and Charles Manson or Jack the Ripper are murderers same as Hitler or Stalin.
Certainly the former never murdered as many as the latter but does
that merit removal of the title of "murderer?" I somehow don't think so!
And
Manson was a terrorist, even though that went largely unrecognised at the time - he "ordered" the murders to incite the war between Whites and Blacks which he had seen prophesied in the Bible and the songs of the Beatles.
After the Blacks had destroyed the Whites, being inferior types, they
would mill around leaderless until Charlie emerged from his sanctuary in the desert, to rise up and lead them. Classic scenario, Ron, use or threat
of violence to terrorise/intimidate towards achieving an objective.

As one innured to the results of terrorism after a lifetime's exposure,
I do confess, nonetheless, to having been shocked at what happened at the WTC and Pentagon but I was shocked and horrified by the scale, magnitude and the loss of innocent life rather than anything else. The generation of mass
fear and terror in a community is the stock in trade of the terrorist. It is his objective - all other considerations are secondary. And the task
of the terrorist task master is to motivate followers to perpetrate acts of violence which the follower would, probably, not ordinarily do. It is
the job of the task-master to cause the follower to suspend any critical faculty and follow blindly and implicitly any direction or order given.
Absolute and unquestioning obedience to those in authority within the terrorist organisation is required. Once that is established then the "volunteer" in the name of the cause, will undertake any action that he is ordered to accept WILL advance that cause. The terrorist is as committed to his cause

as any true believer in righteous ways.

Ron, I know and have known terrorists - I have spent time discussing what they do and have done. There are factors that have come from those discussions that help throw light on those who flew those planes on 11 September and those who motivated/ordered them to do that. *John* was a fairly typical youth, not terribly well educated or especially intelligent. He left school and was on the "dole" soon falling into acquaintanceship with a paramilitary organisation. His religion and his way of life were being threatened by evil forces and it was necessary to oppose them, to defend his homeland and hearth. So he was willingly recruited into membership, to do his duty by the cause and swore the oath of allegiance. When they told him that a neighbour was a "traitor" to the cause he went, as instructed, and broke his neighbour's legs with a baseball bat. And when the "cause" needed money he organised the "voluntary" collection of it from the community on a weekly basis and he stole it from those unwilling to contribute voluntarily. He did all of this without question for the "cause" - he went to jail for it. And there he underwent a "conversion". He met the "enemy" - people from the other side who had done the same things he had but for a different cause. And it slowly dawned that he had been used and abused, that he had never endeavoured to think things out for himself but had blindly accepted the gospel of hatred and done deeds for it that he has regretted ever since.

Now these same factors, although not to the same scale or magnitude, are apparent in events orchestrated by the AO over years past - factors I have previously alluded to in both private and slightly more public posts to the Internet. In June, for example I remarked in the midst of the Greatest Row surrounding Dr Mork's espionage on Zuhur that Nima was engaged in "counter-terrorism." Now whilst there was an element of roguery in that, nonetheless, the word was carefully chosen in that I have long recognised the terrorist-type tactics employed by the AO.

Why of all the rebels in the world were Alison and Michael selected for the treatment they got? Could it be that they were seen as soft targets who would yield to the threats and recant their sins to the greater glory of the AO and a crushing blow to the liberals with the subversion of two stalwarts?

Is this not intimidation in pursuit of an objective and is it not thereby terrorism? Perhaps we didn't use the word "Terrorism" much before - but then before 11 September Americans had not ever experienced terrorism up close and personal in the way that we had - an experience, BTW, that I would wish on nobody, not even my greatest enemy. But let's not smack Fred down because he says the unpalatable truth. The AO utilises terrorist tactics in the purest sense of the word and, as I have noted many times before, would not hesitate to employ harsher methods, could it get away with it.

Perhaps you should recollect that in June word was on the street that certain dissident elements were to be designated CBs. I had dealings off-list with those who felt that they might be targeted and I can tell you that there was a degree of fear and apprehension - at first. It was made very clear by a series of posts on this group that if even one CB was declared, it would be seen as the declaration of all as CBs and that severe retribution would follow. I have no doubt that this rumour was put on the street to gauge the likely reaction where the CBs to be declared. That this was an intelligent tactic in light of the utter hames made with Alison and Michael's expulsions, is IMO, indisputable. That it indicates the dawning of a degree of rationality at Haifa is also indisputable. But it also indicates a hankering for and a notion that opposition can be quelled by the use of violent tactics, despite the failure thereof to date. Strange behaviour for a religion that preaches "consultation" that it chooses not to
"consult" but to "confront." Needless to say, Ron, that's a classic mark of terrorism unless/until somebody manages to pound into their heads the reality that their tactics do not and will not advance their cause one iota.
IRA terror in Ireland has retarded the cause of unification of the island and the acceptance of that by the Protestant people, a fuller generation if not longer - it has achieved the exact opposite of what it was aimed at.
Terror is ultimately counter productive!

- > Apart from being plain wrong, any hint of a similarity between the level
- > of evil of the Baha'i rulers and that of the terrorists merely inflames
- > opinions and makes the building of bridges even more difficult.

As for the building of bridges - are you not being a trifle optimistic?
For any process of reconciliation to be embarked upon, BOTH sides have to be willing to engage. Underneath all of the bombast there is a willingness on the part of the liberals to engage such a process, to sit down without pre-conditions and consult upon grievances and their solution. I detect no such willingness on the part of the AO - it has not yet passed the stage of "enemies" and "internal opposition", albeit that most of the opposition is now external, totally radicalised and absolutely outside its control. The status of "Unenrolled Bahai" has emerged, acquired a following and the respectability that accompanies that, has constructed a de facto, if not de jure, community and is a tribute to the power of AO intransigence. In demonising, expelling and casting forth of the internal enemy it created an external "enemy" subject to no power of influence, control or restraint I fear therefore that the "cycle of violence" continues uninterrupted and unabated. The AO can end it at any time - by indicating a willingness to consult, something that would be in accord with its highest ideals. Were it to make the appropriate gesture I have little doubt it would be reciprocated in full measure. But until that happens ...

I suspect that the time for that is short. What has been confined (very largely) to the Internet to date can spread and escalate. Conflict has to be nipped in the bud - if not, it gets worse as both sides manoeuvre for the advantage of the high ground for the inevitable peace congress when, eventually, one wins or both become too exhausted to continue.

I would not equate the degree of the level of evil of the AO and the WTC terrorists. There is no doubt that the WTC terrorists were and are malign individuals motivated by hatred. The AO, OTOH, is activated more by stupidity than malice. One cannot but be impressed by the dearth of warriors of quality and intellectual prowess within and amongst its most sycophantic supporters. A scrutiny of the Beliefnet archives will reveal glaring and, indeed, farcical examples of that. The action taken against Alison in particular strikes me as precipitate, ill-thought out and embarked upon without an exit strategy being envisaged or even thought necessary, were it to go horribly wrong and backfire, as it undoubtedly has. The greatest obstacle to any resolution of this conflict is that the AO has backed itself into a corner whence it cannot emerge without seeing itself as being humiliated.

For it to agree to any form of consultation is a climb down and it cannot do that without fatal damage to its own position. It is in a cleft stick of its own making - it initiated the conflict through precipitate action that has consistently failed to achieve the objective of silencing the opposition, it did so without thought to a fall back position and now, has no other option than to persist in the conflict it created.

Furthermore the armoury is empty - it has run out of ideas and weapons. It fired the final shot in June last when it threatened imminent CB hood but the enemy's eyes did not even flicker! It now desperately needs an exit strategy to which purpose we might slant our thoughts and discussion. I think we will have to design a parachute for the AO before any peace process can begin - something that will cushion its fall from on high.

- > Furthermore, you do yourself no service whatsoever by aligning yourself
- > with someone whose attacks on the AO are motivated purely by his own - > personal hatred of them. That sort of 'friend', to whom the truth is of
- > use only so long as it points one particular direction, will hold your
- > hand as he leads you to hell.

Actually Fred has aligned himself with my thinking. Furthermore the imputation of motives of hatred to him is questionable. I detect more the anger and despair born of utter frustration at the perceived destruction of something that is most precious to him. Fred certainly is intemperate at times and most annoying at others. Yet there is a blatant sincerity behind what he does, no matter how exasperating or self defeating it might appear to be. I can empathise with Fred - in times past when terrorist outrages have killed friends of mine, I have been tempted to reach for the gun and lash out at any and all people who just might be even sympathetic to those who have committed the foul deed. And as we know only too well here - terrorism in one community spawns its counterpart in the other. Fred is a product of the AO - if he is a monster, it created the monster! That is the tragedy but that is the inevitable product of a system that polarises opinion by stigmatising and demonising those who do not adhere to a strict fundamentalist interpretation.

And when you talk of building bridges you have to think of building bridges to Fred as well. His is an injured soul as well!

Now it may be that I am well on the road to hell! So long as it is a place free from religious fanatics it shall be heaven for me! And nobody is holding my hand, nobody is leading me and I care not if anybody is following!

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM 5 - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Friday, October 05, 2001 9:54 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0110050613.8bbde9@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message news:<9piud5$j4bqq$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...

>
> > > Juan is a pretty good spin doctor - eh?
> > >
> > > I don't buy it, but that's ok.
> >
> > Do you buy into any of the tales of horror on Fred's site?
>
> What I do not buy into is the rehtorical stance, the misleading > language, and an intentional use of negative terminology to describe > the situation.

So forget Fred's editorial and look upon it as an archive of source material, which is the way I approached it. Editorialising comes after the facts, not before them.

> His account was skillfully crafted to leave a reader unfamiliar with > Baha'i Administration thinking that it is some kind of ultra-competant > secret police force with nothing but evil intentions.

I personally think that there are those within the AO who feel they have a duty and a right to spy on whomsoever they please. In that sense therefore there is an element of the "Secret Police". "Competent", however is the last word I would think of to describe it!

Mine own encounters with the AO (long before I ever heard of Fred or Juan) left that impression firmly melded in my mind. These guys haven't a clue how to deal with conflict and contention, especially when it comes from a non-Bahai who does not and will not play according to their made up rules.
I am a great believer in "due process." But do they learn from this? Not in triduum of Tuesdays and why should they! have they not been invested with Divine Guidance on this? But have they not forgotten that God helps those who help themselves - what is in the Writings is principle and guidance which show the way but must be reinforced with the particularities of rules and must be uniformly applied by reference to precedent. Principle and guidance is not especially good law and good law is useless unless uniformly applicable to all equally and without favour. That is why law is based on legislation and case law - rules and precedent as to how to interpret them so that what is illegal in one district will be illegal in all. Given that clarity the citizen knows exactly where he stands .

> Of all people here Dermot you should understand that there are no > demons here - on either side. We are all human, we all make mistakes, > and we are all in the process of growth. That is not reflected in > Juan's words.

Demons- NO! Fools, pedagogues and hypocrites aplenty though!
People should learn from mistakes - be sensible enough to fess up and not repeat the error. But to learn from mistakes, one has first to realise that they have been made, to analyse them and draw proper corrective conclusions. This critical approach is frowned upon by the AO which, for some strange reason, views it as "negative" and verboten therefore. The whole thing about negativity is that it exists from time to time and is an opportunity for positivism. To turn negative into positive is to grow. My impression
of the AO is that it has not recognised or accepted this principle. Were it to do so, to take a long hard critical look at all of the negative areas with a view to learning and growing, matters would improve. Trouble is, Dave - it makes the same mistakes over and over again and keeps getting up the noses of people who do not admit or acknowledge its omnipotence and are not prepared to accept the crap! From the LA study group, through Dialogue, stopping by A Modest Proposal, the expulsions, the spying on Nima, etc ad infinitum, this organisation has acted with the crassest of arrogance which is born only in immense stupidity. IMO it has never once stopped to consider

the fallout of what it has done.

None of these people are Covenant Breakers yet they are banned effectively from being within the ambit of that Covenant. None of them wants to change that Covenant. All they say is that the Covenant is big enough to tolerate a wide range of opinion - if it isn't, then it is not the means of uniting mankind. Why can't the Bahais be like the Church of England which includes High and Low Church, Anglo Catholic to the most evangelical fundamentalist
and where indeed, or so it is rumoured, belief in the existence of God
is actually optional, all united in one Church? Why does it need this fundamentalist interpretation which is totally alien to most ordinary decent folk?

John XXIII exposed the locked mindset of Catholicism to the winds of change
in Vatican II to reflect on and re-interpret traditional doctrine and thinking in and for changed times. Fundamentalist Catholicism vanished as a result - for the first time Catholics approached their Protestant brothers on an equal footing as fellow but separated Christians. Almost overnight barriers disappeared - the Christian values of tolerance and love began to be emphasised over hell fire and hatred. An enemy was turned into a friend, as Abdul Baha once put it, although I paraphrase. Is it not strange
that
"corrupt" Christianity can attain to Bahai ideals whilst Bahais cannot.
They still anathematise their separated brethren of all types and kinds
in the name of a Covenant, which is built on unity and love. There are many kinds of unity but only one conformity - for unity's sake do we not have to overlook the manifest faults and weaknesses of the wife or She Who thinks
She ought to be Obeyed, rather than insist on conformity to set standards!
Is the Covenant so inflexible that it cannot bend to accommodate in the name of love and unity? Which is more important - love and unity or conformity to an inflexible Covenant? If we ceased looking for that which divides
and sought instead that which unites, unity can be achieved without the need for anybody to compromise his beliefs - in other words if the centrality of

the Covenant were to rule, disunity and conflict would disappear. This can be achieved if we revert to the old Christian idea of tolerance.

> One thing that I learned long ago - when there is a conflict, the two > sides are both to blame. I have yet to read anything from Juan,
Fred,
> or anyone on "that side" to fess up to their own mistakes.

When Juan re-declared his belief was he not fessing up to a mistake he feels he made? As for Fred - he has been so anathematised and marginalised that he dare not fess up to anything. And there is the essential problem.
In
the absence of any form of meaningful dialogue between the contending parties attitudes harden, mistrust grows, suspicion becomes overwhelming and hatred develops on both sides. In such an atmosphere it becomes impossible to fess up because the perception is that the other side
will seize on and exploit it as evidence of weakness. It's a vicious circle which neither side can or will break for that is the ultimate weakness.
There are ways of breaking the circle but they require that both sides
are willing to engage in a resolution of the conflict - sadly the AO isn't, partly I believe because it cannot see a way to do that which will not result in a massive loss of face for it! And here lies the biggest problem - given the absence of malice, the AO has manoeuvred itself into this invidious position through its own stupidity and that self same stupidity militates against its seeing a way out!

I confess that this conflict fascinates me. Much as I am a staunch supporter of the liberal cause I am not personally involved and have developed a degree of detachment therefore. What is most interesting is that the conflict is centred in the US which is to be the powerhouse of Bahai development in the world. Consequently the ultimate resolution will have profound significance for the BF for the next 2-300 years.

IMO at the moment the liberals have gained the high ground and have undoubted strategic advantage, not so much from anything they have themselves done but from the fact that the AO, having set the objective of silencing them, has signally failed to achieve that objective. The ball
is now in the liberal court.

In a football analogy the West Coast Offence launched by the AO has failed to achieve first down against a defence that has held under the pressure.
Now the AO can risk a Fourth Down and long or it can punt. Trouble is that the ball is in the AO's own red zone and they lost yardage on the last play

when they tried the CB play, which was the only play that ever worked for them in the past! But when you use the same play over and over again, eventually the other team learns how to counter it. Coach has a problem for he hasn't a clue about the offensive capabilities of the other team. If they use the Internet play it will cost him a field goal but if they use a different play it will cost him a touchdown and the two minute warning has come and gone. The scores are level. He needs a Timeout but he hasn't got one left and he can't see a solution. Can you?

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Friday, October 05, 2001 3:26 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0110030728.6b063b7d@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
news:<9pdf63$hot4k$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...
> > "Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message > > news:f0853486.0110020624.2fd8ca90@posting.google.com...
> > > "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
> > news:<9pb8fm$hupga$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...
> <SNIP>
> > Furthermore fore knowledge of being on the brink does not equate with
the > > receipt of a letter, out of the blue, telling one that one is out on one's > > ear for unspecified offences.
>
> But that would certainly get someone's attention. Then consultation > could follow. A letter such as that may be ill timed and unwise but > it certainly does not equate to terrorism.

So let's recollect - you kick the heretics out and then offer to consult with them about the fact that you intend to kick them out! And this isn't terrorism!

> > Let us also recollect recent correspondence from the House of Horrors > > about "spiritually corrosive" ex -Bahais,
>
> Guess what Dermod - they were right.

I agree - persons corrosive to the hypocrisy and corruption of the sinecure holders at Wilmette and elsewhere together with the nepotism and patronage of "approved" persons.

>
> > coupled with a bit of kite flying nominating certain ex-Bahais for
the > > sanctified title of CB hood.
>
> No one was mentioned in that letter - neither was the term
Covenant
> breaker even mentioned. So that charge is baseless.
>
> > That has, of course, been forgotten now - certain people issued very clear > > advice as to what would happen if the House dared to attempt to cast its evil
> > acts on anybody numbered among the elect of ex-Bahais.
>
> I have no idea what you are referring to.

Cast your mind and your rodent back to June when Dr. Mork claimed that I and another member of Zuhur were setting up a new Bahai sect. In the course of those threads it emerged that word was on the street that certain "dissidents" were about to be declared CBs. Now Dave, in Haifa there are three staffers charged with overseeing TRB - a clear message went forth that if any CBs were declared it would be regarded as an attack on all and retribution would follow. To date no CBs have been declared. You can draw your own conclusions from that.

> > > In fact if people were declared to be Covenant breakers without being > > > warned you would be writing that Baha'is terrorize people by > > > telling them they are in danger of being declared to be a Covenant
NOT
> > > breaker.
> >
> > It all depends on whether or not a consultative process has been followed > > properly. Firstly if charges of heresy are to be laid then they must be > > laid in writing or in such form together with evidence to allow of
the > > accused presenting his defence or explanation.
>
> As Rod has clearly pointed out - that kind of detailed process has
not > yet been created. It is not yet a part of the consultative process.
> It should be, and it will be, but right now it is not.

And never will be unless/until the AO is seized by the throat and forced to implement it. But strange that a religion which promises an advanced civilisation has not yet attained this particular developmental stage of the decayed civilisation it claims it will replace.

> > One does not visit in the dead of night laying allegations of covenant > > breaking
>
> Well since that has never happened then why are we talking about it?

I think Juan used that term in relation to his own interrogation.
>
> > nor does one expel people without first seeking explanation.
>
> Alison is the only person who fits that description and you know that > I feel the NZ NSA dropped the ball on that one.

It didn't! The House did! Take it from me! The NSA has refused to correct erroneous material it circulated to a number of LSAs in New Zealand as requested so to do, so, effectively, dismissing an appeal.

<SNIP>
> > When actions precede consultative process it is apparent that guilt is > > determined and cannot be undetermined.
>
> Nonsense - it shows that there was a breakdown in the process. It > shows the need for more formal rules. It shows that we are human.
> Even those who have broken the Covenant can re-enter the Baha'i Faith.

There is no process as you have admitted! It's all set to a pre-determined solution that will not be overturned under any circumstances and the rules made up as the situation unfolds.

> > > Baha'u'llah instructed LSA's to be watchful. We humans took it the > > > wrong way. We made a big deal out of it and did not do it the best > > > way possible. But clearly, categorically, and emphatically it is not > > > terrorism.
> >
> > So what is it - this spying, this stalking of individuals who are not Bahais > > any more?
>
> An overreaction in an attempt to adhere to Baha'i law. It is human > error. Unless those individuals pose a real threat to the community.
> But the person you are thinking about did not.

Whether these individuals pose a threat or not - it's none of the AO's business to harass any individual.

> > The Cold War was fought by spies as is the current US sponsored > > operation against bin Laden. When you spy on people who are no longer
 > > members of your community you infringe their privacy which is an act of > > aggression and an act of terror designed to force those people to exercise > > themselves in accordance with your wishes.
 >
 > So the Police are terrorists for not letting criminals know they are > investigating them? Did you know that when you go out in public - > even just outside your home - you have given up your right to privacy?
 > Anyone can take your picture, follow you around, etc. if it is a part > of an investigation.

Police have to act within the procedures as laid down by law - due process which does not exist within the AO. They cannot follow you, tap your phone,
 read your mail or make unfounded accusations against you without a warrant.
 They cannot, by law, harass you and, if they do, you can get a Court to order them to desist. They can only accuse you of breach of specific law and must then take you to Court - they can't tell the community to avoid you like a plague.

<SNIP>

> > > No Dermot - they can't observe the community because they choose to to > > > be a part of it. They have opted out. They do not socialize with > > > Baha'is, they do not attend events with Baha'is. They have no idea > > > what the pulse of the community truly is. No one is keeping them out
 > > > - they are doing that by themselves.
 > >
 > > I have direct and indirect contacts deep within the Bahai community who keep > > me well informed as to what is going on.
 >
 > So you are a terrorist if we use your definition:
 >
 > "When you spy on people who are no longer members of your
 community
 > you infringe their privacy which is an act of aggression and an act
 of > terror designed to force those people to exercise themselves in > accordance with your wishes."

No Dave, I'm into counter terrorism and have been since long before June
 this year when I posted the following: -

29 June 2001

""Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20010629014249.10154.00002585@ng-md1.aol.com...

> >Crystal has called for no Baha'i spies on the list.
>
> Sounds like what she really means is no Baha'is. She couldn't have meant
no
> spies or she wouldn't have allowed Nima to stay on.

Spies practice espionage for the AO - they are banned!

Nima practices counter espionage and counter terrorism - it is permitted!!"

> You should change your handle from the grim reaper to 007. Come on > Dermot. Fred claimed that the Baha'i Community is in a state of > terror. He is attempting to gag the state of the community with > which he has no contact. Sorry but I just don't buy it. Though your > claim to be the anti-Baha'i spymaster is quite amusing.

I'm not the "Bahai spymaster" although I know who does hold that post - I'm also not the Head of Bahai Counter Espionage and, again, I know who is!

> > After all the dear lady and Dr. Mork "received" intelligence from Zuhur - > > their mistake was to divulge that fact and totally misinterpret what they > > got. Did they really think they were getting sensitive information from a > > list which everybody thereon knew was penetrated by their agent(s).
That
> > the AO or its proponents indulge in such intelligence gathering is a sign > > that they regard themselves as being at war - that people on Zuhur indulge > > in "terrorist" attacks on them, justifying their "counter terrorist" > > operations. The similarity between this and US reaction to the WTC bombing > > is marked.
>
> What? Now you are really starting to sound like Ian Flemming.

He wrote fiction - the dear lady and Dr Mork were in receipt of messages purloined from Zuhur (a private list).

<SNIP>

> >And now you know or think you know what Alison felt - > > now you see Bahai terror at work!
>
> I have imagined it. And with all due respect - I would not go > ballistic and start raging against the machine, or spamming news > groups, or filing law suits, or generally throwing a tantrum. I have

- > faith in Baha'u'llah and the tools He gave us for conflict resolution.
- > If I got such a letter I would clarify it ASAP with the AO.

Deborah Buchhorn waited a long time for her letter to be replied to - she sought clarification and action and didn't even get an acknowledgement. If it happens to you how patient would you actually be - given that, per your own admission, there is no due process to guarantee you a result of any kind!

- > Most of
- > what I have seen here and on a few websites out there are
- > overreactions. I would not overreact. There is NO parallel between
- > what happened to Juan, Alison, Nima, Michael, or Fred and terrorism.
- > Zero.

So how do you describe the AO action - "reasonable", "justified", "dignified". You know if there was one shred of common decency in these people they wouldn't hoof people out - they would see the hurt and try to prevent it. Alison would have had prior warning if these guys had a spark of humanity about them - they would have seen her, talked to her, eyeballed her, not chosen the coward's option of a letter out of the blue with no reason given - damn it, she had to wait months for that and even then it was first sent to the BIGS. But if that 's not terrorism, what the hell is it?

- > > Did you know, Dave, that people actually phoned my wife, in the aftermath of
- > > that letter from the House of Horrors, fearing that I was to be one of those
- > > honoured by the House? That they felt the need to do that is, whether you
- > > like it or not, evidence of fear and terror induced by that letter. Terror
- > > is subtle - it is a means of forcing compliance and often in a way that is
- > > utterly deniable. Nobody has claimed responsibility for the WTC bombing
- > > just as here a number of atrocities have not been claimed by one side or the
- > > other. That deniability is an integral part of the terror process.
- >
- > Dermot. That is not terrorism.

So Dr Mork makes a false accusation against me which lines me up for CB hood, if true. Now this is of profound indifference to me but it matters to my wife for if I am declared a CB she has to leave me or bear the same title. But once again, this isn't terrorism! This isn't designed to intimidate or coerce me into alternative action! NO! It's just another in a long line of mistakes - so many of them!

- > It does not meet the definition at
- > all. Your belligerence, exaggerated accusations, hostility, and anger
- > all fit with the description given in that letter. The House was spot
- > on. Now, deal with it.

Yeah man! I'm real corrosive! And guess what - I don't have to deal with it! It's not annoying me!

- >
- > The AO is not the evil systematic terrorist machine that you make it
- > out to be. I just IS NOT. It is a young organization, short on man
- > power and resources, trying to understand just how it should function.

Now that frightens me! These guys don't know what they're doing and this is the pattern of a future civilisation for, make no mistake, what they get away with now, is precedent for what they'll get away with in the future.

- > Mistakes will be made. Incidents have happened and will happen
- > again. But that does not mean that the AO is the Gestapo incarnate.

It does until the AO learns to apologise - assuming, of course that all of these incidents are "mistakes". But if they are mistakes the AO should not have to await formal appeals before rectifying them, that is, if their motives were pure.

- > They are not that organized. They are not that co-ordinated. The - > principles of the Faith do not allow for them to ever behave like that.

Hasn't stopped them so far!

- > Dermot - I am tired of dealing with this subject. You are "spiritually
- > corrosive" because all you do is focus on the negative and magnify it.
- > Are you a bringer of joy and hope or do you hate the light so much
- > that you just want to dampen it with comparisons between
- > mass-murderers and a group of individuals trying to build a better
- > world who made a few mistakes.

I love the light! But to know what light is you also have to experience darkness. If you want to rectify mistakes you have to recognise them first - that's the negative but necessary first prerequisite. If you cannot see that there is a perception that the AO indulges in terror tactics, which you say it doesn't, then it would be out there rectifying these mistakes - not waiting for appeals or anything else. It knows the depth and intensity of feeling out there - it recognises the damage that is being done by having this dirty laundry washed in public and it knows how to resolve this problem. Fact you have got to face is that the AO doesn't give a damn about any hurt it dishes out - if it did, it wouldn't do it and the proof of that is that when faced with the fruits of its mistakes, it persists in them and refuses to consult on a resolution! Many efforts have been made to engage the AO on the present impasse - to get around a table and thrash matters out with a view to resolving the differences and putting an honourable end to the conflict. There were no pre-conditions attached to this - the offer was made by persons prominent in the liberal camp and has been spurned and rejected. And until now no mention has been publicly made of it lest assent to such talks might have been perceived as a climbdown by either side.

It is high time that it was known that the AO has no interest in settling this matter - in engaging in any form of discussion. That is the main reason that most of this conflict has been in public for there is no other way. The AO has no interest whatsoever in CONSULTATION with anybody who disagrees with it.

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: This is Bahai?
Date: Saturday, October 06, 2001 5:49 AM

"Onandagus7" <onandagus7@cs.com> wrote in message news:20011005222659.21551.00001084@mb-ce.news.cs.com... > >a covenant-breaker is a schismatic Baha'i, > >just as various Christian heresies are not seen as really "Christian" by
the > >more orthodox types. Yet, to an outside observer, any person with Jesus
as

> >the central figure can be broadly thought of as Christian.
Likewise, anyone > >with Baha'u'llah as their central figure can be broadly thought of
as > >Baha'i, even if excommunicated from the Faith. I mean, Dave, they aren't
a > >completely separate religion -- they are sectarians rejected and shunned
by > >the majority.
> >
> >Love, Karen
>
> I am not a Baha'i. But didn't Bahauallah say that anyone who lived
the moral > teachings of the faith was already a Baha'i? Why wouldn't that also apply
to > people who had been kicked out of the faith for heretical views but lived
the > ethical standards?
>
> Don Bradley

Actually, I think it was Abdul Baha who said that or something similar, but it doesn't matter who said it for it's true. When as in the BF, there exists an administrative order, which is into "control", such sentiments are set aside. It is now a faith system dedicated to "order" within the ranks,
"conformity" to a narrow and often misunderstood interpretation of
the central features, and "unity" so as to exclude any and all who submit
not to the "order" and "conformity".

As the relative success of fundamentalism shows, such an approach has appeal to a number of people. I think the broad mass reject it and if that is
the case then the pool from which Bahais hope to draw converts becomes somewhat circumscribed. In other words it has sacrificed its universalist appeal
and approach.

As you will note from these newsgroups there does exist a small but vociferous group of former Bahais (expelled or otherwise compelled to leave) who do not accept this narrow fundamentalist interpretation of the Faith.

Keep asking those questions, Don. They are most pertinent.

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: UHJ letter on withdrawals (for Don)
Date: Saturday, October 06, 2001 10:43 PM

"Onandagus7" <onandagus7@cs.com> wrote in message news:20011006215400.16563.00002399@mb-fb.news.cs.com...
> Thanks Karen.

**>
> Is the UHJ generally more reasonable than many in the Baha'i community itself?

Only slightly! It tends to be somewhat polite and apparently reasonable!

Everything flows down from the UHJ - its status as an infallible entity
is akin to the Papacy, only more so. As the head of the BF and the ultimate decision maker it has the responsibility for much of what is wrong in
the
community.

You also have to understand the subtext - "being left to one's own devices" is shunning by another name. Those who have been subject to this will affirm that whereas ordinary Bahais won't.

Another factor to be considered is that much of the current conflict revolves about the interpretation of the role of the administrative order and its practices. Bahais however see it as an attack on the centrality
of the whole Covenant and the entire Faith. This is not the case. I no longer accept the Bahai Faith as my personal faith system but I launch no attack on those who do - my contention is with those who abuse it to inflict pain
and suffering on past and present members.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: This is Bahai?
Date: Saturday, October 06, 2001 10:14 PM

"Craig Koller" <cwkkoller@earthlink.net> wrote in message news:cwkkoller-56C048.13091806102001@nnrp05.earthlink.net...

> In article <9pnmjg$jbu6$1@ID-73584.news.dfncis.de>,
> "John R MacLeod" <jrmacleod@consultant.com> wrote:

**>
> > "Craig Koller" <cwkkoller@earthlink.net> wrote
> > <snip>

**> >
> > > In LA,
> > > our former Auxiliary Board Member for Protection (who recently passed > > > away) told me that oftentimes it's people with great abilities
and > > > intellect who sometimes let ego get the better of them, who start to > > > eschew humility and try to wield intellectual power over others.

> > >

> > > That's when problems happen.

> > >

> > <snip>

> >

> > Wouldn't it have been wonderful if, instead of this pointed remark, your > > friend had said something like:

> > "You know I've noticed that the people who become disaffected are often > > people with great abilities and intellects. I think its very important that > > we find out why the Faith is failing these people and see if we can correct

> > the situation."

> >

>

> That's pretty much the spirit of what he said, and how he said it to me,

> I'm simply paraphrasing. Although, as far as the "Faith failing these > people" I think there's a distinction that has to be drawn between the > Faith of Baha'u'llah (which we are not to "improve"), and the community > of Baha'is (which fails as much as human design allows for failure!).

But that's not at all how you presented it. This kind of self righteous cant is rife in the Bahai community on this side of the pond, as well.

>

> The New Testament is rife with accounts of those who failed, who > doubted, who betrayed, who showed arrogance to Jesus to His face.

> History is filled with stories of people who let their ego's get the > better of them.

You're still at it! Ever considered the fact that people do what they do because they BELIEVE it to be right! Isn't that why you're a Bahai? If so, kindly accord the same respect to those who aren't and don't agree with you!

> We rarely show compassion for these people because of > their status and abilities. I've spoken with several community leaders > and heard nothing but compassion and hope for those whose behavior at > one time required administrative action.

Crocodile tears for sure!

>

> The fact remains that sometimes the Baha'i community fails the people, > true, but just as often these people simply fail. That's the price of > free will. There's wiggle room to be sure, but sometimes there's little > more that can be done by the administration IMO...

There's plenty can be done by the AO - start with answering the correspondence of Deborah Buchhorn, continue with apologies to the authors of "A Modest Proposal" for getting it all wrong at National Convention, explain to Alison Marshall why nobody bothered to consult with her to explain why she was going to be turned out, apologise to Nima Hazini for running surveillance on his private life after he left the BF and then writing a scurrilous letter about him, apologise to Fred Glaysher for removing him from the Rolls WITHOUT telling him that this was being done and tell me why after being away from the BF for 20 years, I am still referred to as a Covenant Breaker by people who ought to know better ....

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: This is Bahai?
Date: Saturday, October 06, 2001 9:33 PM

"Craig Koller" <cwkkoller@earthlink.net> wrote in message news:cwkkoller-43A2B7.11110006102001@nnrp05.earthlink.net...
> In article <9pmnik$iqqq5$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>,
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote:
> >
> > Actually, I think it was Abdul Baha who said that or something similar,
> but > > it doesn't matter who said it for it's true. When as in the BF, there > > exists an administrative order, which is into "control", such sentiments are > > set aside. It is now a faith system dedicated to "order" within the ranks, > > "conformity" to a narrow and often misunderstood interpretation of the > > central features, and "unity" so as to exclude any and all who submit not to > > the "order" and "conformity".
>
> Yikes! You'd think it was the Gestapo sitting there in Chicago, instead > of an NSA, nine men and women elected by national convention delegates, > who were in turn elected at district conventions by individual Baha'is.
> There's no campaigning in the process, although admittedly there is a > small amount of turnover from year to year (usually one or two new > people come into the NSA each election IIRC).

Now there is no open campaigning which is not to say that there is no campaigning. the district conventions are held in October - the National convention in April. This leaves an interval of 6 months in which the incumbent National Assembly and aspiring candidates can, shall we say,

"meet" the community and/or the delegates for campaigning purposes, sorry!, consultative processes. Last year the NSA went on a grand tour of the country in November. Now if the district conventions were held in February/March there would be no opportunity for cynical sods like me to suggest that there is a "campaign trail."

There is little or no turnover in membership of National Assemblies.

And no! It's not the Gestapo sitting there at Wilmette - more like "Dad's Army!"

> Last year, the national convention was opened up to *all* Baha'is, > although only convention delegates were allowed to consult with the NSA.
> But if you had a question, comment or concern, all you had to do is ask > your delegate (or any other delegate) to ask it for you. That's what I > did. Oh, and you can *always* talk to NSA members (like in the hotel > lobby), because they're just individual Baha'is after all...

Pressing the flesh or associating with the great unwashed is one of the least pleasant aspects of being in elective office!

>
> People "kicked out of the Faith" aren't necessarily CB's, that's a very > specific infraction. Some people have lost their voting rights, which > precludes them from attending official Baha'i gatherings, but not holy > days, social gatherings, firesides, deependings, etc.

There's a specific and innovative category that Craig hasn't noted - those who are "disenrolled", removed from the rolls because they are found not to be in compliance with the belief requirements for a BIGS.

>
> In all of these cases, even for Covenant Breakers, one need only cease > in engaging in that behavior that got them "kicked out" and ask to > regain their voting rights. If they're sincere, they should be > reinstated. They can still be the most cantankerous contrarians on the > planet, but if they're not openly, flagrantly breaking Baha'i laws, > there's no basis for losing voting rights.

The disenrolled may not have been informed as to the exact reasons they were deemed no longer qualified for membership.

>
 > In my 15 years in the Faith, I've seen incredible patience and > forbearance amongst Baha'i administrators who've had to deal with a > myriad of ego's and attitudes. I've been through the review process at > National for a music project I did, and although it was painfully slow,
 > I found them fair and open to folks trying to promote the Cause.
 >
 > Honestly, I'm *glad* I'm not in their shoes. How easy do people think it > is to protect and promote a religion, wherein the land of its origin > (Iran), people still live in peril, and some of the behavior we engage > in here (in the once-thought impenetrable USA) can cause harm there, as > well as here?

That there has been some persecution of Bahais in Iran is of no relevance to the spread of the Faith in the US or elsewhere. Secondly the persecutions have been motivated by religious hatred and other reasons, including
 the close identification of Bahais with the Shah's regime.

>
 > >
 > > As the relative success of fundamentalism shows, such an approach has appeal
 > > to a number of people.
 >
 > The biggest influx of Baha'is was during the late 60's and early to mid > 70's. Are you saying these people were prone to fundamentalism? I > heartily disagree. If all that mattered were "converts" and raw numbers,
 > the Faith could morph itself into whatever the focus groups recommended
 > (if it had the latitude to do so, which by definition of Baha'i Law, it > doesn't). Besides, such catering to the mores of the time is a trap I > think we've seen historically in other religions, that has led to > confusion and division that adversely impacts us to this day.

What I can note in relation to Northern Ireland is that the BF does not appeal to Catholics - they are severely under-represented therein.
 Catholicism tends toward authoritarianism in Ireland - I can well understand why Catholics would not forsake one authoritarian faith for another.
 As for the US I think fundamentalist religion is much more popular and deeply rooted there than in Europe. The US is quite conservative compared
 to Europe and as a result, I think it more likely that persons who commit
 to religion are much more likely to be conservative/fundamentalist. In Europe religion has been largely relegated to a lower division.

>
> > I think the broad mass reject it and if that is the > > case then the pool from which Bahais hope to draw converts becomes somewhat > > circumscribed. In other words it has sacrificed its universalist appeal
and > > approach.
>
> Most of the broad mass have never even heard of the Baha'i Faith. I > originally thought Baha'is were like Unitarians, which except for the > "unity" and the embracing other religious truth, was pretty off the > mark. Nobody's forcing anybody to become a Baha'i. IMO there is no more > comprehensively laid-out set of administrative guidelines on Earth,
to > prevent the kind of infighting and division that effected nearly every > other religion shortly after the ascension of its Founder.

Rules and regulations never have sufficed to stop disputation or internal conflict in any organisation. Disputation and conflict can only be settled
by dialogue and compromise or by people agreeing to differ amicably.

> > As you will note from these newsgroups there does exist a small
but > > vociferous group of former Bahais (expelled or otherwise compelled to leave) > > who do not accept this narrow fundamentalist interpretation of the Faith.
> >
>
> The "independent investigation of truth" calls for all to judge for > themselves based on a fair and thorough examination of the facts.
In LA,
> our former Auxiliary Board Member for Protection (who recently passed > away) told me that oftentimes it's people with great abilities and > intellect who sometimes let ego get the better of them, who start to > eschew humility and try to wield intellectual power over others.

Or if independent investigation leads to a conclusion that is at odds
with the POV of the powers that be in the BF, it is not the product of intellect or calm dispassionate analysis of all of the factors but malice or ego.
Furthermore the explanation of such conclusions is not to be understood as explanation or exposition but an attempt to dominate the opinions of others.

This is something that fundamentalists and certain liberals agree on - where the fundamentalists argue that liberals attempt to impose their views
on others the liberals are positive that the fundamentalists have imposed their views and will tolerate no dissent.

>

> > Keep asking those questions, Don. They are most pertinent.

> >

>

> You know, we're so conditioned to look at conflict as the result of two > opposing forces, one obviously right and the other obviously wrong. It's > a convenient way to dispatch an argument without taking the time to > probe the details.

Incorrect! Conflict arises when persons with differing views cannot reconcile them, settle them or create a condition in which the disparate views will be tolerated. The question of right or wrong does not arise and is not relevant. Right (Wrong) is in the eye of the beholder - but a dispassionate look at conflict will reveal that there is right (and wrong) on both sides. To each is given the responsibility of making his own decisions - the only wrong inherent in that is when somebody tries to prevent one acquiring pertinent information. In other words if a decision is to be informed it has to be based on an evaluation of all of the information available. Don is quite obviously quite capable of weighing up the pros and cons of any situation for himself - all he requires is access to information, all of the information available. Whatever decision he arrives at is right! It is incumbent on all to accept that even if one is not in agreement with what he decides. Toleration of those who differ is the most necessary human virtue - imposition of one's own views on another is an abomination, whether through false logic, lies, distorted evidence, force or the threat thereof.

> We're human and we're messy, that's the way life is. Anger and hate is > its own punishment sometimes, or the sign that we're holding on to > something that really needs to be let go of.

And often anger and hate is born of an injustice suffered and must not be let go - for justice is the best of all human and divine attainments!

>

> That's my take.

>

> --

> --

> Craig Koller <cwkkoller@earthlink.net>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: This is Bahai?
Date: Saturday, October 06, 2001 10:02 PM

"Craig Koller" <cwkkoller@earthlink.net> wrote in message news:cwkkoller-ECB0CA.03015006102001@nnrp05.earthlink.net...
> In article <20011005222925.21551.00001085@mbce.news.cs.com>,
> onandagus7@cs.com (Onandagus7) wrote:

<SNIP>

> One of the most virulent and destructive Covenant breakers was Mirza > Yahya, Baha'u'llah's own half brother. Perhaps because he saw himself as > the true Manifestation of God or simply resented not being the Promised
> One, he sought in every way to destroy Baha'u'llah, even resorting
to > poisoning Him at one time. Yahya was able to draw a tiny band of > followers from within and without the believers and they too tried
to > destroy the Faith. This caused great physical and spiritual pain to
the > community, exacerbating Baha'u'llah's already tenuous relationship
with > hostile governmental and religious authorities, and ultimately led to > His final banishment to Akka in Palestine (Yahya and his followers were > banished to Cypress IIRC).
>
> Yahya not only caused harm to Baha'u'llah, to himself and to the loyal > Baha'i community, he condemned the souls of those who chose to follow > him. Consider for a moment how horrific an act that truly is, to > spiritually pull someone away from the light of God...

FYI as has been pointed out before on this group Mirza Yahya was NOT a Covenant Breaker. He never did sign up to the Faith developed by his half-brother and therefore could not have broken a covenant he never subscribed to. Yahya was the appointed nominee/successor of the Bab - might it be therefore that the animosity between him and Baha'u'llah arose
from Yahya's position as the head of the Babis and a not unreasonable conclusion
on his part that Baha'u'llah was breaking the Covenant of the Bab.

Bahais may argue that Baha'u'llah abrogated the Babi Faith through his claim to be "he whom God shall make manifest" and that Yahya had thereby
an unqualified need to submit to him. The only problem with this approach is that Baha'u'llah was only one of many who laid claim to this station (including Nabil). In hindsight we can see that his claim was the only one that attracted any significant support but that fact alone, unclear at the time, was not deemed significant enough to cause any shift in Yahya's stance.

In the early history of the BF - Covenant Breaking was largely due to family feuding possibly over control of the money flowing from believers to Haifa and at the disposal of the leaders. In later years it has arisen largely in relation to control of the administrative organs. Little of it has had to do with matters of faith or theology as Christians would understand that. In the BF however the administrative function is a part of the theology and therefore any significant challenge to the dominant interpretation merits the award of Covenant Breaker status.

The historical writings of Shoghi Effendi are sectional and sectarian - they are by no means an objective history of the development of the BF but written with a pre-conceived agenda in mind - the promulgation and dissemination of officially approved history which glosses over or omits anything deemed embarrassing. It is also bad history in that the author has not annotated his work with sources. It is therefore not safe to draw definitive conclusions from his work. In addition histories which draw only or predominantly from his work as source material are likewise unsafe.

Shunning of anybody on matters related to faith is an unmitigated abomination for which there can be no excuse.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: This is Bahai?
Date: Saturday, October 06, 2001 10:32 PM

"Onandagus7" <onandagus7@cs.com> wrote in message news:20011006230354.16563.00002411@mb-fb.news.cs.com...
<SNIP>>

> I hope, however, that no one takes offense at my questions, and even implied > criticisms. I only recently became aware of what the Baha'i faith is about, and > I was just blown away. The vision of the faith is expansive, sweeping, and > profound! But it is that very vision that has given me very idealistic > expectations of the Baha'i community. I wondered if the community would really > live up to its founding vision, as religions almost never do. So, I am, in my > investigation of the faith community, holding it to what I see as the highest > standards, and seeing how it stacks up.

You're a man after me own heart!

There is one important facet of Bahaism that you must take account of. The principle of independent investigation of truth was one of the most attractive aspects of the BF to me - having come from a relatively authoritarian Catholic background, which I had long discarded in favour of an embryonic form of my current faith system, God fearing Atheism, I felt I had contacted a liberal non-doctrinaire and inclusive system that would both allow of and encourage worthwhile disputation of matters of faith.

Prior to joining, this POV was encouraged by the Bahais I met. After joining, the picture altered somewhat. I was informed that my independent investigation of truth was now at an end as I had discovered the truth and need search no more. Any further questions I had would now be answered for me by the powers that be! That was twenty years ago.

I got out of there so fast the shirt tail didn't touch the nether regions! If you're curious as to why I am here I suggest you go to <https://home.clear.net.nz/pages/alisonz/> . Alison was expelled from the BF in a manner contrary to natural justice. That's what blew my mind and being "Fightin' Irish" it seemed the right thing to get involved!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Disowning and Shunning?
Date: Wednesday, October 10, 2001 3:39 AM

"Matt Menge" <mspmeng@msn.com> wrote in message news:dc19cfc5.0110092019.51955a0a@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
news:<9pvmar$kv0a0$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...
>
> >Could you define the difference between "shunning" and "leaving > someone to > >their own device"?
>
> Well in my mind leaving someone to their own devices would mean
to > leave someone alone, but not to resist if they tried to force you into > a conversation.

And shunning is leaving somebody alone but protecting their civil rights.

> > Is there any substantive difference?
>
> Yes and there is also a difference of degree. Most importantly there > is no mandate to avoid someone left to their own devices, it is simply > a warning that they are a bad influence. For example if my brother > was a criminal I might not treat him the same way, but I wouldn't > refuse to talk to him.

You have now defined the difference but it is not substantive - within the BF "shunning" is mandatory whereas "leaving to own devices is advisory."

Theoretically there is a difference - practically there isn't, for in the sub-text BIGS "know" what they are "expected" to do in both cases.

>

> > Seems to me that if the NSA advises the BIGS to leave Nima to his own > > devices and then hammers his folks for not doing that, there is no > > substantive difference.

> > It's all spin!

>

> That's what I find irritating about Nima's approach. I really don't > fully trust Nima, but all we have to go on is his own personal > testimonial.

>

> And then when I question it, Nima chides me for being ignorant, all > the while not giving me any new information. Maybe I will have to > contact the Aussie NSA after all.

The Aussie NSA will reply that it is a matter of personal status and that it cannot discuss this with you as such discussion would be backbiting.

Fact

is that on two occasions the Aussie NSA has publicly issued letters defamatory to Nima - once to the LSA where his folks reside and once to the "Australian Bahai" a news rag of some sort, allegedly. I understand that this documentation is up on the Internet - I clearly recollect seeing it.

In respect of the alleged physical assault and other proceedings, there is no evidence to the contrary. Furthermore I am more inclined to believe what

Nima has stated is true on the basis that this type of AO behaviour is consistent with AO behaviour, observed by me directly, observed by friends of mine and reported elsewhere on the Internet, ad nauseam, by other parties.

It is conventional to regard any account as truthful in the absence of evidence to the contrary - in other words we do not doubt the veracity of those who post here when they are reporting facts and events.

Perhaps if you adopted a different approach you might find out more!

> Have a good evening,

It's morning here which just shows how much some people are out of line with the time(s) we live in - cheap pun!

Dermod

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Monday, October 08, 2001 11:07 AM

"Timothy Casey" <worloq@iprimus.com.au> wrote in message news:3bc1657a@news.iprimus.com.au...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
> news:9piuie$j6ilc$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...
> >
> > "Timothy Casey" <worloq@iprimus.com.au> wrote in message > > news:3bbaa99d@news.iprimus.com.au...
> > And pray explain how placing opinions on a relatively small Internet group > > is "imposing your personal beliefs upon others or misrepresenting your > own > > beliefs as the collective beliefs of the Baha'i Faith or for that matter,
> > any other religion."
>
> Stick a "Believe or else" clause in your paper, or personally abuse someone
> (as opposed to labelling an action or statement) for not agreeing with you > is a good start. Saying, "This is the Baha'i viewpoint" instead of, "This
is > my viewpoint" is another great way to offend friends and intimidate people.

Can you give us specific instances where this has been done - where individual liberals have put such statements in papers or messages?

"Ad hominem" is the weapon of choice of AO apologists.

The statement "This is the Baha'i viewpoint" is usually found or implied in official statements from the official organs. Is this why they offend friends and intimidate people?

> Apart from that;
>
> It isn't.
> I do it.
> I put my name to it.
> "They" know where I live.
> I do not get harassed for it.
> I still vote.
> End of story.

Splendid!

**>
> --
> Timothy Casey

> South Australia
> worloq@iprimus.com.au
>
> Formerly:
> casey@smart.net.au
>
>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Monday, October 08, 2001 3:35 PM

"Timothy Casey" <worloq@iprimus.com.au> wrote in message news:3bc16579@news.iprimus.com.au...

> In reply to your post as a whole, I have a question.
>
> Is it possible to have universal liberty and rights when the liberty
and > rights of one may be exercised at the expense of the liberty and rights of > many?

Ever heard of the dictum that one is free to exercise any and all rights that do not infringe upon the rights of others? That, BTW, is pre-Bahai!

> PS
> Before we resume our "invective", I think you should know that the "House
of > Horrors", as > you call it, is on your side here:
>
> 'The House of Justice recognizes that, at the other extreme, there
are > Baha'is who, imbued by what they conceive to be loyalty to Baha'u'llah,
> cling to blind acceptance of what they understand to be a statement
of the > Sacred Text. This shortcoming demonstrates an equally serious failure to > grasp the profundity of the Baha'i principle of the harmony of faith
and > reason. The danger of such an attitude is that it exalts personal > understanding of some part of the Revelation over the whole, leads
to > illogical and internally inconsistent applications of the Sacred Text,
and > provides fuel to those who would mistakenly characterize loyalty to
the > Covenant as "fundamentalism".' Letter to Susan Maneck dated (08/02/2001)

This refers to "personal understanding" and the exercise of it such as
to incur the tag of fundamentalism which is of course a false descriptor
of Bahaism. However that fundamentalist interpretations approved or made by the institutions do not attract or merit such a descriptor, is a principle not addressed by the above. And since the actions by the AO, which attract criticism, are motivated by a fundamentalist interpretation, the above passages of no support to me or others who proffer the criticisms.

> By the way, isn't, "House of Horrors" invective?

Not, IMO, when it is a title merited by actions!

> Of which you say,

>

> The weakness

> > of any argument is directly proportionate to the amount of invective used

> to > > support it, in the absence of any evidence.

>

> Is invective really the tool of the meek? - of whom you say:

Invariably - good invective and satire have never been produced by the establishment as a weapon with which to demoralise opposition.

> "Terrorism never wins, the extremists are buried by history for the meek

do

> inherit the earth."

>

> ????

>

> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message

> news:9pj7hc$j7139$2@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...

> >

> > "Timothy Casey" <worloq@iprimus.com.au> wrote in message

> > news:3bbbf4b8@news.iprimus.com.au...

> > > "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message

> > > news:9pen5e$ibu17$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...

> > > >

> > > > "Timothy Casey" <worloq@iprimus.com.au> wrote in message

> > > > news:3bbaaa1c$1@news.iprimus.com.au...

> >

> > So you've done the psychological profile then. Looking for a weakness

to > > exploit? Might be difficult! Do not exclude the possibility that there > > might be more than one entity lurking behind this identity - each with

the > > same agenda but different modus operandi. You might succeed in profiling

> > the wrong one!

>

> Ha Ha! So that's why you are so busy! :^)

Or why a schizophrenic never lacks a friend! Which of us really knows?

<SNIP>

**> >

> > Irrelevant to the point made. This was, that, to the average Joe Bahai, > > there is no substantive or material difference between a Liberal of the > > dissenting kind and the genuine Covenant Breaker as nominated and declared > > by the AO.

**>

> "of the dissenting kind" was not included in the former statement. The > average Joe Bloggs Baha'i does not have a computer and has not even heard

of

> "dissenters". I try to tell them about our little conversations and all I > get is that blank stare...

Funny! I have shared a lot of this stuff on the Internet with BIGS and found horror expressed!

<SNIP>

> I decline your generous conferral of authority upon my "Writings" (with that > capitalisation!) Peck peck peck! :^)

> By the way, I think liberals are not enemies of the faith - I think the > Faith is run by liberals!

Geez! I'd love to see your definition of a conservative, never mind a fundamentalist! I note you have swallowed, in toto, the dear lady and Dr

Mork's argument that the Faith is run by lovely liberals whilst those in opposition should acquire another title. since "liberal" is a good positive word it obviously worries some in authority that it has been used by those that those in authority detest. Hence this feeble effort to purloin it!

**>

> > enemies are of little consequence - it's the Fifth Column within that

you

> > should fear and denigrate not a few pseudo-academics and ne'er-do-wells

on > > the outside!

**>

> Interesting. Ambiguous. Religious nuts could argue for centuries over the > meaning of that statement...

And probably will!

**>

> If you refer to the "Fifth Column" within each of us, I should heartily > agree. Always a source of bullets in feet.

No! The Fifth Column of the most dangerous enemies within the Faith, the enemies the Guardian specifically warned of, the real enemies, not the weak ones on the outside looking in!

<SNIP>

<SNIP>

> > " Highly predictable" - most definitely. There's not a shred of > imagination > > or originality within.

>

> Which demonstrates the point made that this is a far cry from the randomness > of terrorism!

Terrorism may appear to be but is not random - terrorists work to an agenda, one we may not like or even recognise, but one that is real, nonetheless.

<SNIP>

> I include the writings of all authoritative bodies, including the Guardian > and the UHJ. The Guardian was quite clear in his interpretations.

Whether

or > not people follow correct procedures or their heart's desire can vary from > community to community, but it is in no wise honest to slander an entire > community on the basis of a few individuals whose practice is clearly not > condoned by the rest of the community.

I'm not talking about the actions of individuals but those of the institutions.

>

> > thereof and how do you manage without one therefore?

>

> Which responsibility to interpret, the UHJ must assume in the absence of a > better alternative... ...But that is just my opinion. Whether or not the > UHJ has actually assumed this responsibility is yet another question that > remains to be answered for me....

It cannot assume the function of authoritative interpretation and remain within the conditions of the W&T and other scriptural texts covering its establishment and ambit of powers.

<SNIP>

- > Given that conferred spiritual infallibility applies to the UHJ, I don't see
- > why they cannot offer their interpretation of the Writings in the complete
- > absence of any better, more authoritative alternative. Of course this does
- not
- > negate the value of personal interpretation, if it is honestly represented
- > as an individual opinion.

It can of course "offer" an interpretation but can it impose it, given that authoritative interpretation is "ultra vires." Given that there is no Guardian and no authoritative interpretation, even legislation from the House must be suspect as to its "immaculacy."

<SNIP>

- > > > It's a situation that is slowly destroying the
- > > > Bahai community both in its own eyes and in the eyes of the world.
- > > >
- > > > Only on the internet...
- > >
- > > Wanna bet? Do you really think that mine opinions, as expressed on the
- > > Internet have not also been expressed in the non-electronic world?
- >
- > Not to the same degree or proportion.
- > Even my outspoken views become over-rated on the internet.

There is considerable fall out from the Internet and this will increase. But let's move to a time when some events spawned on the Internet generate consequences in the real world!

<SNIP>

- > Perhaps you forget that the internet is a notoriously unreliable source of
- > information. Reputable peer reviewed journals do not allow supportive
- > references to
- > internet publications. Just because an increasing number of people rely on
- > the internet, doesn't make it any more reliable.

But what of reputable peer reviewed journals which are available on-line?

- > So the curious punter hears about the dozens of Baha'i sects on the internet
- > and then goes looking for them in the real world, and there is only one
- > substantial organisation, and whole bunch of obsessive wannabes!
- I mean,
- if

> it ain't the case, show me some official government stats to the contrary!

The fact is that he hears of dozens of Bahai sects and this may cause him to question claims as to "unity" and lack of schism? But that he hears about them is evidence as to the pervasive influence of the Internet.

<SNIP>

> > Do define what a "genuine" academic society is.

>

> A genuine academic society publishes based on truthfulness, factual correctness, and lack of fallacious argument. A genuine academic society > offers full legal membership and protects the rights of its members by > living up to its promises.

>

> Legal membership entails voting rights and the right to elect administrators > and/or a board of directors. Further rights include the right to inspect the > annual report. The right of the organisation is to condition membership upon > a code of practice or ethics. Failure to abide in this code of practice usually results in permanent expulsion from the organisation.

Scientific

> societies are notorious for expelling fraud-mongers and on occasion, > intellectual pranksters. The Baha'i Faith is unique amongst religions in > that it offers its adherents the same legal membership. However the Baha'i > Faith is far more forgiving on matters of fraud and other breaches of its > equivalent of the code of practice. Most of the time such breaches are > treated to extensive consultation, and failing any agreement or compromise, > the temporary denial of voting rights. Even the expulsion represented by > being declared a CB is temporary and expires on the CBs acceptance of the > community's right to forge its own destiny.

So you're conflating the BF with a genuine academic society and I thought it was a religious organisation. Quite obviously as the BF decries current academic criteria and methodology it cannot be so conflated, unless you're a BIGS.

> > I'm sure your comment about > > liberals damaging the reputation of any organisation the lay claim to will

>
> Now just a minute here! How do we go from "self proclaimed liberals who are > anything but liberal" to "liberals"?
> It would seem that you are dissembling my words to infer that I stated > something different. Is this really true?

No! You dissemble your own words!

<SNIP>

> >
> > My God! You disagree with Counsellors! On what matters of greatest > > import - pray tell? Such earth shattering controversies as to whether
one > > puts the milk or the tea in the cup first?
>
> How about the number of pins that can dance on the head of an angel?

Yep! That sounds about the right level of Bahai intellectualism and academia.

<SNIP>

> I think the UHJ can do what they > please. Once again, I am told that this is not so. My beliefs > deviate from the official and here I am! I just don't go around confusing
my > opinions with the official version. So who cares anyway?

Now this is confusing! Does not the House of Horrors think it can do
as it pleases, being the head of the Faith? If so how can you be confusing
your opinions? True enough however - nobody cares!

<SNIP>

> Who says I have to be a "radical" or a "dissenter" to have a difference of > opinion. It would be different if I went around proselytising people to my > point of view. On the other hand, what did Baha'u'llah say about dissension?
> (Hint: 3 characters with the ASCII values: 65, 100, 104)

But you told us how bold and adventurous you were in disagreeing with the powers that be but not one whit of evidence to back this up. Methinks
you are a "sounding brass" - not invective, ad hominem but justified
conclusion
on the basis if the evidence (or lack of) available.

<SNIP>

> > You haven't pushed the envelope of test driving toy cars, never mind, > > rattling the AO cage!

>
> Peck, peck, peck! "Mine's bigger than yours" and all that excess baggage...

FYI - "pushing the edge of the envelope" is taking the system to its design specifications and beyond. In present context this means "dissent".

> However, what would you know?
> Besides if all this intolerance really exists, then what of "Theocracies and > Other Disasters"? I mean if it is that difficult to stir things up, what are > you so concerned about?

Who said it was difficult to stir things up? The House of Horrors can stir things up quite easily - only being surprised by the fact some people call it to task for the stupidity of its actions.

>
> > It's not my way to boast but I've collected a few AO > > scalps over the years and, quite frankly, you haven't got what it takes to > > emulate that!
>
> However, I know that you know not what I know.

I know exactly what I do when I wax the tail of AO jocks and assist them to auger in and buy the farm!

> I know of my own self, that you are not in a position to make that kind of > judgement. So, what are you trying to achieve by saying such things if they > don't have any meaning for me? I think this is an important question with an > important answer. Not for me, or the rest of us, but for you, and for your > contentment in life.

Not in the least! I am most heartily contented with life and all of its many foibles!

> Another question. How does making such judgements entail being meek, a > virtue you seem enthusiastic, dare I say, "inspired" about...? Do you not > want to be meek?

Who ever did say or assert that I was meek? Some sheep in wolf's clothing like Miss Maddy by any chance?

> By the way, until Mr Cole answers my reply to his "rights of Iranian Baha'is > and hypocrisy"(See soc.religion.bahai archives, 25/01/1998), some might say > I've got his "scalp" :^) It is curious that my reply remains unanswered > to this day. But who cares? Cole evidently doesn't, and neither do I.

Last I heard the man was still going on all burners so I don't think you can claim any credit for a kill there. I only expect credit for a kill of AO types when promising careers in the AO are terminated by my waxing their tails.

<SNIP>

> I've heard a few stories that have made me drool for a little academic > confrontation... ...seems as though it is all talk - in more ways than > one.

BMALATO!

> > > Enough coprolite, OK?
> >
> > To date - you've produced some but I know you can produce even more!
And
> > Wow! Here it comes! In great torrents!
>
> Well, unlike you, or Glaysher, or Cole, etc. I am in the thick of it.

Right up to your neck in it!

>Unlike
> you or Glaysher, or Cole, etc. I have very much more to go on than hearsay > and anecdotes biased to a particular, dare I say out of touch, sector
of
the > Baha'i Community.

But we have only your word for this - anecdotal evidence at best

<SNIP>

> I have to admit that your sense of humour is to be commended.
"Great
> Torrents of [Coprolite]" (inferring both liquidity and fossilisation)
That
> one's got to go to a special place in the Hall of Funnies. It is not the > scatological implications that are so funny, but the absurdity of the > thought. I really have to applaud you on a very funny misuse of the terms > that no-doubt comes from a sound understanding of these terms and of the > engineering of humour.

I first came across this field of study i.e Coprolite when I observed that fundie-loony BIGS all seemed to be well qualified in that area. I surmise that accomplishment in this field is a pre-requisite for adoption of AO directives and understandings.

<SNIP>

- > > Right to the point of delaying obfuscating and totally ignoring anything
- > > that's difficult but everything else is addressed and proves totally
- > > inspiring and uplifting!
- >
- > So waddayawantfacryinoutloud!
- > Consultation or dictation?

Consultation is the Bahai philosophy - expulsion is the Bahai way!

- > Obfuscating what? How do you distinguish disorganisation and
- > procrastination? Is the sample random or filtered?

Random? Anybody with the guts to come forward and tell the story. The informants come from all over - there seems to be no geographical link.

- > Besides, surely you know that it is an ill omen when the trains run on time?

<SNIP>

- > Actually, I do! Complete amateurs. Anyone who on investigating Baha'i
- > membership criteria, is incapable of thinking laterally to the meagre extent
- > of seeing the analogy of membership procedures in regular organisations
- and
- > companies, with that of the Baha'i
- > Faith has no right claiming to be anything else!

The thing is that nobody disputes this - every organisation has the right to make rules. The rules of the BF were laid by its Founders. The problem is that the guys, kicked out or invited to leave, contend that they haven't broken the rules.

Ditto anyone who uses their

- > academic position to push an idea based on hearsay, generalisation and data
- > collected exclusively from only one corner of the community -
- Instead of
- > hard work, thousands of randomly sampled statistical figures accepted without
- > bias with respect to the result they might favour.

One assumes this refers to your own bete noir, the one and only Juan Cole.

The article in question was peer reviewed which is more than can be said of AO propaganda.

<SNIP>

> > There's that word again - "inspiring".

>

> So what? What problem exactly, do you have with such creative stimuli as > fill people with enthusiasm, and motivation to do more than they say? Are > you not sufficiently enthusiastic about meekness to extol its virtues to > me? Is meekness therefore not inspiring to you? Why should there be a > problem when others find something inspiring?

The problem is that the use of the word "inspiring" to describe all Bahai events, eventually becomes boring and uninspiring.

<SNIP>

>

> As Norman Vincent Peale would put it, the difference between happiness > and sadness is the difference between judging the glass as half full or > half empty. There is no point in focussing on the "uninspiring" because

that > does not bring happiness. Furthermore, focus on the "uninspiring" by > definition is defeatist, and has the ultimate result of depression and > inactivity. That is because the uninspiring by definition is demotivational:

> About as healthy as shooting up with morphine. Furthermore, "uninspiration" > by definition is the opposite of creative stimuli. What point is there in > that? We might as well bring back the Stone Age...

"

Has this not happened within the AO?

<SNIP>

> ...I could come to your defense by stating that you are not criticising > individuals in the last post, but rather an organisation. An organisation, > is in my view, fair game _if_ the merchantability of their product is > questionable. However, I understand that you seek to persuade.

Incorrect assumption!

Invective

> persuades no-one. Invective only causes people to become even more stubborn > about their position. Read Dale Carnegie and practice with others. If memory > serves me correctly, Glaysheer has both literary and sales expertise. Consult > with Glaysheer. You do not persuade people to buy from you by hurling this > kind of invective.

Who's trying to sell anything? Apart from the AO of course!

>
> On the other hand, it could sound silly to some, if you say your criticism > is up front when there is no CC secretarial@bwc.org anywhere in the header.
> Not all of us believe we are being monitored.

Belief does not negate the fact. The lads monitor everything!

> > backs, straight in their faces or did you not know about the Monitors at > > Haifa who read these posts for them and report anything of interest?
> Expect
> > they've got a thick file on me by now!
>
> I expect they have better things to do...

They do but they don't!

<SNIP>

> > You do have a point about materialism - it's rampant in the Bahai community!
> > As for disillusionment with religion - well, when it can be used to inspire > > suicidal fanatics to drive aircraft into the WTC, when it is utilised to > > justify the killing of Catholics and Protestants in Northern Ireland, when > > it gives rise to Falwell, Robertson, Paisley and that guy Jones who suicided > > his followers, is it any wonder that people are disillusioned with it!
>
> Is it possible that it is materialism that inspires these things, and not > religion as such? Religion just happens to be convenient front or label.

I would have thought that self-immolation was the very antithesis of materialism. No point in getting loads money for a job if you're not alive at the end of it to enjoy the fruits.

<SNIP>

> > Come back Torquemada - there's a place for you in the AO! Come back when > we > > need you!"

> These people are not disposed of. They are still there. They still voice > their opinion and claim authority for themselves. It's just that no-one > really bothers to listen anymore. Zzzzzzzzzzzzzzz!

Which is precisely why you need Torquemada - he knew how to deal with these types and, by God, the state stood back and gave him full support.
None of this stupid stuff like Courts and so forth - a good old fashioned stringing up and you do't hear from these liberals again!

<SNIP>

> As for these fossilised faecal pellets about incumbency; if what you claim > about all this widespread intolerance was so true, and everyone was so very > dissatisfied and disillusioned, the administrators would be getting kicked > out at every election. It seems that everyone is so pleased with the way > things are being run that they are not inclined to change their votes.
What?
> Shhh! Is that the sound of > "nobody's listening" I hear? More Zs? Perhaps a snore or six million? Or > could this be a sign of astonishing levels of unity?

NO! It's the sound of snoring as the delegates are gently lulled to slumber by the only reports they get to consider at Convention, the report of
the incumbent assembly which has done a great job over the last year ...
"emergence from obscurity" ... "entry by troops" .... "growing maturity"
.... "embryonic" .... "inspiring victories" ..... Oops! Nearly nodded off, myself! BTW all quotes there are from the Report of the NSA (1892 - date) -
each and every year, the same.

<SNIP>

> No. Materialism has always opposed human progress.
> Generations of nobles and lords and their wannabes have held back human > progress for the sake of maintaining the right to rob the peasants.
If > anything, religion has upset such insidious plans, and what is the result? -

Yup! Religion took over the right to rob the peasants and keep them under subjugation. But like I said when society relegated religion to its proper place in the gutter, the lot of the people improved.

<SNIP>

> So how do you unite with the Hitler's of the world? Stalin tried that,
and > you know the rest...

Always argue a case from the extremes!

> Unity is not what CBs want. Just division so they can have a piece of
the > pie, and another and another > and, dammit-let's just take the whole thing! Like Hitler...

He wanted unity - of everything under his control. Just like Haifa wants everything under its control, just like the CBs .....

> > Abdul Baha emphasised freedom of conscience - you cannot unite people > unless > > you are tolerant of different points of view and interpretations.
>
> Correct. However demands for allegiance from those whose leadership is > unwanted does not constitute a meagre difference of opinion.
Neither is > fraudulently presenting a personal opinion as the official dictate a matter
> of meagre personal opinion.

Geez! For somebody with academic pretensions you sure do a lot of jumping and talk a loada bollix!

Firstly liberals do not claim leadership. Theirs is presentation of a difference of opinion as their own and nobody else's. For one who has pushed the edge of the envelope of dissent this is depressingly and boringly like the official Party line - it's certainly as uninformed as it is.

<SNIP>

> > If this Faith is the Cause of God, none can destroy it or damage it.
>
> OOOH!
> How fanatical.
> How fundamentalist.
> How so very Jackie Fischer!
> Can you do that again?
> Since when did you cross the floor anyway? >:^
> Every other Cause of God has eventually been buried beneath the dust of > materialism. What makes us so special?

Nothing! Except that maybe you're getting buried a lot sooner under
the mantle of materialism.

<SNIP>

> > And you won't have love and unity unless you have > > tolerance of those who differ.
>
> As long as such "differences" are not forced upon others, there is no > problem. It is not the differences that are not tolerated, but rather
the > forcing of such views upon others.

Nobody is forcing anything apart from the AO - it started this by descending upon obscure academics who were doing what academics do so well - waffle night and day about the slightest smidgen. And all of a sudden Antiquated
Bored Missiles descend upon them with "Covenantally Challenging" remarks being scattered to all corners of the place. So the academics start moaning about strictures on academic freedom and all of that crud. Now I'm all in favour of leaving the old farts to argue amongst themselves - we all know they talk in tongues and bore the pants of everybody. You wouldn't inflict them on your friends. So anybody with any sense leaves them to carry on and takes no notice of them.

And all of a sudden there's all of this talk about restrictions on academic freedom and the whole lot of them are out on the Internet and, strangely and for most of them the first time in their lives, they're talking plain common sense about the way they are not left to do their own thing but are having views imposed upon them by total morons who wouldn't know the difference between black and white.

<SNIP>

> Actually, the vision restricts the rules, as we shall see...
>
> > Rules govern and restrict behaviour absolutely, which is perfectly > > all right until you have to break them
>
> Well, Iranian Baha'is got to educate their children in direct contravention > of Iranian Law - Technically in breach of Baha'i Law, but governed by the > principles of conscience not to mention the values of the Faith, this > attracts no sanction because these values disqualify such rules from being > so rigid, or taken "beyond the bounds of moderation".

Like I said about rules- "perfectly all right until you have to break them>"

<SNIP>

> > That's the difference between a Liberal and a BIGs - the former has no > means > > of restricting the appeal of the BF whilst the BIGS rests content with his > > rules. You have no room for me and others like me within your purview of > > the BF

> If that was true, I'd not be communicating with you.
> Sure there is room for you, I just don't have to blindly swallow everything > you say.

There is no room for Juan Cole, Alison Marshall etc - there's no room for me!!

<SNIP>

>
> It is also "clap-trap" to equate "attempts at schism" in my own words, with
> "schism" in your words.
>
> > > 1) Failure to deal justly by the vast majority of Baha'is who have > > > absolutely no interest whatsoever in neglecting religious issues to > > > negotiate away their rights as members of the Baha'i Faith whose entire > > > point is love and unity.
> >
> > There are no rights to be negotiated away
>
> When you are sold a bill of goods, you inherit the rights to those goods.
> There _are_ rights.

So the right to a fundamentalist, literalist faith system exists and is non-negotiable. have you told Abdul Baha about this?

>
> > nor does anybody want to do that.
>
> Except the CBs who want to run the show in spite of the fact that no-one > wants their leadership...

What CBs? Who brought them into the discussion on Liberalism and its place in the scheme of things?

> > > 2) Disintegration of the AO into splinter groups
> >
> > That just is not happening

>
 > Never said it was. I said it was a cost of tolerating attempts at schism.
 >
 > > although the BF is starting to develop a lot more > > splinter groups. Did you realise that the House has formed one - those > who > > believe in the BF but are dispensed from allegiance to the House by kind > > grant of permission from the House to that effect!
 >
 > Please elaborate! Extra bonus points for verifiable references from the UHJ, > Central Figures, etc....

No need - those who profess belief but do not meet the requirements of membership as defined by the House.

<SNIP>
 > Not really. They have no collective voice. Some whacker comes out of the > woodwork and mass murders thousands of people claiming it is done in the > name of > Islam, and Islam has no voice to reply collectively on behalf of its > people... Individuals like you and me can jump up and down and quote Sura > 2:190 until we are blue in the face. However, the local self titled > hate-mongers are always more convincing than meagre individuals such as > ourselves because people are not taught critical thinking.

Like the whackers referred to in the letter from the House that you refer to at the beginning of this tome.

<SNIP>
 > > > 4) Lack of love and unity within the Baha'i Faith as evidenced by the > > purile > > > need to have segregated systems of administration, places of worship, > > > deepening, and consultation.
 > >
 > > For what reason? Who's advocating this? It's a new one to me!
 >
 > Well, let's see? The CBs are doing it.
 > Don't deeds speak louder than words eh?

I thought the CBs were arguing that all should unite under the living Guardian.

<SNIP>
 > > Trying to persuade the AO to take an inclusivist
 >
 > One man's persuasion is another man's extortion...
 >
 > > approach and negotiate a

>
> One man's negotiation is another's unconditional capitulation.
>
> (No, these little gems are not original either: "One man's god is another > man's devil" ring a bell for you?)
>
> The point is that such are threatening to deliberately contribute damage, > rather than warning of consequences beyond their control. That is the > difference between persuasion and extortion.

So you assess and judge the motivation of those who post to these or other groups or are otherwise active in this debate. You suggest they are there to deliberately inflict damage. If that were the case they would not be voicing their opinions - they would be engaged in other activities of a more direct form.

>
> > resolution to the conflict in which everybody wins and nobody loses.
Now
> if > > such a deal happened and were promulgated by the House are you implying
> that > > if these liberals were accommodated in any way, your rights
would thereby
> be > > compromised and you would arise to oppose any such thing?
>
> The liberals are not the problem.
> They are the ones running the show.

That's the second time you've said that - you must believe it!
>
> It's the loonies who think we shouldn't choose our administration > collectively, who are the problem. Accommodate the separatists, and it will > be at the expense of the rights of those members who adopted the Faith
> because of the "religion is for love and unity" deal they are promised in > the first place.

WTF are the "separatists" in this equation? Do you have a clue about
what you're saying? On second thoughts I withdraw the question. There's no need to put it.

<SNIP>

> > Do you think that booting somebody out after 20 years of membership > without > > prior warning or consultation is anything other than an act of violence?
>
> 1) That is not how it is done. Why should I believe this claim of yours if I > have never seen it for myself? Remember, I am in the thick of all this. I am > not some pretender academic selecting convenient stories according to how > well they fit my particular opinion. My data set is a truly random sample.

And excludes Alison Marshall - which means it is truly random.

>
> 2) Even this does not amount to violence.
>
> > If
> > you really feel the need to get rid of dangerous folk, then according to > > your own exposition, there are rules to govern this, so gawd damn it, > follow
> > the darned things!
>
> As far as my random data sample is concerned, we do. There is no hard > evidence to the contrary.

Not in your sample which emphasises the randomness of it.

<SNIP>
> > Wot - www.bahai.org is woefully unreliable as a source of information.
I > > knew that!
>
> www.bahai.org ain't the internet. You ought to poke around some of the > other websites on offer (no pun intended). However, you can only gauge its > reliability by comparing it with the real thing...

Funny! You know up until now I thought only sex was better than the real thing!

<SNIP>
>
> > So we are agreed on this point. However the terrorists are crooks. The same > kind that pronounce their own authority and refuse to accept the fact that > the vast majority of people reject their leadership. Without regulation, > they resort to murder to prove their point. The diagnostic feature of crooks > is their own ego.

Well - Mick Collins and his bunch were branded as "terrorists" by the British Government and they had the support of the people, well, the Irish people or most of them!

>
> > You have Irish genes
>
> Straight off the wash-board

That explains a lot about you - most people get them from their parents!

>
> > - how do you describe McCracken, Munro, Tone, Pearse, > > Connolly and Collins - "terrorists" or "patriots"?
>
> Try as natural consequences of earlier historical events.

Or dodge the issue. The strong always label the weak as "terrorists" until the weak overcome the strong when they earn the appellation of patriot, freedom fighter and hero. Of course the real difference is the methodology.

The aspiring patriot fights honourably - man to man, soldier against soldier, trying not to involve or hurt civilians. But in a war of independence the aspiring patriot relies on support from the civilian so the civilian becomes a combatant, which starts to blur definitions.

<SNIP>

> > Depends on your > > partiality - doesn't it?
>
> Cynical, but true. The problem with partiality is that people assume that > there is only one dividing line...
>
> What never ceases to amaze me is how people in other countries > fail to exploit the opportunity of learning from the tragic mistakes of > others.

Or how religions never draw lessons from the secular world!

<SNIP>

> I agree, the meek are on the winning side. Mahatma Ghandi demonstrated that > beautifully. I do take this seriously, it is some of the other stuff I find > a humourous. "House of Horrors"! I mean, where were you when the WTC was > hit? Watching that was sheer horror. Sickening. Nothing else in our soft, > luxurious, cushy Western life compares!

No more horrifying than many other things that have happened and, in my personal perspective, a lot less horrifying than some personal experiences. It's a lot less disconcerting to see an explosion on television than to see one fifty yards away, especially as you watch the fireball headed yours and pull yourself off the floor afterwards, with no clear impression as to how you got to be lying there, with smoke and fumes choking your airways.

<SNIP>

> But I cannot help but wonder if there will be other Mr. Bean > Ladens and Dubyas, if the descendants of each side will still be at > each other's throats - you know the old skit, "One evil deed inspires > another"

There will always be those who forswear negotiation as a means of resolving differences and resort to violence instead. And those who forswear negotiation beget violence from their own and others!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Wednesday, October 10, 2001 4:30 AM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0110040700.4df6f771@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
news:<9pg8ls$i0tg8$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...

>
> > BTW I don't demonise anybody - I call things as I see them!
>
> You are painting the Baha'i community with a broad brush in your > original statement. Your statement said that the average Baha'i > thinks that a "liberal" is a Covenant breaker. That is a negative > statement.

It may be "negative" in your purview but that does not detract from the fact that it is true. Dave, I've been there and been called a CB behind my back - long before the Internet even existed.

>
> Broad + Negative = Demonizing.

Incorrect on several counts. Firstly I am not demonising - I report a phenomenon which the BIGS should address and rectify. Secondly I am reporting based on mine own observations and those of others - there is a factual base for my assertion. Thirdly a "negative" only remains negative if it is not counteracted to make a positive.

> >
> > I did not state that the entire Bahai community is terrorised - fact is, > > that individuals who step outside certain boundaries, as defined by the AO, > > mark well, will be subject to terror tactics to induce their falling into > > line OR leaving the community.
>
> Considering that those boundaries are defined by Baha'u'llah and > Abdul-Baha and crystalized by the Gaurdian then anyone who strays > from them should be warned. If that warning scares them then it would > be no different than the fright felt when one realizes that the car > you were driving in nearly crashed.

The boundaries are set by the current AO, allegedly based on writings by Abdul Baha and the Guardian. You will find nothing in their writings to suggest that a critical review of the "Bahai World", an article proposing reform of the institutions, a discussion on infallibility or a debate on whether the current ban on women on the House is incorrect constitute "covenantly challenging" behaviour. That's an interpretation imposed by the AO which appears not to want any discussion which is not on its agenda. That is contrary to Bahai principles.

>
> > But the general overall > > morbidity of the Community in terms of numbers indicates that all is not > > well. I don't attribute this to the terror tactics but to the overwhelming > > introspection caused by the need to protect the Faith and that need is often > > met by terror tactics when there is a clear and present danger to the > > interests of the AO.
>
> I know all is not well. The AO knows all is not well. They are > working to fix it.

It is not working to fix it, as you put it, for it is stifling any and all debate or discussion which strays from its pre-determined agenda. Consultation has to be free if it is to produce the desired results - suppression of topics or discussion is therefore contrary to Bahai principles.

> > You don't need to terrorise a community - you only take action against those > > who are perceived as a danger and then isolate them from the community

by > > demonising them, as in the denunciation of Dialogue and A Modest

Proposal.

> > The little lambs follow suit - but, if any step out of line, they get their > > asses kicked.

>

> Even if this were true - it still does not equate with terrorism.

What is it then?

> > > Bull. The AO listens when what is being said actually fits within the > > > Covenant.

> >

> > Yup! - THEIR definition of the Covenant after set aside of Abdul Baha's > > statements on freedom of speech etc.

>

> The AO is not opposed to freedom of speech. But that speech may never > take the form of opposition to the Covenant - Abdul-Baha and > Baha'u'llah confirmed this.

Who is opposing the Covenant? How can academic discussion be rated as "opposition" when, as everybody knows, academics waffle but actually never do anything to have their ideas executed. They are not "hands on" people - they are not the ones who organise opposition or indulge in tactics designed to force or impose acceptance of their ideas.

>

> > > How can anyone compromise the Word of God? You can't.

> >

> > We're not talking about the Word of God - we're talking about the systemic > > corruption of religion to suit the power lust of its leaders, as has been,

> > is and always will be the way with certain religious leaders.

>

> When someone can clearly show me systemic corruption then I will > believe you. Thus far all of the online critics have shown is a few > individuals with bad judgement, an immature Assembly or two, and the > rest have been shadows and speculation.

How many examples do you need? But one FAILURE of the system is sufficient to demonstrate that the system is not perfect and therefore in need of reform. Indeed reform is a continuous process for as soon as one defect is fixed, another appears. The UHJ botched Alison's expulsion - she was kicked out without forewarning. That is an abuse of power or a systemic failure.

It requires to be changed lest it happen again and the impetus for

that change should come from the Bahais themselves who are the ultimate victims.

>

> Baha'u'llah wanted to limit it. Do I need to quote Him when he talks

> about limits on liberty and the need for moderate speech?

And what is more moderate than an academic waffling on a list or in professional journals that nobody important ever reads. There were 175 people on Talisman, none of whom were seething revolutionaries.

The tone of the discussions was heated at times, immoderate on occasion but these guys

were (are) academics to whom this type of behaviour is quite normal.

Nobody

was shot or otherwise assaulted - nobody really fell out with anybody else

because of some academic tiff. Nobody was told to "Fuck Off!" - no threats were made or carried out. No revolutionary movement was advocated - no direct action was advised. What could be more moderate?

>

> Yes - we no longer have an infallible interpreter. What we do have
is > infallible application and execution of the writings. Baha'u'llah > commanded His followers to elect representatives who would gather and > consult on His Writings. Whatever they decided was to be obeyed.

> Further we could always appeal to them or to higher bodies. That is > our guide.

You cannot have infallible application without infallible interpretation.
The governing bodies are not infallible they are charged with the affairs of the community but they also have responsibilities as well as rights.

You

cannot appeal to the UHJ and expect an impartial consideration if the actions that are appealed are those of the UHJ. No man can be expected to judge fairly in his own case!

<SNIP>

>

> Thus conveniently leaving out the fact that many who resolved
their > difficulties through consultation with the AO are actually thriving > inside the Baha'i community.

No I have not forgotten them - but I also have not forgotten those who have not resolved their problems.

>
 > > > You know Dermod you are really good at exaggeration. There is not > > > terrorism in the Baha'i Faith. There are laws and punishment
 for > > > breaking laws - Baha'u'llah gave us that.
 > >
 > > Is there a law against discussion via E-mail in the Aqdas? So what
 "laws"
 > > did they break? Why were the Dialogue editors castigated for something
 they > > didn't publish, that was still under review? Was it perhaps because they > > were seen as nasty bastards who threatened the cushy jobs held by certain > > people in the AO?
 >
 > The discussion over email were a clear attempt at establishing an > authoritative view and convincing others to follow along with it.

Sorry Dave but that is bull! They were discussions just like this - exchange of views, certainly partisan, certainly forceful at times BUT
 that is not the same as establishing or endeavouring to establish an authoritative view. Until you see that you're not going to understand
 the feelings of those spurned by the AO, you cannot appreciate the alienation and you cannot come to terms with the fact that many of them are still vocal, in the hope, mistaken in my opinion, that the AO will listen and rectify.

That > is clearly outside of Baha'i Law. As for Dialogue - you know that I > feel that was a big mess with mistakes all around. The editors of > dialogue were mistakenly seen as undermining the process of National
 > Convention. It was a mistake to denounce them from the podium.
 The
 > NSA mistake of going ballistic and overreacted.

An awful lot of messes, Dave, and NO efforts to rectify them (BTW I use capitalisation to emphasise, not to shout) - Dialogue, Nima, Alison, Michael
 etc.

> > I don't give two fiddlers' farts who leads the BF - personally I'm done
 with > > it as I am with any and all organised religion. What I care about
 is > > justice and what I hate is the hypocrisy that rides roughshod over sensitive > > souls in the name of a God most of these buggers couldn't recognise if they > > met Him in person. Your BF which has a powerful, beautiful and attractive > > philosophy has been ruined by the megalomaniacs and bigots who run it!

>

>

> But Dermod - Baha'u'llah said that His laws were Manifest Justice.

> They are _the_ definition of what is just and what is unjust. You are > judging the situation with your standard. It can't be weighed on that > scale. You want the Baha'i Faith to conform to your narrow view of justice.

No. It has to conform to its own view as enunciated by Baha'u'llah and duly interpreted by successors empowered so to do. The current AO flies outside of those interpretations, never mind the original word, with its own nebulous interpretation of the Covenant

> That is not how this Faith functions.

Absolutely correct! On that we are agreed!

As ever,

Dermod.

>

> Cheers,

>

> Dave

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Subject: Re: Your bahai Newsgroup Experience - How to IMPROVE IT

Date: Thursday, October 11, 2001 7:01 AM

Don,

"Onandagus7" <onandagus7@cs.com> wrote in message news:20011011011126.11331.00003253@mb-fv.news.cs.com...

> Fred,

>

> I sympathize very much with the spirit of your attempts to stop censorship and > oppression within your religious community. But I think you are making some > strategic errors. However much intimidation you may see other Baha'is using > against dissenters, the word "terrorist" is simply too loaded a term to convey

> this. "Terrorism" does not denote non-violent intimidation, and even if it did,

> the term carries too much emotional baggage, much like the words
"cult"
and > "brainwashing." People usually use these words only when they wish to dismiss > or demonize those they disagree with. You can't _realistically_ expect to > influence people with this sort of inaccurate and inflammatory language.

I agree with you that the use of the word "terrorist" is emotive at the moment. Nonetheless it does properly describe tactics used by the AO against its perceived enemies. Last night local Television (in Northern Ireland) showed a 76 year old woman who was absolutely terrified out of her wits. She had received a crude threatening letter advising her that unless she vacated her home something nasty would befall her. She is a member of the Protestant community living adjacent to the current School protest in Ardoyne, North Belfast. The threat purportedly came from the "Catholic Reaction Force" - a title that has been used in the past to claim responsibility for sectarian murder. In the current atmosphere that crude letter is sufficient to intimidate and terrorise and that is its purpose.

To be declared a Covenant Breaker is the greatest sanction of the AO - shunning is the consequence to the extent that even a spouse must divorce a CB or face the same penalty. To somebody whose social and family life is bound up and inextricably linked with the Bahai community, the threat of being declared a Covenant Breaker is one filled with immense horror and fear. It is sufficient to intimidate and terrorise and that is its purpose.

There is another thread on this very subject which starts with a post made by Fred on 30 September. I'm not the best at giving you URLs for these things but this is the message that started it -

"BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing"
<patrick_henry@liberty.com>
wrote in message news:<9p79aa$gp743$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de>...

and this is one which gives my understanding of and attempted definition of terrorism.

"Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message news:<9pb8fm$hupga$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...

> Also, as an aside, while I don't know everyone you listed as a "Baha'i fanatic," from what I've seen Pat and Matt really don't fit the bill. They come across to me, as an impartial outsider, as moderate true believers.

I append my own opinion of Fred (which I have posted to the above thread): -

"Furthermore the imputation of motives of hatred to him is questionable. I detect more the anger and despair born of utter frustration at the perceived destruction of something that is most precious to him. Fred certainly is intemperate at times and most annoying at others. Yet there is a blatant sincerity behind what he does, no matter how exasperating or self defeating it might appear to be. I can empathise with Fred - in times past when terrorist outrages have killed friends of mine, I have been tempted to reach for the gun and lash out at any and all people who just might be even sympathetic to those who have committed the foul deed. And as we know only too well here - terrorism in one community spawns its counterpart in the other. Fred is a product of the AO - if he is a monster, it created the monster! That is the tragedy but that is the inevitable product of a system that polarises opinion by stigmatising and demonising those who do not adhere to a strict fundamentalist interpretation."

Fred's methodology arouses a great depth of feeling - those who disagree with it, he tends to group under the heading of fundamentalist.

I have not kill-filed any on Fred's list - the only victim of that procedure on my machine is one who goes under the name of Darrick Evenson, for unmitigated racism of the first degree. From what I can determine his views have not moderated at all.

I agree that Matt is not the worst in the world and would add Dave Fiorito and Brian Walker to that category (the latter sadly has not been about much recently). As for Pat Kohli - a lot would depend on the thickness of the brown envelope he'd be prepared to offer for my endorsement - notwithstanding the fact that underneath that strange surname, there are some decent Irish genes. Only joking! Pat 's a good type too!

As ever,

Dermod

**>
> Best wishes,
>
> Don Bradley

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Your bahai Newsgroup Experience - How to IMPROVE IT
Date: Thursday, October 11, 2001 7:43 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0110111115.2369140a@posting.google.com...
Dave

**>
> Sunning is the legitimate treatment of those who have broken the > Covenant.

Tan their hides! (Sorry! Cheap awful pun!)

> It is something that every Baha'i knows. If someone feels > "terror" when they find out that they are moving towards breaking
the > Covenant that is a good thing. With out fear of conequences how would > laws ever be enforced.

In the W&T Abdul Baha admonishes to "shun THE (emphasis added)
Covenant
Breakers." That definite article gives a completely different dimension to the phrase - he did not say "shun covenant breakers" or "shun all
covenant
breakers" - he said "shun THE Covenant Breakers" - a particular group of CBs alive and up to dirty deeds at the time he wrote the W&T. Other quotations advise shunning evil doers but I would hold that this is no more than advice to disregard their machinations and intent. Indeed is it not advice to shun those who work against the Covenant rather than those who seek deeper understanding thereof ?

I note however that you regard "terror" as legitimate when applied to "covenantly challenging" behaviour. It is a short step from that to its abuse, by misinterpretation of the Covenant, especially when there is no

Protector of the Covenant alive.

- >
- > The fear of breaking the covenant is more like the fear felt when a
- > criminal is caught and convicted, and realizes the punishment that
- > awaits.
- >
- > The law is there for a reason. Baha'u'llah expected it to be
- > enforced. If a Baha'i is approaching the point where they are going
- > to be considered a CB then they need to know.

And how do you deal with a conscientious Covenant Breaker especially those who believe that the UHJ is itself a nest of CBs who have rejected the living Guardian? The very thing that Shoghi Effendi was supposed to prevent has happened - the Cause is split. All that is left is a very imperfect understanding of the Covenant and no assurance of continued Divine Guidance in its further interpretation. Without a Guardian how can you have CBs for only he can interpret whether individual interpretation of the Covenant is in accord with the Divine Will. The UHJ cannot do that save by default and that is bound to be prone to error.

- >
- > The woman in your example was on the end of a criminal threat. A
- > Baha'i who is close to being considered a CB would be hearing a
- > serious, legitimate warning of the possibility of a legitimate law
- > being enforced.

The UHJ is not a judicial body charged with protection of the Covenant - it cannot therefore declare anybody to be a CB in the original meaning of the concept without acting ultra vires. Perhaps that's where disenrollment came from. In any case the practice is incontrovertibly alien to the growing practice of human rights law. It's a dead duck!

And in any case - terror is terror! To endeavour to instill fear into one who abides by the dictates of his conscience is immoral!

- > Do you see the difference? One is criminal and the other lawful.

An unsafe conclusion!

Dermod

- >
- > Cheers,
- >
- > Dave

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM 5 - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Saturday, October 13, 2001 4:30 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0110100806.19bc52db@posting.google.com...
Dave,

> > So forget Fred's editorial and look upon it as an archive of source > > material, which is the way I approached it. Editorialising comes after
the > > facts, not before them.
>
> But his archives a fragments of facts where some important facts
have > gone missing.

The only "facts" missing are those of the AO which doesn't want to expose them.

<SNIP>

> > I personally think that there are those within the AO who feel they have a > > duty and a right to spy on whomsoever they please. In that sense therefore > > there is an element of the "Secret Police". "Competent", however is the > > last word I would think of to describe it!
>
> Yes Dermod - I agree on both counts. But the subtle point here is > that the "spying" is done on individual initiative and is not a part > of Baha'u'llah's Administrative Order. So the problem is not > systemic.

Incorrect! Paul Dodenhoff left because he had been instructed as an ABM to spy on people. Such a purpose is not in the Writings - it's a part of AO corruption.

> > Mine own encounters with the AO (long before I ever heard of Fred or Juan)
> > left that impression firmly melded in my mind. These guys haven't a clue
> > how to deal with conflict and contention, especially when it comes from a > > non-Bahai who does not and will not play according to their made up rules.
>
> Agreed. Our community is too small and to young to have effective > LSAs all over the world.

It has fuck all to do with smallness etc.! The Northern Ireland community is full of professionals who are good at their jobs and then come to the AO to make a total balls-up of everything they touch. Why is this? Do they think that Old World Order efficiency and concern have no part in religion?

**>
> > I am a great believer in "due process." But do they learn from this?
Not
> > in triduum of Tuesdays and why should they! have they not been invested > > with Divine Guidance on this? But have they not forgotten that God helps > > those who help themselves - what is in the Writings is principle and > > guidance which show the way but must be reinforced with the particularities > > of rules and must be uniformly applied by reference to precedent. Principle > > and guidance is not especially good law and good law is useless unless > > uniformly applicable to all equally and without favour. That is why law is > > based on legislation and case law - rules and precedent as to how to > > interpret them so that what is illegal in one district will be illegal in > > all. Given that clarity the citizen knows exactly where he stands .
>
>
> Preaching to the converted here Dermot. I understand what you mean > and I agree with it. Again - this has to do with our lack of > administrative experience and skill. That will come with time. This > is also not a systemic problem.

Wrong again Dave! The AO has no interest in a due process which might show forth its own corruption. You need a free press to oversee the overseers and that's one thing the AO does not tolerate. That's why Dialogue and Modest Proposal were put to death! That's why they hate Juan and the rest of the Wild Bunch - they are not cowed and subservient! They don't believe the crap!

**>
<SNIP> > > Demons- NO! Fools, pedagogues and hypocrites aplenty though! People should > > learn from mistakes - be sensible enough to fess up and not repeat the > > error. But to learn from mistakes, one has first to realise that they have > > been made, to analyse them and draw proper corrective conclusions.

>
> YES!!!! Now - this needs to be applied to both the AO and its > critics!

Why? The critics have performed this process - the AO hasn't! when we get to a level playing field, you might put that point again but not until then.

>
> > This critical approach is frowned upon by the AO which, for some strange > > reason, views it as "negative" and verboten therefore. The whole thing about > > negativity is that it exists from time to time and is an opportunity for > > positivism. To turn negative into positive is to grow.
>
> YES AGAIN!!!! Wow we are actually in agreement. I have seen a change > in the AO here in the US over the last 10 years. They are giving a > long hard look at the "negative" and they are working on it.

Evidence?

<SNIP>

> > Trouble is, Dave - it makes the same mistakes over and over again and keeps > > getting up the noses of people who do not admit or acknowledge its > > omnipotence and are not prepared to accept the crap!
>
> But this comes back to Baha'u'llah - He told us to obey the AO. He > told us to use consultation to settle our differences. This is where > I feel the critics of the AO have stumbled. They ignore those > commands of Baha'u'llah for one reason or another.

Consultation is a two sided process best not served by midnight visits and threats of excommunication.

>
> > From the LA study group,
>
> US NSA - I agree that this was handled poorly - so why didn't the LA > folks accept the decisions of the NSA and make a humble appeal to the > UHJ for a consultation on the matter?

The UHJ canned David Langness etc on the advice of the NSA. There's nothing to gain from dealing with an organ which has its mind made up for it and acts on advice tendered without checking on the other side first.

<SNIP>

> > the expulsions,

**>

> This is where the water gets cloudy. Michael was making statements > clearly in conflict with the Writings and he refused to obey the UHJ.

> Clearly the AO had no other choice. Fred asked to be removed.

Alison

> made a clear attempt to establish a version of the Covenant that does > not match the Covenant revealed by Baha'u'llah. He case is not as > clear cut as the other two. I feel more consultation is required on > this one.

This bullshit about Alison. She was on a small e-mail list which most people had never heard of - a list incidentally which had a fair number of

AO loyalists on it. She's not the militant type and has not the charismatic aura to attract a mass following - put another way, Alison plies her own beliefs and is not interested in having others latch on to them. She's not a leader so talk of her establishing her own version of the Covenant in opposition to Haifa is bull. Some consultation prior to the event of her expulsion might have helped but as there was none, talk of more is useless.

> > the spying on Nima,

**>

> You know I think that was a mistake and should never have happened.

Just what Paul Dodenhoff stated he was instructed to do.

<SNIP>

> > this organisation has acted with the crassest of arrogance which > > is born only in immense stupidity. IMO it has never once stopped to consider

> > the fallout of what it has done.

**>

> Maybe so, but the reaction the AO received was not exactly wise > either.

What did it expect? If you fall on people wielding knives they tend to defend themselves.

> > None of these people are Covenant Breakers yet they are banned effectively > > from being within the ambit of that Covenant.

**>

> Correct - if they want to rejoin the community they can do so.

There

> just needs to be some real consultation on these matters.

I don't think any of them want to rejoin the community as it now is.

> > None of them wants to change that Covenant.
>
> This is where I disagree. Many on this list want to make changes that > would not be Covenantially sound. For example, the vocal insistance > that women serve on the UHJ.

If the House determined that women could sit on it, would you regard that as covenantally sound? So what's wrong with people discussing the matter?
What's wrong with research on the matter? what's wrong with people proposing the adoption of different policies? Isn't this what happens day and daily in everyday life? Do citizens in the US lose their voting rights if they openly disagree with Government policy? Are Catholics excommunicated for stating that they think artificial birth control is OK?

<SNIP>

> > > One thing that I learned long ago - when there is a conflict, the two > > > sides are both to blame. I have yet to read anything from Juan, Fred, > > > or anyone on "that side" to fess up to their own mistakes.
> >
> > When Juan re-declared his belief was he not fessing up to a mistake he feels > > he made?
>
> No. He may have rediscovered his belief in Baha'u'llah, but he has > not looked at his actions or his positions for the places where the > original conflict occurred. He has not, to my knowledge, approached > the AO to consult on his situation. He does not need to make a public > confession - that is forbidden - but he does need to make ammends.

For what? The AO shat on him and not the other way around.

> > As for Fred - he has been so anathematised and marginalised that > > he dare not fess up to anything.
>
> No - he dug his own hole so deep that he can't see out of it anymore.

I wouldn't bet on that but with your hard attitude do you wonder why Fred gets even more entrenched. It's a cycle of violence - vioence begets violence begets violence.

> > And there is the essential problem. In > > the absence of any form of meaningful dialogue between the contending > > parties attitudes harden, mistrust grows, suspicion becomes overwhelming > > and hatred develops on both sides. In such an atmosphere it becomes > > impossible to fess up because the perception is that the other side will > > seize on and exploit it as evidence of weakness. It's a vicious circle > > which neither side can or will break for that is the ultimate weakness.

 >
 > That is the point of consultation. If I were in a position where I > had been removed from the rolls, I would find someone inside the AO to > talk with. I would make it clear that I wanted to consult about the > matter, but I did not want it to turn into a blame-fest or a feeding > frenzy. I would hope to gain the confidence and trust of a member of > the Institution of the Learned and work with them to seek a fair > consultation with the LSA/NSA/RC/UHJ. I would be careful _not_
 > to > become entrenched lest I end up where so many are right now - > radicalized and partisan.

So who initiates this consultation? Don't you realise that in conflict the side that initiates negotiation is the weaker side, acknowledging it is wrong (to some degree or other) and giving the other moral legitimacy?

> > There are ways of breaking the circle but they require that both sides
 are > > willing to engage in a resolution of the conflict - sadly the AO isn't, > > partly I believe because it cannot see a way to do that which will not > > result in a massive loss of face for it! And here lies the biggest > > problem - given the absence of malice, the AO has manoeuvred itself into > > this invidious position through its own stupidity and that self same > > stupidity militates against its seeing a way out!
 >
 > Then isn't it up to the agrieved party to help find a way back without > making the AO lose face? Others have done it. Trouble is that folks > like Juan, Michael, Fred, and Alison all went on the PR attack > afterwards. They helped to create the atmosphere of distrust by > seeking others to rally around them. They sought sympathy from both > Baha'is and non-Baha'is alike. They, not the AO, created the us > versus them mentality we see today. That is a barrier. Words like > "liberal", "fundamentalist", "conservative", "mainstream", etc. were > not coined by the AO. They did not create that kind of division.
 > That is a problem.

You're admitting the AO will lose face if it initiates consultation. FYI repeated efforts have been made to start that process on a "no pre-conditions and without prejudice" basis. They have all been rebuffed by an AO which insists it will consult with people, it has demonised and marginalised, on its terms and no other. If people went public with this it's because there is no alternative.

>
> > I confess that this conflict fascinates me. Much as I am a staunch > > supporter of the liberal cause I am not personally involved and have > > developed a degree of detachment therefore. What is most interesting
is > > that the conflict is centred in the US which is to be the powerhouse of > > Bahai development in the world. Consequently the ultimate resolution
will > > have profound significance for the BF for the next 2-300 years.
>
> I agree - this is a big test for our community. The purpose of a test > is to learn and grow through either success or failure. Thus is > America's test for sure.

To date the AO is failing badly. Why not wait until things are really bad when it will be crying out for consultation and action to get it out of the pit. Concessions will then be more readily forthcoming.

> > IMO at the moment the liberals have gained the high ground and have > > undoubted strategic advantage, not so much from anything they have > > themselves done but from the fact that the AO, having set the objective
of > > silencing them, has signally failed to achieve that objective. The ball
is > > now in the liberal court.
>
> Agreed. Now, if they turn to Baha'u'llah, understand that forgiveness > and reconciliation is in order, and rejoin the fold, then I will say > they have succeeded. If they continue to identify themselves as an > alternate to the Baha'i Faith, then they will just end up being > declared Covenant breakers and will become marginalized even further.

Forgiveness? For what? For acting in accordance with what is seen as right?

Dave, I would personally and very sincerely welcome the award of the title of CB - it would at least show that these people have guts even if they don't have any sense. But I don't even think they have guts.

One thing is apparent! The AO embarked on this witch hunt without a clear strategy, without having achievable aims, without assessing likely and possible enemy reaction, without doing an assessment on repercussions outside the Bahai world and without having an exit strategy if it all went horribly wrong. They threatened to nuke the opposition (the CB threat) and succeeded in having them withdraw. But the opposition didn't keep quiet so the AO deployed its next weapon - the disenrollments. Again the opposition did not keep quiet. So in June they threatened to nuke everybody and tried it with Nima. And everybody has told them to eff off! The threat no longer works. And now the armoury is empty whilst the Wild Bunch is still running rampant.

So tell me why should anybody initiate consultation with the AO? To save its face, to continue to allow this mob of duffers to remain in situ? I don't see any necessity to initiate any form of consultation with a corrupt and tottering AO. Best wait and see it totter some more!

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Disowning and Shunning?
Date: Saturday, October 13, 2001 7:00 AM

"Matt Menge" <mspmeng@msn.com> wrote in message news:dc19cfc5.0110122218.2c1d3d3e@posting.google.com...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
news:<9q5gs8$mekaf$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de>...

>
> >
> > And did you believe those things implicitly (coming from Bahai sources)
or > > cast about for corroborative evidence?
>
> I also asked a number of individuals in the area about the event > regarding my now-Muslim friend (clearly I wouldn't be able to do
that > in Nima's case.) There was actually some feeling that during feast > there was a kind of nasty spirit in the air. However, not even the > bystanders would give me too much information.
>

And that atmosphere of secrecy is cultic and oppressive. The essence of justice is that it is open and manifestly right. I think that is why Courts are open to the people and judges have to justify their decisions. If the rationale behind a decision is manifest, the grounds for appeal, if any,

are clear and people know that the Court has tried to do the right thing.

> > That the NSA published two separate defamatory statements is > > incontrovertible. That one of them was published after an assault on
Nima

> > in which the assailants shouted "Covenant Breaker!" is well attested.

This

> > is an act of religious persecution perpetrated by bigots. Might we conclude > > therefore that the NSA concurred with the actions of these bigots

in > > publishing the second defamatory statement?

>

> Yes, I've been slowly reading Glaysher's stuff but haven't found these > reports yet. By the way was Fred actually banned from certain > newsgroups or was it just that he never said anything innocuous?

> Clearly banning him sounds extreme.

I have a great deal of admiration for Fred's principled stand and the work

he has put into assembling and maintaining his website. As a source
of evidence it stands as an indictment of the AO and a measure of the shameful tactics adopted by it.

> > When it comes to motive often there is no "smoking gun" but, as in this > > case, there is a deal of circumstantial evidence which allows of a > > reasonable conclusion that the NSA perpetrated a wrong. As far as I am > > aware and as is the usual practice in the AO, the NSA deigns not

to offer

> > any evidence or purview on the matter over and above its published > > statement. There is therefore no evidence offered by the defence and in its > > absence the jury has found the charges proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

>

> I am not sure why the assemblies do not go into greater detail
about > such matters. It seems a little strange, but I am not going to jump > to conclusions yet.

Assemblies expect to be obeyed implicitly - they therefore feel no need to justify their decisions. Compare that to the way that Courts operate - their decisions are to be obeyed but they are fully justified. I prefer

the way that Courts operate.

>

> By the way, what is actually meant by assault? Clearly physical > contact was made but were there bruises for example?

>
> So you mean to say that the NSA said, "Yes, you did the right thing
in > assaulting Nima"?

Effectively yes!

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - Terrorism & OFF- ONline Stalking
Date: Saturday, October 13, 2001 2:17 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0110120637.1ef2abca@posting.google.com...
> "Thirinel" <thirinel@email.msn.com> wrote in message news:<etivoSpUBHA.2140@cpimsnntpa02>...

>
> Yes - diversity is welcome. Fred is not about diversity or unity.
> Fred is about attacking the very intitutions the Baha'u'llah commanded > we humbly obey. Unity in diversity is not like the free-love, warm > and fuzy, go with the flow, new age unity. Unity is based on the > recognition that we are all servants of God, and that God has given us > laws to follow for our own betterment. Unity is submission to the > Will of God.

Fred is attacking the corruption that is the business of the AO - he is not attacking the institutions, he is attacking the filth that spews from in a total perversion of what Bahaism is about. And that, Dave, is where the zero growth and stagnation is founded.

As I've said before - if Fred is negative, then turn that something negative into something positive by kicking ass in the AO.

Dermod.

>
> > As a matter of fact I more often disagree with his positions than I agree but > > Baha'u'llah states that all who follow him are on the Crimson Ark.
>
> I would like that reference for that. I would like to read it in > context. Baha'u'llah clearly said that belief was not enough to be a > follower of His. One had to obey (submit) to His Will as expressed by
> His laws and exhortations.
>
> > How in the world can we expect the peoples of the world to live in peace
and > > harmony with each other when we Baha'is reject fellow Baha'is who disagree > > with us.

>
> Because the Baha'i Faith has the integrity to remove from its > membership a person who actively seeks to cause disruption.
>
> The Baha'i Faith is not the Society for Group Hugs, it is not a place > for all and sundry to peddle their own twisted view of Baha'u'llah's > Revelation.
>
> From Baha'u'llah::
>
> This is not a Cause which may be made a plaything for your idle > fancies, nor is it a field for the foolish and faint of heart. By God, > this is the arena of insight and detachment, of vision and upliftment, > where none may spur on their chargers save the valiant horsemen
of the
> Merciful, who have severed all attachment to the world of being.
> These, truly, are they that render God victorious on earth, and are > the dawning-places of His sovereign might amidst mankind.
>
> -- Bahá'u'lláh, The Kitab-i-Aqdas paragraph 178
>
> Peace,
>
> Dave

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Attn Dermod - Re Haifa's "monitors"
Date: Friday, October 26, 2001 6:13 PM

"BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing"
<patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote in message news:9rckn0$sjbmq$2@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de...
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
> news:9rbr91$sa5qr$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...
> >
> > Sorry Fred - no names!
>
> Well, any guesses? Anybody we know around here?

My understanding is that they are in a bunker buried deep under Mount Carmel near Haifa and they live in constant fear of attack. The bunkers are designed to resist a dead hit by a rocket propelled Fred Glaysheer - a variant that is considered more deadly than the Fred Glaysheer Mk 1 Master of Spam.

To protect these valued assets who serve a daily report on the activities on TRB to the House members over breakfast - an event that makes breakfast the worst meal of the day - counter-Glaysheer weapons have been deployed across the Internet. These include the Fiorito Close In Weapons System, the Medium Range Kohli and the Rolling Articulated Matt Menge.

We can't provide the names of the monitors for security reasons - that and the fact that they are regularly rotated for the strain of having to listen to the absolute filth and drivel on TRB is considered too hazardous - and that's just the guy who monitors the fundies. Word has it that several have died from boredom, as well - something we can all empathise with.

The ones in charge of the others, those faced with daily exposure to the "covenantly challenging" infection, for which there is no known cure, are a particularly sad case. A number have gone over the hill, having succumbed to the infection; others are reported to have ended their days in strait jackets. I tell you, Fred, you gotta take your hat off to these guys.

Due to their courage and devotion to duty, the Bahai World is a safer place for your kids to be brought up as fundamentalists!!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: New Thread - Deception and Unity
Date: Wednesday, November 07, 2001 4:57 AM

"Robert Little" <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message news:xZLF7.61853$R9.16594346@typhoon.we.rr.com...

Hi Robert,

> If your experience is that the entry of numbers of Persians into your > community constituted an invasion, then the problem was yours.
These
> Persians did not leave their native land with any degree of happiness, or > much choice. Many of them lived for long periods of time in those same
> Pakistani refugee camps you now see populated with Afghans.
(Afghanis?
> Afghanis?). I know Baha'is who went through them.

None of these superior fundie asses were refugees - let's get that straight! The refugee families that came were exemplary in their willingness to take a back seat and learn about the society they had come to live in. That is what distinguishes the real human being from the pseudo one. As the old proverb says "When in Rome ..." I have no problem with people who come from afar and note the differences between their culture and mine. But I'll be damned if I'm going to accept some arrogant twat coming here and telling me that his culture is superior to mine and that I (and the rest of the nation) must change to accord with his viewpoint. Better than him have been observed floating, face down, in Belfast Lough!

> Those Persians who you feel failed to properly respect your own native > customs were not pioneering, they were escaping. That influx represented a > remarkable opportunity for your two peoples to learn from each other.

> Represents still, just not for you personally.

One of the best Persians who was here - not a refugee - developed one of the best Belfast accents I have heard and learned to enjoy and participate in the robust self deprecatory humour that is at the heart of local lifestyle. He didn't try to tell anybody that Persian culture was inherently superior - he observed and learned that our culture suited us and that if he bothered to immerse himself in it (whilst retaining his own identity) people stopped looking upon as a foreigner (while still trying to learn of his culture) and fully accepted him into the community as an equal partner - emphasis on "equal." He brought people into the BF - including me. The superior types didn't because at the core of them was neither love nor respect for the natives and their culture.

> Nice to see how the children > of an Irish-Persian marriage would turn out. Perhaps, they'd put their books > on the floor, but kiss them first?

Depends a lot on which side is emphasised. Some are brought up within the indigeneous culture (which is the one they live in) with due respect and regard for the other. Some (a minority) have been inculcated with the dreadful superiority complex! Guess which ones I prefer! Guess which ones will be most accepted by the rest of the natives!

> Being Irish is terrific, although you personally can't take much credit for > that, but I seem to recall something along the lines of "Glory rather in > this, that you love mankind."

Being Irish is so terrific that over 70 million people outside of the island claim Irish ancestry! It's quite obvious that the Irish "love" mankind!

Dermod.

> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message

> news:9rvl6g$uooui7$5@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...

> >

> > "Robert Little" <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message

> > news:vm7E7.42583$R9.11672491@typhoon.we.rr.com...

> > > You ask the wrong question, impose the wrong answers.

> > >

> > > Ask any Baha'i who is at all active in his/her community, and you > > will get > > > the answer that the administrative order functions in direct proportion to > > > the level of functioning of the community of which it is an integral > > part.

> > > It is maturing as the constituent members mature both in terms

of > > experience > > > and wisdom.
> >
> > I asked and did get this answer as one might expect from those taught > > to believe in the efficacy of the AO. OTOH as one who has suffered > > for many years from the same AO I disagree. For those years Mrs > > Reaper assiduously carried out her administrative duties on days and > > nights. Much administration but no practical gains - the community > > was moribund but the administrative burden remained the same.
> >
> > <SNIP>
> > > I have seen what can happen > > > when someone enters the Baha'i Faith in a tiny community, gets > > elected to > > > the Spiritual Assembly, and then reveals severe emotional or mental > > > problems. Drugs, alcohol, sex, you name it, you will find > > > communitys > > > struggling with all these problems, and when you only have ten or > > twenty
> > > Baha'is in a community, the problems can seem overwhelming.
> > Sometimes, they > > > ARE overwhelming.
> >
> > They had a great way of dealing with "problem" Bahais here - they > > removed them from the community.
> >
> > >
> > > Years ago I moved into a community that had lost its LSA. The > > chairman had > > > died of cirrhosis, one teenaged Baha'i had died of a dirty needle, > > another
> > > smoked pot, and one member was a manic-depressive. Wow.
The first > > time I > > > went to visit one family, the surviving spouse slammed the door
in > > my face.
> > > Shame.
> > >
> > > We got over all that: the manic-depressive was hospitalized; the pot > > smoker > > > and I said 500 Removers of Difficulty, and he flushed the pot down down
> > the > > > toilet, after which he borrowed some money to pay for it; he helped > > his > > > younger brother clean himself up, and we soon had a healthy

 > > community.
 > > > Things change. Tests happen.
 > >
 > > People with problems like that know better than to join the Bahai > > community here and if, by any chance, they slip through the net
 they > > are soon alienated into leaving.
 > >
 > > <SNIP>
 > > > The Baha'i Faith is in its infancy, and is changing rapidly.
 What
 > > was true
 > > > of a community yesterday - local or national - is not going to be > > true > > > today. There have been migrations of Persian Baha'is into many > > communities,
 > > > large numbers of racial, cultural and "other" minorities have > > entered the > > > Faith in some areas, and numerical stagnation in others.
 > >
 > > One of the greatest handicaps the Bahai community has had here was
 the > > influx of Persians who tried to mould the community into a little > > Persia - like the gomer who tried to hit on me for placing Bahai books > > on the floor. Now Persians may indicate disrespect for a book by > > putting it on the floor but the Irish put a book on the floor if > > that's the most convenient place to put it.
 > >
 > > The imposition of an alien culture does little to enhance the appeal
 > > to an indigeneous population which has had its fill of being imposed > > upon and wishes to emphasise its own identity. If Bahais were serious > > about the intent to sell their faith here they would advise those > > Persians that they are seriously over represented in the community
 and > > ought either to take a back seat or learn and adopt Irish ways.
 It > > was a very distinctive Irish Christianity that made this island one of > > saints and scholars. Bahai pioneers have to adapt themselves
 and
 the > > Faith they present to the indigeneous culture if they wish to make an > > impact.
 > >
 > > <SNIP>
 > >
 > > > No pain, no gain.
 > >
 > > Loads a pain and still no gain. the immature, embryonic argument
 has > > been around too long as an excuse!

> > --
> > As ever,
> >
> > Dermod.
> >
> > "In God We Trust - All others pay Cash!"
> >
> >
> >
>
>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: That's right: Opinions are not banned!
Date: Wednesday, November 07, 2001 5:03 AM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0111050901.6ce41b73@posting.google.com...
Dave,
>
> > How well inform are you of what the UHJ is doing now, or as to what is > > ongoing? Your statements below cannot be verified by you or me
in any > > manner, and you know it.
>
> ... and neither can the statement that they are engaged in some kind > of ongoing campaign of oppression be verified in any way.
>
> My point stands.

With regard to the number and nature of incidents as described on Fred's site and elsewhere -

Once is happenstance,
Twice is coincidence,
But the third time? That's ENEMY ACTION!

--
As ever,

Dermod.

"In God We Trust - All others pay Cash!"

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: That's right: Opinions are not banned!
Date: Wednesday, November 07, 2001 5:58 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0111071202.790ca5cb@posting.google.com...
Dave,
>
> > With regard to the number and nature of incidents as described
on

> > Fred's site and elsewhere -
> >
> > Once is happenstance,
> > Twice is coincidence,
> > But the third time? That's ENEMY ACTION!
>
> Look, removal of ones membership is a legitimate sanction in the > Faith. If it is used then why is the assumption made that it should > not be used? Should we not use punitive measures because they may > hurt someone?

Don't isolate it into one specific area! Fred's site contains a lot of gems apart from Alison and Micheal. The LA group, the termination of Dialogue, Juan's midnight roasting, the denunciation of Modest Proposal, the Bahai Intelligence Agency (some contradiction in this, surely!)surveillance of Nima, Paul Dodenhoff's disclosure on being ordered to spy on BIGS, Albuquerque LSA, etc., all, when grouped together, form a pattern which readily slips into my Three Times Rule. There is other minor but corroboratory circumstantial evidence as well.

Consider, for example, the Corps of ABMs for Protection and the Counsellors. They protect the faith from its enemies. But what enemies are they deployed against? How many ABMs or Counsellors have fallen in battle whilst engaged in combat here against the spiritually corrosive? Not a one! Why? Because they do not battle the external enemies of the Faith. Theirs is a predatory battle against the internal enemy. And that circumstantially supports the hypothesis that the BIGS are controlled as to the expression of their views by the Thought Police. If Protection is not practised on the Internet by active defence of the Faith on the open fora by the institution of the learned (some mistake here, surely!) what the hell are these gomers engaged in?

You come here as an earnest BIGs to defend and uphold the dignity of the Faith. You get mauled every day by the said spiritually corrosive. What support do you get? Is the heavy artillery of the Consellors deployed to support you? Are there squadrons of heavily armoured ABMs charging the foe? No feckin' way! You're the poor grunt in the foxhole with shit raining down on him day and daily (just like the Taleban). And what are the REMF Counsellors and ABMs doing?

They're spying on your and everybody's else's E-mail! And do these guys give one tinker's fart about what you have to endure, are they concerned that their Faith is hacked and slashed here, these guys sworn to protect it? Only slightly but only if it seems you are about to be corroded!

--

As ever,

Dermod.

"In God We Trust - All others pay Cash!"

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Why I Don't Respond to bahai Fundamentalists

Date: Tuesday, November 13, 2001 9:48 AM

"Brian Walker" <bfwalker@net-yan.NOSPAM.com> wrote in message news:Xns91587055AE0D7bwalkernetyancom@202.14.67.242...
> "Freethought110" <freethought110@bohemian.org> wrote in > news:9spt1n$r1r$1@perki.connect.com.au:

Hi Brian,

> > Thanks for the input. I think you've nailed it (no pun intended).
The > > BIGS here don't seem to realize how much their shennanigans
with
Fred
> > makes them look like more and more like mobs of enraged fanatics on a > > blood lust, kind of like those mobs of Shi'ites in Iran who incited by > > the local mullah would go on a rampage against defenseless Babis
or > > Baha'is.
>
> Greetings - is it you Nima? I have been offline for a while ....

Good to see you back! And yes - it is Nima - off on the rampage again with mobs of enraged liberals .... !

**>
> BIGS in general ignore Fred. He is worthy of that. Perhaps a few will be > excited by him, but so what? He does irritate a lot.

If most BIGS avoid Fred how come thjere is such antipathy against him?
Is it because his web site is popular - perhaps more popular than the Edmonton Local Bahais' Website and Floral Garden?

> To equate this with fundamentalist mobs rampaging is a bit arch, don't you > think?

Well we literally don't have mobs but some of those who rant against Fred display certain mob tendencies and sentiments.

**--
As ever,

Dermod.

"The Meek Shall Inherit The Earth - if that's alright with the rest of
you!"

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Dr. Maneck's New Censorship Technique
Date: Friday, November 23, 2001 6:42 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011122033233.08228.00001930@mb-md.aol.com...

<SNIP>

> So why did I change sides? Well, like Karen, I became increasingly aware of how > much the Faith meant to me, and awareness which began to grow as I took > seriously Baha'u'llah's admonition to read the Writings every morning and > evening. It was the only act of firmness in the Covenant I felt capable of at > the time. And as I began to do that, my desire for reconciliation began to grow.

> But what I began to realize is that the people I was associating with did not > want reconciliation, they were locked into a battle with the administration and > what they wanted most was to win.

Here lieth the ultimate truth - here is the crux of fundamentalism.
It is black and white, right or wrong failing to recognise that life is not that simple or clear-cut. Rather than perceiving a situation where there are differences to be resolved, the fundamentalist mindset sees these differences as a challenge to the revealed truth. But the revealed truth is not that clear - that individual interpretation is not merely possible but permitted is symptomatic of this assertion.

Something less antagonistic is needed here - something that suggests that the causes of contention need to be resolved, tolerated and reconciled rather than seen as a means to escalate the contention into conflict.

This is the process of reconciliation you refer to but if it is to work it requires compromise on all sides. The classic build-up to conflict sees both sides girding their loins and becoming more antagonistic to the other. Sooner or later this explodes into violence - one side attacks, the other retaliates and the spiral continues. Who started it is never clear yet unless BOTH are determined to stop, it will continue.

At its simplest the current Bahai War is about authority and inclusion. The House demands its authority be absolute up to and including a rigid interpretation of and adherence to the COVENANT.
Liberals dispute both the the wisdom of this (to the mission of winning converts) and the House's right to insist on it. They believe the Covenant is inclusive of wide and varying interpretation, they therefore have a right to belong to the community if they so wish and the House has no right to exclude them. At this point in time there is no indication that either side is prepared to compromise - the prospect is continuing internecine warfare which will flare up and down from time to time in varying degrees of intensity. That continuing conflict will sap the energy and vitality and the ability of the BF to proceed. Indeed the only loser in the conflict is the BF - for the liberals at no cost to themselves can continue the struggle indefinitely. The solution is obvious yet will not be applied!

You changed sides in this conflict! You reconciled yourself with those who are antithetical to everything you once believed in! You sold your integrity and have paid a gruesome price for so doing and not mainly from those whose cause you once shared! Far from effecting reconciliation, apart from your own, your defection effectively hardened battlelines and attitudes - you, wittingly or not, escalated the conflict and brought a lasting opprobrium upon your own head. And what you joined is an organisation that is "Ruhi-ising" the entire community - the Catechism of the Bahai Faith for all to learn by heart and recite by rote. The Institutions don't hate you - they have nothing but contempt for you - for you hadn't the guts to plough your own furrow but submitted and went under the yoke.

I don't need to tell you that fundamentalist revolutions never succeed in the long run - the onward march of liberalism has never been repulsed. But fundamentalism, because it suppresses human creativity, can do untold damage to its victims of whom you are one!

The essence of the Bahai Revelation is that one does RIGHT, not because some authority orders you to do it but because it is the right thing to do. Bahaism is of the spirit and the heart and not the institution and its authority. That is why the Covenant ought to be a loose binding that it can inspire but never restrict the surge of creativity that is the human yearning. When it becomes a matter of authority it has failed and the world will disregard it as it advances way beyond the limited vision that is set in concrete in Haifa. The Bahai spirit - the real Bahai spirit - is in the many people who work with my autistic kid and all the other sick and disabled kids throughout the world. Not a one of them is Bahai - not a one would believe that a better world will result from the machinations of assemblies or Haifan folks fulminating about E-mails.

I spent twenty years of guilt wondering if I did right to leave the Bahai Faith for, seemingly, I was the only one who saw its wasted purpose and potential for corruption. When I came to the Internet, especially when Alison was canned before mine own eyes, I knew I was right! To have belonged to this apparat would have sapped every vestige of self respect and deeply held belief that I ever had - I would have had to betray myself to belong to it. I have seen Bahais support corruption in the Assembly when every sinew of their being cried out against it - for the sake of unity and the upholding of authority in the institutions. But that's why I know what you're going through! And at the end of the day, that's why I feel sorry for you!

This current Bahai Faith will fail - but the spirit of the Revelation is alive, well and prospering throughout the world. It will improve the lot of mankind in due course and at that time the rump of Haifans will have put the "For Sale" sign up on those grandiose terraces. Who knows but that Fred will negotiate the sale for a reasonable commission!

Dermod.
--

"The Meek shall inherit The Earth - if that's alright with the rest of you!"

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Conference Call - Reiterated - Conference Call - Reiterated - Conference Call - Reiterated - Conference Call - Reiterated -
Date: Thursday, November 29, 2001 6:32 PM

"Milissa" <milissabk@altavista.com> wrote in message news:df0d6959.0111280821.63eabb5f@posting.google.com...
Hi Milissa,

<SNIP>

> So, if anyone on this list is going to be at Green Acre, give me a > buzz and lets see if we can meet up. I would really like to have > someone to talk to about these things, but this list gets too hot > sometimes plus my husband I think is weary of me going on and on about > stuff.

There are places I plan to go and Green Acre ain't one of them, sadly.
As for hubby - well, Mrs Reaper used to get weary of it too but she has now seen the light and agrees with me more and more. So keep on putting pressure on him and he might well start to see the light as well!

<SNIP>

> Fred, we are not going to get anywhere at all until *both* sides can > genuinely give the other credit for being decent human beings. This > means that liberals must accept that people in the AO are not demons > out to steal their civil rights and those in the AO will have to get > thicker skin and not confuse criticism of them as criticism of the > Covenant.

Now here's the problem - neither side trusts the other so, if you're going to have this conference you need a few confidence building exercises beforehand.

<SNIP>

**>
> I agree and would just reiterate that both sides need to do this.
> Dave, do you really think such a conference could happen? What > protection would someone attending have from administrative sanctions?
> See, my thinking at this moment is that the AO would perceive it as > negative campaigning or some type of internal opposition. Until I > could feel really secure that this conference could take place in > absolute freedom with no possibility of AO backlash, I don't think I > or lots of other people would attend. Please don't get offended
Dave,
> but this is really the perception I have, and I am sorry to have to > say it. And this is very sad.....

Now why in a religion that preaches "consultation" would you or anybody fear retaliation for voicing your views? And incidentally, that's one of the reasons that this conference will not take place at this time for the AO perceives no self interest in participating. It has the community deluded into believing that all is well and growth is taking place, albeit slowly, and would be greater were it not that non-BIGS are too materialistic to join.

The dear lady recently stated in another place, that, last year the number of deaths exceeded the number of enrollments in the BIGS community in the US. Given that we also know that some 50% of new enrollments withdraw within two years, the Bahai population is therefore now in decline and that rate of decline will increase as the baby boomers age.

Consequent on this decline in numbers will be a decrease in dollars flowing to Wilmette and Haifa, which latter may well squeeze the funds of the former even further. News of numerical successes in outer Mongolia may be good for morale but not for the coffers as Mongolians, lacking the material benefits of the US, are not fruitful prospects for financial squeezing. I hear many tales of financial hardship in the Bahai communities throughout the Occident - I think there will be more of them.

I think you'll get your conference when the decline in numbers and finance becomes terminal. Whether the AO will initiate it or whether the AO will be overwhelmed by irate duped BIGS, I wouldn't like to forecast but I hope to be around to see it all unfold!

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
To: "Fred Glaysher" <FG@hotmail.com>
Subject: Web site
Date: Tuesday, November 27, 2001 12:24 PM

Fred,

Messages as requested.

as ever,

Dermod

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011122033233.08228.00001930@mb-md.aol.com...
<SNIP>

> So why did I change sides? Well, like Karen, I became increasingly aware of how > much the Faith meant to me, and awareness which began to grow as I took > seriously Baha'u'llah's admonition to read the Writings every morning and > evening. It was the only act of firmness in the Covenant I felt capable of at

- > the time. And as I began to do that, my desire for reconciliation began to grow.
- > But what I began to realize is that the people I was associating with did not - > want reconciliation, they were locked into a battle with the administration and
- > what they wanted most was to win.

Here lieth the ultimate truth - here is the crux of fundamentalism. It is black and white, right or wrong failing to recognise that life is not that simple or clear-cut. Rather than perceiving a situation where there are differences to be resolved, the fundamentalist mindset sees these differences as a challenge to the revealed truth. But the revealed truth is not that clear - that individual interpretation is not merely possible but permitted is symptomatic of this assertion. Something less antagonistic is needed here - something that suggests that the causes of contention need to be resolved, tolerated and reconciled rather than seen as a means to escalate the contention into conflict.

This is the process of reconciliation you refer to but if it is to work it requires compromise on all sides. The classic build-up to conflict sees both sides girding their loins and becoming more antagonistic to the other. Sooner or later this explodes into violence - one side attacks, the other retaliates and the spiral continues. Who started it is never clear yet unless BOTH are determined to stop, it will continue.

At its simplest the current Bahai War is about authority and inclusion. The House demands its authority be absolute up to and including a rigid interpretation of and adherence to the COVENANT. Liberals dispute both the the wisdom of this (to the mission of winning converts) and the House's right to insist on it. They believe the Covenant is inclusive of wide and varying interpretation, they therefore have a right to belong to the community if they so wish and the House has no right to exclude them. At this point in time there is no indication that either side is prepared to compromise - the prospect is continuing internecine warfare which will flare up and down from time to time in varying degrees of intensity. That continuing conflict will sap the energy and vitality and the ability of the BF to proceed. Indeed the only loser in the conflict is the BF - for the liberals at no cost to themselves can continue the struggle indefinitely. The solution is obvious yet will not be applied!

You changed sides in this conflict! You reconciled yourself with those who are antithetical to everything you once believed in! You sold your integrity and have paid a gruesome price for so doing and not mainly from those whose cause you once shared! Far from effecting reconciliation, apart from your own, your defection effectively hardened battlelines and attitudes - you, wittingly or not, escalated the conflict and brought a lasting opprobrium upon your own head.

And

what you joined is an organisation that is "Ruhi-ising" the entire community - the Catechism of the Bahai Faith for all to learn by heart and recite by rote. The Institutions don't hate you - they have nothing but contempt for you - for you hadn't the guts to plough your own furrow but submitted and went under the yoke.

I don't need to tell you that fundamentalist revolutions never succeed in the long run - the onward march of liberalism has never been repulsed. But fundamentalism, because it suppresses human creativity, can do untold damage to its victims of whom you are one!

The essence of the Bahai Revelation is that one does RIGHT, not because some authority orders you to do it but because it is the right thing to do. Bahaism is of the spirit and the heart and not the institution and its authority. That is why the Covenant ought to be a loose binding that it can inspire but never restrict the surge of creativity that is the human yearning. When it becomes a matter of authority it has failed and the world will disregard it as it advances way beyond the limited vision that is set in concrete in Haifa. The Bahai spirit - the real Bahai spirit - is in the many people who work with my autistic kid and all the other sick and disabled kids throughout the world. Not a one of them is Bahai - not a one would believe that a better world will result from the machinations of assemblies or Haifan folks fulminating about E-mails.

I spent twenty years of guilt wondering if I did right to leave the Bahai Faith for, seemingly, I was the only one who saw its wasted purpose and potential for corruption. When I came to the Internet, especially when Alison was canned before mine own eyes, I knew I was right! To have belonged to this apparat would have sapped every vestige of self respect and deeply held belief that I ever had - I would have had to betray myself to belong to it. I have seen Bahais support corruption in the Assembly when every sinew of their being cried out against it - for the sake of unity and the upholding of authority in the institutions. But that's why I know what you're going through! And at the end of the day, that's why I feel sorry for you!

This current Bahai Faith will fail - but the spirit of the Revelation is alive, well and prospering throughout the world. It will improve the lot of mankind in due course and at that time the rump of Haifans will have put the "For Sale" sign up on those grandiose terraces. Who knows but that Fred will negotiate the sale for a reasonable commission!

Dermod.

**-

"The Meek shall inherit The Earth - if that's alright with the rest of you!"

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011125023334.27459.00002727@mb-fo.aol.com...

> >The

> >Bahai spirit - the real Bahai spirit - is in the many people who work > >with my autistic kid and all the other sick and disabled kids

> >throughout the world. Not a one of them is Bahai -

**>

> You think only non-Baha'is care for autistic kids?

Did I say that? I don't think so!

>I cared for one for over three years.

So now you know a little of what I go through each day. Bravo!

Is that all you could find to contend with?

Splendid!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Tuesday, December 04, 2001 4:52 PM

"Milissa" <milissabk@altavista.com> wrote in message news:df0d6959.0112041122.42fd24fb@posting.google.com...

> Fred--

**>

> Why don't you just write to them and tell them they misunderstood your > request and asked to be reinstated?

**>

> WHY don't you?

**>

> The Faith has enough problems without you making some up or causing > them.

**>

> Please attempt to rectify this situation with them before you subject

> us on the list to another round of regurgiposts. You haven't even > written to them to tell them they misunderstood, have you? You > haven't even tried to resolve this. If, after contacting them to > explain the misunderstanding, they refuse to reinstate you, then you > might actually have a point. At this time, you don't.

Au contraire, Milissa! If National has disenrolled Fred the onus is on it to inform him of that fact, not Dave F, Pat K, Tony Blair, David Trimble or Uncle Andy! It seems that anybody who contacted Wilmette was told that Fred had been cut off, if not in his prime then surely in some other state of which he is, equally, unaware! But nobody at National has deigned to tell Fred or, pace Dave F. etc., confirm that he has been disenrolled. When I escaped the clutches, the UK National

wrote to confirm my name had been taken off the rolls! maybe Wilmette could follow suit. Unless/until it does I'm all for Fred claiming to be a BIGS of the finest kind!

What I glean from this is that Wilmette is inhabited by a flock of clucking chickens (note I checked the spelling to avert unpleasanties) who haven't the guts to face up to Fred and tell him that they have given him the heave! Gutless, spineless fundie loonies with a great big yellowstain where the backbone ought to be and you want to go back and join them! Give us a break - you got more to you than that!

As ever,

Dermod.

> "BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing" <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote in message
news:<9ufgrp$7ou3o$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de>...
> > Bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
> >
> >
> > In 1996 my request to the circulation department for the American
Bahai,
> > repeated twice and perhaps a third time, read, "Please remove my name and > > address from your mailing list." I had torn off the preprinted address > > change label regularly published on the back page of the American
Bahai and > > mailed it into the address given for subscription changes.
> >
> > I asked for nothing other than my name and address to be removed from the > > mailing list--no gloss, no explanation, no complaint, no threat, etc....
> > Dermod Ryder's speculation that willingness to receive the American Bahai
> > has become compulsory should give pause....
> >
> > Again, note well, I used the address on the back of the American Bahai given > > specifically for handling subscription addresses. I did not write the nsa, > > its secretary, etc. My communication was limited to the simplest
of > > requests: remove my name and address from your mailing list.
Not a word or > > suggestion about withdrawing from the Bahai Faith, nor any criticism of it > > whatsoever, real nor implied. I conveyed my wishes to the proper address, as > > announced in the American Bahai itself. That I received a response
back from > > an entirely different address speaks volumes, as they say. After six years,
> > I believe the time is now right to release it publicly. I've scanned the > > letter so others might read the original.
> >
> > I am not about to accept the slander and backbiting of fanatics
and > > fundamentalists nor allow them to provoke me into one action or another. I > > prefer the facts: Again, I declared my belief in Baha'u'llah in

1976 and > > notified the nsa, who sent me back the declaration card available on my > > homepage. I have never notified them otherwise. They, as distinguished from > > liars and sycophants online, have never notified me to the contrary. Scanned
> > originals at <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/nsa1996.htm>
> >
> > The other two letters were related to the Detroit local spiritual assembly
> > and its junk mail.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Wednesday, December 05, 2001 5:21 AM

"Robert Little" <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message news:1geP7.16531$PQ2.2028628@typhoon.socal.rr.com...

Robert,
>
> How do you know that Mr. Glaysher has not been contacted, or that there was > not a legitimate attempt to contact him?

Because nobody has ever produced a letter from National telling him that he had been disenrolled. There is other corroborative circumstantial evidence that such a letter was never sent.

The house wrote to a number of people detailing why Alison Marshall was expelled yet never explained this to her - in Michael's case it said more to his wife than to him.

As to a letter from an ABM - one assumes that this was a request for a meeting. After all only National and not an ABM can expell one from membership!

As ever,

Dermod.

> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
> news:9ujggi$915ub$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...
> > "Milissa" <milissabk@altavista.com> wrote in message
> > news:df0d6959.0112041122.42fd24fb@posting.google.com...
> > > Fred--
> > >
> > > Why don't you just write to them and tell them they misunderstood
> > your > > > request and asked to be reinstated?
> > >
> > > WHY don't you?
> > >

> > > The Faith has enough problems without you making some up or causing > > > them.
> > >
> > > Please attempt to rectify this situation with them before you
> > > subject
> > > us on the list to another round of regurgiposts. You haven't even > > > written to them to tell them they misunderstood, have you?
You > > > haven't even tried to resolve this. If, after contacting them to > > > explain the misunderstanding, they refuse to reinstate you, then
you > > > might actually have a point. At this time, you don't.
> > >
> > > Au contraire, Milissa! If National has disenrolled Fred the onus
is > > > on it to inform him of that fact, not Dave F, Pat K, Tony Blair, David > > > Trimble or Uncle Andy! It seems that anybody who contacted Wilmette > > > was told that Fred had been cut off, if not in his prime then surely > > > in some other state of which he is, equally, unaware! But nobody at > > > National has deigned to tell Fred or, pace Dave F. etc., confirm that > > > he has been disenrolled. When I escaped the clutches, the UK National > > > wrote to confirm my name had been taken off the rolls! maybe Wilmette > > > could follow suit. Unless/until it does I'm all for Fred claiming to > > > be a BIGS of the finest kind!
> > >
> > > What I glean from this is that Wilmette is inhabited by a flock of > > > clucking chickens (note I checked the spelling to avert > > > unpleasanties) who haven't the guts to face up to Fred and tell him > > > that they have given him the heave! Gutless, spineless fundie loonies > > > with a great big yellowstain where the backbone ought to be and you > > > want to go back and join them! Give us a break - you got more to you > > > than that!
> > >
> > > As ever,
> > >
> > > Dermod.
> > >
> > > "BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing"
> > > <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote in message
> > > news:<9ufqrp$7ou3o$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de>...
> > > > Bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing > > > list."
> > > >

> > > >
> > > > In 1996 my request to the circulation department for the American
> > Bahai,
> > > > repeated twice and perhaps a third time, read, "Please remove my > > name and > > > > address from your mailing list." I had torn off the preprinted
> > address
> > > > change label regularly published on the back page of the American
> > Bahai and > > > > mailed it into the address given for subscription changes.
> > > >
> > > > I asked for nothing other than my name and address to be removed > > from the > > > > mailing list--no gloss, no explanation, no complaint, no threat,
> > etc....
> > > > Dermod Ryder's speculation that willingness to receive the > > American Bahai
> > > > has become compulsory should give pause....
> > > >
> > > > Again, note well, I used the address on the back of the American
> > Bahai given > > > > specifically for handling subscription addresses. I did not write
> > the nsa, > > > > its secretary, etc. My communication was limited to the simplest
> > of > > > > requests: remove my name and address from your mailing list.
Not a > > word or > > > > suggestion about withdrawing from the Bahai Faith, nor any > > criticism of it > > > > whatsoever, real nor implied. I conveyed my wishes to the proper
> > address, as > > > > announced in the American Bahai itself. That I received a response
> > back from > > > > an entirely different address speaks volumes, as they say.
After
> > six years,
> > > > I believe the time is now right to release it publicly. I've > > scanned the > > > > letter so others might read the original.
> > > >
> > > > I am not about to accept the slander and backbiting of fanatics
> > and > > > > fundamentalists nor allow them to provoke me into one action
or > > another. I > > > > prefer the facts: Again, I declared my belief in Baha'u'llah

in > > 1976 and > > > > notified the nsa, who sent me back the declaration card available
> > on my > > > > homepage. I have never notified them otherwise. They, as > > distinguished from > > > > liars and sycophants online, have never notified me to the > > contrary. Scanned
> > > > originals at > > <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/nsa1996.htm>
> > > >
> > > > The other two letters were related to the Detroit local spiritual > > assembly
> > > > and its junk mail.
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
>
>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Wednesday, December 05, 2001 7:12 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0112051332.94f6844@posting.google.com...
> Dermod,
>
> Why should they contact Fred if his letter was a withdrawl request?
> They got his first letter. Wrote to him to clarify the situation.
> Fred sent a letter that said, in effect - just do it. So they did
it.
> No need to contact him further - case closed. Now if Fred was > misunderstood and he want to be a member of the Baha'i community
it's > up to him now.

Dave,

He asked to be removed from the Mailing Lists. If in AOnion that is determined to be a withdrawal - fine! But where is that stated in a policy directive that predates Fred's letter (Ex post facto law is not good law) that he either knew or could be deemed to have known that his request to be withdrawn from the mailing list was synonymous
with a request to withdraw?

I don't dispute that Fred has been disenrolled or that National has the authority so to do. What is incredible is that rather than have the guts to stand up and tell him it has done this, it slinks in a corner, informs you and waits for you to tell Fred whilst maintaining silence. At the same time it hopes to sell the story that Fred withdrew of his own accord. It is an absolute shambles - the national body which is supposed to be a central authority is hunkered down

and keeping quiet about a relatively simple matter which could be cleared up with a five minute letter.

Do you wonder why I am sitting here laughing at this farce which purports to be the governance of the future? You elect these jokers to office year in and year out without even a cursory glance at the shambles they create amid a falling membership.

As ever,

Dermod.

>
> Cheers,
>
> Dave

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Wednesday, December 05, 2001 7:58 PM

"Milissa" <milissabk@altavista.com> wrote in message news:df0d6959.0112051012.51818abe@posting.google.com...
Hi Milissa,

>
> Fred is not being honest with you. Just because the AO has some liars
> in it, does not automatically make Fred correct.
>
> Fred claims he was unjustly removed from the rolls, while to others
it > appears that the NSA misunderstood his request. Dermod, ask Fred
for > proof that he wrote clarifying the misunderstanding and asked to be > reinstated. Demand the proof. I don't think he can. If he can prove > he wrote such a letter and THEN was told off by the NSA, I would agree > with your assessment Dermod. But Fred has to prove it and he hasn't > yet.

Fred claims to STILL be on the rolls. He states that National has never told him that he has been removed. It seems to have told everybody else but him.

Frankly in such circumstances I don't think it is up to Fred to write to them - enough of them read the posts here. If it is a genuine misunderstanding then National should contact him - if he has been disenrolled, National should write and tell him this, not tell Dave F but tell
Fred G.

>
> Dermod, I agree that the AO has done some things that are bad.
This
> just isn't one of them. Please Dermod, I don't want to have a round > with you like I did Nima. I'm still hurting over that.

It's only an Internet forum - don't take it so seriously! You can't be expelled or otherwise harmed for what you say in a place like this after all! Sure ain't I one of Nature's leprechauns - albeit an overgrown one - who never falls out with anybody unless anybody tries to shaft me in a not nice fashion, which you're not trying!

**>

> All I want is PROOF.

I agree with you - I think that if National has disenrolled Fred it ought to have the decency to write and tell him that. I also think it was very wrong of it to communicate, in the first instance, a disenrollment to other than the person disenrolled, for quite frankly, I'd take Fred's word on it that he has received no communication from National telling him he has officially been disenrolled. If he has why does he have to learn this from Dave F. and not from the folk who actually removed his name from the rolls - whether he requested it or not? If National feels Fred disenrolled himself why has it not confirmed to him the fact that it has carried out his instructions? The answer is apparent - it goes "Cluck .... Cluuck .... Cluuuck! Chicken!" And boy! Do they lay eggs!

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Friday, December 07, 2001 6:27 AM

"Milissa" <milissabk@altavista.com> wrote in message news:df0d6959.0112060630.edc0d99@posting.google.com...
Hi Milissa,

Listen, I've trimmed your headers! Don't tell the husband! But it's all right cos Pat said so!

<SNIP>

> If Fred were to promise not to sue them for harassment, I am sure they > would. Is Fred willing to promise this?

Under no stretch of the imagination can a straightforward letter notifying somebody that his membership has been terminated be deemed to be harassment. I conclude that the use of this as an argument is symptomatic of cowardice in the face of the enemy.

<SNIP>

> You can't > > be expelled or otherwise harmed for what you say in a place like this > > after all!
>
> No, but it can sure be uncomfortable!

Why? Why should comments in this or any other place engender an atmosphere of discomfort or fear?

> Sure ain't I one of Nature's > > leprechauns - albeit an overgrown one - who never falls out with > > anybody unless anybody tries to shaft me in a not nice fashion, which > > you're not trying!
>
> I am very relieved to hear that my favorite leprechaun still loves me!
> ;) I really do hate disagreeing with people I like.

I disagree all the time with people I like. That's one of the advantages and benefits of friendship that you can disagree with somebody but still count them as a friend! Of course I'm not allowed to disagree with Mrs Reaper! Geez! Talk about Holy Writ!

> I agree that they didn't tell him. The question is why?

Lack of Moral Fibre! Sheer stupidity! Take your pick!

<SNIP>

> Well when I sent in my disenrollment letter I didn't get final > confirmation either. The American Baha'i still comes, although it is > addressed to Michael and not both of us like before. He gets official > mail and I don't and it is clear from the statistics of our community
> that I am counted as one of the 2 non-Baha'i spouses in the area.
So,
> the fact that they did not confirm it doesn't necessarily seem out
of > place.

That your name has been removed from mailing lists and statistics is confirmation of a sort. Fred was cannier however! Knowing that he would, most likely, be expelled he got off the mailing lists first. He also knew full well that after citing "harassment" National would effectively twitter as to what to do with him and how to announce it. Along comes Dave to solve that latter one! Unfortunately, nobody having had the brains to fully work out the consequences, this only opened another avenue of exploitation for Fred et al to romp freely in.

> > The answer is apparent - it goes "Cluck .... Cluuck .... Cluuuck!
> > Chicken!" And boy! Do they lay eggs!
>
> I know Fred thinks that the NSA is afraid of him or something, but I > think they simply find him annoying.

That's National's biggest mistake! Fred is actually very dangerous! His site is well up there on the Search Engines - I've had private mail from enquirers who look in here on TRB trying to make sense of the contradictions between what the official sites say and the evident acrimony here (I had one last night - I'm not saying who it was or anything else). I point such enquiries to the official sites AND to Fred and Juan, on the basis that they are entitled to all of the facts.

The mere fact that such sites as Fred's exist is a damning indictment of the inability of the AO to create, foster and maintain unity in diversity of thought. It is a searing insight into the inability of the AO to protect the good name and reputation of the BF - all that this incompetent clique that is at the head of affairs does, is provide ammunition for all of those who oppose and criticise it. All they accomplish is to drive out and make enemies of those who could be within. And make no mistake, Milissa, they have driven out the brightest and the best! Net result is that the driven out run rings around them on the newsgroups whilst the incompetence flourishes from New Mexico to Fred's membership card!

> You see them as chickens and > they see him as the fox! Thing is, both sides are probably right.
:-(

And I'm the hound! Woof! Woof!

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Friday, December 07, 2001 5:39 AM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0112060757.14da7eef@posting.google.com...

Dave,

>
> > Fred claims to STILL be on the rolls. He states that National has > > never told him that he has been removed. It seems to have told > > everybody else but him.
> >
> > Frankly in such circumstances I don't think it is up to Fred to write > > to them - enough of them read the posts here. If it is a genuine > > misunderstanding then National should contact him - if he has been > > disenrolled, National should write and tell him this, not tell Dave F
> > but tell > > Fred G.
>
> Dermod - come on. Stop letting your anti-AO bias blind you like this.

I have no bias against the AO - I have formed an opinion as to its competence or lack thereof based on research and experience!

> If National read Fred's request as a request to be disenrolled and > they honestly feel that they have done exactly what he wanted them
to > do, then why the hell should they contact him? Dude, think for a > minute. You jump all over the AO for doing what Fred asked them to > do. Why should they contact him?

You really need to be told this!

You have people spouting about "protection" of the good name and reputation of the BF and here is a situation which periodically is rehashed all over the newsgroups and does nothing for that good name and reputation. And why is it rehashed? Because of the ambivalence about Fred's status! And what is the way to remove that? National writes to Fred and tells him he has been disenrolled in light of his refusal to meet with an ABM to consult on the matters which have perturbed him, his E-mail messages have not been consistent with his duties to protect and uphold the BF and, in any case, he asked for his membership to be cancelled.

Net result - end of ambivalence, end of any doubt as to Fred's status and no more opportunity for me (or others) to lambast the continuing idiocy. Fred is no fool - he knows damn well that National wants rid of him and has effectively expelled him! But until National gets the guts together to get the act right - Fred will continue to exploit the situation for his own purposes and people like me, who actually know how to kill this controversy, will continue to have fun!

>
> HE ASKED FOR IT!

So damn well give it to him instead of farting about like a beached porpoise! Would you like me to draft a suitable letter for National to send to Fred to put a stop to his antics?

> > > All I want is PROOF.

> >

> > I agree with you - I think that if National has disenrolled Fred it > > ought to have the decency to write and tell him that. I also think it > > was very wrong of it to communicate, in the first instance, a > > disenrollment to other than the person disenrolled, for quite frankly,

>

> WHAT? I did what any Baha'i has the right to do - I wrote to National > to find out if Fred's claim was legit. If I had not asked, they would > never have said anything.

I'm not criticising you for writing - I'm criticising National for telling you before it actually told Fred that it had acted in accordance with his wishes or had simply removed him!

> > I'd take Fred's word on it that he has received no communication from > > National telling him he has officially been disenrolled. If he has

> > why does he have to learn this from Dave F. and not from the folk who > > actually removed his name from the rolls - whether he requested it

or > > not? If National feels Fred disenrolled himself why has it not > > confirmed to him the fact that it has carried out his instructions?
>
> Oh puh-leez. Why should they confirm anything that someone requests.
> When a magazine subscription runs out you get a renewal notice.
If
> you do not answer it you stop getting the magazine.

Because when you're dealing with somebody like Fred you have to use your intelligence to anticipate what his reaction will be and take measures to counteract that.

> Tell you what - let's say that the disenrollment was a > misunderstanding and Fred wanted to be a Baha'i but stop the American > Baha'i. If the AO misread his request and his lack of clarification > to their query as a withdrawal request and Fred found out later that > he was disenrolled by mistake - why doesn't he call them to straighten > it out?

Why should he? National has made a stick for him to beat it! Like I said - Fred is no fool!

>
> I would call in a heartbeat. If it is that important to him why > doesn't he just go complain to the AO that they did not follow his > instructions and clarify to them that he does indeed want to be a > Baha'i?
>
> I will tell you why. He would rather be an anti-AO martyr, and give > folks like you an excuse to beat up on the AO.

You got it .... eventually! Mind you, National still hasn't grasped it! But then it rarely does! And you're the folk who elect it and I'm only one of those who laugh at it!

> Sorry but this problem is Fred's to solve. Until he does he will > remain outside of the Baha'i Faith looking in.

A most splendid place to be!

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Saturday, December 08, 2001 11:11 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011208175428.02597.00002071@mb-dh.aol.com...

> >
> > if National feels able to delete names from it's list without any > > notification at all at the time of occurrence then how do we know they are > > not also adding names willy nilly as the urge suits them
>
> Dear Randy,
>
> They did not remove Fred 'willy nilly' without notifying him. They had honored > his own demand not to be contacted, that is all. But you guys can invent > whatever fantasies you want about National.

Hi Randy,

There's none so blind as those who cannot see and the dear lady is a prime example. If Fred has been removed and not told about it, there's no guarantee as to who is and who isn't a BIGS anymore.
Secretaries of local communities would be well advised to check the status of community members on a weekly, if not daily basis, to ensure that only Beehives who are confirmed as in good standing, can attend Bahai-only functions and events. One week you could be in and the next day you're out but nobody will know that unless it is checked regularly.

Who will know who's a BIGS anymore? I think this has more serious implications than the dear lady realises. Damn it - for all we know she might have been declared a CB already - and think of the implications of that! We're all risking spiritual morbidity now and we don't know it!

Makes you fantasise!

As ever,

Dermod.

PS Are you sure you are still in and haven't been disenrolled? What about Dave and Pat?

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Saturday, December 08, 2001 6:11 AM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message
news:20011208002639.02564.00002087@mb-dh.aol.com...

> > At the same time it hopes to sell the story that Fred > > withdrew of his own accord.
>
> Dear Dermod,
>
> No one in the AO ever suggested that Fred withdrew on his own accord. Because > he had said he would consider any attempt to contact him as harassment they > decided to oblige him and therefore didn't contact him when they removed him > from the rolls.

Bullshit! If that was the case then a top would have been put on answering any query about Fred's membership. That he has been disenrolled, not informed of that BUT the information has been made freely available to anybody who enquires, looks more like harassment than any straightforward letter to him informing him that National has exercised its prerogative and removed him from the rolls.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Saturday, December 08, 2001 10:39 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message
news:20011208110030.02564.00002160@mb-dh.aol.com...
> >That he has been > >disenrolled, not informed of that BUT the information has been made > >freely available to anybody who enquires, looks more like harassment
>
> The Office of Membership and Records will inform anyone of a person's > membership status who request it. That is hardly harassment.

It's either that or backbiting when it hasn't told the person that his membership status has been changed!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Saturday, December 08, 2001 10:58 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message
news:20011208105053.02564.00002157@mb-dh.aol.com...
> >
> >So he still is a BIGS - he is telling the truth!
> >
>
> No, I didn't say that. He was removed from the rolls whether he requested it or > not. He was not notified of that fact because he demanded not to be contacted.

You recognise the ambivalence - did Fred seek to withdraw or did he just cancel the American Bahai? That alone is cause why he should have been told of his disenrollment before anybody else was.

**>
> >If he hasn't been told he has been removed it is quite legitimate
for > >him to state that he is still a Beehive in Good Standing.
>
> In good standing with whom?

The AO as it hasn't told him he isn't!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Sunday, December 09, 2001 6:25 AM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011209010128.11254.00002482@mb-fi.aol.com...
> >
> >You recognise the ambivalence - did Fred seek to withdraw or did he > >just cancel the American Bahai?
>
> He cancelled his American Baha'i *and* he told his Auxiliary Board Member that > any attempt to contact him would be considered harassment. He also told the > House of Justice he no longer cared about his status as a Baha'i.
But know, he > didn't withdraw to my knowledge, nor have I ever heard anyone in the
the > administration suggest that he had.

So you're on the inside track for information on Fred's expulsion!
Seems you know more about it than he does! Isn't that odd?

<SNIP>
>
> >> >If he hasn't been told he has been removed it is quite legitimate
> >for > >> >him to state that he is still a Beehive in Good Standing.
> >>
> >> In good standing with whom?
> >
> >The AO as it hasn't told him he isn't!
>
> If he can't stand them, why would he assume they can stand him?

Because they haven't told him otherwise!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Saturday, December 08, 2001 11:28 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message
news:20011208104916.02564.00002156@mb-dh.aol.com...
> >He insists he is a BIGS and has not been officially told otherwise - > >you insist he isn't! Here's to the same round next and every month > >that Fred reposts the same old message!
>
> Dermod,
>
> Fred will find some reason to post the same message again and again

and again,

> regardless. If they had sent him a letter that is what he would be posting > instead, along with something about how wronged he has been.

What

difference

> does it make?

Well if Fred had been told that he had been disenrolled he couldn't complain about it without subjecting himself to the "appeal" process. But since he hasn't been told he doesn't have to resort to the "appeal" process. The former circumstance would have put the AO on the high ground - the latter doesn't!

Any semi-competent person in the Old World Order would have handled

Fred in such a way as to hem him in and give him no cause for complaint. The AO is so far up to its oxsters in the New World Order that essential verities like this elude it. Like I said - do you want me to handle the correspondence that would torpedo Fred? On second thoughts, don't bother - I have always been quite particular about those for whom I do any work.

>

> >When are you people going to learn the lesson of not giving ammunition > >to the enemy?

>

> Besides Fred's demand that he not be contacted, I suspect that is precisely why > they didn't send him a letter.

They got it wrong - again!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."

Date: Saturday, December 08, 2001 7:29 AM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011208004600.02564.00002092@mb-dh.aol.com...

> >

> >Under no stretch of the imagination can a straightforward letter > >notifying somebody that his membership has been terminated be deemed > >to be harassment.

>

> Under no stretch of the imagination can the letter the Hoda Mahmoudi sent Fred > be considered harassment either, yet Fred made it quite clear he would consider > it such. But then he always did have a wild imagination. :-)

You obviously have no imagination or you have forgotten the very real fears experienced by many who came under investigation by the authorities. The real art of intimidation is that it is innocuous and deniable.

I would suggest that it is not unreasonable for any letter from a ABM to be viewed with suspicion.

> >That your name has been removed from mailing lists and statistics is > >confirmation of a sort. Fred was cannier however! Knowing that he > >would, most likely, be expelled he got off the mailing lists first.
>
> Ahhh. So now you are arguing that Fred made every effort *not* to know he was > removed from the rolls. I think that is quite plausible.

I am speculating - not being privy to Fred's innermost thoughts. If my speculation is correct then National has manoeuvred itself into the mire that Fred foresaw it would!

> >He also knew full well that after citing "harassment" National would > >effectively twitter as to what to do with him and how to announce it.
>
> I'm not sure they ever had any intention of announcing it. >

Now why does that surprise me - on's status as an American BIGS is known only unto Wilmette and nobody else, not even you. Dear Lady - are you sure you are a BIGS? Can you be certain?

**> >
> >That's National's biggest mistake! Fred is actually very dangerous!
> >His site is well up there on the Search Engines - I've had private > >mail from enquirers who look in here on TRB trying to make sense of > >the contradictions between what
>
> I do too. Some of them have become Baha'is as a result. :-)

There's no accounting for tastes - but there can't be that many. You have stated in another place that deaths exceed enrollments - a situation that will improve as the Baby Boomers approach the time of turning up the toes!

**>
> >And make no mistake, Milissa, they have driven out the > >brightest and the best!
>
> If Fred represents our 'brightest and best' we are indeed in trouble.

You are indeed in trouble - membership falling, finances in crisis and a laughing stock where Fred's membership, or lack thereof, is concerned.

He's certainly a lot brighter, better and more capable than the current incumbents of high position in the AO. After all Fred's lone shenanigans have incurred the total wrath thereof and twisted it into a situation where it can't even send him a simple letter. Rarely in the course of Bahai Wars has so much confusion and humiliation been caused by one lone individual. ROFL!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Saturday, December 08, 2001 11:17 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011208104606.02564.00002155@mb-dh.aol.com...

> . If my > >speculation is correct then National has manoeuvred itself into the > >mire that Fred foresaw it would!
> >
>
> You mean by honoring Fred's demand that he not be contacted?

Got it in one!

> >Now why does that surprise me - on's status as an American BIGS
is > >known only unto Wilmette and nobody else, not even you.
>
> It is known to anyone who asks Membership and Records, as Dave found out.

I shall be checking on these memberships - one has to be careful whom one calls a BIGS now!

>
> >Dear Lady -
> >are you sure you are a BIGS? Can you be certain?
>
> I still get my American Baha'i. :-)

So I was right - the criterion for membership of the US BIGS
community
is receipt of the American Bahai.

> >You > >have stated in another place that deaths exceed enrollments - a > >situation that will improve as the Baby Boomers approach the time
of > >turning up the toes!
>
> I don't think I said that. But you are correct that if the present demographics > were to hold that would be the case. Like many new religions our major growth > was in the 70's

Has anybody worked out why this is the case? Is Fred the reason?

>
> > After all Fred's lone > >shenanigans have incurred the total wrath thereof and twisted it

into > >a situation where it can't even send him a simple letter.

>

> What wrath? He asked them not to speak to him, so they didn't.

Why the righteous wrath that kicked him out - what else? Well apart from the chickenshit fear that couldn't summon the courage to tell him or ask for the return of his membership card which, as some have pointed out, is the property of the AO!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."

Date: Saturday, December 08, 2001 6:48 AM

"Robert Little" <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message news:L4VP7.24336$PQ2.2653693@typhoon.socal.rr.com...

Robert,

As Uncle Pat has requested, I've trimmed your headers for you.

These

administrative details are quite important - Uncle Pat has written, through me, to the group requesting that the headers be trimmed.

This

is good administrative practice and one that can only be carried into effect by communication.

> Dermod, whether or not I am a good Baha'i is a determination neither you nor

> I are capable of making. However, we are both capable of identifying > slander, backbiting, hatred, bigotry, lies, and whathaveyou. We are both > capable of identifying love, patience, courtesy, reverence, whathaveyou.

I tend not to judge the condition of another's soul unless that soul is trying to judge me or others.

> The evidence clearly shows that the Baha'is attempted to discuss with Mr.

> Glaysher whether or not he wished to be considered a Baha'i, whether or not > he believed in Baha'u'llah and whether or not he wished to obey the laws and > ordinances Baha'u'llah revealed. Mr. Glaysher, for reason or reasons he has > not stated, refused that meeting, and furthermore demanded that HE

NOT BE

> CONTACTED IN ANY WAY, SHAPE OR FORM, ANY MORE. He himself has attested to > this, therefore, I fail to see why you insist that Baha'is should have > contacted him.

The status quo was that Fred was a BIGS. That places no obligation on him to meet with any ABM - indeed his statements that he not be contacted could have been viewed as indicative of his wish to distance himself from activity in the Bahai community for a length of time. This, I understand is permissible. In light of the content of Fred's website, after the experiences of Steve Scholl, Juan Cole etc (detailed there and elsewhere) it should have dawned on the AO that proposed meetings with ABMs were going to be viewed with suspicion and scepticism by persons who held certain views. This may seem strange to you but as one who underwent "interrogation" by a Bahai institution long ago, I find it not at all unusual. Bahai institutions, in my experience are extremely loving and caring when they are looking for something from you but when the shoe is on the other foot, they tend to get quite nasty.

National determined to change the status quo as far as Fred was concerned. That placed an obligation on it to inform Fred of that fundamental change, whether or not he had placed strictures on communication. Such communication could not in any way, by any reasonable person, be construed as harrassment. It did not do so! Rather, it chose the coward's way of telling somebody else and off-loading the decision as to whether or not to tell Fred onto that person. That is despicable!

- > Inasmuch as the Baha'is have also not contacted you or anyone else who
- > participates here, re the status of Mr. Glaysher, I also fail to see where
- > backbiting has entered the picture. The Baha'i national office has said
- > nothing, other than to reply to inquiries that the individual in question is
- > not a member of the Baha'i Faith. It has said absolutely nothing beyond that
- > simple statement. Others have, however.

Sure! It has told somebody else that Fred is not a BIGS. It hasn't told Fred - incidentally obviating thereby any potential appeal against this decision. In your book that may be all right - to me, it has simply confirmed the incompetenbce and cowardice of the AO and, delightfully, made another great stick to beat it with.

- >
- > As to the delay in changing your status, I find that normal. Baha'i offices
- > are staffed with volunteers the world over. As an example, my older son had
- > to repeatedly request an ID card, which took over a year to arrive, simply
- > because his declaration card had been misplaced somewhere in the 212 area
- > code. His younger brother actually got his ID card before his fifteenth
- > birthday. Go figure.

Balderdash! National offices in the US and UK have full and part time paid employees. They may indeed be overworked but that can only explain delay not incompetence. The letter I got did apologise for the delay. Fred just hasn't got one at all - along with Deborah Buchhorn and God knows how many others.

As ever,

Dermod.

>
> Robert A. Little
>
> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message
> news:9uoukd$9ntiu$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...
> > "Robert Little" <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message > > news:DKzP7.18454$Ws6.2648836@typhoon.socal.rr.com...
> > Robert
> >
> > > In other words, you acknowledge that a meeting was requested by a > > member of > > > the Baha'i Faith, and Fred refused it in a hostile and threatening > > manner.
> > > The Baha'is have honored his request to not be contacted, after > > trying to > > > contact him.
> > >
> > > His posts clearly show that he does not wish to follow the teachings
> > of > > > Baha'u'llah, and he does not wish to have contact with His > > followers. What > > > other proof would you wish for that he is not a Baha'i?
> >
> > Carrying a card may make you a BIGS but says nothing about your status > > as a Bahai. You are in no position to judge Fred's motives or actions
> > beyond noting that they do not accord with your perceptions of Bahai
> > teachings. Some would see your perceptions as being especially > > ill-informed and misguided.
> >
> > National has nonoured nothing in this debacle except its own > > cowardice - if it is satisfied that Fred withdrew of his own accord
> > then it ought to, as a matter of courtesy, confirm to him, in writing, > > that it has removed his name from the rolls. It has written to Dave
> > telling him this - it has not apparently written to Fred.
> >
> > After all when I left, National wrote to me confirming that my > > resignation had resulted in my name being removed from the rolls.

> > Mind you I had to get nasty with it to get this done - a year after I > > had resigned. But it was done and it should be done with Fred - not > > with Dave or anybody else. Until or unless National has notified Fred > > that he is gone it should not communicate that information to anybody > > else. Acting behind somebody's back like that sounds mightily like > > the backbiting the AO decries but purely loves to indulge in!

Ooops!

> > Sorry! When the AO does it - it ain't backbiting!

> >

> > As ever,

> >

> > Dermod.

> >

> >

> > > "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message

> > > news:9ul693$9a4hb$5@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...

> > > > "Robert Little" <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message

> > > > news:1geP7.16531$PQ2.2028628@typhoon.socal.rr.com...

> > > >

> > > > Robert,

> > > >

> > > > > How do you know that Mr. Glaysher has not been contacted, or

> > that > > > there was > > > > not a legitimate attempt to contact him?

> > > >

> > > > Because nobody has ever produced a letter from National telling > > him

> > > that he had been disenrolled. There is other corroborative > > > circumstantial evidence that such a letter was never sent.

> > >

> > > The house wrote to a number of people detailing why Alison

> > Marshall

> > > was expelled yet never explained this to her - in Michael's case

> > it

> > > said more to his wife than to him.

> > >

> > > > As to a letter from an ABM - one assumes that this was a request > > for a > > > meeting. After all only National and not an ABM can expell one

> > from > > > membership!

> > >

> > > As ever,

> > >

> > > Dermod.

> > >

> > >

> > > > "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
> > > > news:9ujggi$915ub$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...
> > > > "Milissa" <milissabk@altavista.com> wrote in message
> > > >
news:df0d6959.0112041122.42fd24fb@posting.google.com...
> > > > > Fred--
> > > > >
> > > > > Why don't you just write to them and tell them they > > > > misunderstood
> > > > > your > > > > > request and asked to be reinstated?
> > > > >
> > > > > WHY don't you?
> > > > >
> > > > > The Faith has enough problems without you making some up
or > > > > causing > > > > > them.
> > > > >
> > > > > Please attempt to rectify this situation with them before
> > you
> > > > > subject > > > > > us on the list to another round of regurgiposts. You > > haven't > > > > even > > > > > written to them to tell them they misunderstood, have you?
> > You > > > > > haven't even tried to resolve this. If, after contacting > > them
> > > > to > > > > > explain the misunderstanding, they refuse to reinstate
you,
> > then
> > > > you > > > > > might actually have a point. At this time, you don't.
> > > > >
> > > > > Au contraire, Milissa! If National has disenrolled Fred
the > > onus
> > > > is > > > > > on it to inform him of that fact, not Dave F, Pat K, Tony > > Blair,
> > > > David
> > > > > Trimble or Uncle Andy! It seems that anybody who contacted > > > > Wilmette
> > > > > was told that Fred had been cut off, if not in his prime then > > > > surely > > > > > in some other state of which he is, equally, unaware! But > > nobody
> > > > at > > > > > National has deigned to tell Fred or, pace Dave F. etc., > > confirm

> > > > that > > > > > he has been disenrolled. When I escaped the clutches,
the
UK
> > > > National
> > > > > wrote to confirm my name had been taken off the rolls!
maybe > > > > Wilmette > > > > > could follow suit. Unless/until it does I'm all for Fred > > claiming
> > > > to > > > > > be a BIGS of the finest kind!
> > > > >
> > > > > What I glean from this is that Wilmette is inhabited by a > > flock of > > > > > clucking chickens (note I checked the spelling to avert > > > > > unpleasantries) who haven't the guts to face up to Fred
and > > tell > > > > him > > > > > that they have given him the heave! Gutless, spineless fundie > > > > loonies > > > > > with a great big yellowstain where the backbone ought
to be
> > and
> > > > you > > > > > want to go back and join them! Give us a break - you got more
> > to
> > > > you
> > > > > than that!
> > > > >
> > > > > As ever,
> > > > >
> > > > > Dermod.
> > > > >
> > > > > > "BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing"
> > > > > <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote in message
> > > > > news:<9ufqrp$7ou3o$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de>...
> > > > > > > Bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your > > mailing
> > > > > list."
> > > > > >
> > > > > >
> > > > > > > In 1996 my request to the circulation department for
the > > > > American
> > > > > Bahai,
> > > > > > > repeated twice and perhaps a third time, read,
"Please > > remove > > > > my > > > > > name and > > > > > > > address from your mailing list." I had torn off the > > preprinted
> > > > > address > > > > > > > change label regularly published on the back page of

the > > > > American
> > > > > Bahai and > > > > > > mailed it into the address given for subscription changes.
> > > > > > >
> > > > > > > I asked for nothing other than my name and address
to be > > > > removed > > > > > from the > > > > > > mailing list--no gloss, no explanation, no complaint, no
> > > > threat,
> > > > > etc....
> > > > > > Dermod Ryder's speculation that willingness to receive
the > > > > > > American Bahai
> > > > > > > has become compulsory should give pause....
> > > > > > >
> > > > > > > Again, note well, I used the address on the back of the > > > > American
> > > > > Bahai given > > > > > > specifically for handling subscription addresses. I did
> > not > > > > write
> > > > > the nsa, > > > > > > its secretary, etc. My communication was limited to the > > > > simplest
> > > > > of > > > > > > requests: remove my name and address from your mailing
> > list.
> > > > Not a > > > > > word or > > > > > > suggestion about withdrawing from the Bahai Faith, nor any > > > > > criticism of it > > > > > > whatsoever, real nor implied. I conveyed my wishes
to
the > > > > proper
> > > > > address, as > > > > > > > announced in the American Bahai itself. That I received a > > > > response
> > > > > back from > > > > > > > an entirely different address speaks volumes, as they say.
> > > > After
> > > > > six years,
> > > > > > > I believe the time is now right to release it publicly.
> > I've

> > > > > scanned the > > > > > > letter so others might read the original.
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > > I am not about to accept the slander and backbiting
 of > > > fanatics
 > > > > and > > > > > > fundamentalists nor allow them to provoke me into one > > action
 > > > or > > > > another. I > > > > > > prefer the facts: Again, I declared my belief in > > Baha'u'llah
 > > > in > > > > 1976 and > > > > > > notified the nsa, who sent me back the declaration card
 > > > available
 > > > > on my > > > > > > homepage. I have never notified them otherwise.
 They,
 as > > > > > distinguished from > > > > > > liars and sycophants online, have never notified me
 to
 the > > > > > contrary. Scanned > > > > > > orignials at > > > > > > <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/nsa1996.htm>
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > > The other two letters were related to the Detroit local > > > spiritual > > > > assembly
 > > > > > and its junk mail.
 > > > >
 > > > >
 > > > >
 > > > >
 > > > >
 > > > >
 > > > >
 > > >
 > > >
 > >
 > >
 >
 >

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Sunday, December 09, 2001 6:22 AM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011209010733.11254.00002483@mb-fi.aol.com...
 > >
 > > But the process hasn't been followed -

>
> I just said that he refused to cooperate in any process.

Like I said - the process has not been followed!

> >Fred would not have known that he is in a position to lodge an > >appeal - if he wants to, which I doubt he does.
>
> Then what is the fuss about?

About his having the choice of appealing - about National having the courtesy (at least) to inform somebody of a change in their status as a BIGS.

> >
> >Once upon a time Fred was a BIGS
>
> Probably a long, long time ago.

So!

>
> >He > >told the AO not to contact him - i.e. he went "inactive."
>
> Fred has hardly been inactive.

As far as the AO is concerned he is "inactive" i.e. he does not work for its purposes. In other ways Fred has been most active.

> >Now you maintain that the AO did not contact Fred out of consideration > >for his request not to be contacted at all.
>
> There is no "now" about it. It was what I was told at the time.

At what time - when Fred was expelled or when Dave was told?
Indeed
when was Fred expelled? Does anybody know that - including Fred?

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Sunday, December 09, 2001 8:56 PM

"Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com> wrote in message news:u172mu23745o9d@corp.supernews.com...
Hi Karen.

> Fred just doesn't upset me much. I'm not crazy about his approach, but then,
> I could say that of some other AO critics as well. He's deliberately made > himself into the guy everybody loves to hate. He crossposts repetitive > messages, says some wild stuff sometimes, and generally makes himself a pain > in the butt. On the other hand, he has made a strong stand for freedom of > conscience and expression and has a wealth of information on his website > about cases of AO injustice. There are very few who have done as much to > promote awareness of the problems in the Baha'i system about those issues.

> Fred, or at least his online persona (which I believe to be deliberately > contrived), is about as lovable as a prickly pear, but he has made an > important contribution.

Fred is the one guy that the AO loves to hate.

The measure of his effectiveness is that the wee shites haven't the guts to tell him that they have disenrolled him. And it is a measure of their rancour that they can tell the dear lady "in confidence" and know that she will use that information to help cover their hypocrisy.

As far as I am concerned Fred is a BIGS until or unless those smarmy "gits" at Wilmette officially say otherwise.

Whether they do or don't, Fred has won this round. Nobody but a crass idiot can accept a situation in which the AO expels an adherent and fails to tell him whilst telling all and sundry, as being in any way morally justifiable or the product of a righteous upright society.

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Sunday, December 09, 2001 8:58 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011209131903.16269.00002631@mb-ch.aol.com...

> >
> >No - they just tell that one who thought he was a BIGS ain't a BIGS > >and they haven't told him because they say he didn't want them to tell > >him anything.
>
> That is not what they said Dermod. They simp gave a negative answer
to > someone's question regarding whether Fred was a Baha'i. They gave no further > information as you suggest.

Just in case it hasn't registered with the dormant organ, that is all they have to say! That says it all - Fred was a BIGS, Fred is no longer a BIGS and the AO hasn't the balls to tell him but it will tell everybody else who asks and eventually somebody will tell Fred!

What
a bunch of wimps!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Sunday, December 09, 2001 9:10 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message
news:20011209132027.16269.00002632@mb-ch.aol.com...
> >But because of he said he
> >would > >> consider any contact from them to be harassment, they saw no reason > >to inform > >> him of this fact.
> >
> >But not, presumably, anybody else who enquired!
>
> If Fred had enquired, I'm sure they would have told him as well.
They were not > going to initiate communication with someone who has essentially said, 'Don't > talk to me!'

But they were not initiating communication - they merely had to inform him that as he didn't want to communicate with them, they had decided to terminate his membership. That would have been the courteous
and sensible thing to do. Maybe Fred would have blazened this across TRb but, at least, the AO would have been seen as having the balls to terminate him and tell him they had done it. It's not as if this would remain secret forever; it was bound to come out someday.
Better that it come out with the AO smelling of roses (having done the proper thing) rather than being seen to be skulking behind the bushes!

All it has done is give another reason to lambast it - not for having terminated Fred but for not having the decency to tell him. All it has achieved is further proof of the assertion that the AO is corrupt, inept and incompetent.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Monday, December 10, 2001 3:29 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0112100754.455f1895@posting.google.com...
> Dermod,
>
> > I have no bias against the AO - I have formed an opinion as to its > > competence or lack thereof based on research and experience!
>

> ... and you let that opinion shade everything that anyone ever says > about the AO. That is bias.

No - it is not bias to lambast the AO for incompetence, of which I have seen many examples over the years. You on the other hand close your ears and eyes to even consider that there is institutional incompetence that could be rectified if more effort were directed to that and less to its defence through thick and thin, right and wrong. If I have bias then so have you - my bias is capable of elimination if the AO were to be reformed - yours isn't!

>
>
> > > If National read Fred's request as a request to be disenrolled and > > > they honestly feel that they have done exactly what he wanted them > > > to do, then why the hell should they contact him? Dude, think for a > > > minute. You jump all over the AO for doing what Fred asked them to > > > do. Why should they contact him?
> >
> > You really need to be told this!
> >
> > You have people spouting about "protection" of the good name and > > reputation of the BF and here is a situation which periodically is > > rehashed all over the newsgroups and does nothing for that good name > > and reputation. And why is it rehashed? Because of the ambivalence > > about Fred's status! And what is the way to remove that?
National
> > writes to Fred and tells him he has been disenrolled in light of his > > refusal to meet with an ABM to consult on the matters which have > > perturbed him, his E-mail messages have not been consistent with his > > duties to protect and uphold the BF and, in any case, he asked for his > > membership to be cancelled.
>
> ... and if National ever did contact Fred, do you think he would tell > us?

Well! If he didn't, the dear lady would - so I don't think it has and having made a pig's buttocks of the situation (with stalwart defence thereof from you and the dear lady) it sees no need to contract him at all in saecula saeculorum.

>
> > Net result - end of ambivalence, end of any doubt as to Fred's status > > and no more opportunity for me (or others) to lambast the continuing > > idiocy.

>
> I have not seen you do that. I mean you won't say a single thing > about Fred's behavior :-)

Why should I? I'm not here to defend the AO- I'm not here to offer aid and succour to it; I'm not here to assist its defence against its critics. And let's face facts - you're whinging for condemnation of Fred because he's perceived as the greatest threat to the current order! Fred does his thing and he does it well! If you don't like it, try doing something to take the ammunition away from him!

> > Fred is no fool - he knows damn well that National wants rid > > of him and has effectively expelled him! But until National gets the > > guts together to get the act right - Fred will continue to exploit the > > situation for his own purposes and people like me, who actually know > > how to kill this controversy, will continue to have fun!
>
> Oh, Dermod - even if Fred were contacted and he did tell us you would > just find something new to have fun with.

Dave - I can always find something to have fun with; indeed I have fun away from TRB as it is! Now if you guys realised that the current situation is not one which is advantageous and your current tactics merely exacerbate that situation and tried something new, you might just cut off this source of fun for me. But if that ever happened there's an awful lot of loonies out there whom you're keeping me away from at the moment!

> > > WHAT? I did what any Baha'i has the right to do - I wrote to > > > National to find out if Fred's claim was legit. If I had not asked, they > > > would never have said anything.
> >
> > I'm not criticising you for writing - I'm criticising National for > > telling you before it actually told Fred that it had acted in > > accordance with his wishes or had simply removed him!
>
> That is so weak Dermod.

In other words - you've no answer to proffer!

> > > Tell you what - let's say that the disenrollment was a > > > misunderstanding and Fred wanted to be a Baha'i but stop the > > > American Baha'i. If the AO misread his request and his lack of > > > clarification to their query as a withdrawal request and Fred found out > > > later that he was disenrolled by mistake - why doesn't he call them to > > > straighten it out?
> >
> > Why should he? National has made a stick for him to beat it!
Like I > > said - Fred is no fool!

>
> Coulda fooled me. Look, if the heat in your house gets cut off > because of an ambiguous letter you sent to the heating company are
you > just going to sit and freeze while you wait to hear from them? No.
> You are going to call whoever you need to until the situation is > corrected. This is no different.

This is the age of "glayshiation" but Fred ain't the one who is freezing or closing his old folk's home! Now if the AO is a utility offering heat (or salvation) to its customers I would think Fred has a case for referring it to the regulatory authorities for cutting him off on the basis of correspondence which is not clear in its intent. Fred cannot be shown to have applied to have his heat cut off - rather the utility decided to terminate the supply! fred has lodged his complaint with the appropriate regulatory authority - vox populi, and it is responding by hitting his website, drawing closed the purse strings and seeking heat from alternative suppliers.

> > > I would call in a heartbeat. If it is that important to him why > > > doesn't he just go complain to the AO that they did not follow his > > > instructions and clarify to them that he does indeed want to be a > > > Baha'i?
> > >
> > > I will tell you why. He would rather be an anti-AO martyr, and give > > > folks like you an excuse to beat up on the AO.
> >
> > You got it .... eventually! Mind you, National still hasn't grasped > > it! But then it rarely does! And you're the folk who elect it
and
> > I'm only one of those who laugh at it!
>
> Trouble is that Fred is a self appointed Martyr and nobody cares.
The > more he cross posts to places like alt.culture.indian and > alt.culture.mogolian the more troll-like he becomes. No one is > listening to him anymore. He could have the most valid concern in the > world, but he has killed his credibility.

So why are y'all so annoyed with him if he's engaged in a self-defeating methodology! Methinks you do dismiss him too easily!

> > > Sorry but this problem is Fred's to solve. Until he does he will > > > remain outside of the Baha'i Faith looking in.
> >
> > A most splendid place to be!
>
> For you, but Fred seems to think otherwise.

Fred's entitled to his opinion. I do not deign to insist he agree with me just as I do not necessarily have to agree with him on all things. Parrots, inter alia, find this concept beyond their capabilities!

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Monday, December 10, 2001 3:34 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <big happymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0112100740.499d1d00@posting.google.com...
> Paul,
>
> > As someone who actually agrees with a lot of Fred's more serious > > arguments, I find his methods embarrassing sometimes. I tend to > > think of him as the embarrassing uncle who farts a lot. You've > > hung around on Beliefnet - I'm sure you must be aware of that > > feeling yourself with some of the embarrassing uncles whose > > viewpoints you largely agree with but whose style sometimes > > stinks.
>
> Yes, I have seen Baha'is act in ways that I felt were not very > tactful or wise. I try to tell them what I think. I often ask folks > to take a breath, calm down, and reflect. I have also told Baha'is > that go over the top, that they have gone over the top IMO and need
to > chill. Just ask effy on Beliefnet. What burns me is when folks like > Dermod defend the indefesible just because they are on the same "side"
> of an issue.

Dave, if you haven't sussed it yet - I don't agree with Fred, Paul or whoever on everything. However, expelling Fred without telling him it has been done, never mind when it has been done and communicating that fact to you and the dear lady, is indefensible!!

> I am glad that folks like you and Milissa are taking a stand like > this. If places like this are going to be of any value then people > who disagree are going to have to treat each other as equals, and > eliminate the insults and flames.
>
> Many people abandon TRB/ARB simply because of the nasty tone here.
If
> this place is going to work then it needs to be much more civil than > it currently is, IMO.

You want me to be nice to Miss Maddy and Evensong! G'away and get your head felt!

As ever,

Dermod.

>
> Cheers,
>
> Dave

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Tuesday, December 11, 2001 11:34 AM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0112110649.79971838@posting.google.com...

Dave,

>
> > ... expelling Fred without telling him it has been done ... is > > indefensible!!
>
> Let's clear that up. Fred was not expelled. He withdrew.
>
> The conversation went kinda like this:
>
> Fred: "Take me off your lists?"
>
> National: "Did you mean just the mailing lists or the membership list
> as well."
>
> Fred: "What kind of idiot are you? Take me off your lists, and if > you ever contact me again I will drag your ass to court!"
>
> Silence as National complies with Fred'd request.
>
> As Milissa pointed out - no one who withdraws ever gets confirmation.

I did resign from the Bahai community and I did get confirmation that that had been actioned in the administrative records.

>
> End of story. Now - to me National owes Fred nothing.

Fred disagrees - he said that he did not withdraw! There is a disputation as to fact. How shall it be resolved?

Until it is, this thread shall repeat, like a Mexican Chilli or a decent Madras Curry!

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Tuesday, December 11, 2001 10:54 PM

"Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net> wrote in message news:fwrR7.917$a%5.177415@dfiatx1-snr1.gte.net...

Dear Randy,

> I think you are missing the point on the closing of the Old Folks Home. No > doubt there is money to be made and the current location is prime real > estate. As you said, additions to Bob's house are imminent.
 >
 > This is a question of desire I think, since I doubt the world will miss the > Baha'i Old Folks Home. Such activity is commercially viable here in the > U.S. and I'm sure that not a single old folk will suffer as a result of this > closing. Apparently the Baha'is of the U.S. just don't have the desire to > do this anymore.

I wasn't missing the point - care homes here are privately run both for the elderly and the disabled. They are heavily and rightly regulated by the Health authorities who pay the residential fees for those who cannot afford to do do themselves. They are profitable - last I recollect the market value was about £20,000 per bed space (about $32,000) and that was 4-5 years purchase. I assume the economics in the US are not that different which made me wonder why commercial funding would not be available for any necessary upgrades.

The question is one therefore - will we hear the site has been sold or appropriated for Bob's new house?

> Maybe they have bigger and better humanitarian projects in mind.
 >
 > Here' hoping!

Don't hold your breath, good buddy! A humanitarian project which is capable of paying more than its way, if properly run, is not one lightly to be shed. I can hear the silence from our BIGS friends on this one - a touch of the Simon and Garfunkel which seems to be of interest in another place.

As ever,

Dermod

>
 > Dermod Ryder <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message > news:9v5dj3$datf4$1@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...
 > > "Robert Little" <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message > > news:d1iR7.4142$ga.1212573@typhoon.socal.rr.com...
 > > Robert,
 > >
 > > > Easy
 > > >
 > > > The present structure requires more money to upgrade to current > > legal > > > standards than it is worth. It, the structure, is therefore being > > closed.

> >
> > If I'm not mistaken a significant part of the Kingdom Project was
the > > upgrading of the Old Folks' Home. Current legal standards are usually > > promulgated some years in advance of the time they are to become > > mandatory that a chance is offered to upgrade to them.
Presumably
> > these standards were known therefore at the time the Project was drawn > > up and costed. So how come that now the whole thing is uneconomic?
> >
> > In light of the fact that the Home charges the residents it should be > > a profit centre generating a modest surplus towards its upkeep
and
the > > subsidisation of less well off residents. I would have thought
that > > the funds to upgrade it could have been borrowed commercially - much > > as the UK NSA is proposing to borrow commercially to fund the > > acquisition of a National Sub-office.
> >
> > It seems to me that priorities need to be re-assessed at Wilmette - an > > old folks' home is far more important than almost anything else in
the > > entire Project! I would have thought extensions to Bob's house could > > wait!
> >
> > As ever,
> >
> > Dermod.
> >
> > > "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in
message
> > > news:9v2gbe$h81$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...
> > > >
> > > > Greetings, Dermod.
> > > > Actually, this could be a quite significant comment you made.
> > Do you > > > mean the US NSA is closing the Senior Citizens Residence at > > Wilmette? As
> > > > I understand the history, Baha'u'llah wrote that Baha'i Houses
of > > Worship > > > are intended to be centres of humanitarian activity and when the > > American
> > > Baha'is suggested the Temple in Wilmette to begin fulfilling
this > > > > requirement have a library connected with it, Shoghi Effendi, I

> > think it > > > > was, said this was unacceptable and more direct care of society
 > > was > > > > necessary. Thus, was the senior citizens residence founded.
 > > > > If my interpretation of your comment is correct and this
 is > > now being > > > > closed, unless some other alternative humanitarian activity is > > replacing > > > > it, we are observing a highly significant decline in the > > institution of > > > > the American National Mashriqal Adhkar, a retrogression below
 what > > was > > > > acceptable in previous generations by Shoghi Effendi.
 > > > > I await with interest any clarification.
 > > > >
 Slan,
 > > > >
 Michael
 > > > >
 > > > > "Dermod Ryder" (Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com) writes:
 > > > > > "Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message > > > > > news:20011209133223.16269.00002635@mb-ch.aol.com...
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > > > Don't need to - I use Hendi's name and number to access
 that > > > > > place -
 > > > > > > > not that it's worth it.
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > > Is that your wife? Are you saying you can access the US > > > > > > administrative website
 > > > > > > using an Irish I.D.?
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > > Geez! You really are a dumb cluck! "Hendi" as in Robert C.!!
 > > Duh!
 > > > > > Geddit! Sometimes, however, just for fun, I log on as you!
 > > > > >
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > > > I haven't seen anything of importance on it > > > > > > > yet - nothing about reforms in New Mexico, declining numbers.
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > > Or a letter telling Baha'is not to say the prayer for America?
 > > :-)
 > > > > >
 > > > > > No - didn't see that but then I didn't claim to have seen it so > > why > > > > > would I have? Did see the lovely bit about closing the old > > folks'
 > > > > > home! Now there'll be nowhere for you in your dotage!
 > > > > >
 > > > > > --
 > > > > > "My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar

Guard."

> > > (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

**> > >

**> > >

**> > >

**> > >

**> >

**> >

**>

**>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Subject: Re: About wearing religious jewelry... Are you protected?

Date: Tuesday, December 11, 2001 10:41 PM

"Jen" <jc_well2001[REMOVETHIS]@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:vatR7.165$fv5.168699919@twister2.starband.net...

**>

> Also, please direct me to a website that explains more about the Bahai

> faith.

As well as the site Dave has directed you to you might also like to look at

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/index.htm>

which presents a somewhat different picture of life in the Bahai community. The links provided there are well worth a look - especially those pertaining to Alison Marshall and Juan Cole.

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Subject: Re: bahai - talk.religion.bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."

Date: Friday, December 14, 2001 9:03 AM

"Robert Little" <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message
news:D__R7.7977$Ha.1980843@typhoon.socal.rr.com...

> It is my belief that many of the comments you categorize as

"...have been > doing so out of love for the Baha'i Faith." emanate clearly from some other

> emotion, one that allows the poster to denounce, backbite, find fault,

> criticize, ridicule and otherwise drag down those Baha'i men and women who > have served with such marvelous love, faith and devotion the cause

of

> Baha'u'llah.

But not competence!

**>

> It is not unusual for people to pick and choose passages, and portions of

> passages that fit their own agenda.

Yup! the AO does it all the time too!

- > We have read here on arb/trb certain
- > quotes, repeated repeatedly, that have been utilized in an effort to call
- > into question the morality, ethics and devotion of the Baha'i community.
- > Schism is clearly identified in the Baha'i writings as being contrary to the
- > will of God. Backbiting, slander, lying and cynicism are among the more oft
- > utilized tools that lead to schism.

Yup! That is why the AO is careening the BF towards schism! It has already happened and will continue until all of you BIGS can a grip on the AO and control its excesses.

- > The vast majority of Baha'is who voted that first time around expressed
- > clearly their intent that Baha'u'llah's name not be sullied in this fashion.
- > This puts you in opposition to the overwhelming majority of Baha'is, not the
- > Baha'i administrative order, which did not act to prohibit Baha'is from
- > participating, and has not since.

And who has sullied the Cause of Baha'u'llah more than the ardent supporters of the AO?

- > You are free to prove me wrong, free to quote from the writings of
- > Baha'u'llah or 'Abdul-Baha' and so demonstrate that an assault on the
- > Universal House of Justice is commendable, or even permissible.

You're telling me that it is above criticism?

Dermod.

- >
- > Robert A. Little
- >
- > "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
- > news:9v56oc$I00$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...
- > > Dearest Robert,
- > > Our perceptions of reality are considerably different.
- > > My experience, both on the e-mail lists with several dozen or score
- > > subscribers, and in wider cyberspace, is that there is a desire by some
- > > to prevent opinions at variance to their own from being expressed.
- It
- > > is not a question, in this wonderful modern technology, even of having
- > > to have your eyes sullied by the thoughts of those who disagree with you.
- > > You can simply kill file them and delightfully imbibe what pleases

you.

> > No, the issue is that these displeasing contradictory thoughts are so > > convincing that you, and more significantly, the men now sitting on the > > chairs intended for members of the Universal House of Justice, would > > rather no one read them.

> > I have often posted to Baha'i cyberspace that you and those like you > > can have your say. That's what freedom of speech is all about. If you are > > indeed the majority, then let all these 900 plus naysayers come and share > > with us words of wisdom and love. Surely, these will swamp all the hate > > you perceive here, though honestly I don't see that hate. What I see is > > honest criticism of the lot currently in power. Since they are ruling > > over an entity in considerable decline, such criticism is the opposite > > of hate. Anyone with an IQ higher than a twig's and hating Baha'is would > > merely gloat silently while the inept guys in power continued their dive.

> > Those who for years have been speaking up have been doing so out of love > > for the Baha'i Faith.

> >

To

Love,

> >

Michael

> >

> >

> >

> > "Robert Little" (rlittle1@socal.rr.com) writes:

> > > What happened is that Baha'is voted against it first time around. On the > > > last vote, most of those Baha'is who had voted against it the first time > > > simply did not vote again. The remaining Baha'is who had an interest in

> > > it

> > > voted more for it than against it.

> > >

> > > As this is a newsgroup dedicated to discussion of Baha'u'llah and His

> > > Faith,

> > > and as the majority of His followers who did vote that first time

> > > generally

> > > did not want an unmoderated forum that would allow backbiting, > > > spite,

> > > deceit, lies, racism, bigotry and the like to populate a forum with the > name > > > of the Glory of God attached; and, inasmuch as the Baha'i Faith > inculcates

> > > the concept of the will of the majority taking precedence over the will
> of > > > the few, it would seem reasonable to conclude that this newsgroup ought
> not > > > to exist, reasonable to conclude that it exists more because of hatred
> than
> > > of love, reasonable to conclude that the protagonist of this newsgroup
> did > > > not wish to abide by the overwhelming wish of the Baha'i community.
> > >
> > > Robert A. Little
> > >
> > > "BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing"
<patrick_henry@liberty.com>
> > > wrote in message news:9v2c4k$cb2me$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de...
> > >> Michael,
> > >>
> > >> 600+ no votes on the first interest poll. You're right that > > >> people on news.groups were noticeably shocked by the
> > >> figure and realized something was going on. One of them > > >> immediately created alt.religion.bahai in response. There's > > >> a very long and complicated record of fundamentalist > > >> interference in the creation of talk.religion.bahai.
> > >>
> > >> For those interested, most of the relevant docs are at this link:
> > >> <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/trbmenu.htm>
> > >>
> > >> --
> > >> FG
> > >> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
> > >> <https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>
> > >>
> > >>
> > >> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in
message
> > >> news:9v0nel$q4k$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...
> > >> > Hi, Pat.
> > >> > Duh, have I wandered into another sliders world again. I recall > some > > >> > outlandish figure such as 900 plus NO votes the first time TRB was > voted > > >> > on. People at News.Groups noticed this and some helped out on finally > > >> > getting the Newsgroup through. Sorry for my poor memory, but perhaps
> all > > > > these alternate universes I've passed through contributes

to that. I > do > > > > have the impression it took three tries before TRB got through.
> Taking
> > > all > > > > three votes, including that first one with its NSA of Iceland
NO
> vote,
> > > or
> > > > was that on the second ballot?, I strongly suspect more Baha'is voted
> to > > > > prevent this first uncensored line of communication in recent
Baha'i
> > > > generations.
> > > >
Thrive,
> > > >
M.
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > Pat Kohli (kohli@ameritel.net) writes:
> > > > >
> > > > > He has voting results which show that more Baha'is voted for TRB
> than > > > > against > > > > > it, yet he concludes that Baha'is were an obstacle to TRB > formation.
> > > > >
> > > > > Blessings!
> > > > > - Pat
> > > > > kohli@ameritel.net
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > >
> > > > --
> > > > "My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."
> > > > (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > >
> > >
> >
> >
> > --
> > "My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar
Guard."
> > (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)
> >
>
>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Friday, December 14, 2001 9:13 AM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011213021242.12706.00002110@mb-cu.aol.com...

**> >
> > Fred is the one guy that the AO loves to hate.
**> >
**>
> When have you even heard the AO even talk about him? The only thing
they have > ever done is respond to questions about his membership status.

That's the problem - they removed him but hadn't the guts or manners to tell him!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Friday, December 14, 2001 10:17 AM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0112111400.1132dc62@posting.google.com...

Dave,
**>
> > > Yes, but you see incompetence where there is none.
**> >
> > Over the matter of Fred's no longer being a BIGS? There is > > incompetence there - knowing him to be troublesome, National should > > have made sure that everything relating to him was confirmed in > > writing so that he should have naught more to complain about.
That > > included telling him that he was out - no letter to that effect
would > > have stood in any court as being vexatious or harrassing.
**>
> It does not matter what would stand and what would not - you still > have to pay the lawyers.

Like they did in New Mexico?

**>
> > And the measure of competence is the effort exerted to correct > > mistakes when they are made. Give examples of how and where these > > bodies have tried to make amends on these matters!
**>
> Why, I admitted that these were mistakes. They have not been > corrected. Am I missing something here?

Yup! A competent organisation, when it makes mistakes, corrects
them
and institutes procedures to ensure the mistakes are not repeated.
Part of the corrective action is apologising to and ameliorating relations with the aggrieved party.

> > > All I am asking is to be a bit more objective. Yes, you can and > > > should point out the flaws in the system, but don't create flaws > > > where they do not exist.
> >
> > The flaws exist because they are not addressed!
>
> Not talking to someone who has threatened to sue if you do is a wise > thing to do.

On the contrary - it is the most foolish thing to do for that's the way to wind up in Court as in New Mexico.

> > Ah c'mon, Dave! Everybody knows who the "Dear Lady" is! It's not
as > > if I haven't addressed her that way for months past! I'll give you a > > clue - the "Queen of AOL"
>
> Ah. I see.

Splendid - I won't have to send you a month's supply of contact lenses!

> > > > Why should I?
> > >
> > > Because Fred is a cross-posting spamster whose posts often cross > > > over into the absurd.
> >
> > That's free expression, Dave! That's what it is all about!
>
> No expression is free. He is breaking the rules of netiquette. He
is > being a troll. That is just plain wrong. Mesbah does the same thing.
> You probably did not read the thread in alt.native where I confronted > him and asked him to stop bothering the folks there with unwanted > posts about the Faith. I do not hesitate to address the troll problem
> no matter what "side" they are on.

Spamming and trolling, as you put it, spreads the word all over the place! that's what makes it annoying to the AO - it cannot get ahead of Fred, it can't find the pass where it can head him off!

> > > You don't have to, but at least have the honesty and objectivity
to > > > call for a foul no matter who commits it.
> >
> > But I do when I see one. However I distinguish between Fred's > > cross-posting which I perceive as essentially mischievous and the > > malevolence displayed by the AO to its perceived opponents!
>
> Fred goes around insulting a religion to all and sundry and that is > just mischief? No way. He is being intentionally malevolent to steer > people away from the Baha'i Faith.

Fred does no more than point out the current state of lunacy within the AO. Granted he's somewhat more extreme and adept than some others of similar mind.

> > > > And let's face facts - you're whinging for condemnation of > > > > Fred because he's perceived as the greatest threat to the current > > > > order!
> > >
> > > Hardly, Fred is an annoying troll, he is not a threat.
> >
> > So why complain? Leave him to his own devices!
>
> Because he is an annoying troll.

Why? Because you have no credible answer to what he posts. The spam and trolling could not exist unless there was a basis in fact on which they subsist.

<SNIP>

> > > Huh? National was very clear - thay asked if he wanted to be off > > > the mailing list, or the membership list, or both. He answered yes.
> >
> > Not acording to Fred - let's see some documentation produced to prove > > this assertion!
>
> The letter from National is right there on his site. I would show
you
> the URL but I can't stand all of the pop-up adverts on his new > provider.

Do tell that to the dear lady! She who was told from the start has been justifying National's decision to remove him from the rolls not merely action his request to be removed!

> > > No I dismiss him because he doth protest too much. What bugs me
the > > > most id the volume of spam he posts. The only issue that I have > > > voiciferously opposed is Fred's claim to be a BIGS. He is > > > attempting to decieve and I do not like that at all.
> >
> > Put him on your kill-file and let people decide for themselves about > > his site and concomitant efforts!
>
> Google has no kill-file.

Poor Google!

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: The bahai Taliban
Date: Sunday, December 16, 2001 8:56 PM

"Mike Strelitzer" <madmike@wi.rr.com> wrote in message news:3l5T7.53424$8w3.13705643@typhoon.kc.rr.com...
Mike,

> Give it a rest Fred! Show me some PROOF that the uhj would murder 4000 > people and I'll MAYBE start to take your ridiculous crap seriously.
Next > thing you'll be telling us is that some black unmarked helicopters landed in > your yard to try to kidnap or murder you.

I suggest that you read what Fred said and compare that body with other and similar religious bodies in the past and in the present. No philosophy has been more destructive of mankind than religion - the Taleban and Bin Laden from their interpretations of Holy Scripture justify oppression and murder. The uhj is not yet in a position to do that but it condones other sad behaviour - it encourages its officials to spy on the behaviour of adherents and discipline them for deviations. It condones spying on former adherents - it has blatantly disregarded its own rules in expelling those it doesn't like. Its supporters here spy on private e-mail lists and hesitate not one whit to blatantly misinterpret the results of that spying.

This is a fundamentalist religious body which has, as yet not reached its full potential. We are well used here in Northern Ireland to merchants of hatred who piously dissociate themselves from acts of violence committed by their followers - hypocrisy is the bedmate of every true fundamentalist religious body and adherents.

> If you really have a desire to change things, why don't make an attempt to > start a reasonable dialogue (that's a TWO WAY conversation, if you don't > realize that), instead of your mouthing off on this NG.

Unfortunately Mike, it is Fred's spamming to other newsgroups that really pisses off the AO - and it has an attitude that it will not open discourse to settle what is called the Bahai Wars! repeated efforts have been made to do this and all have been rebuffed! That is the main reason, IMO, that the Bahai Faith has now turned the corner into decline. That which claims to be a unifying force for the world cannot even reconcile and unite its own liberal wing.

**>
> I've been following your posts for months now, and I find them:
>
> Hateful (Dude, I went to your website---you've got a chip on your shoulder a > mile wide!)

Hit the links and look at them!

> Unforgiving (Dave did publicly apologize you know!)

I agree!

> Boring (endless post after post after post after post.....)

An inevitable result of the marginalisation and Fred's consequent perceived need to keep these matters at the forefront of every newsgroup he can hit. This is understandable when you take into consideration that the natural consequence of unresolved conflict is escalation by one or both sides.

The whole situation stinks! I think that the AO would do well to undertake a study of conflict resolution in Northern Ireland. This historic conflict is being resolved by compromise, negotiation, mutual respect and tolerance and parity of esteem.

As ever,

Dermot.

**>

> "BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing"

<patrick_henry@liberty.com>

> wrote in message

news:HI3T7.28185$va.13104749@news2.rdc1.mi.home.com...

> > The bahai Taliban

**> >

> > For the record, I said and say the bahai uhj is "little better" than the

> > WTC terrorists. That, in my reading, acknowledges they're not yet quite as despicable, though I believe, given their record, it is not > > unlikely, at this juncture, that they'll devolve into similar violence > > as well. The hatred animating the person in question further > > substantiates it.

**> >

> > One may slander and lie for years about my status as a bahai, write an obscenely filthy message clearly intended to discredit me with unsuspecting non-bahais, manipulate AOL, distort out of context my messages, and that's entirely acceptable, in bahai fundamentalist quarters....

**> >

> > I certainly don't believe any claims, including putative apologies, > > made by the person in question and who wrote this message:

**> >

**>

https://groups.google.com/groups?

selm=f0853486.0109141001.2fd2b8c%40posting.g > > oogle.com&output=gplain

**> >

> > Non-bahais might also want to look at "The Baha'i Technique":

> > <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/technique.htm>

**> >

**> > --

> > FG

> > The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

> > <https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

**> >

> >
> >
> >
>
>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - talk.religion.bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Sunday, December 16, 2001 8:17 PM

"Robert Little" <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message news:xLSS7.5347$37.797003@typhoon.socal.rr.com...
> I'm suggesting that you read the writings of Baha'u'llah,
'Abdul-Baha' and > Shoghi Effendi (I'll leave the letters from the Universal House of Justice
> out of this for the moment), and select those passages that refer to
the > Universal House of Justice, and that apply to the present subject.
>
> I'm inferring that you are not going to find anything that allows > discourtesy and disrespect.

I see nothing that exempts any person body or institution from criticism. Now I may not do that criticism in the manner that you expect but that's your problem that you fail to address the content of criticism by considering only the tone in which it is made.

That perhaps is why your Faith and AO sail oblivious of tidal conditions onto the rocks. If you addressed the substance of the criticism - if you as a BIGS stood up and told your beloved AO that it has done things that stink and cry out to heaven for retribution, you might just disarm your critics and leave them with nothing to complain about.

Anybody ever thought of trying that new and original approach with Fred?

I somehow don't think so! Much easier to address his tone than what he (or anybody else) actually says! And that is why you BIGS are such hypocrites!

>
>

> "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in
message
> news:9vd6h6$esvup$4@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...
> > "Robert Little" <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message
> > news:D__R7.7977$Ha.1980843@typhoon.socal.rr.com...
> > > It is my belief that many of the comments you categorize as
> > "...have been > > > doing so out of love for the Baha'i Faith." emanate clearly from > > some other > > > emotion, one that allows the poster to denounce, backbite, find > > fault,
> > > criticize, ridicule and otherwise drag down those Baha'i men

and

- > > women who
- > > > have served with such marvelous love, faith and devotion the cause
- > > of
- > > > Baha'u'llah.
- > >
- > > But not competence!
- >
- > Your standards of what constitutes competence may not be the same as mine.
- > You may expect human beings to perform superhuman feats of administrative
- > legardmain, whereas I expect some human foibles now and then, a little ego
- > here and there, amidst the general sea of devotion and dedication.
- >
- > >
- > > >
- > > > It is not unusual for people to pick and choose passages, and
- > > portions of
- > > > passages that fit their own agenda.
- > >
- > > Yup! the AO does it all the time too!
- >
- > Please quote the relevant instances.
- >
- > >
- > > > We have read here on arb/trb certain
- > > > quotes, repeated repeatedly, that have been utilized in an effort to
- > > call
- > > > into question the morality, ethics and devotion of the Baha'i
- > > community.
- > > > Schism is clearly identified in the Baha'i writings as being
- > > contrary to the
- > > > will of God. Backbiting, slander, lying and cynicism are among the
- > > more oft
- > > > utilized tools that lead to schism.
- > >
- > > Yup! That is why the AO is careening the BF towards schism! It has
- > > already happened and will continue until all of you BIGS can a grip on
- > > the AO and control its excesses.
- >
- > If the Baha'i Administrative Order was propelling the Baha'i Faith towards
- > schism as you state, it would mean that Baha'is are doing this, as in the
- > Baha'i community, not some separate, independent agency (AO) as you seem to
- > suggest.
- > >
- > > > The vast majority of Baha'is who voted that first time around
- > > expressed
- > > > clearly their intent that Baha'u'llah's name not be sullied in this > > fashion.

 > > > This puts you in opposition to the overwhelming majority of Baha'is,
 > > not the > > > Baha'i administrative order, which did not act to prohibit Baha'is
 > > from > > > participating, and has not since.
 > >
 > > And who has sullied the Cause of Baha'u'llah more than the ardent > > supporters of the AO?
 >
 > How have Baha'is done this?
 >
 > >
 > > > You are free to prove me wrong, free to quote from the writings
 of > > > Baha'u'llah or 'Abdul-Baha' and so demonstrate that an assault on
 > > the > > > Universal House of Justice is commendable, or even permissible.
 > >
 > > You're telling me that it is above criticism?
 >
 > Baha'u'llah has something to say concerning criticism in general, criticism > of His Universal House of Justice, criticism of His followers.
 >
 > Robert A. Little
 > >
 > > Dermod.
 > >
 > > >
 > > > Robert A. Little
 > > >
 > > > "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in
 message
 > > > news:9v56oc$I00$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...
 > > > > Dearest Robert,
 > > > > Our perceptions of reality are considerably different.
 > > > > My experience, both on the e-mail lists with several dozen
 or > > score > > > > subscribers, and in wider cyberspace, is that there is a desire by > > some
 > > > > to prevent opinions at variance to their own from being expressed.
 > > It > > > > is not a question, in this wonderful modern technology, even
 of > > having > > > > to have your eyes sullied by the thoughts of those who disagree
 > > with you.
 > > > > You can simply kill file them and delightfully imbibe what pleases

> > you.
 > > > No, the issue is that these displeasing contradictory thoughts are
 > > so > > > convincing that you, and more significantly, the men now sitting > > on the > > > chairs intended for members of the Universal House of Justice,
 > > would > > > rather no one read them.
 > > > I have often posted to Baha'i cyberspace that you and those > > like you > > > can have your say. That's what freedom of speech is all about.
 If > > you are > > > indeed the majority, then let all these 900 plus naysayers come > > and share > > > with us words of wisdom and love. Surely, these will swamp all
 the > > hate
 > > > you perceive here, though honestly I don't see that hate.
 What I > > see is > > > honest criticism of the lot currently in power. Since they are > > ruling > > > over an entity in considerable decline, such criticism is the > > opposite > > > of hate. Anyone with an IQ higher than a twig's and hating Baha'is
 > > would > > > merely gloat silently while the inept guys in power continued > > their dive.
 > > > Those who for years have been speaking up have been doing so
 out > > of love > > > for the Baha'i Faith.
 > > >
 > > Love,
 > > >
 > > Michael
 > > >
 > > >
 > > >
 > > > "Robert Little" (rlittle1@socal.rr.com) writes:
 > > > > What happened is that Baha'is voted against it first time > > around. On the > > > > last vote, most of those Baha'is who had voted against it
 the > > first time > > > > simply did not vote again. The remaining Baha'is who had an > > interest in > > > it

To

> > > > > voted more for it than against it.
 > > > > >
 > > > > > As this is a newsgroup dedicated to discussion of Baha'u'llah
 > > and His > > > Faith,
 > > > > and as the majority of His followers who did vote that first > > time
 > > > generally > > > > did not want an unmoderated forum that would allow backbiting,
 > > spite,
 > > > > deceit, lies, racism, bigotry and the like to populate a forum > > with the > > > name > > > > of the Glory of God attached; and, inasmuch as the Baha'i Faith
 > > > inculcates
 > > > > the concept of the will of the majority taking precedence over > > the will
 > > > of
 > > > > the few, it would seem reasonable to conclude that this > > newsgroup ought
 > > > not > > > > to exist, reasonable to conclude that it exists more because
 of > > hatred
 > > > than
 > > > > of love, reasonable to conclude that the protagonist of this > > newsgroup
 > > > did > > > > not wish to abide by the overwhelming wish of the Baha'i > > community.
 > > > >
 > > > > Robert A. Little
 > > > >
 > > > > "BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing"
 > > <patrick_henry@liberty.com>
 > > > > wrote in message
 news:9v2c4k$cb2me$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de...
 > > > > > Michael,
 > > > > >
 > > > > > 600+ no votes on the first interest poll. You're right that > > > > > people on news.groups were noticeably shocked by the
 > > > > > figure and realized something was going on. One of them > > > > > immediately created alt.religion.bahai in response.
 There's
 > > > > > a very long and complicated record of fundamentalist > > > > > interference in the creation of talk.religion.bahai.
 > > > > >
 > > > > > For those interested, most of the relevant docs are at this > > link:
 > > > > > <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/trbmenu.htm>
 > > > > >
 > > > > > --
 > > > > > FG
 > > > > > The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
 > > > > > <https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote
in
message
> > > > > news:9v0nel$q4k$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...
> > > > > > Hi, Pat.
> > > > > > Duh, have I wandered into another sliders world again. I > > recall > > > some > > > > > outlandish figure such as 900 plus NO votes the first time > > TRB was > > > voted > > > > > on. People at News.Groups noticed this and some helped out on > > finally > > > > > > getting the Newsgroup through. Sorry for my poor memory,
but > > perhaps
> > > all > > > > > these alternate universes I've passed through contributes
to > > that. I > > > do
> > > > > > have the impression it took three tries before TRB got > > through.
> > > Taking
> > > > > all > > > > > > three votes, including that first one with its NSA of Iceland
> > NO
> > > vote,
> > > > or
> > > > > > was that on the second ballot?, I strongly suspect more > > Baha'is voted
> > > to > > > > > > prevent this first uncensored line of communication in recent
> > Baha'i
> > > > > > generations.
> > > > > >
> > Thrive,
> > > > > >
> > M.
> > > > > >
> > > > > >
> > > > > > Pat Kohli (kohli@ameritel.net) writes:
> > > > > >
> > > > > > > He has voting results which show that more Baha'is voted > > for TRB
> > > than > > > > > against > > > > > > > it, yet he concludes that Baha'is were an obstacle to TRB

He has not lied about his card or his membership. As the dear lady has confirmed, National has never officially told him he has been disenrolled. In the absence of that official notification Fred is quite within his rights to insist he is still a Bahai. After all, any other intimation as to his status would rank in the same category as Pilgrims' Notes - interesting but not as binding as the genuine text!

As ever,

Dermod.

>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."

Date: Sunday, December 16, 2001 8:22 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011214113726.25979.00000257@mb-md.aol.com...

> >

> >> Not talking to someone who has threatened to sue if you do is a wise > >> thing to do.

> >

> >On the contrary - it is the most foolish thing to do for that's the > >way to wind up in Court as in New Mexico.

>

> Dear Dermod,

>

> Almost any competent lawyer would disagree with you there. And it was the > incompetent lawyer who case got thrown out in New Mexico.

Case was thrown out of Court on basis that due to First Amendment Court considered it could not take jurisdiction. The substance of the Complaint has never been addressed - that's the problem the AO has not yet tackled or resolved. And I doubt that it ever will - in the meantime however the mud sticks!

> >Fred does no more than point out the current state of lunacy within > >the AO. Granted he's somewhat more extreme and adept than some others > >of similar mind.

>

> In other words he demonstrates who the real lunatics are.

Yup! The mindless moronic cultists in the AO!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: The Silence of the Lambs
Date: Wednesday, December 19, 2001 9:26 AM

"Brian Walker" <bwalker@net-yan.com> wrote in message news:3C200C26.C3E6FDE3@net-yan.com...
Brian and Mike,

- >
- > Bahá'í wars are not really an issue in the world. Check out a couple of site,
- > and count for yourself. The vast majority of Bahá'ís do not participate in the
- > internet fora, but are out there "doing things".;

Bahai wars are a much more important issue than the vast majority of BIGS are either aware of or prepared to consider. What you see on TRB or Talisman is a tip of the iceberg - the vocal and erudite who are prepared to sound forth, who are either immune from AO counterforce or prepared to defy it. Beneath them is a growing mass of the disaffected and plain disillusioned and bored, most of whom just disappear. There is much anecdotal evidence to back up that assertion from personal experiences, through comments on other lists, to the statistics on membership. For example the Bahai community in Northern Ireland was 300 strong when I joined 20 years ago - it is still 300 strong and a lot have gone through the revolving doors over those two decades. I think most of those who have left would broadly agree with my analysis of what is wrong with Bahaism.

Those remaining are doing things for sure but most of those things are internally directed with but a dim glimmer that they will attract masses of entrants.

> those opposing the Bahá'ís > are in 2 broad camps - "orthodox" Bahá'ís who believe in a continued > guardianship in the form of a number of men, and "anti-AO" groups who express > themselves on these *.r.b and Talisman9. There are not many of them.

There are over 200 subscribed to Talisman 9 at the moment. Karen's "Unenrolled Bahai" has I think around 50 - who can tell how many read

TRB. A awful lot of Bahais are on-line in the West - it is primarily a middle class grouping of supposedly educated persons who just tend to be the type who buy computers and go online. Since Talisman and TRB are viewed in certain quarters as hell writ in Java, many simply lurk around them picking up on the threads and possibly not talking much about them but probably influenced by them. So the overall effect of Bahai Wars is indeterminate.

But I have been told by people who have contacts in the right quarters that the AO intensely deprecates and dislikes Talisman and TRB and I deduce from the morbidity of the BIGS community and recurrent financial difficulties that the Wars are having a deleterious effect on the planned advance by the AO.

Take a > look, listen, feel . See the issues involved, and make a decision.

Personally

> I think some of the points they raise are interesting, but the real issues are > ignored.

The essential business of war is the ability to cut through the smokescreen of disinformation to assess the damage inflicted on the enemy by one's operations. That is a complicated and complex business. In assessing the effect of Bahai Wars on the AO one has to learn to read the subtext. For example the UK NSA used to publish the names and numbers of new additions to the flock as well as the withdrawals. It hasn't done so for many moons past. That is the fact. The speculation comes when you ask why. But you cannot take this one element of the equation in isolation. If you assume the figures are not printed because they are poor and detrimental to morale you have to look for corroborative evidence. Might that be found in the recurrent financial crises, the lack of growth in the Northern Ireland community, the lack of reports that numbers are increasing etc.? All of these factors have got to be combined and assessed before one comes to an overall assessment as to the effects of Bahai Wars on the faithful and faithless.

> Fred has been approached in a variety of methods, all of them result in rebuff

> unless you are in agreement with him.

Fred is a problem that none of you have sussed! Before you deal with him it is advised that you consider his motives for doing what he does. It is the conventional wisdom on this group to declare that he does what he does from motives of hatred. That is a most serious mistake! Fred does what he does because he cares passionately that his vision of the Bahai Faith has been perverted and that he has no other means of attempting to undo that perversion. The more this group persists in the SPAM, SPAM, LIAR, LIAR approach the more Fred becomes alienated and the more intense will be his campaign. Fred wears his heart large on his sleeve and nobody notices because the easiest way to deal with him, apparently, is to continually denigrate him. It doesn't work and it doesn't take a genius to see that!

You have made him a monster and because you have made him that he will continue to be seen to behave as such. What is the effect of this?

Well some will see him as a monster - others will trot over and look at his site, will study it whilst disregarding the hyperbole and may conclude that there is compelling circumstantial evidence thereon that there is something radically wrong within the AO!

You've made Fred a scapegoat - so long as you can blame him for his methods you can safely discount everything substantive that he has to say. I don't especially like much of Fred's methodology but I'm long enough in the tooth to discount the emotion and look at the substance.

If you do you may begin to understand the rationale behind Bahai

Wars

and discern the ways in which your faith can become a potent and relevant force. If you don't you can watch the BF go from Spring to Winter in less than the twinkling of Milissa's eyes!

>When it comes to an exchange of ideas, > speaking to people opposed to the faith, you could do worse than listen to > Dermot, who is as opposed as any I have seen, but has intelligence and wit to > back up his arguments.

The usual £5 shall be wending its way to you by snail mail as per our agreement that you earned it when you said anything nice about me. Of course that remains confidential between you and me!!

>Nima (alas he has left the groups for the >time being) > is virulent, but backed up with sources. Karen and Melissa are always worth a > read.

Dare one disagree with so cogent a point?

>

> Muddy, er.... Madman ... ah ... Moody ...ummm ... well, there a khalifa-based, > brain-dead, violent ex-con with penis envy who profanes the group with his > presence. He is good for an occasional laugh, but not for an exchange of > ideas. He and Fred are well suited to each other.

Miss Maddy is undoubtedly a buffoon and a cowardly one at that as befits a bully which he has tied to be but is not very good at!

>

> A number of posters here come from the orthodox camp. Now, Shoghi Effendi > described Bahá'ís as "orthodox", but in the sense used here, it refers to the > followers of covenant breakers. Their main interest is in proving how much of > the W&T was fulfilled by their respective "guardians". As the answer is "zero" > they are of no interest, except insofar as they demonstrate how not to read the > scriptures. Points made in discussion will lead back to this theme, and as such > most of us ignore them.

The unfortunate thing about the Remeyite split is that it has polarised the entire Bahai community. One either accepts there is a living Guardian or there isn't and there is no middle ground. That results in extremism - on one hand the Orthodox uphold their

Guardian

and brook no opposition, on the other the Haifa uphold the House as supreme and tolerate no opposition of any kind. This division has stifled worthwhile research into the results of the loss of a living Guardian and how that loss can be compensated for. As a counterbalance to the Orthodox Haifa has placed all power in the House and all power corrupts. Yet so long as the Orthodox pose a threat (or because they do) Haifa can brook no devolution of its powers to accord more fully with what the W&T envisaged - the Twin Pillars of the AO.

**>

> So, seeker, check out the scene here. We are robust group, often irascible, > polarised, opinionated and vulgar. For a list of the BIGS (I mean the real > ones) check out Fred's hate list.

Quite incorrect, Brian - for the real hard-line, nasty, vitriolic, venomous, vicious and self righteous BIGS trot on over to Beliefnet. Compared to those daisies the people here are only beginners! Even poor old Karen has been accused there of being a Violator and Covenant Breaker!

TRB is a robust group but remarkably civil overall considering it flourishes without benefit of moderation. There is nothing in the Bahai Writings that says that argument is not to be robust - I would indeed venture the opinion that adoption of TRB methods within the AO would revitalise consultation for it would become wild, exciting and interesting. It might also become productive - nothing discourages embryonic and immature administration more than the thought that some blood curdling wolf who has honed his skills on TRB is going to rampage through the Convention season and collect AO scalps on his way! That is the horrifying prospect that encourages the current crop of duffers therein to so decry criticism! Their incompetence could result in electoral disadvantage!

One thing you soon learn about the Bahai AO is that it is composed of lambs in wolves' clothing! Sadly they are far from silent! And my thespian aspirations lead me to wannabe Hannibal (fava beans and a nice Chianti) - fefefefefefefeFEH!

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Subject: Re: AOL - Fred lies all over the internet ----->

fundamentalist spam choking AOL bahai message boards like NNTP

Date: Wednesday, December 19, 2001 8:05 PM

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0112170720.4b64ff11@posting.google.com...

Dave,

**>

> > He has not lied about his card or his membership. As the dear lady > > has confirmed, National has never officially told him he has been > > disenrolled. In the absence of that official notification Fred is > > quite within his rights to insist he is still a Bahai. After all, any > > other intimation as to his status would rank in the same category as

> > Pilgrims' Notes - interesting but not as binding as the genuine text!

**>

**>

> Were Fred to try and attend his Electoral Unit Convention he would not > be allowed to vote. If any Baha'i checked his credentials they would > find that he is off the rolls. It does not matter what Fred says -

> his ID is invalid.

I'm not disputing what you say!

Just tell the bastards at National to tell Fred preferably before they tell you or the dear lady!

Dermod.

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Subject: Re: Orthodox and Heterodox or Vice Versa

Date: Sunday, December 30, 2001 12:14 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20011230043240.01059.00001283@mb-mk.aol.com...

**> >

> > So he has been declared a CB without being told about it!

**>

> Dermod,

**>

> That I don't know, though I am looking into it now.

But you told us he had been declared a CB and he has told us he has not been told of this - so exactly what hole are you looking into?

**>

> > Geez but this proves

> > the point about Fred's not having been told either!

**>

> I told you Fred wasn't informed, and I told you why.

No you told me the official reason you and the A Onions would like to be disseminated and accepted. The task now to hand is to come up with a plausible excuse as to why Martin and others have not been informed.

While you're at your checking do check up on the Bennetts

(remember them? - in the fair land of Oz?) as well!

> >Any fear you could check your sources and see if I've got the supreme > >accolade as well -
>
> After having left the Faith twenty years ago? Sorry, Dermod you lost
your > chance a long time ago. Martin here, did it right as he intended to from the > start.

I do hope you have evidence on which you base your assessment of Martin's motives apart from the usual prejudicial mindset concerning anybody who rejects the Haifan version.

**>
> >
> >Having been privy to parts of the conversations you refer to I
would > >advise you that Martin, in turn, was advised to take certain > >elementary precautions in dealing with the rottweilers.
>
> Thank you for you confirmation that what I stated regarding these machinations > was true.

My, what colourful language from the Officer Dibble of the AO! So we deal with "machinations" when somebody, asked to meet with an ABM
seeks advice on how best to protect himself during such a meeting.
You do acknowledge that any BIGS summoned to such a meeting has no right to refuse or to insist on any fair dealing; he must submit himself to the embrace of the rottweilers without question or query.
Just exactly what I have seen at first hand - the "accused" got a letter from the NSA telling him he had been adjudged guilty of misbehaviour even though he had never been told he had been charged with it, never mind acquainted with any details of the charges.

But as these are machinations are in the nature of the New World Order
we have to accept them!

**>
> >In such circumstances actions by an accused to > >ensure accuracy can scarcely be regarded as "entrapment" other than
,
> >perhaps, by one who thinks that such accuracy is not needed.
>
> To my knowledge, he was not accused of anything at the time these discussions > took place. The machinations your refer to were not responses to a meeting > which the ABM had already demanded, but one which Martin was deliberately > trying to provoke her into asking for.

Your knowledge is far from complete on this and many other matters. The request I dealt with was one that said a meeting had been requested by the ABM and what advice would be given regarding such.

Amongst the things suggested were - a tape recorder and/or independent witness at the meeting to ensure that a true record was kept, that the ABM be requested to put in writing the subject matter for such a meeting etc. You see - midnight calls by Counsellors, interrogations in hotel rooms, denunciations from the Convention platform and secret court decisions have bred an atmosphere where no sensible person, having been requested to meet with an ABM will do other than take elementary precautions to ensure he is not about to be stitched up.

> But you know all this.

I do, but you obviously don't!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Notice: Mild Usenet annoyance, Fred "Baha'i in *Perfectly* Good Standing" Gleysher, STILL at it!
Date: Sunday, December 30, 2001 8:42 PM

"Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au> wrote in message news:3c2ee28c@news.rivernet.com.au...

> "No! It has just expelled him and not bothered to tell him!"
>

> Dermut....

> How can act like such a pratt?? Fred has been told so many times of his > removal that even you couldn't fathom this number. And as you start to reply > with he wasn't contacted directly..... Fred asked not to be > contacted and returned all mail.

Even a bostoon like you ought to be able to understand that until Fred has been officially informed that he has been disenrolled he can continue to describe himself as a BIGS. After all you BIGS are told only to go by the written Text and disregard everything else as akin to pilgrims notes.

Ah! To see the administrative organ wilt in face of force majeure!

> Sounds like a vicious circle that Fred > loves to hide in and perpetuated by you and the other Glaysher lackies. It > seems that Night Shadow has done his homework and you can't handle an > opinion that seems to be non-biased. Maybe it's time for Freddy to respond > and give you a break from your general duties.

Night Shadow has just regurgitated the same crud that you BIGS have been coming out with for decades. As it was on Beliefnet so it is on TRB and SRB forever and ever.

DUTIES? Nothing to do with duties! I'm here for the sheer enjoyment of seeing you loonie fundies perform. It's the best show in town!

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> Subject: Re: Notice: Mild Usenet annoyance, Fred "Baha'i in *Perfectly* Good Standing" Gleysher, STILL at it!
Date: Monday, December 31, 2001 7:15 AM

"Graham Sorenson" <graham@fragrant.demon.co.uk> wrote in message news:yNQX7.90059$Wd.28774892@news1.rdc1.az.home.com...
> "Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au> wrote in message > news:3c2ee28c@news.rivernet.com.au...
> > "No! It has just expelled him and not bothered to tell him!"
>
> You don't seem to have noticed that if they did inform him then they
would > have gone against 'his' wishes about not contacting him in any way!
>
> A catch 22 situation perhaps?

That National determined on expelling Fred, obviously as a disciplinary measure, is such a fundamental change in the subsistent relationship as to warrant and justify its going against his wishes and informing him of it.

As you note it is a Catch 22 situation and it still is so long as National which initiated the situation does nothing to resolve it. Until he has been officially informed that he is no longer a BIGS Fred can quite happily and legitimately so describe himself. National is in the Catch 22 of its own making because it has neither the guts nor the brains to get itself out of it - spineless wimps in other words!

Of course the same trait of not indulging in correspondence was in evidence over the New Mexico business, which still remains happily unresolved. But this is what inevitably happens when you treat adherents with contempt - sooner or later one of the worms turns and causes immense discomfort. If you BIGS had brains you'd turf the bunch of wimps out and replace them with people of ability but that's difficult because you've turfed out the people with ability.

Still it's your problem and not mine!

Dermod.

> >
> > Dermut....
> > How can act like such a pratt?? Fred has been told so many times of his > > removal that even you couldn't fathom this number. And as you start to > reply > > with he wasn't contacted directly..... Fred asked not to be > > contacted and returned all mail. Sounds like a vicious circle that Fred > > loves to hide in and perpetuated by you and the other Glaysher lackies. It > > seems that Night Shadow has done his homework and you can't handle

an > > opinion that seems to be non-biased. Maybe it's time for Freddy to > respond
> > and give you a break from your general duties.
> > M
> >
> >
>
>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Notice: Mild Usenet annoyance, Fred "Baha'i in *Perfectly* Good Standing" Gleyshe, STILL at it!
Date: Monday, December 31, 2001 8:47 AM

"Mike Strelitzer" <madmike@wi.rr.com> wrote in message news:wYTX7.153271$RP1.30933414@typhoon.kc.rr.com...
Hi Mad Mike,

> What I don't see from you is ANYTHING constructive. You are like the enraged
> bull seeing the matador, and all you want to do is charge, charge, charge!!!
> Destroy the enemy!!! Get the bad guys!!! Kick their asses!! Bloody their their > noses!!

Every religion has problems from time to time with its leadership as you note and the BF is no different. There is conflict between the leadership and a small but extremely erudite group of dissident liberals and absolutely no chance of rapprochement between them. Not that it hasn't been tried - the battlefield is laden with the cadavers of failed efforts to engage the AO in fruitful and constructive consultation. At the moment and for the foreseeable future this conflict is in its combat phase. Strike and counter strike, blow and counter blow is the order of the day. In such an atmosphere any talk of constructive measures is most definitely not on the agenda.

You may perhaps recall what happened to the constructive proposals contained in "A Modest Proposal". Prior to publication of this article, whilst it was undergoing "review", its authors were mendaciously charged with circulating it and roundly condemned at National Convention. The principal author was deprived of his voting rights - his associates subsequently drummed out by an unholy combination of kangaroo courts and midnight interrogations and the article was denied official publication. It says much for the power of its ideas that some of them have been implemented - in an organisation which denies the need for any reform. Sadly, having so peremptorily dismissed the authors of those reforms, the AO only demonstrates its own moral bankruptcy and sterility of thought - it is reduced to piracy.

You may detect from the A Onions on this and similar fora, denials that there is anything wrong within the AO - it has no need of reform. Such "mistakes" as may have been made are not systemic failures but indicative only of a lack of maturity. All organisations make mistakes but the mature ones do not repeat them. Sadly the AO falls again and again into the same errors of judgement.

You would think, after the furore surrounding the disenrollment of Michael McKenney, that this would not have been repeated. Along came

Alison Marshall - prior to her expulsion, nobody had heard of her. Now she has become an icon of resistance, a rallying call to the troops of opposition. And of course we have Fred's expulsion - proclaimed and told to everybody but Fred. Let's also not forget the New Mexico business where a member of the LSA complained to National about its activities and waited two years, without response, before wheeling it into Court. The matter is still unresolved! In July last, the word was on the streets, from sources close to the AO, that certain dissidents were to be declared Covenant Breakers. That, of course, led to a right donnybrook! And so on and so forth - incident after incident of incompetence, ignorance,

Yet in this catalogue of gross errors can you find one A Onion with the grey matter to stand up and say - Things are not going well - it would be of advantage to open consultation with those who feel aggrieved? Au contraire! Efforts by dissidents to initiate such a process have been continually rebuffed and ignored. Their ideas have been purloined but they are not welcome!

So why are you surprised that Fred acts the way he does or that there is an absence of constructive discourse. So long as the AO resists any discourse there will be no flow of constructive ideas from the dissidents. The AO does not want discourse for that would be a real threat to the sinecures and the patronage! And for as long as that continues the BF shall continue down the path of decline in terms of numbers, finance and moral standing. That which cannot unite its own adherents (save by expulsion) cannot unite mankind as a whole!

You have stumbled upon this way when the conflict is in its "hot" stage and probably about to get "hotter". The next fifteen months will see some major escalation of the conflict as Haifa moves to destroy the dissidents before the next International Convention. That's my bet on the situation!

Hopefully I'll be back in time for the hottest action! For the fact is that I'm off now for a time away from TRB and the rest due to pressure of external exigencies!

As ever,

Dermod.

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Scapegoat

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Scapegoat.htm>

OXFORD ENGLISH DICTIONARY. Scapegoat. (Lev. xvi) 1. Invented by Tindale 1530.... One of the two goats that was chosen by Lot to be sent away into the wilderness, the sins of the people having been symbolically laid upon it, while the other was appointed to be sacrificed. 2. One who is blamed or punished for the sins of others. 1867 Freeman, He has been made the scapegoat for many of the sins both of other individuals and of the whole nation.

"...In mythology, a furious mob mobilizes against scapegoats held responsible for some huge crisis. The sacrifice of the guilty victim through collective violence ends the crisis and founds a new order ordained by the divine. Violence and scapegoating are always present in the mythological definition of the divine itself. .... As the Greeks thought, the shock of death of the victim brings about a catharsis that reconciles. It extinguishes the appetite for violence. For the Greeks, the tragic death of the hero enabled ordinary people to go back to their peaceful lives." FROM New Perspectives Quarterly interview. Summer 2005. "Ratzinger Is Right." René Girard

Compare

Straw man

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/straw\_man.htm

The Baha'i Technique - Slander & Shunning

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/technique.htm>

Shunning > Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm>

---

Homepage

---

avigation-->

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Scholl on the eventual impact upon his family.

Scholl re: Article in American Family Foundation's Cultic Studies Journal by Karen Bacquet

Scholl comments on this letter, "A Crisis of Faith"

Reply of Steven Scholl to Birkland Letter, 11 December 1996

---

From: White Cloud <sscholl@jeffnet.org>
To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Subject: Crisis of Faith, pt. 1
Date: Friday, May 15, 1998 11:42 AM

Dear Fredrick,

I am fwding my statement to the UHJ that was posted on talisman awhile back. Hope it is of use to your site.

Best wishes,
Steve

-----

15 May 1996

To the Universal House of Justice
The National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States Counselor Stephen Birkland
Talisman

Dear Friends,

Over the last few weeks Baha'is around the world have been informed about the removal of David Langness' Baha'i rights, the denunciation of David by Firuz Kazemzadeh and Stephen Birkland from the floor of the US National Convention, and of the withdrawal of his Baha'i membership by Prof. Juan Cole. As a friend and colleague of both of these loyal lovers of Baha'u'llah, I am devastated by these sad events I can not in good conscience remain silent in the face of such injustice.

I have known David and Juan for over 15 years. I have worked with them professionally and have benefited from their generosity of spirit and the brilliance of their insights and wisdom. I value their friendship and love them as my dear brothers. With David I worked in a professional capacity as director of publications for the Hospital Council of Southern California, where David served with great distinction as a spokesperson on health care issues. David also serves as a leading advocate for homeless Americans, serving on the Board of Directors of the Homeless Healthcare Project and with Robin Williams, Whoopi Goldberg and Billy Crystal on the Board of Comic Relief. David has distinguished himself to the non-Baha'i world as a passionate leader for social justice and political reform in America. He also has led many missions of mercy and relief to troubled corners of the globe. For example he spearheaded major relief efforts to the Philippines and to El Salvador. He has been sought out by national media such as the New York Times, the Los Angeles Times, National Public Radio, Time magazine and the major networks to speak as a leading authority on the crucial issues facing the American political and social welfare system in the face of the conservative revolution taking place in the United States.

I have learned a tremendous amount from David. Much of it of a professional nature, but the more important lessons came from seeing how he dealt with difficult moral and ethical issues in his professional, personal, and Baha'i life. I have rarely seen a person more humble regarding the good works he has accomplished in his life. I feel that I have been blessed by our friendship.

As an example of David's character, I will share one story. After the editors of "Dialogue" magazine were attacked by the NSA for seditious behavior back in 1988, many of us descended into depression and "inactive status." David was one of the few who stayed active. He continued his personal teaching of the faith, was a popular Baha'i speaker at firesides, the Bosch Baha'i school, and other venues. In his local community, Los Angeles, he remained an active Baha'i and strong defender of the faith and its institutions. He has spent long hours writing an important introduction to the Baha'i faith, THE SEEKER'S PATH: MYTH, MATURITY, AND THE BAHAI TEACHINGS, which is scheduled for publication by One World this summer. Those close to David, the members of his local community, recognized his devotion to the faith, his maturity, and his wide experience, and elected him to serve as a member of the Los Angeles LSA, where he served with distinction until he and Teresa moved from Los Angeles a few years ago. I think this speaks volumes of David's character and devotion to the Baha'i administrative order.

I first became friends with Juan as I began my undergraduate studies in History of Religions in the late 1970s. Juan was at that time pursuing his graduate studies at UCLA. It was largely through his encouragement and example that I saw the merit of pursuing my graduate studies in Islamic philosophy and mysticism so as to prepare myself for service to the Baha'i faith through the field of Baha'i studies. Over the years, Juan provided me with loving support and guidance as I pursued my studies. When I began my publishing company, Juan was the first person I signed as an author. I have had the great fortune to work with him in an author/publisher relationship.

Juan's brilliance is a source of constant enrichment to me personally, and his groundbreaking Baha'i studies will be a lasting treasure and resource to future Baha'i scholars. I believe that he stands with Alessandro Bausani as the two foremost thinkers that the Baha'i community has produced in this century. Juan's accomplishments are many and outstanding. He has served with distinction as Director of the Center for Middle Eastern and North African Studies at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, one of the top Middle East studies departments in the nation. He was a Fullbright scholar and has served on the Board of Directors of the American Institute of Iranian Studies and on the American Council of Learned Societies, and Middle East Studies Association.

He is author and editor of several important academic studies including his books COLONIALISM AND REVOLUTION IN THE MIDDLE EAST (Princeton University Press, 1993) and ROOTS OF NORTH INDIAN SHI'ISM IN IRAN AND IRAQ (University of California Press, 1991). He has published two books of translations of Iranian Baha'i scholar Mirza Abu'l-Fadl Gulpaygani (both from Kalimat Press) and two translations of the Arabic writings of Kahlil Gibran (White Cloud Press). He has penned dozens of articles for prestigious academic journals such as the International Journal of Middle East Studies, Iranian Studies, Comparative Studies in Society and History, Middle Eastern Studies, The Muslim World, Encyclopaedia Iranica, Encyclopedia Philosophique Universelle, and The Encyclopedia of the Modern Middle East. Juan is known by his academic colleagues as an eloquent and persuasive representative of the Baha'i faith and a staunch defender of the Iranian

Baha'is, and he is a recognized expert on the Middle East in general by the press and the United States government.

Juan's great love for Baha'u'llah is evident in all of his work, even in his most demanding academic studies that uncover the context and setting of Baha'u'llah's world reforms. His translations of Baha'u'llah's mystical tablets show us that he is not merely a dry academic historian but that he is also an inspired mystic and poet whose soul has been lit by the fire that burned on Sinai and that he has been transformed by the spirit of the Abha Beauty. Juan has not only provided me with guidance but he has been an invaluable friend, colleague and mentor to younger Baha'is entering the field of Baha'is studies. He has given us his time, encouragement, criticisms, and friendship. He is our true brother.

It is to my lasting benefit that I have been able to call these men my friends. I wish to state publicly that I believe David and Juan have been completely open and honest in their dealings with the Baha'i administration and that the Baha'i institutions have falsely accused them of crimes against the Covenant and, in David's case, unjustly removed his Baha'i rights. Moreover, the Baha'i institutions have disregarded their own policies in attacking and vilifying these loyal servants. In doing so, I believe that the Baha'i institutions have acted in a manner that is contrary to the letter and spirit of the Baha'i teachings.

My reasons for this belief are rooted in my personal knowledge of many of the events that are reported in the communiqués of the NSA and House of Justice. In the House's letter of 10 April, old distortions and half truths are publicly declared and David is accused by the Supreme institution of the Baha'i faith to be "insincere" and "duplicitous." I believe that a more complete accounting of the events that led us to this tragic state of affairs will demonstrate that although there may be faults on the part of all involved parties, it is the Baha'i institutions who have acted in violation of their own clear policies and in violation of the foundational principles and values of the Baha'i sacred writings. The House of Justice letter to the US NSA of 10 April regarding David's case demonstrates that the House of Justice continues to accept as truth the false statements and distortions propagated by the National Spiritual Assembly surrounding the publishing activities of "Dialogue" magazine and Kalimat Press. In doing so, the House of Justice continues to ignore the facts of the case as presented in our appeal letters. Indeed, one of the most frustrating aspects of our appeal process to the House of Justice is that they have simply refused to address the specifics of our appeals and the evidence we have presented that contradicts the NSA's account of our actions and motives. In doing so, the House of Justice has relied on the campaign of backbiting and gossip that has been directed at us for over 15 years by prominent Baha'i administrators.

The easiest way for me to address these issues is to respond directly to accusations made against us by the Universal House of Justice and the NSA. Let me begin by first addressing David's loss of pilgrimage rights.

In his appeal to the House of Justice that was posted on Talisman, David attempted to reconstruct the events that led to his removal of pilgrimage rights and his confusion as to who was sanctioning and why. The House of Justice letter of 10 April 96 is unsatisfactory as it attempts to dismiss David's detailed accounting of events with the following statement: "The inaccuracies and distortions of this communication are too many and subtle to enter into here."

As one of the four "Dialogue" editors sanctioned (Anthony Lee and Payam Afsharian rounded out the list), I, too, was confused as to who was taking action and why. The communications from the NSA and House to us were contradictory. On 8 June 1988 the NSA wrote to the four of us that, "Considering the seriousness of the matter, the National Spiritual Assembly has withdrawn, and will not extend, invitations to you for pilgrimage to the Baha'i World Centre for the time being. In so doing, the National Assembly is carrying out the specific instructions of the Universal House of Justice."

At that time some of us who received this letter remained unsure of what exactly we had done to receive such a reprimand and what exactly were the specific instructions of the House of Justice concerning our case. Payam Afsharian sought clarification from the House of Justice as to why he had been sanctioned. Their response to Payam indicated to us that the House was not fully involved in the case and the sanctions, leaving the impression that it was an NSA action. In response to Payam's query, the Dept. of the Secretariat of the House of Justice wrote:

"The Universal House of Justice has received your letter of 17 December 1991 in which you ask what you may do "to regain Baha'i status". It has asked us to say that, to the best of its information, your administrative rights have not been removed and you are a Baha'i in good standing. Concerning your question about pilgrimage to the Holy Places at the World Centre, as the instruction of the National Spiritual Assembly indicated, the restriction placed on you and a few others, in the heat of the problems which arose from the actions of the editors of "Dialogue" in connection with the intended publication of the article "A Modest Proposal", was temporary, and you may apply, if you wish, to come on pilgrimage. As to your request to know what you did to have caused the problems which came to a head in the Spring of 1988, the House of Justice feels that this matter has been discussed exhaustively with you and others concerned by the National Spiritual Assembly and its representatives both orally and in writing (letter dated 9 Sept. 1992).

Our reading of this letter was that the House of Justice was unsure of our Baha'i status as it was under the jurisdiction of the NSA and that any questions should be raised with the NSA and not the House of Justice. National Center staff also interpreted the letter to Payam in such fashion and communicated this impression to David.

It should also be noted that we had very good reason not to trust the communications of the NSA sent to us by the Secretary General. The Secretary General had a history of attacking us, distorting our words and actions, and failing to provide us with full information on issues surrounding our case and appeals. Because of the Secretary General's track record for partial or dishonest communications, we did not accept this statement at face value and thus some of us sought further clarification. Unfortunately, no clear guidance came and, indeed, the House of Justice letter to Payam added to the confusion.

The House of Justice could have easily cleared up the matter during David's three-day visit in June 1988. A member of the House and ITC representative could have met with David to discuss events that led up to the crisis and stated clearly and unequivocally that the House of Justice had taken this action. Instead, David was shunned by the members of the House and ITC. I found this shunning of David difficult to comprehend as it runs so contrary to the examples of Baha'u'llah, Abdul-Baha and Shoghi Effendi, and even the House in earlier years. Baha'u'llah's response to believers that he felt might be trouble-makers was to take them with him into exile and have them share his imprisonment. The House could have easily ended the confusion on our part by spending 30 minutes with David during his three-day visit to the Baha'i World Centre. Or they could have ended our confusion by stating directly to Payam what they are now stating. But it is unfair to call David insincere and duplicitous in light of the fact that those of us who were sanctioned and the NSA's own staff remained uncertain about jurisdictional issues due to the House's inability to communicate clearly.

I am also disturbed by the manner in which the NSA and House of Justice have taken certain passages from our appeals and twisted their meaning in order to give the appearance that we are being devious in our actions. What comes across time and again in the letters from the House in response to our appeals are vague accusations that are never substantiated with specific examples. On the other hand, our appeals supplied the House with concrete evidence of lies and unethical behavior on the part of the NSA. To these specific charges (which I will discuss below) the House has remained silent and continues to misrepresent the actions and motives of those of us involved with "Dialogue" magazine and Kalimat Press. As an example of how the House of Justice has twisted our words to make us appear insincere or duplicitous, I refer to my second appeal letter to the House of

Justice of 26 April 1988 and their response to me on 21 June 1989.

Selectively quoting words from my appeal letter, the House of Justice writes that I "assume that all is due to the machinations of certain individuals in positions of responsibility" and that I lack any "awareness that there may have been faults" on my side; that I characterize the "Dialogue" staff as "Baha'is who are innocent of any wrongdoing." I find this statement offensive and a sign of the House of Justice's intransigence in dealing with us. In several of my letters to the National Assembly and the House of Justice, I have openly acknowledged that I am not without fault in this dispute. In these letters I acknowledged that feelings of mistrust have developed in my heart toward individual members of the National Assembly; I recognized that I did not always agree with National Assembly policies and decisions affecting "Dialogue" and have expressed these disagreements in language that has offended; and that I regret some of my actions.

However, what I actually stated in my appeal letter of 26 April 1988 to the House of Justice was that "in our activities associated with the preparation, review and publication plans for the article 'A Modest Proposal' we were innocent of any wrongdoing." I maintain that we did not do anything to circumvent the authority of the National Assembly nor did we act in any way contrary to established Baha'i guidelines concerning publishing, nor did we have any intent or motivation to undermine the authority of the National Spiritual Assembly specifically or the Baha'i administration generally. Once we were aware of the National Assembly's concerns about the article, we did everything possible to work with them to alleviate their concerns. For example, we requested to meet with two representatives of the NSA to go over the article word by word. This meeting was held in Los Angeles and we agreed to make changes to the article based on the recommendations of the two NSA members. We met extensively with Counselor Fred Schechter to find a way to achieve reconciliation. We made proposals to the Counselor and the NSA on ways to achieve understanding and harmony. I personally wrote to each member of the NSA and invited them to contact me at any time if they had any questions or concerns about our activities. I invited each NSA member to contribute an article to "Dialogue". In May 1987 the NSA summoned Anthony Lee, Payam Afsharian, Richard Hollinger and myself to Wilmette where they presented their concerns about our activities. We patiently answered all their concerns and felt that we had laid to rest some of the false impressions held by several NSA members, particularly Firuz Kazemzadeh. Following this meeting, I wrote to the NSA and acknowledged that there may still be some lingering concerns between us and that we needed to build bridges of confidence, so I suggested that the NSA should ask us to do something for them, give us a publishing project to work on together. I believe a similar letter was written by Kalimat Press. We (Kalimat Press and "Dialogue") felt that if we could work with the NSA on such projects it would be a first step toward better understanding of each other. My hope was that we could come to recognize that we are all co-workers in the Cause of God. I also suggested that the "Dialogue" editorial board and NSA meet at the Bosch school to pray together and consult with each other, and recommended the calling of a "review summit" where various independent Baha'i writers, publishers, and Baha'i institutions might brainstorm to find a way to make review a more effective and less arbitrary process. The response to each of these attempts to achieve reconciliation and common ground was met with silence.

Every attempt on our part to achieve common ground and a true reconciliation only led to further attacks on our motives and characters.

Our appeals to the House of Justice came from our concern for the integrity of the institution of the National Spiritual Assembly as well as concern for our Baha'i rights and the economic viability of our work. We appealed to the House of Justice because the Constitution of Universal House of Justice states that the Supreme Institution of the Baha'i Faith is responsible "to safeguard the personal rights, freedom and initiative of individuals," and "for ensuring that no body or institution within the Cause abuse its privileges." I remain convinced that violation of Baha'i law, abuse of authority and privileges, and disregard of Baha'i teachings and values has occurred and that the National Assembly is the perpetrator of such violations.

So much of what happened over the years took place in heated discussions off the record. For example the meeting between the NSA and Payam Afsharian, Anthony Lee, Richard Hollinger and myself in Wilmette in May 1987 and the hostile interrogation of the editors of "Dialogue" by three representatives of the NSA in a hotel room in Los Angeles the following year. However, the above attempts on our part to faithfully obey and to work out a true reconciliation with our detractors are on record.

Furthermore, there is one crucial element of the controversy that can be used by any objective person or body as evidence of duplicity and corruption. It is my belief that the National Assembly lied to the 1988 National Convention delegates and observers about our activities, particularly that as editor of the magazine I "widely distributed"

"A Modest Proposal" to "dozens and dozens" of delegates, that the article was intended as a "dissident manifesto," a petition aimed at undermining the authority of the National Assembly, and that "A Modest Proposal" was an attempt at electioneering.

I claim that I did not circulate the article to any delegates and that the only delegates who received copies from me prior to the convention were Anthony Lee, a "Dialogue" editorial board member, and Sheila Banani, an advisor to the magazine. I ask that the House of Justice poll the delegates from the 1988 convention to see if I am lying on this matter or whether the NSA is lying. I stand by my belief that this is one of the key proofs that we can turn to to demonstrate truth from falsehood in this case.

The House of Justice further states to me in their June 1989 that we are somehow violating a Baha'i principle and canvassing support within the community to bring pressure to bear on Baha'i institutions. "A Modest
Proposal" is thus seen as a dissident manifesto because I offered seven reviewers the opportunity to become co-signers of the article and that this somehow "changes the circulation from an attempt 'to elicit critical feedback for improving it' into an effort to raise a petition" (UHJ letter to Scholl, 21 June 1989). First, I know of no Baha'i law forbidding circulation of petitions within the Baha'i community to communicate the will of believers to their institutions. In fact, Baha'i history records many instances when such petitions (stirrings at the grassroots) were received with careful consideration by the Central Figures or institutions.
Baha'i

But the fact is that in this case "A Modest Proposal" was from the beginning envisioned as a "Dialogue" article and not as a petition to the NSA. Why would we only ask seven more people to sign it? Previously, I submitted to Wilmette and Haifa the letter I sent to our outside reviewers. There is no indication in that letter that this article was envisioned by its original authors as a petition and never, God forbid, as a dissident manifesto. I urge the House of Justice to contact any of the outside reviewers, many who are employees of the NSA or serving within the appointed branch of the administration, and ask them if I or any other "Dialogue" staff member ever spoke of this effort with the language or even subtle intentions that the NSA and House of Justice accuse us of having.

If the NSA had honest concerns about the article, all they needed to do was tell us about them in a direct and honest manner. If they did not like it that we had co-signers, we would have gladly removed the offensive list of names or even run the article under one name, no name, or as being from "The Editors." Or they could have simply banned the article for "security reasons" and the whole matter would have turned into one more annoyance to the "Dialogue" staff, and another example of the administrative attempts to suppress any open discussion of difficult issues facing the Baha'i community. However, since the dissident manifesto/petition angle seems to be a late development in the NSA's list of ever-changing accusations (it appears to have emerged after the "negative electioneering" charge was abandoned due to utter lack of credibility), the entire argument takes on the quality of after-the-fact scrambling for a sufficiently vague but ominous sounding accusation; one that has no merit but may eventually be used to expel us from the faith.

In the 21 June letter to me, the House of Justice attempts to make the case that the work of Kalimat Press and "Dialogue" magazine is implicitly an attempt to undermine the Baha'i administrative order by working outside of the boundaries of the Baha'i administration.

I do not see how the House of Justice and the NSA can insinuate that we were attempting to work outside of normal Baha'i channels any more than George Ronald or One World Publications or any other of the growing number of independent Baha'i publication companies. The Baha'i institutions formulated the rules for independent Baha'i publishers. Kalimat Press and "Dialogue" accepted these rules and abided by them. Every book published by Kalimat and every article dealing with the Baha'i faith published in "Dialogue" was approved for publication by the NSA's Review Board. The House of Justice has no grounds for declaring that we have acted contrary to the letter or spirit of the law in this regard. I am sorry but the Baha'i institutions cannot have it both ways. It is unfair to demand that we abide by review and then once we publish appropriately censored materials to claim that they are proof of seditious intent on our part. So, yes, it is surprising to me that some of the friends have surmised that we were attempting to create an alternative to the Baha'i administration through our publishing activities. But it is truly shocking that the Universal House of Justice should be among those who have interpreted our faithful efforts in such a partisan and unfair manner.

These are some of the specific events and background that we have previously noted in our appeals and which have never been addressed by the House of Justice. More recently, the House of Justice also twisted David's meaning and intent by taking out of context his reference to kangaroo courts and show trials in his Talisman posting. But in the midst of all these unsubstantiated accusations and false reports on our behavior by the Baha'i authorities and the denial of our Baha'i rights of due process, it appears to me that a show trial has taken place and the verdict has been rendered by removing David's rights even though he has not violated any Baha'i law and never disobeyed any Baha'i institution. He was asked to make a retraction of his Talisman statement or lose his rights. He retracted and still lost his rights. Where is justice in all of this?

Furthermore, it is important to note that unethical behavior and outright lies are commonly used by the Secretary General and Secretary for External Affairs of the NSA in their attempt to curtail the good work and honest efforts of Baha'is around the country. It is not merely a matter of the lone case of the Los Angeles heretics, who currently have scattered to the four corners of the globe. It has long been noted by mutual friends that the Secretary for External Affairs is particularly vindictive in his attacks on "the LA group." National center staff and national committee members have been warned against associating with us because we are clearly "enemies of the faith" and most likely Covenant-breakers. These statements were made with the implied threat that Baha'is may lose their jobs due to association with trouble makers. Other friends have noted that Prof. Kazemzadeh's view of us is irrational and unshakable. In his mind we are beyond rehabilitation. This type of backbiting and gossip is carried out constantly by prominent Baha'is in positions of authority. I have even heard that the Secretary General has intimated to National Center staff that members of the DIALOGUE staff are closet homosexuals.

We have heard over and over again for the last 15 years these kinds of personal attacks being made against us by members of our NSA.

I have heard from senior staff members at the National Center in Wilmette that the method used by the Secretary General in particular is to skillfully target his victims (people who have questioned his behavior and personal agendas) and then begin to drop suggestions of grave concern about the targeted victim to other NSA members and senior staff. He then manufactures a crime and when he announces that there is an evil Baha'i in our midst, the groundwork has been laid for discrediting and discarding any Baha'i who interferes with his quest cult of personality.

Recently the NSA removed the administrative rights of Mouhebet Sobhani over questions that emerged concerning the World Congress. In The American Baha'i it was stated that Mr. Sobhani and another Persian Baha'i living in the United States had been spreading "outrageous, scandalous, and erroneous accusations about how the National Assembly administered" travel arrangements for the World Congress.

In brief, Mr. Sobhani was accused by the NSA of accusing the Secretary General of the National Assembly of "enriching himself as a result of stealing millions of dollars from the World Congress." This charge against Mr. Sobhani was communicated to the House of Justice by the Secretary General and became the basis for Mr. Sobhani's removal of rights. The only problem is Mr. Sobhani claims that he did not make this charge against the Secretary General. I have read the correspondence between Mr. Sobhani and the NSA on this matter and it becomes clear that Mr. Sobhani raised some serious questions about the handling the World Congress by the NSA, but he never made these "outrageous" accusations. The charge appears to have been created by the Secretary General as a way of discrediting Mr. Sobhani and passed on to the House of Justice as fact, similar to the manufacturing of the charge that I spread "A Modest Proposal" to national convention delegates as way of discrediting the NSA and electioneering for office.

Other examples of corruption at the National Center abound. National Teaching Committees have been chastised and disbanded for preparing accurate national convention reports that reflected poorly on the NSA. National center staff and Baha'is around the country have been asked to become informants on persons felt to be suspect. Many Baha'is with whom I have spoken feel the Secretary-General consistently uses his authority to carry out his personal agenda, frequently leading him to abuse the rights of individual Baha'is. There are numerous examples of senior staff at the Baha'i National Center being fired for raising concerns and objections to actions of the Secretary-General which they felt were in contradiction to Baha'i principles. The firing of Anna Lee Strasburg, I believe, was a particularly outrageous example of how the Secretary-General manipulates a situation to discredit honest servants of the Baha'i administrative order. The perception of those at the Baha'i National Center who were very close to the situation is that the Secretary-General's motivation for terminating Ms. Strasburg was his total intolerance for any expression of views contrary to his own, or for the expression of concerns about his actions which he interpreted as questioning his authority, even when those views and concerns were offered in forums expressly convened for the purpose of consultation at the national center. Mr. Henderson construes any divergence from his positions or actions as acts of disloyalty to him

personally, while portraying them as acts of disloyalty to the National Assembly.

Actions such as the firing of Ms. Strasburg has led to a serious decline of morale among National Center staff, and long-time employees have left the National Center rather than work in such a poisoned atmosphere. Other long-time senior staff who have voiced concerns about the Secretary
General's behavior have become persona non grata and have been ostracized and marginalized and are fearful of retribution from the Secretary General.
Many employees feel that the climate at the administrative offices is spiritually sick.

Above I noted that we felt that we could not always know whether the actions of the NSA that were being directed to us by the NSA as a body or by Mr. Henderson acting on his own or in consultation with his step-father, Firuz Kazemzadeh. This is not just a wild paranoid perception of those of us who have been maligned by leaders within the Baha'i administration.
Examples of Henderson's renegade acts are fairly well known, especially by those who work at the National Center. For example, for sometime the Secretary General placed the contributions being sent in from around the country for the Arc projects into an account rather than transferring them expeditiously to the House of Justice. He then funneled the interest from this account to the National Spiritual Assembly. He did this action without the approval or knowledge of the NSA. Only through the courageous reporting of this fact by a few staff members to the NSA treasurer was the NSA made aware of the situation. When this was made known, the NSA repaid the House of Justice the interest and the practice was stopped. I believe it was shortly after this that NSA member Juana Conrad was sent to work at the National Center offices. I was told by high ranking Baha'is and NSA staff that this was done to "keep an eye on Bob."

In these and many other cases, we see a pattern in which the Secretary
General has acted in ways that are disturbing. In the personal cases noted above we see how he has advanced false accusations against individual Baha'is who have threatened or questioned his actions, then refuses to allow the accused to know what evidence has been brought against them so that they may develop their appeal, and he then is in a position to serve as lead prosecutor and judge in their show trial. This tactic is in direct violation of Baha'i administrative procedures and policies. For example, the NSA of the US has stated that:

- 1. A Baha'i accused of wrongdoing has a right to know that he is accused of, and
  - 2. He has a right to know what evidence has been presented against him.
- (letter to an individual believer from the US NSA 8 January 1985)

This policy is being violated in our case and others. What I am formally requesting with this letter is that the House of Justice and the NSA abide by established Baha'i laws, policies, and procedures in handling the case of David Langness and the editors of "Dialogue". I am requesting that the case against the "Dialogue" editors be reopened and that we be provided with all relevant documents including the following:

- 1. All communications between the NSA and the World Center concerning our actions.
- 2. A tape or transcript of Firuz Kazemzadeh's 1988 National Convention denunciation of the "Dialogue" staff.
- 3. All reports from Counselors Schechter and Birkland to the NSA and House of Justice concerning our actions and any relevant communications from the World Center to the Counselors pertaining to our case.

4. A tape or transcript of Firuz Kazemzadeh and Stephen Birkland's 1996

National Convention denunciations of David Langness.

5. Any and all evidence that exists in our files at the National Center and the World Center including any other letters of complaints that have been received about us that have led to a prejudicial attitude toward us on the part of the Baha'i institutions.

The charges made against us have been made public by the NSA via their misleading convention reports and postings on Talisman. I feel that justice calls for the reopening the case as the conflict has never been resolved and is the source of disunity within the community. If the Baha'i institutions refuse to release all relevant documentary evidence, then, again, I think it will be clear that the best beloved of all things in the sight of Baha'u'llah is not a goal for the institutions of his faith.

I would also suggest that the House of Justice establish an independent Commission of Inquiry to investigate the corruption that exists within the National Spiritual Assembly. It is my belief that I have only exposed the tip of the iceberg and that there are many more such cases. I have heard many stories of gay and lesbian Baha'is losing their rights under suspicious circumstances where Baha'i administrative policies were ignored and outrageous lies and distortions have been asserted as facts and become the basis for sanctions. It is also widely known that good friends of NSA members have been hired to serve the community and betrayed the trust of the friends. Such betrayals have included theft of Baha'i properties and sexual misconduct at Baha'i schools. Such misconduct has been treated with the utmost leniency and the true nature of such violations of trust have been hidden from the community.

And I have heard too many accounts of dedicated Baha'is from all over the country who have had a shadow cast upon their character and activities by NSA members and members of the appointed institutions. In the wake of Juan Cole's resignation of Baha'i membership, I have heard the sad story of how Michael Sours, who has authored several books dealing with the Baha'i Faith and Christianity, was publicly chastised at the Louhelen School by the Secretary for External Affairs, who openly questioned Michael's firmness in the Covenant. I have never met or communicated with Mr. Sours, but I have been impressed by his work and dedication to presenting the Baha'i Faith to the Christian West. I was saddened to learn that Mr. Sours has followed other Baha'i intellectuals into voluntary exile from Baha'i activity. It has been reported to me that Mr. Sours is now totally cut off from the Baha'i community and is pursuing his art and writing projects on non-Baha'i themes so as not to have to bother with the types of intransigence and intimidation that brought Juan to make his break with the faith. I know of dozens of other such stories and have been personally informed by many well-known Baha'i authors, intellectuals, and scholars that they will not write on Baha'i topics as they do not wish to go through such trials.

I suggest that the Commission of Inquiry be composed of independent Baha'is (i.e. persons without affiliation with the US NSA or US Counselors) who will be regarded by all parties as unbiased and fair. As the precipitating issues revolve around Baha'i scholarship and publishing, at least some Commission appointees should be qualified academics. Persons such as Amin Banani, Heshmet Moayyad, and Todd Lawson come to mind. It would also be well for some appointees to have national administrative experience and perhaps members of the NSA of the United Kingdom and Canada, who have extensive experience with scholarship issues, could serve on the Commission. Through The American Baha'i, believers could be invited to share any experiences or concerns with the Commission. I feel that something along these lines will be required if there is to be a true healing of the American Baha'i community. As I have noted, it has been the Baha'i institutions that have publicly attacked loyal Baha'is through the bully pulpit of the National Convention, removal of rights announcements in the American Baha'i, through whispering campaigns, and through their postings on Talisman. I believe that a public process of accounting must take place.

It is now popular for Baha'is and Baha'i institutions to claim that Baha'i scholars and intellectuals are attempting to force the Baha'i Faith to conform to western democratic values and procedures. First, I want to make it absolutely clear that in all of our appeals we drew solely on the sacred texts and established policies of the Baha'i administrative order. We did not appeal on the grounds of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights or the US Constitution and Bill of Rights. Our appeals have always been grounded in Baha'i law, values and principles. As I noted above, our appeals were based on the Constitution of the Universal House of Justice and not the U.S. Constitution.

Indeed, I think almost the exact opposite case must be made in that it appears to me that it is the Baha'i institutions who have adopted old world political tactics in dealing with Baha'i scholars, intellectuals, and writers. Scholars such as Juan Cole have attempted to work within the framework of the Baha'i system and do their research in a way that is consistent with the principles of the faith and the principles of intellectual honesty and discipline established within academic discourse.

Karl Mannheim, the founder of the sociology of knowledge, makes the following distinction between political discourse vis-a-vis academic discourse:

"Political discussion possesses a character fundamentally different from academic discussion. It seeks not only to be in the right but also to demolish the basis of the opponent's social and intellectual existence. . . . Political conflict, since it is from the very beginning a rationalized form of the struggle for social predominance, attacks the social status of the opponent, his public prestige, and his self-confidence" (Ideology and Utopia, p. 38).

This political approach of attacking the character and public prestige of perceived enemies of the faith is clearly the method being used by Baha'i institutions in their attacks against scholars and intellectuals. It is a sad irony that in such attacks they accuse their targets of being enmeshed in partisan political practices found in "Western liberal democratic values and traditions."

Over the years the Baha'i institutions have painted a false portrait of who my friends and I are. Many Baha'is who do not know us or who are unfamiliar with our work will take such vague but dire warnings at face value and conclude that we are misguided at best and enemies of the faith at worse. However, many hundreds of deepened and dedicated Baha'is have a very different perception of us than do the Baha'i authorities. Following the demise of "Dialogue" I received hundreds of phone calls and letters in support of our work. They came from all over the world and from Baha'is at the highest levels of service and responsibility within the faith.

The chairman of a European National Assembly wrote to me saying:

"Of course I have heard various things about the situation with "Dialogue" and have read the letter from the House of Justice to the American Baha'is to which you refer . . . I do hope that all misunderstandings are now cleared up, as the magazine does provide an interesting medium for discussion and comment. Interestingly, our own NSA promotes this magazine along with all other magazines-we do not find it at all threatening or too controversial-many of the points raised are heard in everyday consultation
here, even at national convention . . ."

A European Baha'i scholar and widely published author wrote:

"Although the material you sent me shocked and saddened me, it described a situation not altogether foreign to my own experience here, when I incorporated some of the details and much of the spirit which animated A MODEST PROPOSAL in several articles that appeared in the [national newsletter] . . . There was an enthusiastic response from lots of ordinary Bahais, but, as I learned soon afterwards, a negative reaction from the powers-that-were. . . .
"The point is that people in the Bahai community are very conservative in matters religious and social, and so long as this attitude prevails, there won't even be the sort of Liberal-traditionalist tensions that exist in say, the Anglican communion, because the Liberal trend in the Bahai
community is so weak. How, nearly seventy years since Abdul-Baha's death, has this come to pass? We might well ask ourselves this question, but the fact remains that at this point in time the Bahai faith is being expressed

in a very narrow and fundamentalist form throughout its institutions, worldwide. What you say about the negative situation which would exist if DIALOGUE and Kalimat folded seems to me absolutely correct. "That's the reality. I know through my work [at the national institute] people who have ended up bitter and scarred through their struggle in the contemporary political environment in the Bahai community. "As you pointed out in your letter to the House of Justice, many good and caring people simply no longer see the relevance of the Bahai community to contemporary developments, and have taken their creativity and commitment elsewhere. The rump that remain - well what can one say of them? They'll still be preaching their same old tired message when the world is unified and virtually running the sort of order Baha'u'llah envisaged. A genuine Bahai who is true to the cause of the founder of his faith should be ardently seeking the stones which Baha'u'llah said he would raise if the Bahais failed.... "As for me, I take no active part in the community other than to give the occasional session to the youth here - sessions usually swamped by 10 students. I feel at a loss as to how to live my life spiritually and ideologically these days, but I know I cannot go back into the ranks of Bahais and pretend, pretend..."

Another prominent European Baha'i administrator and widely published author and translator of the sacred texts wrote:

"I read the issues [of dialogue] with great interest. I was impressed by their high standard. The articles deal with questions that are relevant and challenging. DIALOGUE is really an open forum for different, even controversial, views. It is a new type of journal, we have never had before. I think we need such a journal which is in touch with society and which provokes an interchange of thought. . . .

"What I found really important and necessary was the discussion on politics and all questions which derive from it. There is nothing more appropriate to write than to quote from a letter you published (issue 1, p. 37):

'Whether or not all views are accepted is irrelevant-the stimulation of thought will give us all new intellectual vigor to meet the challenges put to us by the Universal House of Justice in 1983.'

"The journal is provocative and treats the issues more interestingly than the Baha'i magazines published by the institutions. . . .

"I do hope that you will continue as, for a new dimension of understanding, such an open forum for the exchange of thoughts is indispensable."

The general manager of one of the national Baha'i Publishing Trusts wrote:

"I was saddened to learn of your trials and difficulties with DIALOGUE. I am sure you anticipated some of them, change is a painful thing and I believe DIALOGUE is a force for positive change in the Baha'i Community. I will pray for DIALOGUE and hope that from your efforts the "spark of truth" will emerge. . . ."

A Baha'i publisher from the South Pacific wrote:

"I want you to know that other people, even people on this side of the world, know something of what has gone on with you, and sympathise with your struggle. Whatever happens, at least it's down on record and the matter is kept alive in somebody's mind.

"I think you have been treated very badly. Issues aside, you've been treated badly as human beings. If it was me I would be devastated. . . ."

Clearly there are differences of opinion about our character and the sincerity and value of our Baha'i activities.

Baha'u'llah warned us that it is the leaders of religion in every age who corrupt the pure teachings of the Manifestation of God. Baha'is assume that corruption within the Baha'i administrative order is not possible. However, I think it is naive to think that there can ever be perfection in this world. Ever. Abdul-Baha states this quite clearly. A major theme of The Kitab-i Iqan is the dangers posed "by the leaders of religion in every age" and Juan and others have posted many of Abdul-Baha's concerns over tyranny and corruption by those in authority. The Master also notes that because of the slippery ego, corruption can enter the Baha'i system, even if it is divine in its origin. There is a very strong statement from Abdul-Baha on how those in authority within the Baha'i community are vulnerable to the disease of corruption by power. Speaking in Haifa in 1915, Abdul-Baha observed that:

"Holding to the letter of the law is many times an indication of a desire for leadership. One who assumes to be the enforcer of the law shows an intellectual understanding of the Cause, but that spiritual guidance in them is not yet established.

"The alphabet of things is for children, that they may in time use their reasoning powers. "Following the spirit" is a guidance by and through the heart, the prompter of the spirit. The Pharisees were extremely orthodox, holding strictly to the law. They were the cause of the condemnation and ultimate crucifixion of Jesus. . . .

"The ones in real authority are known by their humility and self-sacrifice and show no attitude of superiority over the friends.

"Some time ago a tablet was written stating that none are appointed to any authority to do anything but to serve the Cause as true servants of the friends--and for this no tablet is necessary; such service when true and unselfish requires no announcement, no following, nor written document.

"Let the servant be known by his deeds, by his life!

"To be approved by God alone should be one's aim. . . .

"Envy closes the door of Bounty, and jealousy prevents one from ever attaining to the Kingdom of Abha. No! Before God! No one can deprive another of his rightful station, that can only be lost by one's unwillingness or failure to do the will of God, or by seeking to use the Cause of God for one's own gratification or ambition.

"No one save a severed soul or a sincere heart finds response from God. By assisting in the success of another servant in the Cause does one in reality lay the foundation for one's own success and aspirations.

"Ambitions are an abomination before the Lord!

"How regrettable! Some even use the affairs of the Cause and its activities as a means of revenge on account of some personal spite, or fancied injury, interfering with the work of another, or seeking its failure. Such only destroy their own success, did they know the truth."

Star of the West, vol. 6, no. 6 (June 24, 1915)

Even sterner is the Master when he warns "What deviation can be more complete than falsely accusing the loved ones of God!"

Another disturbing aspect of these recent events is how the Baha'i institutions have complained about how "the LA group" has undermined the authority of the NSA by its disrespectful attitude and hostile publishing activities. Yet at the same time it is very clear that an even more blistering campaign of gossip is being carried out by the House of Justice and some of the Counselors.

For example, in several private conversations with different Baha'is around the country, Counselor Birkland has acknowledged that the US NSA has a problem with corruption. He has stated that Baha'is should not be concerned, that everything is under control and that there will be "an elegant solution." The implication being that the House of Justice will find a way to get some of the most offensive members off the NSA via retirement or re appointment.

As for the "elegant solution" coming down from Haifa, many recent pilgrims and visitors to the Baha'i World Centre have returned home with interesting stories to tell. Several have spoken of the very blunt criticisms of the US NSA by individual House of Justice members and ITC members. The story line goes something like this: "Yes, the House of Justice is aware of the problems and corruption surrounding the American NSA. Haven't the Baha'is read the May 19th letter? Why don't the delegates do something about this? What more can we say? Wasn't this statement clear enough? We are waiting for the Baha'is to reform the system via election."

From the pilgrims' tales I have heard, it seems clear that the House of Justice too believes there is a problem and is now attempting to control the situation by supporting their May 19th communiqué with a stream of backbiting about the NSA in hopes that the word will spread. This seems contrary to the high ideals espoused by the House and is a troubling development within the Baha'i community. Our position has always been that it is time for the establishment of open discourse within the faith via uncensored publications and the development of scholarship and journalism. This path seems much more honest and healthy than the culture of deceit that dominates the Baha'i community in the late twentieth century.

This is culture of deceit has existed for some time now in the Baha'i faith. It is a fact of life that those of us involved with Kalimat Press and "Dialogue" were very much aware of. It has always been our position that in such a climate of gossip and backbiting our only chance for protection is to be open and honest about our beliefs and actions. We have never shied away from directly stating our views in private correspondence with the Baha'i institutions and through our published works. We have nothing to hide or be ashamed of. I am proud of what we accomplished with "Dialogue" magazine and I am proud of the way we handled ourselves in the face of such hostility. In the course of 18 months we became the largest paid subscription publication in the Baha'i world, surpassing World Order, which had a 50 year head start on us.

Finally, I feel it only fair to state what my sense of the current situation calls for. The Baha'i institutions have invited the world to study the Baha'i faith as a model of unity in a world of crisis. Talisman is a public forum with several non-Baha'is on board. These events have already gone beyond the Baha'i community through the participation of these interested non-Baha'is in the Talisman discussions. One non-Baha'i on Talisman has already indicated that he plans to develop a story on these events for a prominent national magazine. I have also discussed this situation with my Catholic, Jewish, and Buddhist colleagues, who are interested to hear about these developments which are so contrary to the public image of the Baha'i faith as a religion of tolerance, peace, compassion, and unity. I think that it is for the good that this controversy is spilling outside of the Baha'i community. The Baha'i community has asked the world to regard it as a major player on the world stage and the Baha'is have begun to be more visible in world affairs. It is important that non-Baha'is see the entire picture so that they can judge between Baha'i public relations and the true state of Baha'i community relations. Baha'is are doing good works in the world. No one can doubt this. But it is also clear that there is a darker side to the Baha'i faith, a hidden Baha'i faith, that appears in these cases dealing with intellectual honesty, academic integrity, and an open community. The dark side of the Baha'i faith is the role of censorship and harassment of Baha'i authors, the punishment of any Baha'i who publicly offers critical analysis of Baha'i institutions, the threat of shunning and excommunication to force conformity, the use of informants, and sanctioning of faithful Baha'is who are seen as "dissidents" by a frustrated and over-sensitive American administration that has presided over thirty years of stagnation and no growth.

The crisis of the present hour is a test that we must face with faith and courage. I believe that these troubling patterns within the Baha'i community primarily reflect that we are passing from one phase of development to a new one. The old ways no longer work and adjustments need to be made. These adjustments do not mean we should lose heart or faith in the fundamental verities of Baha'u'llah's new world order, but we must work to find new ways that meet the challenges of the crisis. Sadly, we have lost one of the most learned champions for a Baha'i renewal that is firmly rooted in the writings of Baha'u'llah and 'Abdul-Baha. Perhaps if justice is truly served, a loyal servant of the Blessed Perfection such as Juan Cole will be able to return to the community. This is my hope and prayer. Whatever happens I remain confident that Juan, David, and others who have been unjustly accused and slandered over the years will eventually be vindicated as honest and faithful Baha'is.

The NSA and House of Justice in their statements concerning those of us who have been working for constructive change within the Baha'i community appear to have raised unity and obedience above all other Baha'i values and principles-indeed, it appears that many fundamental Baha'i principles are being sacrificed in the name of unity and obedience. Yet it is clear that for Baha'u'llah and 'Abdul-Baha it is not a constricted and forced unity through conformity that is the Baha'i ideal. Nor would Baha'u'llah and 'Abdul-Baha, who were prisoners of conscience, desire to see the elimination from the Baha'i community of personal conscience, freedom of expression, the independent investigation of truth, and the harmony of religion and science. These are not western liberal democratic values and traditions, these are Baha'i values and traditions that cannot be sacrificed on the altar of personal ambitions of Baha'i administrators or dictatorial behavior of Baha'i institutions.

'Abdul-Baha notes that truthfulness is the foundation of all virtues and Baha'u'llah has made it clear that "the purpose of justice is the appearance of unity." In other words, there cannot be true unity if truthfulness is abandoned and justice is not adhered to in the conduct of our affairs. This is what I am seeking by writing this letter: that truthfulness and justice be the guiding lights in dealing with these difficult issues so that the light of unity, a unity that embraces diversity and preserves human honor, will make it possible for a new beginning.

I know that the four Baha'is who are currently under investigation for undermining the Covenant have acted out of love and loyalty to the Covenant of Baha'u'llah in all their activities. It will be tragic if the Universal House of Justice supports or takes further actions against them. I urge the members of the House of Justice to prayerfully look into their hearts to see if there might be a more just and honorable way to deal with these disputes.

With love,
Steven Scholl
White Cloud Press
PO Box 3400
Ashland, OR 97520
Phone/fax 541-488-6415
e-mail: sscholl@jeffnet.org

-----
Steven Scholl, Publisher
White Cloud Press, PO Box 3400, Ashland, OR 97520
phone/fax 541-488-6415
e-mail: sscholl@jeffnet.org
<https://www.jeffnet.org/whitecloud>

---

rom - Mon Apr 07 07:53:02 1997
>From sscholl@jeffnet.org Mon Mar 31 08:45:01 1997 Received: from [204.203.88.9] (ip23.jeffnet.org [204.203.88.23]) by jeffnet.org (8.8.0/8.8.0) with SMTP id JAA30874 for <FG@hotmail.com>; Mon, 31 Mar 1997
09:04:27 -0800
Message-Id: <v01510101af646d4e48da@[204.203.88.9]>
Mime-Version: 1.0
Content-Type: text/plain; charset="us-ascii"
Date: Sun, 30 Mar 1997 20:53:57 +0100
To: FG@hotmail.com
From: sscholl@jeffnet.org (White Cloud Press)
Subject: Your Letter to UHJ
X-Mozilla-Status: 0004
Content-Length: 1967

Dear Frederick,

A friend on Irfan sent me your letter to the UHJ. I just want to let you know that I think it is right on the money and I applaud you for writing such a clear statement on current Baha'i practices. As you may know, I was one of the founders of Talisman 1 and the editor of Dialogue, and am now an ex-Baha'i. Like Robert Hayden, I came to ask myself why I was still a Baha'i and came to the conclusion that the religion had strayed so far from the open and life affirming teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha that I could no longer honestly say, "I am a Baha'i." And so I resigned my membership last October. Although at times I find this sad, I also must admit that I feel much happier and healthier as a non-Baha'i. I do not regret my years of service to the Baha'i community, and I hope you will have similar feelings. Sure, there is some anger, because I feel strongly that Baha'i could have been a real source of good for the world rather than becoming a narrow and arrogant minor religion with fantasies of world domination. But in the end I came to see that there really was no hope

for openness within the Baha'i system and that I did not want to spend my life
as an angry Baha'i fighting a hopeless fight. Instead I wanted to find a way to work for Baha'i ideals outside of the fanaticism and rigidity of
the Baha'i administrative order and leave the Baha'is to spin their fantasies of religious triumphalism and mass conversions.

I hope you find a way to reach peace with this part of your life. I know that it is a hard road and I wish you all the best on the path you have bravely taken.

Warmest regards,
Steve

PS: In your letter mention is made of a letter from Hoda Mahmoudi.
Could you forward a copy of this to me for my files? Thanks

-----

Steven Scholl
White Cloud Press
PO Box 3400
Ashland, OR 97520
Phone/fax 541-488-6415
<https://www.jeffnet.org/whitecloud/>

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <jricole@my-dejanews.com>
Subject: Re: Bahai Dialogue Magazine
Date: Thursday, May 13, 1999 6:50 PM

Actually, the horse's mouth in this instance is Steve Scholl, whose account of the suppression (that is what it was) of Dialogue magazine by Kazemzadeh and Henderson can be found at:

<https://www.bcca.org/services/srb/archive/970101-970228/0992.html>

I append it below.

This issue wasn't only that "A Modest Proposal" was rejected for publication by the NSA's "review" process. It was that it was made the basis for a set of false charges against the editors of planning to engage in "negative campaigning." Since they submitted the piece for Review, this seems ridiculous. Kazemzadeh stood up at the National Convention in 1988 and delivered one of his typical, long-winded paranoid attacks on the editors. As Scholl notes, anyone who knows anything about Baha'i publishing would know that after that it was very difficult to imagine publishing the magazine any longer. Baha'i publishing requires the NSA's cooperation, and the NSA is in a powerful position to badmouth a publication and so discourage Baha'is from reading it.

The "Modest Proposal" was a set of polite suggestions for improving community functioning. Its title was ironic, drawn from Swift's essay in which he suggested eating Irish babies as the solution to a number of problems. The babes of *Dialogue* had no idea they were dealing with Aristocratic Lords who would eat *them*.

cheers

Juan Cole

"The Modest Proposal"

Re: Dialogue thread on SRB

White Cloud Press (sscholl@jeffnet.org)
10 Feb 1997 21:06:04 -0700

Dear Friends,

I have been informed of some of the posts on this list re: Dialogue magazine and the article "A Modest Proposal." It seems to me that several key issues remain unclear and, in some instances, the actions taken by the Dialogue editorial board have been misrepresented. Let me attempt to clarify.

1. The article "A Modest Proposal" was a collective effort by a fairly wide group of Baha'is in the Los Angeles area, mostly members of the Dialogue staff but a number of others joined in the consultation process that helped develop the article. The article's primary author was David Langness, who developed an initial draft, presented it to the Dialogue staff and interested friends. This led to a second draft that became the working paper that was submitted to the NSA for review under the full title: "A Modest Proposal: Nine Recommendations for the Revitalization of the American Baha'i Community." We sent this working draft to the NSA even though we realized it was not in final form.

2. At the same time I sent the draft to the NSA for their review, I sent it to seven outside readers to solicit their feedback. To my knowledge none of these individuals were national convention delegates. However, it might be of interest to know who they were. They included Aux. Board members, the head of a permanent Baha'i school, senior NSA staff, two Baha'i scholars, a couple of national committee members. In short, I circulated it to prominent Baha'is who were either on the NSA payroll or close to the NSA--not a bright move if we were planning to take over the NSA! In doing so we sought their feedback to improve the article, to help us make it better and more acceptable to the Baha'i administration and the community at large. Most of the outside reviewers responded positively to the project and offered criticisms to the draft for improving it. None of these prominent and deepened Baha'is contacted me saying they felt we were engaged in any kind of negative criticism or improper action.

3. Once the NSA read the article they reacted in a rather extreme manner. In an attempt to better understand their concerns and to work with them in a spirit of cooperation, we met with two NSA members to go over the article line by line. These NSA members were very open and frank and expressed their concerns and explained how certain wording or specific proposals would be interpreted by the NSA as confrontational, or, in some instances, our initial proposals were, in fact, matters that should be addressed to the Universal House of Justice. We agreed to adopt every one of the suggestions of the NSA members, and Dialogue editor Sidney Morrison was asked to prepare a final draft for the NSA. At this meeting, it was emphasized by the NSA members that they understood the positive spirit and motivations of the Dialogue staff in preparing the article, that the proposals, as they were to be modified based on this consultation, were important and should be circulated within the community. It was even suggested by the NSA members that it is these kinds of ideas that should be circulated to the national convention delegates.

4. Based on this positive meeting, I contacted the Office of the Secretary in Wilmette and suggested that if the revised article met with the approval of the NSA, we would be happy to provide national convention delegates with a copy of the article. I did not expect this to be approved, but in light of the positive response we received from two NSA members, I thought it was a long shot worth asking about.

5. Shortly thereafter I was accused by the NSA of circulating the article to dozens and dozens of delegates in an attempt to engage in "negative electioneering" and to attack the NSA. In fact, to the best of my knowledge only two delegates saw the draft of "A Modest Proposal," and these two were Los Angeles area members of the Dialogue editorial and advisory boards. On hearing this charge, I submitted to the NSA the extent of the circulation of the draft and the cover letter I sent to the outside readers. In my letter to outside readers there was no indication of this being a "dissident manifesto" or any kind of subtle attempt to undermine the authority, or malign the integrity, of the NSA.

6. These documented *facts* always seems to get lost in the accounts by those who criticize our actions and assume to know our motivations. A proper understanding of the sequence of events is crucial to reaching an accurate assessment of the affair and of the motives of the disputants. It deals with the old Watergate question: what did they know and when did they know it? The NSA was informed very early on that we did not circulate the article to delegates. A full month before they denounced the Dialogue staff at national convention and circulated their accusations of negative electioneering and attempting to sway the delegates, they had all the information from us about who the article had been sent to along with my cover letter to the outside readers. I have requested the NSA or UHJ to provide any evidence of this accusation, to bring forth even one delegate who I sent the article to let alone the "dozens and dozens" of delegates I supposedly contacted according to the NSA. They have yet to respond with any contrary evidence to support their charges.

7. Consequently, I disagree with Susan Maneck when she says things like:>Apparently >action was initiated against these Baha'is under the mistaken premise >that they had distributed the article to delegates prior to the >Convention.

While others have their opinions, it is my feeling that the National Spiritual Assembly had to be aware that we were innocent of these charges and I feel that they somehow misled the Universal House of Justice, the convention delegates, and the general community due to what I personally perceive as false accusations.

8. In one post on this list it was noted that Dialogue was never commanded by the Baha'i institutions to cease and desist publication. This is true, but reveals a rather unsophisticated understanding of how Baha'i publishing operates. It seems to me that modus operandi of the NSA re: Dialogue was to make it clear to the American Baha'i community that we were a renegade "dissident" group attempting to subvert the administrative order via our campaign of negative criticisms. This was done by sending out the letter to all Aux. Board members and assistants disparaging our work followed by an open denunciation of the editors by the NSA to the national convention delegates. Furthermore, members of national committees, national center staff, and prominent Baha'is were warned not to have any association with the editors or to write for the magazine. It is my understanding from national center staff that at least some of the Dialogue editors were designated "internal enemies of the faith" and that a blacklist was circulated in high Baha'i circles. In a closed system such as the Baha'i faith, which is a very small community where most information is spread via gossip and backchannel communications, this is the preferred method for marginalizing unwelcome views and those who hold them. There was no need to officially ban the magazine when the magazine could be shut down by more delicate and PR-friendly forms of control. This campaign was, indeed, effective, and we realized that in such a hostile environment it was impossible to carry on with our work. The closing of the magazine was devastating to the staff.

9. I would like to remind the members of this list that Dialogue followed all the established policies and guidelines for Baha'i publishing. Every article dealing with the Baha'i faith was first approved by the NSA's review committee. Prof. Maneck is correct that our work was carefully monitored and scrutinized. I find it unfair for Baha'i institutions to demand that we submit to censorship and then condemn our publishing program as an attack on the integrity of Baha'i institutions for publishing materials that the official review agency approved. You just cannot have it both ways. I am grateful to Prof. Maneck for emphasizing that "A Modest Proposal" was never published and that all the hub-bub was over an article that had been properly submitted for review and was still in the review stages. As I noted in an appeal letter to the Universal House of Justice, if the NSA had honest concerns about the title, the listing of the collective authors names, or any content, all they needed to do was present their concerns to us. If they found the title offensive, we would have changed it. If they did not like a listing of all those involved in the creation of the article as co-authors, we would have dropped the names and run it under "From the Editors" or whatever they suggested.

10. Finally, when I was a Baha'i, I sought in many ways to resolve these issues with the Baha'i institutions, quietly, privately, and in a spirit of openness and reconciliation. But reconciliation requires two parties to come together to seek understanding and healing. Following a meeting in Wilmette in 1987 with the NSA, I expressed my hope that we had put behind us any misgivings regarding each others' motives and that we find a way to work together for the good of the faith. I invited the NSA to suggest a publishing project for Dialogue to work on that would be of assistance to them. I invited every member of the NSA to phone me at any time with any concerns they might have about the magazine. I invited every member of the NSA to contribute an article to the magazine. I suggested that a meeting between the NSA and the Dialogue staff be held at the Bosch School as this would provide an opportunity to spend some relaxed time together in prayer, consultation and fellowship, so that we could come to know each other in a friendly fashion and seek ways to resolve issues and create a sincere love and appreciation for each other. Each and every one of these attempts at reconciliation initiated by me were met with silence. I trust that these comments are useful in helping those trying to follow this discussion.

With best wishes, Steve Scholl

-----

Steven Scholl White Cloud Press PO Box 3400 Ashland, OR 97520 Phone/fax
541-488-6415

Scholl - "A Crisis of Faith"

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Steven Scholl

When I received a letter from a Baha'i Continental Counsellor indicating that I was under threat of being declared a Covenant-breaker, the impact on me personally was less than on my family. My wife is a Baha'i as are many of her family members, . . . The very real threat of being declared a Covenant breaker meant my wife had to face the decision of joining me as a heretic or divorcing me so that she could maintain her relationships with her family and other lifelong friends. Since [my wife] had no intention of divorcing me, the choices then extended out to her family. Her sister would not refuse to socialize with us so she would automatically be declared a covenant breaker along with her husband and children. Many of my close Baha'i friends would also be faced with the decision of maintaining friendships or joining me as a heretic. The whole thing is absurd and quite medieval. But it does raise the issue which you point out so well; how anyone would want to belong to a group which is willing to act this way and be so cruel is beyond me. That is why I voluntarily left the religion. Not in order to escape punishment but because the Baha'i community had become such an unhealthy place spiritually. I was terribly saddened that my spiritual home of 25 years had turned into a prison and nightmare.

Quoted by Karen Bacquet in "Enemies Within: Conflict and Control in the Baha'i Community" [60] Scholl, Steven. (2000). April 26 post to talisman9@yahoo.com.

See Steven Scholl's related comments:
Re: Article in American Family Foundation's Cultic Studies Journal by Karen Bacquet

More by Steven Scholl and his "Crisis of faith":
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Scholl.htm>

Many Bahais and non-Bahais through the years have compared it to Scientology.

Use the Google Search engine at the bottom of the Homepage for links.

---

Other Bahais advised or forced to divorce:

Jeffrey Goldberg, member of the Orthodox Baha'i Faith

"27. My wife did not join the OBF at that time but she was also expelled and shunned because she refused to take my children and divorce me as they had insisted she must."

"Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatism" By IRA RIFKIN
February 27, 1997, Religion News Service
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CChafe.htm>

"In the Baha' i faith, excommunication includes total shunning by family members and friends."

"Baha'i rift Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith." Many A. Brachear. chicagotribune.com

"Goldberg's wife was encouraged to divorce her husband." Also reprinted here.

LaAeterna "in order to belong to the group-at-large, I would have to publicly denounce my family as heretics (or words to that effect), liars and fools. Then, I would have to shun them."

Further examples and details regarding the use of shunning and slander:

The Baha'i Technique - Slander & Shunning

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/technique.htm>

Compare Shunning > Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm>

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: "Steve Scholl" <sscholl@jeffnet.org>
Subject: Re: Article in American Family Foundation's Cultic Studies Journal by Karen Bacquet
Date: Tuesday, March 12, 2002 12:55 PM

Several people on this forum have fwd to me Susan Maneck's comments on the inner workings of my mind. Susan has a history of telling the world what I really mean and what my true motives were in relation to events surrounding my exodus from the Baha'i community. At one point she informed the world that it was my belief that the Baha'i covenant went null and void in 1921 with the passing of Abdul-Baha, which was a rather outrageous lie on her part. She also claimed that she was serving as my confidant and guide in the rocky days leading up to my resignation of membership and that she was counseling me in some way. In short, she has lied and made misleading statements about me in the past and this recent statement of hers is just another example of her lack of honesty.

She writes:

> > The real reason that Steve Scholl was so concerned is that at the > time he received this letter from a Counselor he had already planned to do > this big expose in the press (the Rankin article.) Steve was well aware that > such an attack on the Faith after having received such a warning from the > Counsellor would assuredly result in his being declared a Covenant breaker.
> If he had not been so determined to go forward with this, there > would not have been a problem.

Let me emphasize that Susan Maneck has never been privy to the real reasons for my concerns and actions. That said, I am not even clear what she is trying to say here. The statement of mine that Karen B. quotes in her excellent article was a simple look back at one aspect of my thinking about the internal Baha'i culture wars a few years after the fact. I think the statement indicates clearly that there was no big concern on my part about possibly being declared a Baha'i covenant breaker, that the problems associated with such a move against me would land more on my family and friends than on me. At that point I could have cared less what the UHJ or NSA did re: my Baha'i rights since they had already trampled on them for years and had acted duplicitously and in violation of their own stated administrative principles in handling my "case".

Furthermore, I had gone on record in my correspondence with the UHJ and Counsl Birkland that I would not hesitate to discuss their actions with "people of capacity" outside of the Baha'i community and with the media, and I had already passed on information to several religion writers for major newspapers about what was going on inside the Baha'i community. This was not something I was trying to hide from them.

I don't know what Maneck's last sentence is referring to. Couns. Birkland's threatening letter to me made it clear that if I said or did *anything* he or his handlers disapproved of then I would be declared a CBer. The list of my Baha'i crimes included theological deviations and not accepting EVERY WORD from the pen of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha as true. Birkland made it clear in his letter to me that he did not think I was a Baha'i and that he would not hesitate to recommend my removal from the community.

What I understand Maneck to be saying here is that my big sin was to talk with the media about internal Baha'i crackdowns on intellectuals and scholars, and that if I had not planned to spill the beans to the media "there would not have been a problem." If this is what she is implying, then she is dead wrong. First, if I had not resigned, I believe I would have been declared a CB because I had no intentions of changing my beliefs based on the fundamentalist rants of the members of the UHJ.

But what is telling in this line of Maneckian cult thinking is what she is really saying: The problem in her cult view of the world is the "dissident act" of shining a light on internal Baha'i affairs so that outsiders (and insiders) can learn about what really takes place in the Baha'i world. The great sin is ignoring the Baha'i taboo against speaking out against internal injustices because to do so is to tarnish the reputation of the Baha'i institutions.
Good Baha'is are expected to take their abuse in silence. If they speak out against abuse, they are regarded as internal opposition and come under investigation from the Baha'i Inquisition. They are villified and threatened, even told that their status in the afterlife is threatened if they don't change their ways. And, yes, this was a key element the little drama that played out between the Baha'i leadership and myself.
What I told the UHJ and Birkland was something like
this:

I know you are all excited about emerging from obscurity and taking a larger role on the world stage. Well, that means you are also going to be examined more closely. Your financial misdeeds, your cover ups of sexual exploitation by Baha'i leaders, your fundamentalist leanings, your sexist views, your 1950s view on homosexuality, are all going to be opened up for public scrutiny. Your days of a free ride in the media are over.

Susan can try to nip at Karen's heels and claim that Karen's article is flawed this way and that. But such partisan harping is only preaching to the fundamentalist Baha'i choir. Outsiders and many insiders will read Karen's article as a clear and honest attempt to discuss recent Baha'i events. Susan can try to attack Karen's lack of "methodology" or that Karen's work is not serious scholarship. But this is laughable when one looks at Dr. Maneck's publishing career.
She has penned a few Baha'i articles of marginal value published by internal Baha'i agencies. In short, she has one of the weakest publishing histories I have ever seen in academics and her academic profile is nearly nonexistent. Maneck has attempted (unsuccessfully) to discredit the work of Juan Cole and now Karen with her Baha'i blather.
Yet it is Juan and Karen who are publishing in refereed
academic journals, and Karen has done this as a freelance writer rather than as a trained academic.

Susan, if you think you really have something to say, write it up and submit it to a non-Baha'i publisher and see if they will accept YOUR methodology and YOUR use of sources.

Steve Scholl

Comments on "Crisis of Faith"

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Patrick Henry <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com>
Subject: Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed
Date: Friday, December 10, 1999 9:02 AM

Dear Friend,

This is an automated acknowledgement.

Your message regarding:

Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed

has been received at the Baha'i World Centre.

From ieco@quark.bwc.org Fri Dec 10 05:45:57 1999
Received: from [192.115.145.253] by patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com(3.2) with ESMTP id MHotMailBA1A4CCD000DD82197A3C07391FD0A280; Fri Dec 10 05:36:17 1999
Received: from wagner.bwc.org by quark.bwc.org with SMTP id AA04603
(5.67b-Emil1.1/IDA-1.5 for <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com>); Fri, 10 Dec 1999
15:34:32 +0200
Received: from coral.bwc.org (coral [10.1.0.21])
by wagner.bwc.org (8.8.8+Sun/8.8.8) with SMTP id PAA03395 for <>; Fri, 10 Dec 1999 15:34:31 +0200 (IST) Received: by coral.bwc.org (SMI-8.6/SMI-SVR4) id PAA07462; Fri, 10 Dec 1999 15:34:31 +0200
Date: Fri, 10 Dec 1999 15:34:31 +0200
From: Incoming Electronic Communication Operations <ieco@bwc.org>
Message-Id: <199912101334.PAA07462@coral.bwc.org>
Subject: Your Message Has Been Received...
Apparently-To: patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com

From: Patrick Henry <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com>
Subject: Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed
Date: Friday, December 10, 1999 8:33 AM

Given the uhj's oppressive tactics and violation of the human rights of Linda and John Walbridge, Stephen Scholl, other editors of the Dialogue magazine, the Bahai Encyclopedia editors who resigned in protest, David Langness, Juan Cole, Michael McKenny, Nima Hazini, former Assistant to the Auxiliary Board Paul Dodenhoff who resigned, and so on, and so on, and so on.... All the victims documented on my website.... I hesitate to put the uhj above any reprehensible act.... Including conspiracy to murder Dr. Daniel Jordan.

I have been a member of the Bahai faith since 1976. My ID Card may be found on my website. I have never been contacted by the uhj or any of its underlings to the contrary.

Anything I have ever said is a matter of the sanctity of my individual God-given conscience that both Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha claimed would never be violated in their religion.

I shall "cc" this message to the uhj so that they hear from me directly on the matter.

I would consider it an honor to be one of its official victims; indeed, the highest spiritual achievement of my Bahai life, defending Baha'u'llah's Teachings from the fanaticism that has overwhelmed and hamstrung his Revelation.

--

FG.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"
The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

David Fiorito and Jennifer Spotila <fiospots@pond.com> wrote in message news:3W_34.1724$jC1.177695@newshog.newsread.com...
> He has his ID card on his website. When asked he says he is a registered > Baha'i. So I decided to see if I could verify that he is what he claims to > be.

 >
 > It was a simple check on status to see if his claim was fact. I don't know > anything other than they could not confirm his membership. I went no > further because I really don't want to know more than that.
 >
 > Peace,
 >
 > Dave
 >
 >
 > Carol wrote in message <82p30q$hd7$1@nnrp1.deja.com>...
 > >In article <82p06t$f0o$1@nnrp1.deja.com>,
 > > dfiorito@my-deja.com wrote:
 > >> Out of curiositiy I decided to check on Fred Glaysher's status in the > >> Baha'i Community and his membership could not be confirmed.
 > >>
 > >> I was under the assumption that he is a member of the US Baha'i > >> Community.
 > >>
 > >> Fred?
 > >>
 > >> Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
 > >> Before you buy.
 > >>
 > >
 > >He's a member of an alternative Baha'i community. One of those > >"splinter groups". So why are you checking up on his status?
 > >
 > >
 > >--
 > >Best regards,
 > >
 > >Carol Ann
 > >"We have met the enemy and he is us." Pogo
 > >
 > >
 > >Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
 > >Before you buy.
 >
 >

From: Incoming Electronic Communication Operations <ieco@bwc.org>
 Subject: Your Message Has Been Received...
 Date: Friday, December 10, 1999 5:36 AM

Dear Friend,

This is an automated acknowledgement.

Your message regarding:

Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed

has been received at the Baha'i World Centre.From: TOSBoards1@aol.com[SMTP:TOSBoards1@aol.com]
 Sent: Friday, February 26, 1999 6:57 AM
 To: TOSBoards2@aol.com
 Subject: Fwd: False TOSs on AOL - Bahai Forum Leader Mark Foster

<<Message: False TOSs on AOL - Bahai Forum Lead...>>
 [This Message (REGULAR) Has Been Forwarded By The Mail Spinner]
 From: FG@aol.com[SMTP:FG@aol.com]
 Sent: Friday, February 26, 1999 7:51 AM
 To: TOSGeneral@aol.com
 Cc: TOSBoards1@aol.com; FG@hotmail.com
 Subject: TOS - personal insult - Maneck

This person is consistently insulting me on the Bahai Forums while the Forum Leader permits it, though charging me with TOSs for all kinds of innocuous statements.

FG@aol.com

Subject: Re: alt.religion.bahai & talk.religion.bahai
Date: 2/25/1999 11:22 AM Eastern Standard Time
From: <A HREF="">Smaneck</A>
Message-id: <19990225112245.13529.00000211@ng-ch1.aol.com>

Charlotte writes:

>So.... I will ask Mark to NOT add these newsgroups if you will not agree to >immediately remove those items placed there without permission and agree to >stop the practice of putting them there in the future.

Dear Charlotte,

While your annoyance to Fred doing this is well taken and he is certainly violating standard netiquette and perhaps copyright laws in forwarding other's posts, I don't think we can oppose the addition of newsgroups because of the unconscionable behavior of one of its members.

I think it is sufficient reason to refuse to add Mr. Glaysher's own website, however since he has total control of its contents. Besides, it is not like he doesn't "provide" us with that website address on a regular basis.

Hey Fred, do you have long pink ears?

warmest,

Susan Maneck

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Friday, February 26, 1999 6:58 AM
To: TOSBoards1; HANI72#aol.com; CRust60001#aol.com; AAli929596#aol.com; ccrawfeild@aol.com; Mr Mahdi; Nadle; Ruletherod; Macho786#aol.com; Member1700#aol.com; PParvin#aol.com; RayHanania@aol.com; RobertNik#aol.com; Shaksway@aol.com; Barthaman
Subject: False TOSs on AOL - Bahai Forum Leader Mark Foster

RBCF Mark wrote in message <19990225105858.11959.00000098@ng-cg1.aol.com>...

>Fred wrote:

>> Mark Foster and his cohorts >>are exploiting the lack of >>familiarity among most AOL >>personnel to their advantage >>by attempting to blackball >>me and other AOL members >>who refuse to accept their >>literal interpretations of the >>BAhai Faith.

>

>How do you know I have a literal view of the Baha'i Faith? If you read my >postings when I was on your email list (mirroring alt.religion.bahai), you know >that is not the case.

False. Changing the subject as well. The issue is your constant alleging of specious TOSs against me and others on AOL. For anyone with any knowledge or experience of the Bahai Faith, it's obvious that you're supporting the Bahai fundamentalists there and attempting to target and ultimately have AOL suspend the accounts of anyone who doesn't share your and their views. You and other intolerant Bahais know you can depend on the lack of familiarity on the part of AOL personnel with the Bahai Faith to work to your advantage.

AOL removed Vahid once it understood what was really taking place. I'm confident when AOL has finished it's consideration of Foster's false TOSs allegations they will do likewise.

FG@aol.com

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> On talk.religion.bahai,
alt.religion.bahai, and AOL: Keyword Bahai, Message Boards

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Sunday, February 28, 1999 8:51 AM
To: TOSBoards1; HANI72@aol.com; CRust60001@aol.com; AAli929596@aol.com; ccrawfeild@aol.com; Mr Mahdi; Nadle; Ruletherod; Macho786@aol.com; Member1700@aol.com; PParvin@aol.com; RayHanania@aol.com; RobertNik@aol.com; Shaksway@aol.com; Barthaman
Subject: Re: False TOSs on AOL - Bahai Forum Leader Mark Foster

Deana Marie Holmes wrote in message <36dc6e99.64691791@enews.newsguy.com>...
>On Sat, 27 Feb 1999 20:32:47 GMT, rlittle33@my-dejanews.com wrote:

>I pointed out what people who know about AOL have known for a long >time: when a forum gets out of hand, it gets shut down. This was >noted in the NYTimes wrt the Irish fora. I also pointed out the long >experience critics of Scientology had with the AOL system. I opined >that if Mr. Foster didn't watch his step, the AOL Baha'i forum could >go the way of the AOL Scientology forum. That is NOT defamation.

I'd be in favor of the Bahai Forums on AOL being shut down too
if AOL personnel can't make the effort to understand what's really going on and fundamentalist Bahais can support Mark Foster resigning and finding a fair and honest person to serve as Forum Leader.

>
>I'd also like you to note, Mr. Little, that I am not a Baha'i, and >that I have had quite a bit of experience being harassed by pros, both >legally and extralegally. If you think that just because you can >sling the word "defamed" around that I'll go away, you've got another >thing coming. I would only note that Scientology thought I'd stop >picketing their local org if they picketed my home. They were wrong.

Mr. Little is one of the worst literal-minded Bahai fanatics on Usenet today. He's been a constant opponent of free speech and conscience regarding the creation of talk.religion.bahai for the past two years.

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> On talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, and AOL: Keyword Bahai, Message Boards

>
>
>Deana Marie Holmes / member of the "Gang of Three" (Rod Keller)
>The Few, The Proud, The Banned (2x + 1 ISP on Scientology ban list)
>$cientology: Sponsor Windows84: "Where CAN'T you go today?"
>mirele@xmission.com

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Baha'u'llah's Houri of Wonder
Date: Monday, June 14, 1999 11:03 AM

Below find my provisional translation of Baha'u'llah's Hur-i `Ujab, the Maid of Wonder or Houri of Wonder, which is from the Baghdad period.

cheers Juan Cole

-----
Baha'u'llah
The Houri of Wonder

The beauty of holiness has risen from behind her veil—
and that is a wondrous thing;
And spirits have fainted from the fire of their attraction,
and that is a wondrous affair.
Then they awoke and soared into the pavilions of sanctity at the throne of domes,
and that is a wondrous mystery.
Say: the houri of eternity removed the veil from her face-- exalted be the wondrous beauty of newness!
The lights of her visage shone from the earth to the clouds, and that is a wondrous radiance.
She threw a glance like a shooting star,
and that is a wondrous glance.
By the fire of her countenance she burned up all names and designations, and that is a wondrous deed.
She cast her gaze upon the people of earth and dust,
and that is a wondrous gaze.
Behold, the temples of existence quivered and then vanished, and that is a wondrous death.
Then a black strand of hair appeared from her, an adornment for the soul in the gloom of hindrances, and that is a wondrous hue.
The fragrance of scents and perfumes wafted from her,
and that is a wondrous musk.
In her right hand she holds red wine and in her left, kebab, and that is a wondrous grace.
Her palm is dyed crimson with the blood of lovers,
and that is a wondrous thing.
She passed around the wine of life in jugs and cups,
and that is a wondrous fountain;
And sang of the beloved's name, strumming on lute and rebec,
and that is a wondrous song.
Then hearts melted from fire and blaze,
and that is a wondrous passion.
She bestowed the nourishment of beauty without measure, and that is a wondrous food.
The sword of allusion struck at necks, and that is a wondrous blow.
She smiled, and the pearls of her teeth were manifest, and that is a wondrous gleam.
Then the hearts of those who understand cried out,
and that is a wondrous self-denial.
All those filled with pride and suspicion turned away from her,
and that is nothing but a wondrous opponent.
When she heard, she returned to her palace in grief and regret,
and that is a wondrous sorrow.
She went and returned, may her to and fro be exalted,
and this is a wondrous decree;
And she uttered within her soul a cry that annihilated existence and then was made to vanish, and that is a wondrous grief.
She opened her lips for a river of advice and reproof to flow, and that is a wondrous spring..
She said, "Do not reject me, people of the Book."
And that is a wondrous affair.
"Are you the people of guidance and are you the friends?"
And that is a wondrous falsehood.
She said, "We shall not return to you, my companions."
And that is a wondrous return.
"We shall conceal the mysteries of God that are in his scriptures."
And this matter is from the All-Glorious, the Giving.
"You shall not find me until the promised one appears on the Day of Return."
By my life, that is a wondrous abasement.

Source: Baha'u'llah, Ad' iyyih-'i Hadrat-i Mahbub (Hofheim-Langenhain: Baha'i Publishing Trust, 1980), pp. 153-158.

—

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy *Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i***
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't. From: "Michel Boucher" <alsandorz@netcom.ca>

Subject: Re: high Baha'i divorce rate
Date: Wednesday, June 28, 2000 9:19 PM

rlittle95@my-deja.com a écrit dans <8jdoel$tpk$1@nnrp1.deja.com>:

>This statement seems to hold a number of implications which run >contrary to what Baha'u'llah Himself says about those who find and >accept Him.

But you're assuming that every person who is a member of the Baha'i administrative order (for want of a better term) "accepts" Baha'u'llah. After many years of being a member of said BAO, I realized that this was not the case. Not that I denied his existence, but rather the purpose as stipulated in the writings were not understood by me in those terms. I never denied the matter as set in the writings, but it never had any *personal* importance to me.

>Baha'u'llah states that the first duty of an individual >is to accept the (most recent) Manifestation of God.

There are many "first" duties. My first and most important duty is to see to the welfare of my children (yours too, if you have any). If I forgo that responsibility in the pursuit of some ethereal concept of deity, I'm not doing anyone any good. I'm sure we can come up with some more "first" duties that would take precedence over a "command" from the deity.

It also raises the question: if the deity makes a particular condition mandatory, it is incumbent upon the deity to make it possible as well for all to meet this criterion. I don't buy this "everyone must find him". It is patently impossible for everyone since 1844 to have heard about the Bab and Baha'u'llah. Does that mean their existence is invalidated, or that they are sent to a sort of limbo? If the deity is just (which we must accept otherwise we might as well be Greeks), then the value of a life is in its living and in the pure love one receives (state of grace), from whatever source, not in a set of abstract beliefs that may or may not be subject to erroneous interpretation and overweening sentimentalism.

>I think that to >characterize those relatively few people who in this day have found >and accepted Him, as being "marginal" is clearly contrary to what >Baha'u'llah, 'Abdul-Baha' and Shoghi Effendi would say, and did say >repeatedly about Baha'is.

Well, I have met many and would suggest that Shoghi Effendi did not meet the Baha'is that came in the early 70's. I can only think that as the movement gains amplitude, the problem of "marginals" as members will grow, not decrease. Partly to blame is the willingness to accept members without appropriate scrutiny beforehand. If this is to be a job in the name of the deity, one should be not only qualified but be deemed to be qualified. Too often have I seen membership simply rubber-stamped to increase numbers, and the putative member dropped out of sight after one or two feasts. If this has changed in the last twenty-five years, then fine...

>Does the Baha'i Faith in America suffer from an inordinately high >divorce rate? The answer is an emphatic yes, but the underlying >reasons are very complex, I think, and while Professor Cole has >intelligently touched on some of them, he has a viewpoint which >seems colored by his recent experiences. I think he most assuredly >held different opinions at the time that study was reportedly made.

The problem is likely in American views and ideas on sentimental life. Becoming a Baha'i does not cleanse one of socially acquired prejudices. I encountered early on Baha'is from the US who thought and acted like Baptists, others who were either catholic in their approach, or anti-catholic, depending on their upbringing. People come with their baggage. They don't get rid of that baggage, they integrate it into their way of seeing things. Baha'is in Mississippi can probably agree among themselves because they share the same world view to begin with as people from Mississippi. In my time, the Persian believers were seen as a unifying factor and relied upon to contribute heavily because of their long ties to the Faith and because of their direct access to the writings in the original texts.

I saw that at the beginning as diversity, as a possible start to blending different parts of human behaviour, and that was what we were told in firesides and in the available literature, that all the various parts would form a whole. But that turned out not to be true. I was told one night by one who would know

I don't care how old your religion is. I don't particularly care for Christianity or Islam either. But their religions are at least old enough that their lies can be obscured and turned into myths. The Baha'i religion is still young enough to be found out if you lie.

The web site cited by Mahdi is filled with information that makes your religion look like a fabricated bunch of lies. Go look at it yourself and then explain why your authorities have deliberately changed information to conform to the present when the past wasn't convenient.

If the shoe fits wear it! The Baha'i faith looks like a cult.

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Sunday, February 28, 1999 8:51 AM
To: TOSBoards1; HANI72@aol.com; CRust60001@aol.com; AAl929596@aol.com; ccrawfeild@aol.com; Mr Mahdi; Nadle; Ruletherod; Macho786@aol.com; Member1700@aol.com; PParvin@aol.com;

RayHanania@aol.com; RobertNik@aol.com; Shaksway@aol.com; Barthaman
Subject: Re: False TOSs on AOL - Bahai Forum Leader Mark Foster

Deana Marie Holmes wrote in message <36dc6e99.64691791@enews.newsguy.com>...
>On Sat, 27 Feb 1999 20:32:47 GMT, rlittle33@my-dejanews.com wrote:

>I pointed out what people who know about AOL have known for a long >time: when a forum gets out of hand, it gets shut down. This was >noted in the NYTimes wrt the Irish fora. I also pointed out the long >experience critics of Scientology had with the AOL system. I opined >that if Mr. Foster didn't watch his step, the AOL Baha'i forum could >go the way of the AOL Scientology forum. That is NOT defamation.

I'd be in favor of the Bahai Forums on AOL being shut down too
if AOL personnel can't make the effort to understand what's really going on and fundamentalist Bahais can support Mark Foster resigning and finding a fair and honest person to serve as Forum Leader.

>
>I'd also like you to note, Mr. Little, that I am not a Baha'i, and >that I have had quite a bit of experience being harassed by pros, both >legally and extralegally. If you think that just because you can >sling the word "defamed" around that I'll go away, you've got another >thing coming. I would only note that Scientology thought I'd stop >picketing their local org if they picketed my home. They were wrong.

Mr. Little is one of the worst literal-minded Bahai fanatics on Usenet today. He's been a constant opponent of free speech and conscience regarding the creation of talk.religion.bahai for the past two years.

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> On talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, and AOL: Keyword Bahai, Message Boards

>
>
>Deana Marie Holmes / member of the "Gang of Three" (Rod Keller)
>The Few, The Proud, The Banned (2x + 1 ISP on Scientology ban list) >$cientology: Sponsor Windows84: "Where CAN'T you go today?
>mirele@xmission.com

From: FG@aol.com[SMTP:FG@aol.com]
Sent: Friday, February 26, 1999 7:51 AM
To: TOSGeneral@aol.com
Cc: TOSBoards1@aol.com; FG@hotmail.com
Subject: TOS - personal insult - Maneck

This person is consistently insulting me on the Bahai Forums while the Forum Leader permits it, though charging me with TOSs for all kinds of innocuous statements.

FG@aol.com

Subject: Re: alt.religion.bahai & talk.religion.bahai
Date: 2/25/1999 11:22 AM Eastern Standard Time
From: <A HREF="">Smaneck</A>
Message-id: <19990225112245.13529.00000211@ng-ch1.aol.com>

Charlotte writes:

>So.... I will ask Mark to NOT add these newsgroups if you will not agree to >immediately remove those items placed there without permission and agree to >stop the practice of putting them there in the future.

Dear Charlotte,

While your annoyance to Fred doing this is well taken and he is certainly violating standard netiquette and perhaps copyright laws in forwarding other's posts, I don't think we can oppose the addition of newsgroups because of the unconscionable behavior of one of its members.

I think it is sufficient reason to refuse to add Mr. Glaysher's own website, however since he has total control of its contents. Besides, it is not like he doesn't "provide" us with that website address on a regular basis.

Hey Fred, do you have long pink ears?

warmest,

Susan Maneck

From: FG@aol.com[SMTP:FG@aol.com]
Sent: Thursday, February 18, 1999 9:59 AM
To: HostMgr@aol.com
Cc: FG@hotmail.com; TOSBoards1@aol.com
Subject: Re: Who is Mark Foster?

He's been doing the same thing to me and several other people who don't share the fundamentalist mindset. I've spoken with an AOL person regarding the whole situation. We can appeal the false TOSs by writing the TOSBoard1@aol.com and hostmgr@aol.com.

I've just forwarded a dozen or more messages from various people complaining now in For Non-Bahais to the above addresses and suggest you write them as soon as you can so that they hear from someone else. You know the literalists have and will make me out to be a lone kook otherwise. I Encourage others to do the same. AOL woke up in the past and got ride of Vahid and Edmund, former "Forum Leaders."

We can depend on them to do the right thing with Mark Foster too but have to be patient and make the extra effort to inform them what he's really doing now on AOL.

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> On talk.religion.bahai,
alt.religion.bahai, and AOL: Keyword Bahai, Message Boards

Subj: Re: Who is Mark Foster?
Date: 2/18/1999 9:26:24 AM Eastern Standard Time
From: nadle@aol.com (Nadle)
To: FG@aol.com

Fred,

I'm getting really ticked off with Mark's censorship.

I was wrong and you, it turns out, have been right.

I wasnt to send a complaint to AOL about Mark. He's pulled several of my posts and forwarded them to TOS. TOS, however, have blown him off.

When I repost those deleted posts, he yanks them again, and forwards them - yet again - to TOS.

What do I do?

Thank you for the information.

Sincerely,
Larry Rhodes

----- Headers -----

Return-Path: <nadle@aol.com>

Received: from rly-zd03.mx.aol.com (rly-zd03.mail.aol.com [172.31.33.227]) by air-zd03.mail.aol.com (v56.26) with SMTP; Thu, 18 Feb 1999 09:26:23 -0500

Received: from ngeout01.news.aol.com (ngeout01.news.aol.com [152.163.176.244]) by rly-zd03.mx.aol.com (8.8.8/8.8.5/AOL-4.0.0)

with SMTP id JAA07001 for <FG@aol.com>;

Thu, 18 Feb 1999 09:26:20 -0500 (EST)

Received: from ladder01.news.aol.com (ladder01.news-fddi.aol.com [172.16.30.168]) by ngeout01.news.aol.com (8.6.12/8.6.12) with ESMTP id JAA29829 for <FG@aol.com>; Thu, 18 Feb 1999 09:26:23 -0500

Date: 18 Feb 1999 09:26:22 EST

Newsgroups: aol.boards.internal0.top-o-world.aol-department-level.associations-specia.bahai.for-non-bahais1f6ff4

To: FG@aol.com

Organization: AOL <https://www.aol.com>

References: <19990218080242.27436.00000677@ng90.aol.com>

From: nadle@aol.com (Nadle)

Subject: Re: Who is Mark Foster?

Message-ID: <19990218092622.27682.00003216@ng97.aol.com>

From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>

Subject: Response to a Fanatic

Newsgroups: news.groups

Message-Id: <857214887.14063@dejanews.com>

Reply-To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>

Organization: Deja News Usenet Posting Service

X-Article-Creation-Date: Sat Mar 01 11:14:52 1997 GMT

X-Originating-IP-Addr: 199.179.42.119 ()

X-Http-User-Agent: Mozilla/3.0Gold (Win95; U)

(FORGIVE THE CAPS, BUT I DON'T KNOW HOW ELSE TO DISTINGUISH MY REMARK FROM OTHERS)

I'VE DECIDED TO POST A REPLY TO THIS MESSAGE BECAUSE IT SEEMS TO ME TO TYPIFY THE GROSS FANATICISM AND SELF-RIGHTEOUSNESS OF SO MANY BAHAI.... THIS MENTALITY, I BELIEVE, UNDERLIES MUCH OF THE OPPOSITION TO TALK.RELIGION.BAHAI OVER THE LAST WEEKS.
NO HONEST MEMBER OF THE BAHAI FAITH CAN FAIL TO UNDERSTAND THE TACTIC OF INTIMIDATION USED BY SOME FANATICS TO SILENCE ANYONE WHO MIGHT DARE TO EXPRESS AN OPINION OTHER THAN THE CONVENTIONALLY ACCEPTED ONE. AS A BAHAI, FOR MORE THAN 20 YEARS, THIS TENDENCY CONCERNS ME DEEPLY. IT IS DIFFICULT FOR ME NOT TO SEE IT AS THE SAME LYING, DISTORTING, AND COERCIVE METHODS USED BY EXTREMISTS IN ALL CULTS AND PSEUDO-RELIGIONS.
I BELIEVE THE MODERATORS OF SOC.RELIGION.BAHAI HAVE USED THESE SAME METHODS IN MANIPULATING, THROUGH OTHERS, THE DISCUSSION ABOUT TALK.RELIGION.BAHAI....

I DON'T BELIEVE IT'S JUSTIFIABLE ON THE BASIS OF THE BAHAI
WRITINGS....

Date: Wed, 26 Feb 1997 15:55:19 -0500

From: Roger Reini <rreini@wwnet.com>

To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re: Response to a Jesuit

I am replying privately because I feel it's most appropriate. You do NOT have my permission to post this to Usenet or any other forum.

THE REASON I HAVE IS GIVEN ABOVE.

In my opinion, this note of yours contained some implied criticism of the Institutions and could be construed as undermining their authority.

Specifically, this quote:

>This ignores the fact that many Bahais don't accept review and believe >it's censorship....

WHAT RREINI IS INTIMATING HERE, FOR THOSE WHO DON'T PERCEIVE IT, IS THAT I'M A MISCREANT, INFIDEL, ETC....

If this was not your intent, then you might want to rephrase the concept you're trying to get across so that it's clear you're not trying to undermine the Institutions. On the other hand, if that was your intent, then that's something I prefer not to think about.

HERE IT IS AGAIN.... THE RED FLAG OF ACCUSATION, OF THE SELF-RIGHTEOUS, USED TO SILENCE AND TERRORIZE OTHERS, TO MANIPULATE AND CONTROL....
ENDING WITH HIS WRAPPING HIMSELF IN THE MANTLE OF PIETY AND PURITY OF MOTIVE....

Roger (rreini@wwnet.com)

THIS HAS BEEN THE APPROACH OF OTHERS DURING THIS DISCUSSION PERIOD.
IS THIS THE KIND OF KINGDOM OF GOD WE'RE TRYING TO CREATE ON EARTH?
THE IRANIAN REVOLUTION WORLDWIDE? IT SEEMS LIKE IT AT TIMES....

FOR OTHER EXAMPLES OF IT, ONE MIGHT LOOK BACK AT THE POSTING BY DR. STEVE BURGESS WHO AFTER MAKING HIS SHAMELESS INTIMATIONS
FAILED TO HAVE THE COURAGE TO REPLY TO ME, WHEN I CONFRONTED HIM, IN PUBLIC, WITH HIS CONTEMPTIBLE INSINUATION....

I PRESENT ALL THIS AS EVIDENCE, TO FAIR-MINDED PEOPLE, THAT AN UNCONTROLLED, UNMANIPULATED, UNCENSORED TALK.RELIGION.BAHAI
IS
WOEFULLY NEEDED TO ENSURE THE FREEDOM OF RELIGIOUS CONSCIENCE
GOD HIMSELF HAS BLESSED HUMANKIND WITH.... THERE ARE TOO MANY SELF-RIGHTEOUS FANATICS IN THE BAHAI FAITH FOR IT NOT TO EXIST....

FG
ROCHESTER HILLS, MICHIGAN USA
Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatismNot spell-checked [Note: A sidebar introduction, plus corrections to the article submitted by two Baha'is, and finally a Baha'i report on the article, including a list of the newspapers which ran it, all follow. Some Baha'is interpreted these articles as excessively critical; see for example the NSA response at "Attacks on the Faith". -J.W.]

Eds: RNS Online, <https://www.nj.com/RNS/>, printed this with color photos of Cole, Henderson and the Baha'i Worship Center in Wilmette, Ill, accompanying this story.

NEWS FEATURE: "Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatism"

By IRA RIFKIN

c.1997 Religion News Service

UNDATED - The first 19 days of March are a special time for Baha'is, members of a worldwide religion with a liberal reputation based on its vision of the underlying unity of all faiths, the oneness of humanity and the harmony of science and religion.

The Baha'i faith grew out of Islam, and like the Muslim month of Ramadan, Baha is set aside 19 days - the month of Ala according to the Baha'i calendar - as a period of dawn-to-sunset fasting and spiritual reflection. The month ends with the Feast of Nawruz, the Baha'i new year. It's a festive time of community gatherings featuring prayers, spiritual readings, socializing and lots of food.
For ex-Baha'i Juan Cole, though, this year's feast will be anything but festive.
Cole, a professor of Middle East history at the University of Michigan, is among the nation's leading experts on the faith. Until last May, when he formally resigned from the movement, he had been a Baha'i for 25 years. Now, however, he counts himself among a small but influential group of past and present liberal

Baha'is are angry over what they say is the hijacking of the faith by a cadre of conservative leaders more interested in preserving their authority than the Baha'i principle of "independent investigation of reality." That principle is among the core tenets of the Baha'i faith first articulated by its founder, the 19th-century Persian prophet known as Baha'u'llah (the Glory of God) and who is revered by the faithful as an incarnation of God akin to Jesus. According to the critics, the National Spiritual Assembly (NSA), which oversees the American Baha'i movement, is dominated by a tight-knit group of authoritarian officials who keep the lid on free expression by threatening dissidents with excommunication and by manipulating the process by which NSA members are elected.

In the Baha'i faith, excommunication can include total shunning by family members and friends.

Spreading their message via the Internet, the dissidents - many of whom, like Cole, once were members of the faith's intellectual elite - say the nine-member NSA also hides the truth about the faith's shrinking American following.

"Baha'is are not open - repeat, not open - about how controlling this organization is," said Cole. "Virtually no one who comes into this faith realizes that by becoming a Baha'i you are making your individual conscience hostage to the dictates of the leadership."

"The Baha'is started out Unitarian and ended up Calvinist."

For their part, American Baha'i leaders, headquartered in the Chicago suburb of Wilmette, Ill., dismiss the critics as an inconsequential group of disgruntled elitists who - blinded by their attraction to the faith's more liberal aspects - overlooked its deeply conservative side.

This includes an emphasis on "administrative order" as a prime religious goal. Baha'u'llah taught that religions fail in large part because, of the disunity that tears them apart following their initial burst of spiritual energy.

As a result, tight controls are placed on all public statements made by Baha'is -- including the works of scholars, who are required to submit their writings for pre-publication review.

"The Baha'i community as a whole does not encourage antagonistic confrontation," said Firuz Kazemzadeh, an NSA-member and its secretary for external affairs.

"We always seek consensus. But if there is no unanimity then the majority must prevail."

Not all Baha'i scholars find fault with this.

"I personally don't buy 'the totalitarian argument,'" said Canadian Baha'i B. Todd Lawson, an assistant professor of Islamic studies at Montreal's McGill University.

"The Baha'i faith posits a non-confrontation version of problem solving. My view is if you opt out of that mode, that's your prerogative. But there are others who take a longer view of things. ... Baha'i ideals are extremely demanding."

Michael McMullen, an assistant professor of Sociology at the University of Houston at Clear Lake, said prior review "makes sense" because much of the writings of Baha'u'llah and his successors remain untranslated from their original Persian and Arabic, and are therefore inaccessible to the majority of American Baha'is.

"My experience has been that what is corrected are factual errors not interpretation," said McMullen, who is also a local Baha'i leader in League City, Texas.

The dissidents also claim the Baha'i prohibition against public campaigning or nominating candidates for spots on the nine-member NSA serves to keep it a closed body controlled by the American Baha'i establishment.

Baha'i leaders say they are only following an orthodoxy established by Baha'u'llah and his successors - his son Abdul-Baha and his great-grandson, Shoghi Effendi, who died in 1957.

"It is extremely deprecated if anyone even talks about how the vote is cast," said Kazemzadeh. "Voting is supposed to be a very spiritual act."

Assembly members are elected annually by a fixed number of 171 delegates who represent local Baha'i assemblies across the continental United States.

Robert C. Henderson, a former Atlanta businessman who is the NSA's secretary-general, making him the highest ranking American Baha'i (the faith has no ordained clergy), said there have been 12 changes in the NSA's membership over the past 15 years.

"That's not indicative of a closed group," he said.

However, Cole said each change resulted from retirement, death or a member moving out of the country. No incumbent who has sought re-election has been defeated since 1961, he said.

Cole also noted that family and other close associations are common among American Baha'i leaders. Six of the nine current NSA members have family or professional connections.

For example, Henderson's mother, Wilma Ellis, is married to Kazemzadeh. Ellis herself is a former NSA member who has held a variety of prominent Baha'i positions. Currently she is a member of the Continental Board of Counselors of the Americas, which provides advice and other services to elected Baha'i bodies throughout the hemisphere.

Two other current NSA members are husband and wife James and Dorothy Nelson. He is a former presiding judge of the Los Angeles Municipal Court. She is a judge of California's Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. '

Two other members are Juana Conrad, a retired administrator for the Los Angeles Municipal Courts, and William Davis, former administrative executive of the Ninth Circuit Court.

Yet another current assembly member is South Dakotan Patricia Locke, the first American-Indian woman to serve on the NSA. She replaced her son Kevin: Locke. McMullen, the University of Houston sociologist, acknowledged that the prohibition against nominations and campaigning has made it hard for those outside the Baha'i establishment to win election to the NSA.

But on the local level, he added, there is a much higher leadership turnover. Moreover, on this level of authority, he said, issues, even controversial ones, are freely debated without fear of official disapproval.

Henderson also said that "Baha'is are specifically asked to air their grievances" at local and national conventions. "There are specific channels for such expression, but it must remain within these established channels."

"The Baha'i faith is outwardly liberal but inwardly conservative," he continued. "It's a matter of scripture."

Baha'is claim a worldwide membership of more than 5 million people living in more than 200 nations and territories. About 2.5 million Baha'is live in India. In Iran - where the faith first emerged in the 1840s when Baha'u'llah proclaimed himself to be the divine manifestation for the modern era there are about 300,000 Baha'is. Considered heretics by the Muslim authorities, they live as a persecuted minority.

The heresy charge stems from Baha'u'llah's claim to prophet status some 1,200 years after Muhammad, the founder of Islam, proclaimed himself God's final prophet.

In the United States, Baha'is claim some 130,000 members - a third of whom are African-Americans. About 21,000 live in California, with the largest concentration - more than 6,000 - in greater Los Angeles.

Baha'is are also relatively strong in South Carolina, Texas, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, Illinois, Arizona and Washington state.

However, Baha'i critics say the religion's membership numbers are wildly inflated. Citing friendly but unnamed sources at Baha'i headquarters in Wilmette, the dissidents say no more than 30,000 names represent active Baha'is with verifiable addresses.

"Wilmette has no idea who most of these so-called 130,000 Baha'is are," said Steven Scholl, a Baha'i for 27 years until he withdrew his membership last October.

"The large number of inactive members on the rolls speaks to the number of people who have simply walked away from the faith out of their upset with the leadership," said Scholl, a publisher of spiritual books based in Ashland Ore.

A 1993 book on Americans' religious affiliations, "One Nation Under God" by demographers Barry Kosmin and Seymour Lachman, estimated the number of adult Baha'is in the United States at about 28,000.

"Every new religious movement that is in a missionary phase tends to overestimate its members," Kosmin, currently at the Institute for Jewish Policy Research in London, said in an interview. "They count people coming in, but never count those who leave."

Kazemzadeh, the Baha'i official, insisted that the 130,000 figure is "essentially accurate." But he also said that "if active means contributing funds and serving locally, it's probably about half the names on the list." Sizable Baha'i communities in the South are traceable to the influx of mostly rural African-Americans who joined the faith in the 1960s and '70s, drawn by its strong rejection of racial prejudice. Jazz musician Dizzy Gillespie is probably the best-known African-American Baha'i.

During those same years, relatively large numbers of white liberals, attracted by the faith's emphasis on a society free of social injustice, also joined. It is mostly members of this group - many of them scholars of Baha'i texts, the Middle East and its languages - that today lead the dissident movement. Linda Walbridge, an anthropologist at the University of Indiana specializing in the growth of Islam in America, became a Baha'i in 1966 when she was a 19-year-old VISTA volunteer on the Navajo Reservation. Despite her anger at the hierarchy, she remains a Baha'i.

Raised Roman Catholic, Walbridge said she was attracted to the Baha'i faith by its promise of a universalist vision. "It was far more open than anything I had experienced."

Walbridge's public dissent has prompted Baha'i officials to threaten to label her a "covenant breaker" - a form of excommunication that would require her Baha'i husband to divorce her or risk his own excommunication.

"It was supposed to be the most liberal, broad-based religion on the face of the earth," said Walbridge. "Instead, it turned out to be a straight jacket."

For liberal academics like Walbridge, the lack of free expression is a prime bone of contention. However, they also take issue with the Baha'i claim of inclusiveness when only men can serve on the Universal House of Justice, the faith's international authority based in Haifa, Israel, near Baha'u'llah's, burial place. Established in 1963 in accordance with Baha'u'llah's dictates, the Universal House of Justice is considered an infallible body by Baha'is. The critics also take issue with the harsh attitude taken by Baha'i leadership toward sexually active gay and lesbian members, who are subject to official sanction under the faith's general prohibition against all forms of extra-marital sex.

"I understand that this conforms to understanding of Baha'i orthodoxy that the leadership shares, but how is this inclusive?" said Walbridge. "For heaven's sake, let's at least discuss it. Things have changed since the 19th century."

To members of the Baha'i establishment, Walbridge's challenge to some of the faith's basic tenets are indicative of the critics' misreading of the movement's conservative side.

"These so-called dissident Baha'is like to be among Baha'is because they were liberal and we appear liberal," said Kazemzadeh. "But they did not y believe in God as Baha'is define it. That raises the question of hypocrisy."

"This is a religious community united by a set of beliefs," he said. "So if a person says he does not believe in these beliefs, why is he a member of the community?"

Sidebar: Thumbnail guide to the beliefs of the Baha'is
by Ira Rifkin

c. 1997 Religion News Service

UNDATED -- A cornerstone of Baha'i beliefs is the principle of progressive revelation, which holds that God repeatedly sends divine messengers to Earth and that the latest in a line running from Abraham to Jesus and Muhammad was the 19th-century Persian prophet known as Baha'u'llah. Missionary-minded and pacifist-oriented, the Baha'i faith teaches the unity of mankind and the commonality of all religions. It also emphasizes the harmony of science and religion, rejection of all prejudice, independent investigation of truth, equality of the sexes and compulsory education. "The Baha'i Faith's progressive approach to human society originates with Baha'u'llah's emphasis on unity," said a 1992 official profile of the movement. "Indeed, if one were to characterize His teachings in a single word, that word would be unity."

Baha'is have no ordained clergy and little ritual, and are led by elected officials. Despite the declaration of sexual equality, the faith's international authority, the Universal House of Justice based in Haifa, Israel, is doctrinally an all-male body. Baha'is consider the House of Justice to be infallible.

National Spiritual Assemblies direct Baha'i affairs in individual countries.

U.S. Baha'i headquarters are in the Chicago suburb of Wilmette, Ill., site of one of seven Baha'i Houses of Worship scattered around the globe.

Baha'is believe the world is destined to have one government, which will be led by Baha'is and will be based on the faith's administrative framework. The Baha'i faith grew out of Shiite Islam, and like Muslims, Baha'is are not supposed to consume alcohol and are to adhere to a strict moral code. They also believe in the sharing of wealth and the adoption of a universal language.

Considered heretics by Muslims, Baha'is have long been persecuted by Islamic leaders, particularly in Iran. Baha'u'llah spent much of his life in prison or under house arrest. He died while under house arrest near Acre, just north of Haifa, which was then part of the Ottoman Empire. Since 1980, more than 200 Iranian Baha'is have been executed and thousands have been imprisoned, according to reports, leading to frequent condemnations of Teheran by the U.S. State Department. Because of this persecution, the recently organized, 20-member Secretary of State's Advisory Committee on Religious Freedom Abroad has a Baha'i member.

-END RIFKIN AP - NY-02-26-97 1528 EST

Note: Here follow two corrections sent to a Baha'i academics listserv in March, 1997:

On Thursday, March 6, a Baha'i wrote:

"Mr. Henderson was misquoted. Actually, he said, "The Baha'i Faith is SOCIALLY liberal and MORALLY conservative." Another factual error is that Linda Walbridge remains a part of the American Baha'i community; as many of us may remember with sadness, she withdrew from the Baha'i Faith almost a year ago."

Later, she added:

"I happened to be at the National Center last Friday, and Bob Henderson pointed out to some Baha'is that he was misquoted. Actually, it is something that happens all the time in journalism (in the rush of scribbling down notes and all). My guess is that Linda Walbridge was also misunderstood, as she would have no reason to believe that the institutions consider her to be a part of the American Baha'i community."

The US Baha'i Office of Public Information recently mailed their PI NEWS, April 1997, a bi-monthly publication distributed to Baha'i Public Information Reps. Here is the lead article regarding the RNS article: "News on Opposition National News Wire Article Criticizes the NSA"

"On February 27, 1997, the Religion News Service carried a news article by Ira Rifkin under the title "Critics Chafe at Baha'i Conservatism." The article presented the views of a small group of of disaffected former Baha'is who left the Faith because they rejected certain fundamental Baha'i teachings. The individuals attacked Baha'i institutions and their members attributing to them dictatorial attitudes, accusing them of controlling elections and claiming that Baha'i institutions were dominated by a tight-knit group of authoritarian officials. The article was published in the following US papers:

- 1) Muscatine, Iowa Journal
- 2) Akron, Ohio Beacon Journal
- 3) Kansas City, Missouri Star
- 4) North Carolina Times News
- 5) Charlotte, North Carolina Observer
- 6) Springfield, Massachusetts Republican
- 7) Mobile, Alabama Register

"Local communities responded to the article's publication in a variety of ways. For example, the Baha'is of Springfield, MA, formed a delegation which visited the executive editor of the Springfield, Massachusetts paper. The delegation explained to the editor the Baha'is eighty-year history in the area and noted its community service. During the hour long meeting, the executive editor's tone was apologetic. He stated that he had not read the article before it was placed. Additionally, he promised to feature a positive article on the Faith in the near future. Although published in only seven newspapers, the article is an excellent opportunity to identify issues and teachings to which American media might give a negative interpretation: free speech, the Baha'i electoral process and Covenant breaking to name a few. The Office of Public Information, in consultation with the Research Office of the Baha'i National Center, is developing educational materials for PI Reps which will address these issues.

Back to Newspaper and magazine articles

Baha'i Academics Resource Library ][ Sacred Writings ][ Search Primary sources ][ Secondary sources ][ Resources and etc.
Bulletin board ][ Links ][ Personal pages ][ Other sites hosted by the Library

From: "K. Paul Johnson" <pauljo@cstone.net>
Subject: Re: >>bahai - Harassment Continues Date: Monday, March 20, 2000 11:26 AM

Mark Elderkin wrote:

>> Pat and all others concerned,
>> I probably misstepped the guidelines by posting Freddys Facts
.....

More to the point, what ethical principles were violated?

>> but I think it will give Fred a chance to realize that he is not-so >> anomomous anymore and might wish to quit cross-posting.

So you did this to terrorize him into silence, right?

I understand that >> there are a lot of crazys out there that might not like the things he >> regularly posts and now he can't hide behind his mothers dress.

So you actually envision that he might end up attacked, even murdered, possibly by a fanatical Baha'i, as a result of your heroic action?

I have >> posted my own phone number before and will always make myself available
>for >> anyones input.

That's *your* choice. Don't make someone else's choice for him.

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

From: Mark Elderkin <elderkin@nor.com.au>
Subject: Re: Inter-Parliamentary Union - Universal Declaration on Democracy

Date: Monday, January 31, 2000 4:52 PM

> "The state of democracy presupposes freedom of opinion and > expression; this right implies freedom to hold opinions without > interference and to seek, receive and impart information and > ideas through any media and regardless of frontiers."

Hold your opinion without interference. Why do you interfere, here, with your spam-like postings? It is totally unacceptable by this medium's predefinitions. When I wrote to you, I was totally within my rights to do just that. Certainly it could not have been too offensive or you would not have posted it here for all to read. Like all things in this natural world, there will always be a reaction to your action.

From: <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com>
Subject: Re: Inter-Parliamentary Union - Universal Declaration on Democracy
Date: Wednesday, February 02, 2000 7:03 AM

A Bahai continues to harass me despite my polite requests that he cease emailing me his insults and threats. I hold the uhj directly responsible for the actions of this and other Bahai fanatics. The uhj routinely inspires this type of fundamentalism in my fellow Bahais and then uses them to suppress and control others.

I shall be sending a copy of this message to the uhj along with the individual's name and email address.

As a member of the Bahai faith since 1976, I have every right to express my conscience and beliefs as both Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha guaranteed their followers....

--
Patrick Henry.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"
The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

----- Original Message -----

From: Bahá'í World Centre <secretariat@bwc.org>
To: <EarthrisePress@hotmail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 30, 2000 11:09 AM Subject: RE: Bahai>>> Continuing Harassment

Dear Friend,

This is an automated acknowledgement.

Your message has been received at the Bahá'í World Centre.

Electronic Communications Operation, Bahá'í World Centre
-----

When I asked him to desist, he spammed my account with a dozen copies of this message:
>I will post you and I will stand behind everything I wrote.....

One of his earlier messages was:

> You have truly mastered the high-tech form of rhetorical masturbation.
>You continue to post the things which seem to excite you the most to people >who don't really care what you are posting. It is a shame that you feel that >this has become such a deep seated motivation for so much of your time. I >have heard all the drivel you are posting, before, and it has always come >from individuals who have had their hand slapped for one reason or another.
>Get over it. The Baha'i Faith is divine and nothing you can say (mostly >imagination) can ever effect it in the least. You will never have the >opportunity to understand the significance of the UHJ or its members in your >lifetime. Jealousy takes all forms. Why not stick to an area of your >expertise and get out of this one? No one here cares anymore about you or >your fantasies.

Quotation from the Inter-Parliamentary Union - Universal Declaration on Democracy:

Mark Elderkin <elderkin@nor.com.au> wrote in message news:eunl4.36$si5.3374@nsw.nnrp.telstra.net...

>

>

> > "The state of democracy presupposes freedom of opinion and > > expression; this right implies freedom to hold opinions without > > interference and to seek, receive and impart information and > > ideas through any media and regardless of frontiers."

>

> Hold your opinion without interference. Why do you interfere, here, with > your spam-like postings? It is totally unacceptable by this mediums > predefinitions. When I wrote to you, I was totally within my rights to do > just that. Certainly it could not have been too offensive or you would not > have posted it here for all to read. Like all things in this natural world,

> there will always be a reaction to your action.

>

>

From: <dfiorito@my-deja.com>

Subject: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed

Date: Thursday, December 09, 1999 2:33 PM

Out of curiositiy I decided to check on Fred Glaysher's status in the Baha'i Community and his membership could not be confirmed.

I was under the assumption that he is a member of the US Baha'i Community.

Fred?

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: <dfiorito@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed

Date: Friday, December 10, 1999 3:15 PM

In article <s5203qj0536@corp.supernews.com>,

"Patrick Henry" <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com> wrote:

> Given the uhj's oppressive tactics and violation of the human rights
of

> Linda and John Walbridge, Stephen Scholl, other editors of the > Dialogue magazine, the Bahai Encyclopedia editors who resigned in > protest, David Langness, Juan Cole, Michael McKenny, Nima Hazini, > former Assistant to the Auxiliary Board Paul Dodenhoff who resigned, > and so on, and so on, and so on.... All the victims documented on my > website.... I hesitate to put the uhj above any reprehensible act....
> Including conspiracy to murder Dr. Daniel Jordan.

<SNIP>

It is not a human right to belong to a private organization. It is a human right to choose your personal faith and express it as you would like to. But when you are a voluntary member of a religious body and you break the laws of that body you have no right to remain a member, and that religious group has every right to remove your membership.

There is no human right to demand change within a private organization and have that change happen. There are means and procedures to bring about change in those areas that change is possible. In the Baha'i Faith unity of the community is paramount but subservient to obeying all of the laws of God and the provisions of the Covenant and the chain of authority that has been generated by it. If you choose not to follow those laws and provisions and that authority you may leave - no one is making you stay. And if you stay and do not use proper channels and methods for creating change you have no right to immunity from administrative sanction.

I have no right as a human being to choose to join the Jesuit Order and preach that Baha'u'llah is the return of Christ and still remain a member. I have no right to be a Muslim and claim that Baha'u'llah is a Messenger of God and still remain a member. I have no right to join an Ultra Orthodox Jewish community and expect to break the Sabbath. All of those organizations have the absolute right to remove me from their group.

If any Baha'i want to create change in a private organization you may do so through the proper channels. But don't expect it to happen if the administration of that organization does not accept it and they can point to the place in their charter that contradicts your view.

For Baha'is (by that I mean those registered Baha'is who value unity and obedience to the Will of God over their personal desires) there are methods in place to propose change in our community. We have every right to petition the administration at all levels. We have the right to voice our opinion freely. If the administration decision goes against our wishes then we are left with the Divine call to obey them. If we persist and go outside the boundaries of propriety and disturb the unity of the Faith we must expect to suffer the consequences of those actions.

Change in a large organization is slow. Patience is the key. But we have no human right to remain a member when we end up breaking the laws of the Faith. And if someone leaves voluntarily how is it even possible that their rights have been violated?

Peace,

Dave

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: <dfiorito@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed
Date: Friday, December 10, 1999 12:33 PM

(sorry if this is a repeat post MyDeja is acting funny)

I never assume that anyone is a Covenant Breaker, and I do not look up the membership of everyone on the list.

Fred made a claim that he is a registered member of the Baha'i community. To lend this claim credence he scanned his membership card and posted it on his website.

He is a controversial figure and makes many claims. I sought to verify the truth of his claim to membership in the US Baha'i Community. That membership could not be confirmed.

This is not a value judgement - just a fact. My opinion of Fred will remain private. I make no accusations or threats. I merely researched one of his claims and it turns out to be false.

Peace,

Dave

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: David Fiorito and Jennifer Spotila <fiospots@pond.com>
Subject: Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed
Date: Tuesday, December 14, 1999 8:21 PM

Sorry it took so long to reply. All one needs is the persons name and Baha'i id# which Fred has made a part of the public record. Contact Membership services at National and they reply. If you are a Baha'i that is.

Peace,

Dave Fiorito

starjo8853@my-deja.com wrote in message <83081o$blc$1@nnrp1.deja.com>...
>David - Would you please explain how a person verifies, or as you put >it "confirms" that another person is a US Baha'i? Should the National >really be giving out that information since it could cost some people >their lives.....Are you in a special position that this information >would be given to you such as Board Member? Star*
>
>

>In article <82rdgo$735$1@nnrp1.deja.com>,
> dfiorito@my-deja.com wrote:
>> (sorry if this is a repeat post MyDeja is acting funny)
>>
>> I never assume that anyone is a Covenant Breaker, and I do not look up >> the membership of everyone on the list.
>>
>> Fred made a claim that he is a registered member of the Baha'i >> community. To lend this claim credence he scanned his membership >card
>> and posted it on his website.
>>
>> He is a controversial figure and makes many claims. I sought to >verify >> the truth of his claim to membership in the US Baha'i Community. That >> membership could not be confirmed.
>>
>> This is not a value judgement - just a fact. My opinion of Fred will >> remain private. I make no accusations or threats. I merely >researched
>> one of his claims and it turns out to be false.
>>
>> Peace,
>>
>> Dave
>>
>> Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
>> Before you buy.
>>
>
>--
>"Look within and you will find Me standing there Mighty, Powerful, and >Selfsubsisting".....Baha'u'llah, Arabic HW #13
>
>
>Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
>Before you buy.

From: David Fiorito and Jennifer Spotila <fiospots@pond.com>
Subject: Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed
Date: Saturday, December 11, 1999 2:01 PM

The only information you can get from National about an individual is - 1) Are they a member of the Faith in good standing. 2) Does national have a good mailing address for them (in other words have they had any returned mail recently). The will not give details of membership or any personal data. The will not give out addresses or phone numbers. When I inquired they said they could not confirm that Fred was a member of the Baha'i Community. That is all.

The reason you can get these two pieces of data is so when someone comes to town and says "I am a Baha'i" you can verify that fact with national before that person can join Feast, vote, or serve on an LSA.

Peace,

Dave

From: David Fiorito and Jennifer Spotila <fiospots@pond.com> Subject: Re: "removed from the membership rolls" (Re: REVISED: --bahai-- Messages to uhj regarding their Technique)
Date: Sunday, December 19, 1999 7:37 PM

Fred,

I am not questioning your conscience. You claim to be a member of the US Baha'i Community. You posted your membership card on your site as proof.

I decided to verify your claim. That claim is false. It is deceitful to claim to be a member of the Baha'i Community knowing full well that you are not. I am not questioning your beliefs by doing this. I am only showing all of those in the many irrelevant news groups that you bother that you are not what you say you are.

No one has control over your thoughts. God gave us all free will. But the lie you have told is now uncovered. Its time to face the fact. The people you say are your fellow Baha'is are not. You have been removed from the community. You are on the outside looking in.

You can say whatever you want when it comes to beliefs or philosophy. Those points are debatable. But when you claim membership in an organization to which you do not belong you become a liar.

I respect those on this list who have left the Baha'i Faith and _tell_ everyone the truth about their status. Nima, Carol, Paul Johnson, Michael McKenny, and the others don't hide the fact that they have left the Faith and their points are made stronger because of it. I don't hear Juan Cole keeping his status a secret.

You are trying to deceive us all, and because I caught you red handed you cry foul. Too bad. So keep posting about philosophy and beliefs. Those posts are welcome. They add to the dialog. They add another point of view. But don't cry when you lie about a fact and someone uncovers it for the world to see.

I do not hate you or feel spite for you. As I have said before - there are those on this list like the ones I mentioned above who I actually admire. They have convictions and beliefs that run deep. They are well spoken and do not rely on SPAM and lies to get their point across.

The only thing I did was shed light on a lie. The rest is up to you.

Oh by the way - if you really do believe that you are a member of the Baha'i Community then I suggest you contact your nearest Baha'i friend, have them contact National with your ID# and name and they will confirm what I have already posted. Any registered Baha'i can check for you.

Peace,

Dave

Patrick Henry wrote in message ...

>Ha, ha, ha, ha....

>

>My how desperate Bahai fundamentalists are....

>

>In lieu of any official communication directly from the uhj, >describing what it imagines my offense might be and detailing >the passages in the Writings that permits such spiritual terrorism, >I am certainly not about to believe the claims and forgeries >of rabidly hateful and spiteful fellow Bahais like this person....

>

>My soul and conscience are not under the control of the >pathetically dishonest and oppressive uhj, nor are the souls >of any of its other victims....

>

>I shall "cc" this message to the uhj so that they hear from >me directly on the matter.

>

>--

>Patrick Henry.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"

>The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:

><https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

>

>

>

>><dforito@my-deja.com> wrote in message news:83dpqu$vnbs1@nnrp1.deja.com...

>> Fred is not a member of the Baha'i Community. He was removed from the >> roles in February of 1999. The Baha'i ID that he displays on his >> website is not valid.

>>

>> His claim of membership in the Baha'i Community is false.

>>

>> This was confirmed in a reply to my inquiry to the national center's >> membership services.

>>

>> This was their reply:

>>

>> "Subject: Status of Fredrick Glaysheer

>>

>>

>> To: Mr. David Fiorito

>>
>> Dear Baha'i Friend,
>>
>> In response to your inquiry about the status of Mr. Fredrick Glaysher, >> the records of the Baha'i National Center reflect that Mr. Glaysher's >> name was removed from the membership rolls in February 1999, and he is >> not considered to be a member of the Baha'i Faith.
>>
>> With loving Baha'i greetings,
>>
>> ***** * *****
>> For the Office of the Secretary

<SNIP a whole bunch of stuff>

From: <dfiorito@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: REVISED: --bahai-- Messages to uhj regarding their Technique
Date: Friday, December 17, 1999 11:53 AM

Fred is not a member of the Baha'i Community. He was removed from the roles in February of 1999. The Baha'i ID that he displays on his website is not valid.

His claim of membership in the Baha'i Community is false.

This was confirmed in a reply to my inquiry to the national center's membership services.

This was their reply:

"Subject: Status of Fredrick Glaysher

To: Mr. David Fiorito

Dear Baha'i Friend,

In response to your inquiry about the status of Mr. Fredrick Glaysher, the records of the Baha'i National Center reflect that Mr. Glaysher's name was removed from the membership rolls in February 1999, and he is not considered to be a member of the Baha'i Faith.

With loving Baha'i greetings,

***** * *****
For the Office of the Secretary

In article <s5kb85eiqrs71@corp.supernews.com>,
"Patrick Henry" <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com> wrote:
> This file contains three messages: "to uhj 12-10-99," "to uhj 7-24-1998," > and "The Baha'i Technique":
>
> From: Patrick Henry <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com>
> Subject: Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed
> Date: Friday, December 10, 1999 8:33 AM
>
> Given the uhj's oppressive tactics and violation of the human rights of > Linda and John Walbridge, Stephen Scholl, other editors of the > Dialogue magazine, the Bahai Encyclopedia editors who resigned in > protest, David Langness, Juan Cole, Michael McKenny, Nima Hazini, > former Assistant to the Auxiliary Board Paul Dodenhoff who resigned, > and so on, and so on, and so on.... All the victims documented on my > website.... I hesitate to put the uhj above any reprehensible act....
> Including conspiracy to murder Dr. Daniel Jordan.
>
> I have been a member of the Bahai faith since 1976. My ID Card > may be found on my website. I have never been contacted by the uhj > or any of its underlings to the contrary.
>
> Anything I have ever said is a matter of the sanctity of my individual > God-given conscience that both Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha claimed > would never be violated in their religion.
>

> I shall "cc" this message to the uhj so that they hear from me directly > on the matter.
>
> I would consider it an honor to be one of its official victims; indeed, > the highest spiritual achievement of my Bahai life, defending Baha'u'llah's > Teachings from the fanaticism that has overwhelmed and hamstrung his > Revelation.
>
> --
> FG.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"
> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>
>
> -----
> (Confirmation of receipt by the uhj of the message above.)
> From: Incoming Electronic Communication Operations <ieco@bwc.org>
> Subject: Your Message Has Been Received...
> Date: Friday, December 10, 1999 5:36 AM
>
> Dear Friend,
>
> This is an automated acknowledgement.
>
> Your message regarding:
>
>     Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed
>
> has been received at the Baha'i World Centre.
> -----
>
> From: Patrick Henry patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com
> To: UHJ <secretariat@bwc.org>; Letters to Editor <letters@nytimes.com>;
> bahai-faith @ makelist.com <bahai-faith@makelist.com>
> Subject: To UHJ July 24, 1998
> Date: Friday, July 24, 1998 9:03 PM
> July 24,1998
>
> Dear Members of the Universal House of Justice:
>
> As a Bahai, I am saddened by the news of the execution of yet another Bahai in Iran. However, the immediate public statements made by Firuz Kazemzadeh of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, reminiscent of Robert Henderson's piece in The New York Times on January 13th of this year, appear equally lamentable for their blatant hypocrisy: "We had hoped that President Khatami's assertions about freedom, justice and the rule of law in Iran would apply to the Baha'is of that country.... We urge the international community to protest vigorously Mr. Rowhani's killing and to seek justice for the beleaguered Iranian Baha'i community."
>
> The tragic loss of Bahai lives in Iran and the subsequent exploitation of their deaths by Bahai spokesmen, often in the American media, always courting the President and other members of the government, has become a predictable pattern rendered intolerable in the context of continuing and pervasive Bahai censorship and denial of human and civil rights in the United States and elsewhere. Such incidents as
> I queried you about in my unanswered email of March 31, 1997, available on my Web site, regarding the crushing of the magazine Dialogue, the resignations of a number of scholars from the Bahai Encyclopedia, the attacks on the listserv known as Talisman I at Indiana University, the harassing and blacklisting of many individuals, > Bahai and non-Bahai, suggest profoundly deep-seated problems within the Bahai community and administration.
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/To-UHJ1.htm>
>
> To these incidents must now be added the apparent conspiracy for more than a year and a half of the Bahai Computer and Communications Committee (BCCA), under the chairmanship of Mark Towfiq, to defeat twice now, along with the collusion of other Bahais, the creation of an > unmoderated newsgroup on the Bahai Faith which would be known as > talk.religion.bahai. You may find extensive documentation for all of > these violations of the basic human rights of many Bahais and > non-Bahais on my Web site, "The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom > of Conscience": <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

>

> Because the third interest poll for talk.religion.bahai on Usenet is > approaching, after August 28th, I ask you again to investigate the > BCCA and its depriving me of access last November from all private > Bahai-only mailing lists at a crucial moment just when the tide of > discussion was going very much in favor of the newsgroup, noted by > many observers. I also ask whether you supported or were involved in > that decision? The relevant files can be found on my Web site under > Bahai-Discuss Archives.
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/archive.htm>

>

> Similarly, I would like to know whether your institution or the BCCA
has > approved of or advocated the recent ban of my email signature file by > the moderators of soc.religion.bahai, as well as their complete ban
for > more than a year and a half now on all discussion regarding > talk.religion.bahai.

>

> The prevailing atmosphere of suppression of free speech and > religious conscience that now characterizes the Bahai Faith cannot > but call into question the honesty of many members of the Bahai > administration and perhaps the institutions themselves.

>

> I ask once more whether censorship is allowed in the Bahai Faith and > what passages of the Bahai Writings support it, what are the "rules,"
if > you will, of Bahai censorship?

>

> --

> Patrick Henry.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"
> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

>

> -----

>

> THE Baha'i Technique:

>

> During the last several years or more a number of observers have noted > the common methods many Bahais use to avoid various issues or > discredit people who hold opinions other than their own:

>

> May 12, 1992:

> "The Baha'i Faith has become very oppressive and manipulative of > the individual. That to me is merely a statement of fact, as I > have experienced it, for nearly sixteen years now [over 22]. The usual > stratagem in dealing with anyone who would express his conscience > in good faith is to pretend the Cause is above any kind of > criticism whatsoever while intimating that anyone who would speak > honestly must have something wrong with him, i.e., his spiritual > life isn't what it should be, he doesn't understand the nature of > unity, or he's accused of trying to obtain power for himself, > which at times seems merely a calculated way of discrediting the > person, and so on. Another common strategy used to acquire > control over the individual is to humor the person by letting him > pour himself out, etc., and then self-righteously giving him the > Truth."

>

> Ron House, November 14, 1997:
> "I know what you mean. I've found over the years that > there is a technique used by traditional Baha'is and > others to squash dissension: harry the dissenter so > much he says something intemperate, then point out > how 'loving' and 'compassionate' they are and how > nasty the dissenter is. The trouble is that this > technique works, so I've been making a conscious > effort not to fall for it. Also, when they get the > dissenter discouraged and miserable enough, he > invariably makes a slip-up sooner or later that they > can REALLY let loose the venom over. IMHO, they did

- > this to you when you misread Sharon's intentions.
- > At any other time, they would overlook faults, as
- > Baha'u'llah says, but when they're in this mode
- > they go for the jugular. Very sad."
- > <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/House2.htm>
- >
- > June 1998:
- > "Some of the most striking methods demonstrated repeatedly by
- > many Bahais during the last year and a half of discussion about
- > an unmoderated newsgroup is their refusal to listen and respond to
- > the criticisms of those who are in favor of talk.religion.bahai,
- > ignoring their concerns, never responding analytically to their
- > messages and reasoning and logic and evidence, attacking them
- > through character assassination and ad hominem, ganging up
- > on individuals, and "circling the wagons" around every action
- > of the srb moderators or others who are opposed to
- > talk.religion.bahai."
- > "More than twenty different people on my web site have posted messages
- > explaining their experience with srb censorship yet many srb Bahais
- > NEVER address their concerns. Ignoring such charges will not make
- > them go away. NO ONE has to "try" to link the trb interest poll with
- > censorship on srb; the moderators themselves have done that by
- > suppressing droves of people for years. There are many people who
- > believe such suppression is part and parcel of the Bahai
- > community as it exists today. A YES vote need not necessarily
- > support such a belief. There are other reasons Bahais might vote
- > YES."
- >
- > Fran Baker, May 1998:
- > "Just have to say that in my experience this is a common
- > technique of manipulative people in general; it is especially
- > effective with thoughtful people who are willing to see both - > sides of things, i.e., their own fault. I consider this brow-beating
- > technique to be a form of abuse. The only way to deal with it is
- > to call them on it every time and to refuse to let yourself be beat
- > up, i.e., not to do your part of the "tango." This can be very hard
- > to do, but it works. You can break this pattern in a personal
- > relationship. I don't know whether it's possible when a group
- > acts this way. Very scary."
- >
- > Dr. Juan Cole, June 12, 1998:
- > "Let me ask you why in the world you think that I would risk my
- > professional reputation by publicly stating falsehoods? ...The very
- > technique of the more glaze-eyed among these people is to
- > unbearably bully a Baha'i whom they don't like, use unjustified
- > threats of declaring him or her a CB to silence the individual, and
- > if the person will not be silenced, then to depend upon the
- > gullibility
- > of the Baha'is in refusing to listen to any victim's story because, of - > course, the Baha'i institutions are infallible and divinely guided and
- > could never do anything wrong. It is a perfect racket."
- > "Of course, this technique of making liberals go away has been
- > enormously successful, and ex-Baha'i liberals have no credibility
- > with the remaining Baha'is nor do most of them have any energy
- > to continue to make a case, either to the Baha'is or the outside
- > world, for the incredible abuses that go on inside this organization
- > ostensibly committed to tolerance!"
- > <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Cole10.htm>
- >
- > K. Paul Johnson, September 15, 1998:
- > "If that principle [people are innocent until proven guilty]
- > were followed by Baha'i administration and individuals in
- > their condemnations of their fellow believers, I
- > would have very little to complain about regarding Baha'i
- > affairs. But character assassination by innuendo is the
- > preferred way of dealing with anything remotely resembling
- > dissidence. Seems like that's exactly what you're doing to Juan
- > Cole in your message. Saying I don't want to know what you've
- > "got" on him, thus attacking me but insinuating you have some
- > awful proof of unspecified guilt on his part. If that's not
- > character assassination by innuendo, what is?"
- > <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Johnson18.htm>
- >
- > Gibro28W, October 12, 1998:
- > "In summary, the biggest problem, as I see it,
- > is that most Baha'is don't take criticism seriously--they tune it out
- > as

> "negative" or "harmful to spiritual growth." This selfish > attitude is very stupid. First of all, Baha'is entice people to join > them. When they do, they indoctrinate them until they think like the > group. But as soon as a red flare of doubt goes up in the convert's > mind, they're cordoned off by the group and reminded of their > "spiritual" obligations in the name of Baha'u'llah or the "Covenant."
> If left unresolved and doubt gives vent to prolonged criticism, the > convert is sent packing or is kicked out. What we have here is a > broken family that had failed to truly listen to the needs > of its members in the first place."
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb73.htm>
>
> Barthaman on September 14, 1998:
> "Baha'i dissenters, more or less, are wounded souls abandoned > by their fathers, so-to-speak. They have been cast out and > dismissed or shunned without having had a fair hearing. Consider > their pain when the rest of their "family" dismisses them too.
> Can you know what it's like to be accused of heresy and shunned > following a sincere intellectual conflict (inspired by doubt)-- > after you've sacrificed years in devoted service to your religion?
> Can you comprehend their sense of betrayal and injustice? This is > why disillusioned believers leave their religions each year--while > some still hang around, banging on the door now and then, demanding > a refund for their lost youth. In time they will have to move on, > however, writing the Baha'i Faith off as another lesson in fraud.
> Mock these people all you want--but for the grace of God, the next > dissenter could be you. Don't be too confident, my friend."
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb66.htm>
>
> Juan Cole wrote, February 23, 1999:
> "There is nothing to be puzzled by. Right wing Baha'is only like to > hear the sound of their own voices (which are the only voices they > will admit to being "Baha'i" at all)."
>
> "Obviously, the world is so constructed that they cannot in fact only > hear their own voices. They are forced to hear other voices that > differ from theirs. This most disturbs them when the voices come from > enrolled Baha'is or when the voices speak of the Baha'i faith."
>
> "The way they sometimes deal with the enrolled Baha'is is to summon
them
> to a heresy inquiry and threaten them with being shunned if they do not > fall silent."
>
> "With non-Baha'is or with ex-Baha'is, they deal with their speech about > the faith by backbiting, slandering and libelling the speaker. You will > note that since I've been on this list I have been accused of long-term > heresy, of "claiming authority," of out and out lying (though that was > retracted, twice), of misrepresentation, of 'playing fast and loose > with the facts,' and even of being 'delusional.' I have been accused
of > all these falsehoods by *Baha'is*, by prominent Baha'is. I have been > backbitten by them."
>
> "This shows that all the talk about the danger a sharp tongue can do, > all the talk about the need for harmony, for returning poison with > honey, for a sin-covering eye, is just *talk* among right wing > Baha'is. No one fights dirtier than they when they discover a voice > they cannot silence and cannot refute."
>
> "Paul Johnson has seen all these things, as well, for the past five > years. He can explain it to you."
>
> Cf. K. Paul Johnson's general reflections on coercive techniques
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Johnson21.htm>
>
> And LaAeterna's method of silencing opponents
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb65.htm>
>
> Comments on the related techniques of Susan Maneck:
>
> Juan Cole, February 13, 1999:
> "It is a very, very, very weird religion. And if anyone is reading

> Susan Maneck's absolutely bone-chilling screeds on the > desirability of Heresy Trials and carefulness in Shunning, > they are seeing what it is like at the core of the religion."
>
> "I really am sorry for them and her, since they seem sort of filled
with > hate and quite paranoid, yet say they are preaching love, unity and > tolerance. Susan will say, 'may your abdomen be split by lightning > and your guts fall out you filthy heretic whom I wish I could just have > shunned and buried', and then she'll sign herself "warmest" and > slander a university by adding it to her sig line. As if what she is > about has anything at all to do with *universities*!"
>
> February 15, 1999:
> "Ms. Maneck's approach appears to me to be always to > shunt the discussion off or back to who said what where when > why how and so on.... The farther back in time the better, since > the person's memory, being human, is bound to be unable to > keep up or to have stocked the evidence needed on his or her > hard drive or find it on dejanews.com. And it then allows her > to claim pretty much anything she wants to while seeming to > have discredited her opponent. Further, she relies on the > tactics of demagoguery knowing they usually prevail and will be > supported by other fundamentalist Bahais. By shrieking > "slander" and referring to others' opinions as "garbage," she is > able to create an emotional atmosphere that essentially negates > whatever the topic or content might be and that allows her to > appear to win what is often a narrowly legalistic point or > interpretation."
>
> "All of this is done, of course, in conjunction with her employing > the more common Baha'i Techniques of intimidation and > psychological demonization and terrorism."
>
> Maneck's scholarly reference to others' opinions as garbage:
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Maneck3.htm>
>
> Maneck's scholarly reference to others' opinions as litter:
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Maneck7.htm>
>
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Maneck1.htm>
>
> This document at > <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/technique.htm>
>
> See The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>
>
> Professor Juan Cole, of the University of Michigan, > discusses related issues in his journal article "The > Baha'i Faith in America as Panopticon, 1963-1997":
>
> <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/1999/jssr/bhjssr.htm>
>
> Also see:
>
> Full Text of UHJ's Letter of April 7, 1999
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/UHJLetterApril71999.htm>
>
> Juan Cole, "Commentary" on UHJ's "outburst of vehement ignorance"
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Outburst.htm>
>
> Letter of Resignation from Paul Dodenhoff, Assistant to the Auxiliary > Board
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/LetterResignationPD.htm>
>
> --
> Patrick Henry.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"
> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>
>
>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Fred Glaysher <FG@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re: letter of House
Date: Friday, July 02, 1999 4:40 AM

THE UNIVERSAL HOUSE OF JUSTICE BAHA'I WORLD CENTRE

Department of the Secretariat
7 April 1999
To all National Spiritual Assemblies

Dear Baha'i Friends,

Issues Related to the Study of the Baha'i Faith

In May of 1998, Baha'i Canada reproduced a collection of letters which the Universal House of Justice had written to various individuals on the subject of the academic study of the Baha'i Faith. Copies of this compilation were subsequently mailed by the Canadian National Spiritual Assembly to its sister Assemblies. The reprint has now been made generally available in booklet form by the United States Baha'i Publishing Trust. The House of Justice has asked us to forward you a copy of the latter publication with the following comments.

As a number of the friends are aware, a campaign of internal opposition to the Teachings is currently being carried on through the use of the Internet, a communications system that now reaches virtually every part of the world. Differing from attacks familiar in the past, it seeks to recast the entire Faith into a socio-political ideology alien to Baha'u'llah's intent. In the place of the institutional authority established by His Covenant, it promotes a kind of interpretive authority which those behind it attribute to the views of persons technically trained in Middle East studies.

Early in 1996, the deliberate nature of the plan was revealed in an accidental posting to an Internet list which Baha'i subscribers had believed was dedicated to scholarly exploration of the Cause. Some of the people responsible resigned from the Faith when Counsellors pointed out to them the direction their activities were taking. A small number of others continue to promote the campaign within the Baha'i community.

In the past, in situations of a somewhat similar nature, the patience and compassion shown by 'Abdul-Baha and the Guardian helped various believers who had been misled by ill-intentioned persons to eventually free themselves from such entanglements. In this same spirit of forbearance the Universal House of Justice has intervened in the current situation only to the extent that has been unavoidable, trusting to the good sense and the goodwill of the believers involved to awaken to the spiritual dangers to which they are exposing themselves. Nevertheless, certain Counsellors and National Spiritual Assemblies are monitoring the problem closely, and the friends can be confident that whatever further steps are needed to protect the integrity of the Cause will be taken.

As passages in the enclosed reprint make clear, this campaign of internal opposition -- while purporting to accept the legitimacy of the Guardianship and the Universal House of Justice as twin successors of Baha'u'llah and the Centre of His Covenant -- attempts to cast doubt on the nature and scope of the authority conferred on them in the Writings. When other Baha'is have pointed out that such arguments contradict explicit statements of the Master, persons

-----
To all National Spiritual Assemblies
Page 2

7 April 1999

behind the scheme have responded by calling into question the soundness of 'Abdul-Baha's own judgement and perspective. Gradually, these arguments have exposed the view of those involved that Baha'u'llah Himself was not the voice of God to our age but merely a particularly enlightened moral philosopher, one whose primary concern was to reform existing society.

By itself, such opposition would likely stand little chance of influencing reasonably informed Baha'is. As one of the letters in the enclosed reprint (20 July 1997) points out, the scheme relies for effect, therefore, on exploiting the confusion created in modern thought by the reigning doctrines of materialism. Although the reality of God's continuous relationship with His creation and His intervention in human life and history are the very essence of the teachings of the Founders of the revealed religions, dogmatic materialism today insists that even the nature of religion itself can be adequately understood only through the use of an academic methodology designed to ignore the truths that make religion what it is.

In general, the strategy being pursued has been to avoid direct attacks on the Faith's Central Figures. The effort, rather, has been to sow the seeds of doubt among believers about the Faith's teachings and institutions by appealing to unexamined prejudices that Baha'is may have unconsciously absorbed from non-Baha'i society. In defiance of the clear interpretation of 'Abdul-Baha and the Guardian, for example, Baha'u'llah's limiting of membership on the Universal House of Justice to men is misrepresented as merely a "temporary measure" subject to eventual revision if sufficient pressure is brought to bear. Similarly, Shoghi Effendi's explanation of Baha'u'llah's vision of the future Baha'i World Commonwealth that will unite spiritual and civil authority is dismissed in favour of the assertion that the modern political concept of "separation of church and state" is somehow one that Baha'u'llah intended as a basic principle of the World Order He has founded. Particularly subtle is an attempt to suggest that the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar should evolve into a seat of quasi-doctrinal authority, parallel to and essentially independent of the Local House of Justice, which would permit various interests to insinuate themselves into the direction of the life processes of the Cause.

Typically, when misrepresentations of the kind described are challenged, the reaction of those behind the campaign has been to claim that their civil rights are being threatened, an assertion that is of course meaningless in the light of the purely voluntary nature of Baha'i membership. Much emphasis is placed by them also on academic freedom, their view of which proves, on examination, to be merely freedom on their part to pervert scholarly discourse to the promotion of their own ideological agenda, while seeking to exclude from discussion features of the Baha'i Faith that are central to the Writings of its Founders.

The effect of continued exposure to such insincerity about matters vital to humanity's well-being is spiritually corrosive. When we encounter minds that are closed and hearts that are darkened by evident malice, Baha'u'llah urges that we leave such persons to God and turn our attention to the opportunities which multiply daily for the promotion of the truths which He teaches. In words written at the direction of the Guardian, regarding a situation similar to, though much less serious than, the present one, " ... the friends should be advised to just leave these people alone, for their influence can be nothing but negative and destructive...."

-----
To all National Spiritual Assemblies
Page 3

7 April 1999

The enclosed material is being sent to your Assembly less out of concern over the immediate situation, which is being systematically addressed, than because of longer-term considerations to which it lends perspective. What we are currently seeing, in a relatively primitive form, is the emergence of a new kind of internal opposition to Baha'u'llah's Mission. While it will no doubt assume other features as time passes, it is a kind of opposition that takes aim directly at Baha'u'llah's assertion of the spiritual nature of reality and of humanity's dependence on the interventions of Divine Revelation.

Developments of the kind described will come as no surprise to friends who are familiar with the Guardian's description of the successive waves of "crisis" and "victory" that have marked the history of the Faith ever since its inception. It is precisely this cyclical process, Shoghi Effendi says, that has propelled the steady unfoldment of Baha'u'llah's intent, testing our commitment to His Teachings, purifying His community, and releasing a greater measure of the capacities latent in His Revelation. That resistance to Baha'u'llah should now be emerging in yet a new guise is itself a tribute to the gathering strength of the Cause, offering the friends everywhere new opportunities for the deepening of their faith and the energizing of their work.

With loving Baha'i greetings,

---

For Department of the Secretariat

Enclosure

cc: International Teaching Centre

From: <pdodenhoff@my-deja.com>
Subject: Letter of Resignation
Date: Friday, June 25, 1999 10:43 PM

Dear friends,

As you are aware there has been much discussion about the recent letter dated April 7, 1999 from the Universal House of Justice concerning issues related to the study of the Baha'i Faith. And as you know, these issues have long been a serious concern of mine and many others who are engaged in various academic pursuits including the study of religion.

Over the past weeks, I have read the letter from the House many times and given it a great deal of consideration, thought and prayer. When I first read the letter after it appeared on Baha'i Studies, I was shocked. Considering the dialogue that I thought had begun between the Administrative Order and Baha'i scholars in February of 1998 at our meeting in Teaneck, I felt upon reading it, and still do, that this letter painted with a very broad brush all scholars who are engaged in the academic study of religion.

I do not think it would serve here to give a detailed statement of the many points which I find objectionable in the letter. Until now I have maintained a middle position concerning the use of certain methodologies in the study of the Baha'i Faith and have been open regarding the areas in which I agree or disagree with certain individuals or with the Baha'i Administration regarding the role of Baha'i scholars.

However, I do think it necessary to say that, as one who is particularly engaged in the study of New Religious Movements, I find this letter very disturbing. The very tone of the letter displays an attitude which I find difficult to reconcile with my understanding of the Faith of Baha'u'llah. It states clearly that the methods used in the academic study of religion are "designed to ignore the truths that make religion what it is" and that they, and by inference those that use them, are tainted by the "reigning doctrines of materialism." Apart from the fact that this appears to me to reveal at least a misunderstanding of the proper use of methodologies and their purpose in academic studies, this statement has overtones that can only be described, in my opinion, as fundamentalist in nature. This appears to become even more evident as the reference to the emphasis certain individuals place on academic freedom is demonized as an attempt to "pervert scholarly discourse," an assertion I find particularly objectionable. Indeed, it would appear that the proper use of scholarly discourse, according to the inferences made in the letter, should be nothing more than an exercise in apologetics for the Baha'i Faith. I have no quarrel with apologetics and its role in religion. But it has no place in academic studies where the truth claims of any tradition are beyond the purview of the academic endeavor to prove or disprove. These are matters of the spirit and the heart which are beyond the limitation of any methodology to understand. However, despite that limitation, methods are developed to help us understand the actualities of religion in historical and sociological contexts. Without such understanding, and the vital healthy criticism that can strengthen a faith community, religion eventually devolves into mere ritual, superstition, formality and authoritarianism. It may be true that there are some scholars who, even as people of faith, take what appears to be an extreme approach in the use of methodologies when studying religion. I can understand better those of my colleagues who claim no faith as their own or who even reject faith altogether, where in such cases it is appropriate to rely on "materialistic" methods. And I believe that to some extent an understanding is gained through such endeavors. Contrary to the statement in the April 7 letter, though, I have never met nor have I ever heard any scholar of religion claim that "religion itself can be adequately understood only through the use of an academic methodology." Indeed, it has been my experience that most are still not agreed on what constitutes a proper definition of religion. Yes, there are some who may claim to fully understand religion and who take an adversarial stance against anything that would reflect an attitude of faith, but I have found, to the credit of the academy, that this is not reflective of all scholars. Most simply object to the attempt to inject ideas such as revelation or spirit into an academic discussion of religion, an objection with which I concur. It seems that the April 7 letter reveals a desire within Baha'i Administration to "have ones cake and eat it, too" for while it rejects these methodologies as "dogmatic materialism" it seeks to be accepted, on terms of its own making, into the very arena of discourse it so decries, an arena in which method, not revelation, is the tool used to understand religion. Yet, it is true that methods are simply tools which, like scholarship in general, have a proper and an improper use. Now one may not approve of the way an individual or individuals use their tools and is free to express that disapproval. But in doing so, one should not be surprised if they receive an equal amount of criticism for the manner in which they use their own tools! In this case, the April 7 letter from the House criticizes _what they perceive to be_ an improper use of methodologies. Is it any surprise, then, that some scholars who work with those methodologies, Baha'i and non-Baha'i, are critical of the application of something as subjective as revelation and faith in engaged academic discourse? I think not. Rather than seeking common ground and _on an active, daily basis, engaging in serious consultation _for the purpose of understanding each other_ both sides have become polarized, a situation exacerbated by this letter. It is unfortunate and not a little frightening to read this letter with its "us against them" tone so prominently displayed. More than that, it is saddening to see that the letter did not make any attempt to assure the NSA's to whom it was sent that this may not be a reference to all Baha'i academics. In light of the recent events in some parts of the U.S., where some individuals have been subjected to the indignity of an investigation because of their beliefs, one would suppose that such assurances would be included in the letter. While it may be argued that the letter was meant to be private, only for the NSA's, one should not be surprised that it turned up on the internet and that it caused such pain. More surprising than that, I believe, is the publishing of it in the latest edition of Baha'i Canada without any commentary or contextualization. Imagine the effect this will no doubt have on those who are already suspicious of academic methods and those that engage in academic study! More than the letter itself, I find this action particularly irresponsible.

As I said above, I was shocked when I first read this letter. I was also very angry. And I suppose that in some measure I still am. But over the past few weeks consideration of the contents of this letter have caused Lisa and I to step back and reconsider some of the issues which concern us, particularly those with which we have struggled as members of the Baha'i Faith. The result has been a recognition that, despite our love for the Baha'i Faith, and for the many friends we have made as part of the Baha'i community, there are some issues which, if we are to be honest with ourselves and with the Baha'i Faith, call for an obedience which we cannot give.

One of these, for me, is the issue of review, a process which I find repressive and distasteful as a scholar, and one to which I simply would not submit. Despite the assurances that it is only temporary, it is still a present reality which shows no sign of being abolished in the near future.

Another is the ban on living as a practicing homosexual while a Baha'i. Both Lisa and I have always taken a clear stand on gay and lesbian rights. For us, that clearly meant that gays and lesbians have the right to live _completely_ in same-sex relationships, including marriage and child-rearing. Indeed, we can point to many gay friends who have marriage relationships which put many heterosexual marriages to shame and who are raising happy, well-adjusted children. It was not until after I became a Baha'i that I learned, on my own, of the teachings on this issue. I was dismayed, but tried to convince myself that I could live with this and could simply be quiet on the issue. Lisa became a Baha'i thinking that it would be easy enough to avoid the issue, and both of us held out hope that the Faith would soon change its stand on this issue. By the time it became a reality that this would not happen, we had convinced ourselves, or so we thought, that the issue wasn't important. Similarly, we had the same feelings concerning women serving on the House of Justice.

But, over the past weeks, we have come to realize just how important these and other social matters are to us. We became convinced that the spiritual reality of the Mashriqu'l-Adkhar has been, for the most part, forgotten or ignored. Having been raised in a tradition in which I was, from my earliest years on, engaged in social welfare work, I find and Lisa does as well, that I am uncomfortable with the spending of Baha'i funds for the Arc project while there are so many other ways in which they could be used to help so many who desperately need it. While I do not wish to be critical, I must express my doubt that the completion of the Arc will mean little to the single mother trying to raise children on her own or the homeless family who have no place to sleep other than unsafe shelters or cardboard boxes. And while some may say that we should use "individual initiative" in such matters (which we do), and while we grant there are many individual Baha'is who do such vital work, it must be acknowledged that Baha'is are a _community_ and as such should be addressing these issues as a body of believers on the local, national and international levels in equal measure to those of other traditions.

Most distressing, though, has been the growing sense of fear that can be observed within certain parts of the Baha'i community. As an assistant, I have grown increasingly uncomfortable with the seeming need to keep track of and report on the activities of individuals, something which I initially thought to be necessary to protect the Covenant and serve the cause. But recent events have convinced Lisa and me that such practices, and especially the notion that anyone may at any time be "investigated," are out of keeping with both the teachings of Baha'u'llah and with who we are and what we believe about the essence of religion. Having been raised in a tradition in which I was constantly fearful of "losing my salvation" due to some action or thought, a notion with which I lived for much of my life, I will not allow such fear to again stifle the spiritual growth of myself or that of my family.

Central to the Baha'i Faith is a trust in the institutions of the Administrative Order and, one would assume, a trust of the individual by the Administration. I have increasingly come to lose that trust in the Administrative Order, and especially with the release of this latest letter. Let me be clear, though, that this does not reflect in any way on the individual members of those institutions, most of whom I have never met. I am certain that they are all doing the best they can in their positions to administer the affairs of the Baha'i Faith in a faithful and honest manner, even as they are subject to human frailties, which we believe can indeed interfere with openness to and understanding of the Divine will, a human predicament with which we all wrestle.

As a result of this recognition, we believe that it is best for us, and for the Baha'i Faith, to formally submit our resignation. In doing so, we recognize that there will be some who will, despite anything we may say, accuse us of rejecting Baha'u'llah. However, as one's faith can be conditioned by no one but one's self, we want to make clear here that we still believe Baha'u'llah to be the Manifestation of God. Our relationship to and understanding of Baha'u'llah is something which we must work out for ourselves apart from "official" involvement within the Administrative Order of the Baha'i Faith. I believe it is necessary to also state for the record, despite our resignation, we believe that, based on the evidence of the texts, it is clear that the legitimate authority for the Baha'i community is the Universal House of Justice whose seat is on Mt. Carmel and the Administrative Order in the various parts of the globe. We reject, simply based on facts, any pretense to authority of any other alleged "Baha'i" body or individuals.

Most importantly, we believe that by resigning, we will avoid being a cause of disunity within the community. For were we to remain, we could not, in good conscience, remain silent about these and other issues which are important to us.

Our purpose in writing this letter has been only to explain, perhaps at greater length than we initially desired, why we are taking this step. Our decision has been our own. There have been some close friends with whom we have discussed this matter and who have given us their honest advice. None of them have advised us to leave, some have suggested we stay and try to just "go about our business," but all of them have given their support and love and all will remain our close friends. We pray that this is true for all of you whom we have had the great bounty of knowing and still love with all our hearts.

With warmest love,
Paul and Lisa Dodenhoff

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't. From: Mr Mahdi <mrmahdi@aol.com>
Subject: Re: Article by Vance Salisbury concerning the bahai faith
Date: Friday, December 17, 1999 12:10 AM

One of the most stupid people I ever encountered speaks again after finding out that fake Hadith about the "27 letters" doesn't exist (Adelard, what happened, you found out that fake hadith didn't exist, that is why you didn't post here in a while?):

> Unlikely in former religions like Islam, when a mullah (i.e., a > Khomeini) could impose some understandings and beliefs of Koran on > believers,

What a stupid ignorant statement. There are no "mulla" in Islam, mulla is a shi'a invention. Furthermore, Muhammad (saaw), the Sahabah (ra), etc., were never "mullas."

And your statement of "mullas imposing understanding and beliefs of koran" shows how ignorant and biased you are when it comes to Islam. No "mulla" told me what the Quran meant, most of the Quran is clear and certain verses requires deeper understanding because of the historicity and implications of the verses. Islam has no clergy, Muhammad (saaw) and the Sahabah (ra) were never clergy.

Your simple-minded blind faith makes you ignore the numerous editing in your books. Abdul baha made countless number of false prophecies, mistakes, blunders, etc., but despite this, your simplicity and spiritual and intellectual gullibleness makes you STILL believe in the bahai faith. Bahais realized the mistakes of bahauallah, bab, abdul baha and others, so as a selfish dishonest religion, they had to edit their own books hoping to cover up the lies and mistakes.

>The bahai faith is not a mullahood and califatism, our decisions are made >in committees with consultation .

Man this guy is ignorant. There is consultation in Islam, it is called SHURA!!!

The rest of post was nothing but a pro-censorship advertisement. This just shows how "insincere" you are when it comes to the truth, and that you want to hide and censor certain information that tells the truth about your false religion. And people have the nerve to attack Fred Glaysher for exposing the censorship and extremism within the bahai faith.

Mahdi

<https://hometown.aol.com/mrmahdi>From: "Milissa Boyer Kafes" <milissa8320@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights & Marshall Case
Date: Monday, April 03, 2000 12:24 AM

In article <8c7rb60kqu@news2.newsguy.com>,
"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@email.msn.NOSPAMcom> wrote:
>
> Milissa Boyer Kafes <milissa8320@my-deja.com> wrote in message > news:8c71av$ktiv$1@nnrp1.deja.com...
> > So, it seems that Baha'is say material things, like property, and civil > > rights are protected but the *soul* is fair game.
>
> First of all, that's not "Baha'is", Ms. Kafes. It's just me. Singular.
> Please don't go attributing my individual opinion to the institutions or to > Baha'is in general. I don't recall ever saying that I'm supposed to be a > spokesperson for the Baha'i Faith, and I will, quite frankly, thank you to > not try to turn me into one.

"Baha'is" was a reference to the Faith proper, not you particularly or as a spokesperson for the Faith. So I will, quite frankly, thank you for not twisting my words, Mr Schaut! geez!

> > Secondly, my contention isn't about any abstract notion of "protection".
> It's my opinion that these are the things protected by the Universal > Declaration of Human Rights, and that this declaration cannot reasonably be > construed to apply to the mutual agreement between individual and > organization regarding membership in that organization.

Actually, one would reasonably expect that, in an organization founded directly by God Himself, a person would have *more* rights than in a document conceived by mere mortals. The NSA does say that human rights are God-given rights. If they are given by God and not by secular society, then it is reasonable to assume that they would be upheld within God's organization as well as without.

But people should at least be aware of the fact that they will be expected to give up some of the rights guaranteed to them by secular society when they become Baha'i. I believe that the Faith, by touting how wonderful the UDHR is, is obscuring that fact in their promotional literature. When the NSA wrote: "an equal standard of human rights must be upheld throughout the world" they should have been more forthcoming and wrote: "an equal standard of human rights must be upheld throughout the world, except by us since we are a voluntary organization."

- > Thirdly, the reason for stating that none of Ms. Marshall's civil rights have
- > been curtailed in the slightest degree is to show that, unlike other
- > religious organizations to which the Baha'i Faith has been compared in this
- > very thread, Baha'i institutions do not resort to any infringement of any
- > civil liberty in order to coerce people into remaining members of the Faith
- > or to "punish" (if that's even the right word) people for leaving the Faith.

What I am looking at is the reverse. If someone wants to belong to the Faith, and has broken no Baha'i law, how can they be coerced into leaving it?

- > Lastly, how does one reach the conclusion that the soul is "fair game"? I'm - > afraid I simply don't follow the reasoning. Are you claiming that the due
- > process provisions enshrined in documents like the Universal Declaration of - > Human Rights should be extended to questions of membership in the Baha'i
- > Faith merely because, within the Baha'i Faith, having one's membership card
- > handed back is considered to have significant consequences? Why should any
- > secular standard be imposed on Baha'i institutions for what is a completely
- > internal matter? Are the due process provision that exist within the Baha'i
- > Faith somehow inadequate for the protection of basic human rights? If so,
- > please demonstrate how.

You say that "the due process provision that exist within the Baha'i Faith"...I have to ask what due process provision was followed in this case? Alison got an email message informing her of the decision completely out of the blue! And it was vague. She was not accused of breaking any specific law. If there is no due process for an internal matter involving a Baha'i, how can non-Baha'is be sure that, in the event a country becomes majority Baha'i, they as the minority will be protected? You can tout this as an internal matter all you want, but how internal matters are handled are the **only** way for non-Baha'is to judge whether you are any good or not. You won't be judged solely on nice sounding proclamations and statements from your administrative institutions.

So, since there was no process at all in this case, its impossible to tell how it compares to the secular standard! And the fact that such an event, an expulsion, has such serious **spiritual** consequences, (according to Shoghi Effendi) the fact that due process (**however** you define it!), that any process, was not followed is amazing, in the least. This is what I mean by the soul being fair game.

But, in the end, it seems the real sticking point is this whole "mutual agreement" idea. When you made your **mutual agreement** with the Faith, did you agree that they had the right to summarily expel you, and give you no specific reason for doing so? **mutual** means it has to go both ways, which is why you have to look at not only at the right of an organization to define membership but also at the rights of the member who, having lived up to their agreement, want to remain.

Peace,
Milissa Boyer Kafes
milissabk@freewwwweb.com

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: TLCULHANE <tlculhane@aol.com>
Subject: My case - a letter to my friends
Date: Wednesday, July 28, 1999 2:12 PM

Dear Friends,

I had hoped my case would not be a topic of public conversation and especially an uninformed topic of conversation. One of the dangers of lack of knowledge is sheer speculation that allows for the assertion of preformed ideological templates to dominate discourse.

Please consider this an open letter to my friends. It will be the only public response I will make. If anyone wishes to continue to speak with me about it I will do that in a private conversation as among friends.

In February I had a meeting with two ABm's. The original purpose of the meeting was to gather information about a workshop I had presented at Bosch Bahai school. Two people (out of 62 attendees) had written to the House of Justice protesting what they understood about my comments.

The House of Justice passed the 'protest message' to the NSA and the Continental Counselors for follow up. The Counselors in turn authorized two ABm's to meet with me to gather information about what had taken place at Bosch. So far so good.

One of the ABm's concluded that this was an opportunity to do more than inquire after information. This person effectively conducted the meeting as though it was an interrogation of my theological views among them my views of the station of Baha u llah, my interest in the Maiden writings of Baha u llah and ,of course, my discussion of the Mashriqu l Adhkar . That was the problem as well as how the meeting was arranged and conducted by the ABm.

I was not informed two ABm's would be present, nor who authorized the meeting or to whom the ABm's would be reporting.

Friends I am quite human and cycled through a series of emotions from anger to betrayal,to disgust, to bewilderment and frustration and relief. I went thorough this twice, once in February and again in May after the April 7 letter became public.

How did I handle this 'test' of my faith and why have I *chosen* to remain a Bahai? The simple explanation is I love Baha u llah. As many of you know I am a mystic by temperament which explains my attraction to the spiritual and social reality of the Mashriqu l Adhkar and the "Maiden " writings of Baha u llah. Both times during my "emotional cycle" S/He came to me and I was draped in that "silken Robe of Light." As best I can describe in words we "talked" about my pain and anguish and " My distress and banishment in this remote prison." This is the personal God who reached in and touched my soul and said I understand and shared with me that "perfume of a grace which to tongue can describe." I was reminded that "this not a field for the foolish and faint of heart." If I thought the vision of Baha u llah was easily realized, that all the hope and redemption that His message represents was attainable without effort or without transformation I learned better. The course of human history in general and religious history in particular will change but it will be through multigenerational blood sweat and spiritual tears.

In the midst of this struggle I wrote to the Counselors and the House of Justice , the latter on March 30. I have met with Counselor Birkland twice and we have spoken fro several hours about my case and what I called in my letter to the House the "far too widespread culture of fear and suspicion in the community.

The Counselor extened me an apology for what happened and he assumed responsibility for it. There was no passing the buck or kicking the proverbial dog in his response to me. Our conversations were honest ,open and reflective on both our parts. He was gracious and loving in his conversations with me. he also clearly said to me that as Counselor he has no problem with my theological views and they were not at issue. This saga has also affected my community and he has been most supportive of the LSA and its goals and has publically expressed that support. I have greast respect for anyone who is capable of admitting mistakes,assuming responsibility for them and looking for ways to move forward and heal divisions and misunderstandings. This is exactly how Counselor Birkland responded to me and therfore it can be stated I have great respect for his character as a man.

In the course of my conversations with the Counselor and my observation of his interaction with the LSA and the community I have been able to observe in action what I write about as the *ethic* of consultation and its requirements of mutual recognition and reciprocity. I understand consultation to be a *non adversarial* form of communicative action and the recognition and reciprocity involved is fundamentally about the recognition (the irfan) that we are all made in the image and likeness of God. That is the starting point of Bahai discourse in my view. I have observed the Counselor engage what I write about. I had similar conversations with Counselor Ghadirian, and Paul Dodenhoff will understand my reference here, whom I found to be an example of Abraham Heschels "analysis of piety."

In late May the famous April 7 letter became public. I was very concerned about its reference to the Mashriqu'l Adhkar as I had raised this question directly with the House in my March 30 letter to them. This letter, which I have said before and will state again is one of the more poorly written letters to come from the World Centre. Poor writing style is something which can be clarified and improved upon. It is not *proof* of dictatorial behavior. On May 26 I wrote a summary of my views of the Mashriqu'l Adhkar and sent a copy of it, with reference to my March 30 letter to the House of Justice. On May 31 I received a letter from the House of Justice which stated:

"The House of Justice very much appreciates the clarity and candor of your expression in regard to the issues troubling you. It wishes, first of all, for you to be assured that it did not say or feel that you had violated any of its policies or had been disobedient to it in relation to your discussions about the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar."

The response of the House of Justice is hardly a case of "Plausibility structures and denial. I am perfectly capable of discussing "plausability" as it is used in the sociology of knowledge especially as formulated by Berger and Luchmann. The ideological twist to it is inaccurate on theoretical grounds and inapplicable to the comments of the House of Justice. Their letter was a response to my questions two months earlier before anything related to the April 7 letter became a public issue. The disingenuous combination of the sociological concept of plausability structures with the ideological concept of "plausible denial" is an example of a preformed template that will generate conclusions even in the absence of substantive knowledge of a case. In this situation the facts of my case.

My conversations with the Counselors have reinforced my conviction that this comment in the April 7 letter did not and was not intended to refer to my actions. As early as March 20 Counselor Birkinad reiterated that point to me in our conversation. I also know for a *fact* that the Counselor had been in communication with the World Centre about my case and that the House wanted the Counselor to meet with me and resolve this problem.

Furthermore the House of Justice wrote:

"That the meeting to which you were invited by the Auxiliary Board members became a cause of distress to you is deeply regretted by the House of Justice. But it was glad to learn from your email that Counsellor Stephen Birkland met with you subsequently in a sympathetic attempt to remedy the difficulties of your experience. You should therefore feel assured that your concern has been taken seriously and an earnest attempt made to deal with it. The House of Justice trusts that the burden of your heart has thus been relieved and that you can now refocus your energies on continuing your dedicated service to the Cause."

Friends, dictators and totalitarians do not express deep regret that a soul was distressed or estranged by certain actions. They most assuredly do not take steps or direct that steps be taken to resolve the anguish or distress of *one human being. yet that is exactly what the House of Justice did in my case. They intervened on my behalf because of the mistakes that were made in my case by Institutional representatives.

For anyone who is unable to distinguish between acts of love and care and hypocritical PR damage control I have compassion. This kind of cynical linkage is an example of Orwellian newspeak where love becomes hate. Are we really so long gone and so far from Baha'u'llah that acts of love, kindness, magnanimity cannot be perceived for what they are? Is the world truly that barren?

I am many things but Pollyanna is not one of them. I am Jamesian twice born soul who has hope. And that hope involves believing in spite of the evidence and watching the evidence change. It is easy to be cynical. In a world that needs the hope and promise that life can be lived at a higher level and that needs to know human history can change, however slowly or haltingly cynicism and prolonged despair is a betrayal of the centuries long aspirations of human beings. I believe with all my heart that anyone, of whatever background or religious tradition who indulges such despair has not simply forgotten God but has forgotten humanity. My challenge to my friends is to forego the temptation of cynicism and despair because the "wondrous system" of Baha u llah has not attained perfection. Perfection and transformation do not happen in the abstract they happen with real human beings. The "system" of Baha u llah will only function as well as the people who comprise it. There is much work to be done and it is the spiritual obligation of each of us to engage the struggle of hope and redemption in both its meaning of overcoming 'sin' and imperfection and as the fulfillment of a promise.

I don't say this in ignorance. I say this as one who has had his faith severely tested in ways that are only meaningful to me. In the past year both my daughters bran surgery and stroke and my theological interrogation have been major spiritual battles. They have rocked me at the core of me being. Baha u llah upped the ante for Terry Culhane. I want to "see": my beloved and She says "how many Husayns greater than thee have professed their love. I hope my willingness to engage the struggle and keep turning to Baha ullah is some measure of my love. I often said that if one wants Paradise, Baghdad the abode of peace, the road to that *place* passes through Tehran and the Siyah Chal. Each of us has our Siyah Chal our secret place of fear and despair of dreams lost and hopes dashed. Yet I can say that we are never alone, the odor of that silken Robe of Light is there. Our response is a matter of "learning the art of love's ways and the secret of heart surrender." My dear friends go ahead and learn that art and surrender. Give yourself permission! I am a nobody, a garden level mystic who Baha u llah did not abandon and who the House of Justice did not abandon.

The House is keenly aware of the limitations and imperfections of the community, including the functioning of its administrative bodies. And they did not ask me to pretend all was yet paradise, there was no denial nor attempt to stifle me or shut me up. They acknowledge reality but they refuse to sink into a cynical despair.

They offered me the same challenge Baha u llah has offered me to believe and do the work in spite of any evidence and to watch and make the evidence change.

In response to my concerns about problems "mistakes" and the culture of fear and suspicion that I noted they wrote"

" A perspective that may assist in your review of the experience is that the institutions of the Faith operating throughout the world, like individual believers, are struggling to achieve the high ideals set for them in the Writings, and they inevitably make some mistakes even with the best of motives. Fortunately, the consequences of such mistakes often provide them with the empirical bases for shaping their evolution towards maturity. To the extent that the individuals affected are able to deal successfully, both spiritually and practically, with the tests involved, the institutions and individuals derive mutual benefits. The believers and their God-given institutions are intimately joined in a common endeavor to advance the development of a new World Order. A significant degree of magnanimity on the part of each is essential."

The House of Justice openly acknowledges mistakes were made and have been made. Please be fair in your judgement. Do dictators openly acknowledge mistakes on the part of governing bodies and express *hope* that both those governing bodies and the individuals harmed will learn from them and move forward?

They express the recognition that mistakes are trying and can cause "distress" to souls. They also express the *Hope* that individuals such as myself will 'hang in there.' And most important they recognize that 'hanging in there' requires 'magnanimity'. Even a dictionary can provide us with the richness and challenge of the concept of magnanimity. Yet in the midst of all that and in the recognition of mistakes they asked me to consider the struggles of the Institutions in our common enterprise. In other words they asked me to consult, to put *my money where my mouth is about consultation as mutual recognition and reciprocity. That recognition is that we are in this together. Notwithstanding that request they close that section of my letter with the following comment.

" This does not mean, of course, that mistaken actions on their part should be ignored."

Again be fair in your judgement. Do those bent on dictatorial control suggest that mistakes should not be ignored.?

There is no monolithic system around the Bahai world bent on crushing people. There are folks everywhere with varying perceptions of what is important about the Faith of Baha u llah. We all have to face the struggle to engage the standards of Baha u llah and not succumb to cynicism and despair when the inevitable imperfections and "mistakes" appear. That is even more true when we encounter the bona fide jerks within the community. Baha u llah promised many things in His redemptive message. He did not promise that jerks would not become Bahais. How do we respond to mistakes -- with magnanimity and with the expectation that consultation must and will take place to address mistakes. That consultation is a non adversarial communicative ethic that recognizes and reciprocates the spiritual dignity and humanity, the likeness of God present in each participant.

What message do *I* see in my recent situation? I do not see evidence of a monolithic power structure. I see abundant evidence of people willing to work to overcome divisions and heal hearts and minds. I see people watching my response without my knowing it. Far from driving a wedge between people, between believers and governing bodies it appears my experience and my response are doing something else. I know of three people who have enrolled as Bahai's because of my experience. I know of at least a dozen more, previously unknown to me who have been uninvolved or marginally involved in the community but who have come out of the woodwork and want to engage the spiritual struggle to transform themselves and offer hope and redemption to the world. That is the message of my case. If it were in my power that is the message I would offer to you my friends in your journey to the land of the Most Holy.

warmest regards,

Terry Culhane
From: David Fiorito and Jennifer Spotila <fiospots@pond.com>
Subject: Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed
Date: Saturday, December 11, 1999 1:55 PM

So what is that opinion. And please do not tell me to go look through endless stacks of posts on your site. I want you to talk about this with me. I want to understand your opinion of me because you have no idea who I am, or what my character is like, because you have never taken the time to find out.

Take the time. You may find that you and I have more in common than you think.

Peace,

Dave

Patrick Henry wrote in message ...

>My opinion of fellow Bahais like you is well known.

>

>--

>Patrick Henry.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"

>The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:

><https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

>

>

><dfiorito@my-deja.com> wrote in message news:82rdgo$735$1@nnrp1.deja.com...

>> (sorry if this is a repeat post MyDeja is acting funny)

>>

>> I never assume that anyone is a Covenant Breaker, and I do not look up >> the membership of everyone on the list.

>>

>> Fred made a claim that he is a registered member of the Baha'i >> community. To lend this claim credence he scanned his membership card >> and posted it on his website.

>>

>> He is a controversial figure and makes many claims. I sought to verify >> the truth of his claim to membership in the US Baha'i Community. That >> membership could not be confirmed.

>>

>> This is not a value judgement - just a fact. My opinion of Fred will >> remain private. I make no accusations or threats. I merely researched >> one of his claims and it turns out to be false.

>>

>> Peace,

>>

>> Dave

>>

>>

>> Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

>> Before you buy.

>

>

From: Kathy Pascoe <kathy@scconsult.com>
Subject: Re: Hooper Dunbar and Austin Powers
Date: Sunday, June 27, 1999 11:10 AM

On Sun, 27 Jun 1999 14:19:30 GMT, rreini@wwnet.net (Roger Reini) wrote:

> On Sun, 27 Jun 1999 06:44:49 -0400, "Patrick Henry" > <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com> wrote:
>
> >Bahai fundamentalists regularly spy and report > >on other Bahais. Rick Schaut is one of the official > >hacks given such duties here on talk.religion.bahai.
>
> This is untrue. There are no spies in the Baha'i Faith.

Um, Roger? I have to agree with Fred (and Juan and Michael McKenny and anyone else who's pointed this out). If someone is forwarding your email messages to someone else to check them out and determine if you're straying from the path, there most certainly are spies in the faith.

--

Kathy Pascoe ~ kathy@scconsult.com (at home)
Confused about newsgroups? Visit <news:news.newusers.questions>From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: quotations re soc.religion.bahai censorship
Date: Tuesday, April 27, 1999 8:06 AM

A clear and irrefutable disclosure that the BCCA does indeed own and run soc.religion.bahai....

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm> On talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, and AOL: Keyword Bahai or Newsgroups

Boatright Family wrote in message <1104_925057592@rickboat>...

>As most of you know, Soc.Religion.Bahai is a moderated >newsgroup.
>
>That means, that all posts to SRB go through a single gateway >machine. Unfortunately, that gateway has become unreliable of >late, and the sponsors who provide ISP service to SRB are >attempting to replace it with a newer computer.
>
>Until that happens, occasional service delays like the failing a >couple of weeks ago may continue on SRB.
>
>We are really sorry, and if anyone has a pentium class computer >in the 75 to 133 MHz range with 128 meg of ram that they >would like to donate to BCCA please let me know.
>
>Rick Boatright
>co-moderator
>soc.religion.bahai
>

Boatright Family wrote in message <1103_925057137@rickboat>...

>Well, perhaps a word is in order from one of us.
>
>Seldom enough do any of the moderators of SRB choose to >post. In general, we have agreed among ourselves not to >participate in the fray _IN_ srb, and generally, we try to stay out >of the fray _OFF_ srb too.
>
>There are serious differences between what the various >moderators will post, with myself clearly the most "liberal" >among the group.
>
>However, we try to stay focused on the charter of the >newsgroup, that is, SRB is chartered for discussion of the >BELIEFS AND TEACHINGS OF THE BAHA'I FAITH. Collateral >discussions, about the administration of SRB, about the beliefs >of individuals, personal histories of faith or of accusation, none >of these has any place in that newsgroup.
>
>In addition, a few years back, the moderators faced a crisis of >faith regarding those who promote a belief in an alternace >succession of authority within the Baha'i Faith. Long and heart >breaking discussion about freedom of speech, the role of the >internet, and our personal faith, led to the conclusion that >Baha'u'llah's injunction to shun Covenant breakers means shun, >and that we would not post messages by known cb's and would >not post messages arguing in favor of an alternate succession >of authority within the faith. This was, and continues to be a >horrid burdon.

>

>At this time, posts get rejected for several reasons.

>

>1) not about the beliefs and teachings of the Baha'i Faith

>2) argumentative, not polite, insulting, obnoxious, rude. -- you >may say anything you like about the other persons position, but >you may say nothing about them. the moderators INSIST on >polite discourse

>3) the alternate authority argument above

>4) signal to noise repetative multiple answer to the same >quesiton.

>

>I know of no other reasons for rejection in the past year.

>

>The second is a _very_ subjective and individual decision.

>Each person on the hot seat has to choose for themselves >where to draw that line.

>

>Anyone interested in applying for a position as a mod, is >welcome to ask. It is a horrid, difficult, painful, hard, task.

>

>Rick Boatright

>co-moderator

>soc.religion.bahai

>

From: The142857 <the142857@aol.com>

Subject: Re: This Sect Has No Future (indeed)

Date: Friday, August 06, 1999 5:20 PM

Leo Tolstoy was bright indeed. He saw right through that charlaton right away.

God bless him for his ability to discern.

>Subject: This Sect Has No Future

>From: "Mesbah Javid" 11111174@3web.net

>Date: Sat, 24 July 1999 02:23 PM EDT

>Message-id: <7nd27b$akv$1@iceman.tac.net>

>

>Stages of an Investigation of Truth by Leo Tolstoy:

>

> 'Sir, Thank you for sending me the book by >Baha'u'llah. I regret that I am obliged to say that reading >this book has completely put me off Baha'u'llah's teachings.

>This book merely contains insignificant and pretentious >phrases which have no other purpose but to confirm the old >superstitions which are completely devoid of any moral and >religious content, in the true sense of that word.

>Nevertheless, I am very grateful for your letter and the >book and please accept my warmest regards.'

> [Leo Tolstoy to Hippolyte Dreyfus, 18 April 1904]

>

>

> 'Dear friend, I was very interested by Baha'ism, and >I know all about it. I believe this sect has no future...'

> [Leo Tolstoy to Ernest Crosby, 31 July 1904]

>

>

> 'Babism, which has evolved into Baha'ism

>(Baha'u'llah), and which has its roots in Islam, is one of >the highest and purest of religious teachings. I will be >very happy if you find my reply satisfying.'

> [Leo Tolstoy to Fridul Khan Badalbekov, Dec. 1908]

>

>

> 'I very much regret not being able to set a great >value on the ideas you sent me. There's absolutely no sense >in it. Generally, the more I become acquainted with the >Baha'i teachings the less I appreciate them, and that is why

>I hesitate to write a book on this subject.'
> [Tolstoy to Mirza Ali-Akbar Nakhjavani, ~Dec. 1909]
>
>
> 'Thank you very much for your letter and the book (I >haven't yet received the book). I am putting together a >series of approachable little books, from the point of view >of both price and contents, dealing with the most important >religious doctrines in the world. I wish to compose a book >about the Baha'is, which is why I am glad to have received >documentation indispensable to this publication.'
> [Tolstoy to Nakhjavani, ~Feb 1910]
>
>
> 'I know the Baha'i teachings, and I am in agreement >with its basic principles, except for the belief in the >infallibility of its founders and a few other details.'
> [Tolstoy to A.A. Kasimov, ~April 1910]
>
>
>[Luigi Stendardo: LEO TOLSTOY AND THE BAHAI FAITH;
>George Ronald, Oxford, 1985
>ISBN 0-85398-214-7 & 5]
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

From: <dfiorito@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: loyal opposition in Baha'i
Date: Friday, December 17, 1999 2:02 PM

A very eloquent post indeed.

There is one thing about this whole topic that I find troubling. It may be the very same thing that troubled the UHJ when these issue first surfaced a few years ago.

We in the west have _more_ freedom as citizens of our nation than we do as members of any faith and we just can't seem to reconcile the two. Every faith has laws and a structure that channels our behavior and conduct. It seems we value our legal rights over our religious responsibilities.

We have free will. We can choose to do whatever we want. But in the Baha'i Faith such freedom is not a part of God's Will. Several places in the Kitab-i-Aqdas such freedom is equated with the animal which we are to rise above.

"Say: True liberty consisteth in man's submission unto My commandments, little as ye know it. Were men to observe that which We have sent down unto them from the Heaven of Revelation, they would, of a certainty, attain unto perfect liberty."

-- Bahá'u'lláh, The Kitab-i-Aqdas, p.63-64

An one of His commandments is:

"It is incumbent upon all to be obedient unto them [the House of Justice]."

-- Bahá'u'lláh, The Kitab-i-Aqdas, p.91

And from 'Abdul-Baha:

"All must consider themselves to be of the order of subjects, submissive and obedient to the commandments of God and the laws of the House of Justice."

-- `Abdu'l-Bahá, Selections from the Writings of Abdul-Baha, p.68

In many places in the writings this obedience is extended to all administrative bodies. Does that mean that there are no channels for dissenting views - no. Consultation allows for dissent. It is a place for disagreement to be resolved.

Again we are confronted with the problem we face in the west. Once a decision has been made and the administration has spoken we, if we wish to remain faithful to the Covenant of Baha'u'llah, must be obedient and support the decision. Not to take our grievance to a public forum whether that is here on the Net or in some magazine.

If we do that, then how have we been obedient. How have we followed Baha'u'llah's definition of Liberty.

From the very beginning of the Faith Baha'is who constantly, publicly, and unwaveringly opposed the Faith were removed from the community. Why should it be any different today when Baha'u'llah made it clear that it was His Will to do so.

God asks us to do some very difficult things. Being submissive and obedient are two things that we in the west do not do well but we need to do.

Peace,

Dave

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: <dfiorito@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed
Date: Thursday, December 16, 1999 12:39 PM

For those who are interested in the mechanics. I made a request to membership services at national. I provided them with Fred's name and Baha'i ID# (made public by Fred on his website). At first they said they could not confirm his membership and it went no further.

I made a second inquiry for clarification and this is the email I received:

>To: Mr. David Fiorito
>
>Dear Baha'i Friend,
>
>In response to your inquiry about the status of Mr. Fredrick Glaysheer, the >records of the Baha'i National Center reflect that Mr. Glaysheer's name was >removed from the membership rolls in February 1999, and he is not considered >to be a member of the Baha'i Faith.
>
>With loving Baha'i greetings,
>
>***** * *****
>For the Office of the Secretary

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: "Ron House" <house@usq.edu.au>
Subject: Re: Answering to Other Names (Re: Infallibility and Sniping the AO)
Date: Friday, April 07, 2000 12:20 AM

Adelard R wrote:

> >I wasn't aware your name was also Rick Schaut?! Although I have wondered > >at times whether Rick was not but an evil twin of Pat
>
> Gee!! your posting is very insulting .Nima,I am sure you know that > Insults are very cheap.

> I feel you have an anger on you! why? If people don't share ideas or > beliefs like that of yours , live with it.

Nima _was_ living with it, until the US NSA spied on him after he ceased to be involved with the faith, and informed on him to the Australian NSA after he moved to this country. So now he's here giving out a serve of medicine. What goes around comes around; that sort of miserable dishonest behaviour breeds hostility. It's that simple.

> Or try to have a constructive discussion without insults.insults can't > change someone's heart, instead knowledge can succeed it .

OK, you're big on hearts; try using your compassion to imagine what it would feel like to discover that children were being warned off you behind your back. What is happening here is pretty uncomfortable for the Baha'i institutions, but they are just reaping the inevitable harvest of their own actions. Cause and effect. Start behaving in accordance with Baha'u'llah's teachings and the complaints will also stop. To see why, just look at the contents of the criticisms. Except for bad behaviour of the institutions, there are very few substantive complaints; the few that exist could easily be discussed without problems if the ao hadn't got heavy on the people who raised them.

--

Ron House            house@usq.edu.au

Never fear the truth.From: Mirele <mirele@xmission.com>
Subject: Re: Fred's Membership Issues
Date: Saturday, December 25, 1999 6:04 PM

In article <83qqv!$ntn$1@nnrp1.deja.com>, dfiorito@my-deja.com says...

>
>I do not - CAN NOT - question your faith or your beliefs. Nor do I >wish to discredit your charges. All I want to do is to clear up one >fact. Whether you know it or not, you are no longer considered a >member of the Baha'i Community. You may have a card but it is no >longer valid.

My question to you, dfiorito, is: How come YOU know and Fred Glaysher apparently does not know? As an outsider looking in, this appears to me to be rather tacky behaviour at best, and at worst, it's inhumane.

>>
>> Despite their lies, I am a member of the Bahai faith. Again, my >membership
>> ID card may be found on my website. And I have never heard otherwise >> from a Bahai institution.
>
>
>This is no lie. Any Baha'i who wishes to confirm what I learned can do >so by sending Fred's name and Baha'i ID to National Membership services >through www.usbnc.org and you can get the same information that I did.

WHY WASN'T FRED TOLD!?!?!?

Frankly, this is appalling.

I would address myself to those of you who call yourselves Baha'i. This kind of behaviour is NOT appropriate. I have had dealings for five years now with the Church <spit> of Scientology, and to be honest, I never thought I'd see the day when the "officialdom" of the Baha'i Faith would rank up there with the Scientology leadership. In fact, I would argue that the Baha'i Faith "officialdom" are worse than the Scientologists--because at least Scientology lets people know that they've been "declared" (or kicked out of $cn).

What kind of fear motivates people to do such a thing (drop a person from the rolls of the organization) and then NEGLECT to tell them? This is truly outrageous.

<snip>

>I still maintain that the points you make would be more credible if you >admit you are no longer a Baha'i (in the registered sense), take a >moment to reflect, and actually enter in to a dialogue about these >issues. Others have done this and seem to be gaining more credibility >from civility than from fanaticism.

I think that it would be appropriate for whoever's in charge to explain why this happened--but then again, from what I've read over the months and years on this newsgroup and a.r.b, I don't expect that to happen.

Let me rent you a clue, Baha'is--your "leadership" reminds me of the scientologists. This is not a characterization that any legitimate religious group should aspire to. I would meditate upon this...

Deana Holmes
mirele@xmission.com
From: <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com>
Subject: (bahai) Re: Marshall case
Date: Saturday, April 01, 2000 8:57 AM

In Baha'i Administration, pp. 63-64, Shoghi Effendi wrote:
"Let us also remember that at the very root of the Cause lies the principle of the undoubted right of the individual to self-expression, his freedom to declare his conscience and set forth his views."

In Unfolding Destiny, p. 423: 6 April 1928, Shoghi Effendi wrote:
"I feel that regarding such interpretations, no one has the right to impose his view or opinion and require his listeners to believe in his particular interpretation of the sacred and prophetic writings."

Including the uhj, a legislative institution....

--
FG
www.FG.com
The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Patrick Henry <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com>
Subject: --bahai-- Messages to uhj regarding their Technique
Date: Friday, December 17, 1999 7:05 AM

This file contains three messages: "to uhj 12-10-99," "to uhj 7-24-1998," and "The Baha'i Technique":

From: Patrick Henry <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com>
Subject: Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed
Date: Friday, December 10, 1999 8:33 AM

Given the uhj's oppressive tactics and violation of the human rights of Linda and John Walbridge, Stephen Scholl, other editors of the Dialogue magazine, the Bahai Encyclopedia editors who resigned in protest, David Langness, Juan Cole, Michael McKenny, Nima Hazini, former Assistant to the Auxiliary Board Paul Dodenhoff who resigned, and so on, and so on, and so on.... All the victims documented on my website.... I hesitate to put the uhj above any reprehensible act.... Including conspiracy to murder Dr. Daniel Jordan.

I have been a member of the Bahai faith since 1976. My ID Card may be found on my website. I have never been contacted by the uhj or any of its underlings to the contrary.

Anything I have ever said is a matter of the sanctity of my individual God-given conscience that both Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha claimed would never be violated in their religion.

I shall "cc" this message to the uhj so that they hear from me directly on the matter.

I would consider it an honor to be one of its official victims; indeed, the highest spiritual achievement of my Bahai life, defending Baha'u'llah's Teachings from the fanaticism that has overwhelmed and hamstrung his Revelation.

--
FG.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"
The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

-----
(Confirmation of receipt by the uhj of the message above.)
From: Incoming Electronic Communication Operations <ieco@bwc.org>
Subject: Your Message Has Been Received...
Date: Friday, December 10, 1999 5:36 AM

Dear Friend,

This is an automated acknowledgement.

Your message regarding:

Re: Fred's Baha'i Membership Could Not Confirmed

has been received at the Baha'i World Centre.
-----

From: Patrick Henry patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com
To: UHJ <secretariat@bwc.org>; Letters to Editor <letters@nytimes.com>;
bahai-faith @ makelist.com <bahai-faith@makelist.com>
Subject: To UHJ July 24, 1998
Date: Friday, July 24, 1998 9:03 PM
July 24, 1998

Dear Members of the Universal House of Justice:

As a Bahai, I am saddened by the news of the execution of yet another Bahai in Iran. However, the immediate public statements made by Firuz Kazemzadeh of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, reminiscent of Robert Henderson's piece in The New York Times on January 13th of this year, appear equally lamentable for their blatant hypocrisy: "We had hoped that President Khatami's assertions about freedom, justice and the rule of law in Iran would apply to the Baha'is of that country.... We urge the international community to protest vigorously Mr. Rowhani's killing and to seek justice for the beleaguered Iranian Baha'i community."

The tragic loss of Bahai lives in Iran and the subsequent exploitation of their deaths by Bahai spokesmen, often in the American media, always courting the President and other members of the government, has become a predictable pattern rendered intolerable in the context of continuing and pervasive Bahai censorship and denial of human and civil rights in the United States and elsewhere. Such incidents as I queried you about in my unanswered email of March 31, 1997, available on my Web site, regarding the crushing of the magazine Dialogue, the resignations of a number of scholars from the Bahai Encyclopedia, the attacks on the listserv known as Talisman I at Indiana University, the harassing and blacklisting of many individuals, Bahai and non-Bahai, suggest profoundly deep-seated problems within the Bahai community and administration.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/To-UHJ1.htm>

To these incidents must now be added the apparent conspiracy for more than a year and a half of the Bahai Computer and Communications Committee (BCCA), under the chairmanship of Mark Towfiq, to defeat twice now, along with the collusion of other Bahais, the creation of an unmoderated newsgroup on the Bahai Faith which would be known as talk.religion.bahai. You may find extensive documentation for all of these violations of the basic human rights of many Bahais and non-Bahais on my Web site, "The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience": <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

Because the third interest poll for talk.religion.bahai on Usenet is approaching, after August 28th, I ask you again to investigate the BCCA and its depriving me of access last November from all private Bahai-only mailing lists at a crucial moment just when the tide of discussion was going very much in favor of the newsgroup, noted by many observers. I also ask whether you supported or were involved in that decision? The relevant files can be found on my Web site under Bahai-Discuss Archives.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/archive.htm>

Similarly, I would like to know whether your institution or the BCCA has approved of or advocated the recent ban of my email signature file by the moderators of soc.religion.bahai, as well as their complete ban for more than a year and a half now on all discussion regarding talk.religion.bahai.

The prevailing atmosphere of suppression of free speech and religious conscience that now characterizes the Bahai Faith cannot but call into question the honesty of many members of the Bahai administration and perhaps the institutions themselves.

I ask once more whether censorship is allowed in the Bahai Faith and what passages of the Bahai Writings support it, what are the "rules," if you will, of Bahai censorship?

--

Patrick Henry.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"
The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

---

THE Baha'i Technique:

During the last several years or more a number of observers have noted the common methods many Bahais use to avoid various issues or discredit people who hold opinions other than their own:

May 12, 1992:

"The Baha'i Faith has become very oppressive and manipulative of the individual. That to me is merely a statement of fact, as I have experienced it, for nearly sixteen years now [over 22]. The usual stratagem in dealing with anyone who would express his conscience in good faith is to pretend the Cause is above any kind of criticism whatsoever while intimating that anyone who would speak honestly must have something wrong with him, i.e., his spiritual life isn't what it should be, he doesn't understand the nature of unity, or he's accused of trying to obtain power for himself, which at times seems merely a calculated way of discrediting the person, and so on. Another common strategy used to acquire control over the individual is to humor the person by letting him pour himself out, etc., and then self-righteously giving him the Truth."

Ron House, November 14, 1997:

"I know what you mean. I've found over the years that there is a technique used by traditional Baha'is and others to squash dissension: harry the dissenter so much he says something intemperate, then point out how 'loving' and 'compassionate' they are and how nasty the dissenter is. The trouble is that this technique works, so I've been making a conscious effort not to fall for it. Also, when they get the dissenter discouraged and miserable enough, he invariably makes a slip-up sooner or later that they can REALLY let loose the venom over. IMHO, they did this to you when you misread Sharon's intentions. At any other time, they would overlook faults, as Baha'u'llah says, but when they're in this mode they go for the jugular. Very sad."
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/House2.htm>

June 1998:

"Some of the most striking methods demonstrated repeatedly by many Bahais during the last year and a half of discussion about an unmoderated newsgroup is their refusal to listen and respond to the criticisms of those who are in favor of talk.religion.bahai, ignoring their concerns, never responding analytically to their messages and reasoning and logic and evidence, attacking them through character assassination and ad hominem, ganging up on individuals, and "circling the wagons" around every action of the srb moderators or others who are opposed to talk.religion.bahai."

"More than twenty different people on my web site have posted messages explaining their experience with srb censorship yet many srb Bahais NEVER address their concerns. Ignoring such charges will not make them go away. NO ONE has to "try" to link the trb interest poll with censorship on srb; the moderators themselves have done that by suppressing droves of people for years. There are many people who believe such suppression is part and parcel of the Bahai community as it exists today. A YES vote need not necessarily support such a belief. There are other reasons Bahais might vote YES."

Fran Baker, May 1998:

"Just have to say that in my experience this is a common technique of manipulative people in general; it is especially effective with thoughtful people who are willing to see both sides of things, i.e., their own fault. I consider this brow-beating technique to be a form of abuse. The only way to deal with it is to call them on it every time and to refuse to let yourself be beat up, i.e., not to do your part of the "tango." This can be very hard to do, but it works. You can break this pattern in a personal relationship. I don't know whether it's possible when a group acts this way. Very scary."

Dr. Juan Cole, June 12, 1998:

"Let me ask you why in the world you think that I would risk my professional reputation by publicly stating falsehoods? ...The very technique of the more glaze-eyed among these people is to unbearably bully a Baha'i whom they don't like, use unjustified threats of declaring him or her a CB to silence the individual, and if the person will not be silenced, then to depend upon the gullibility of the Baha'is in refusing to listen to any victim's story because, of course, the Baha'i institutions are infallible and divinely guided and could never do anything wrong. It is a perfect racket."

"Of course, this technique of making liberals go away has been enormously successful, and ex-Baha'i liberals have no credibility with the remaining Baha'is nor do most of them have any energy to continue to make a case, either to the Baha'is or the outside world, for the incredible abuses that go on inside this organization ostensibly committed to tolerance!"

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Cole10.htm>

K. Paul Johnson, September 15, 1998:

"If that principle [people are innocent until proven guilty] were followed by Baha'i administration and individuals in their condemnations of their fellow believers, I would have very little to complain about regarding Baha'i affairs. But character assassination by innuendo is the preferred way of dealing with anything remotely resembling dissidence. Seems like that's exactly what you're doing to Juan Cole in your message. Saying I don't want to know what you've "got" on him, thus attacking me but insinuating you have some awful proof of unspecified guilt on his part. If that's not character assassination by innuendo, what is?"

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Johnson18.htm>

Gibro28W, October 12, 1998:

"In summary, the biggest problem, as I see it, is that most Baha'is don't take criticism seriously--they tune it out as "negative" or "harmful to spiritual growth." This selfish attitude is very stupid. First of all, Baha'is entice people to join them. When they do, they indoctrinate them until they think like the group. But as soon as a red flare of doubt goes up in the convert's mind, they're cordoned off by the group and reminded of their "spiritual" obligations in the name of Baha'u'llah or the "Covenant." If left unresolved and doubt gives vent to prolonged criticism, the convert is sent packing or is kicked out. What we have here is a broken family that had failed to truly listen to the needs of its members in the first place."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb73.htm>

Barthaman on September 14, 1998:

"Baha'i dissenters, more or less, are wounded souls abandoned by their fathers, so-to-speak. They have been cast out and dismissed or shunned without having had a fair hearing. Consider their pain when the rest of their "family" dismisses them too. Can you know what it's like to be accused of heresy and shunned following a sincere intellectual conflict (inspired by doubt)--after you've sacrificed years in devoted service to your religion? Can you comprehend their sense of betrayal and injustice? This is why disillusioned believers leave their religions each year--while some still hang around, banging on the door now and then, demanding a refund for their lost youth. In time they will have to move on, however, writing the Baha'i Faith off as another lesson in fraud. Mock these people all you want--but for the grace of God, the next dissenter could be you. Don't be too confident, my friend."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb66.htm>

Juan Cole wrote, February 23, 1999:

"There is nothing to be puzzled by. Right wing Baha'is only like to hear the sound of their own voices (which are the only voices they will admit to being "Baha'i" at all)."

"Obviously, the world is so constructed that they cannot in fact only hear their own voices. They are forced to hear other voices that differ from theirs. This most disturbs them when the voices come from enrolled Baha'is or when the voices speak of the Baha'i faith."

"The way they sometimes deal with the enrolled Baha'is is to summon them to a heresy inquiry and threaten them with being shunned if they do not fall silent."

"With non-Baha'is or with ex-Baha'is, they deal with their speech about the faith by backbiting, slandering and libelling the speaker. You will note that since I've been on this list I have been accused of long-term heresy, of "claiming authority," of out and out lying (though that was retracted, twice), of misrepresentation, of 'playing fast and loose with the facts,' and even of being 'delusional.' I have been accused of all these falsehoods by *Baha'is*, by prominent Baha'is. I have been backbitten by them."

"This shows that all the talk about the danger a sharp tongue can do, all the talk about the need for harmony, for returning poison with honey, for a sin-covering eye, is just *talk* among right wing Baha'is. No one fights dirtier than they when they discover a voice they cannot silence and cannot refute."

"Paul Johnson has seen all these things, as well, for the past five years. He can explain it to you."

Cf. K. Paul Johnson's general reflections on coercive techniques
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Johnson21.htm>

And LaAeterna's method of silencing opponents
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb65.htm>

Comments on the related techniques of Susan Maneck:

Juan Cole, February 13, 1999:

"It is a very, very, very weird religion. And if anyone is reading Susan Maneck's absolutely bone-chilling screeds on the desirability of Heresy Trials and carefulness in Shunning, they are seeing what it is like at the core of the religion."

"I really am sorry for them and her, since they seem sort of filled with hate and quite paranoid, yet say they are preaching love, unity and tolerance. Susan will say, 'may your abdomen be split by lightning and your guts fall out you filthy heretic whom I wish I could just have shunned and buried', and then she'll sign herself "warmest" and slander a university by adding it to her sig line. As if what she is about has anything at all to do with *universities*!"

February 15, 1999:

"Ms. Maneck's approach appears to me to be always to shunt the discussion off or back to who said what where when why how and so on.... The farther back in time the better, since the person's memory, being human, is bound to be unable to keep up or to have stocked the evidence needed on his or her hard drive or find it on dejanews.com. And it then allows her to claim pretty much anything she wants to while seeming to have discredited her opponent. Further, she relies on the tactics of demagoguery knowing they usually prevail and will be supported by other fundamentalist Bahais. By shrieking "slander" and referring to others' opinions as "garbage," she is able to create an emotional atmosphere that essentially negates whatever the topic or content might be and that allows her to appear to win what is often a narrowly legalistic point or interpretation."

"All of this is done, of course, in conjunction with her employing the more common Baha'i Techniques of intimidation and psychological demonization and terrorism."

Maneck's scholarly reference to others' opinions as garbage:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Maneck3.htm>

Maneck's scholarly reference to others' opinions as litter:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Maneck7.htm>

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Maneck1.htm>

This document at
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/technique.htm>

See The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

Professor Juan Cole, of the University of Michigan, discusses related issues in his journal article "The Baha'i Faith in America as Panopticon, 1963-1997":

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/1999/jssr/bhjssr.htm>

Also see:

Full Text of UHJ's Letter of April 7, 1999
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/UHJLetterApril71999.htm>

Juan Cole, "Commentary" on UHJ's "outburst of vehement ignorance"
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Outburst.htm>

Letter of Resignation from Paul Dodenhoff, Assistant to the Auxiliary Board <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/LetterResignationPD.htm>

--

Patrick Henry.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"
The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Trans. of Baha'u'llah's "Praised be My Lord, the Most High" Date: Saturday, July 10, 1999 3:12 AM trans. J Cole 7-4-99

Baha'u'llah

Praised be My Lord, the Most High

Letter of eternity, put on the bridal trousseau of detachment and walk upon the exalted brocade runner;
praised be my Lord, the most high.
This is the earth of immortality, upon which trod the foot of one of the saints;
praised be my Lord, the most high.
Do not let the comings and goings of this world sadden you, then ascend to the realm of faithfulness; praised by my Lord, the most high.
You have a place with me in the most glorious pavilions-praised be the one who created and made-Wherein you shall hear the melodies of paradise above the farthest lote-tree-
praised be my Lord, the most high-
And shall drink therein red wine from the beauty of God, the most radiant-

 praised be the one who created and made-
 And find therein a cornucopia of the fruits of sanctity-
 praised be my Lord, the most high-
 And shall fly to every corner thereof on sapphire wings, in the kingdoms of the spirit-
 praised be the one who created and made-
 And shall give voice therein with every tune to the songs of immortality-
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 You shall be attracted by the glances of loveliness in resplendent chambers;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 Behold, you shall discover within yourself the lights of guidance and immerse yourself in the great fathomless sea-
 praised be my Lord, the most high-
 And shall be nourished by the fruits of the spirit from the farthest tree-praised by the one who created and made-
 And shall hear the call of God in the audible melody issuing from silence;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 Say: The houri of immortality descended once more to accept this beautiful, glittering moon;
 praised be the one who created and made;
 She grasped the crimson tumbler in her right hand-
 praised be my Lord, the most high-
 In order to pour for whoever accepts this delight in that garden of good pleasure;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 She raised her right hand and leaned on her left leg-
 praised be my Lord, the most high-Then her arched eyebrow appeared, like a keen scimitar, and she slashed with it at hearts and insides;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 She shrugged her shoulders, uncovering ebony tresses beneath her white veil, coiled like a blacksnake;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 Behold, it swallowed up everyone, from those in the heavens to those beneath the earth-
 praised be the one who created and made-
 And returned being to nothingness;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 At one time she revealed her face, and at another she concealed it;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 Behold, she uncovered the creation of the spirits and returned the decree to its realization;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 Then after that she covered the faces once more lest eternity be annihilated by that crimson scene;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 Then she lifted the hem of her black veil from her radiant brow, revealing the brilliance of the new;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 She said, "Am I not the beauty of the beloved in the midst of the forenoon sky?" And, behold, the visage of grandeur cried out with the lips of the beauty of being, saying, "Yes, and again, yes!"
 praised be the one who created and made.
 See, the essences of spirit dance in the temples of immortality at having secretly appeared;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 The hearts of the sincere are attracted by her luminous rays;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 The minds of the holy ones are distracted at how she descends and ascends;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 Behold, the crier called out in the midst of the air at the center of appearance;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 She said, "By the Lord of the heavens! A glance at her is better than possessing this world and the next."
 Praised be my Lord, the most high.
 Then she rose, and the most great resurrection took place;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 She seated herself, and the hearts of the insightful quaked;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 Thereafter she brought from behind her hair a tablet of green chrysolite;

 praised be the one who created and made.
 She read out one letter from among the tablet's lofty symbols and behold, the spirits issued from the temple of names;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 Then she pointed with her middle finger and all the religions from Adam to Jesus were annihilated;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 She moved, after that, time and again, and behold, the sun split in the heavens of command;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 She bared her head and a ringlet of hair dangled on her breast;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 The voice of God was manifest in the strands of her hair, making mention of her Lord, the exalted, the most high;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 Behold, the sign of night appeared from her dusky locks and the sign of day from her white brow;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 She voiced thereby the call of holiness in the paradise of presence;
 praised be the one who created and made.
 She said, "You shall be subjected to temptations, companions of virtue;"
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 "You shall be denied access to the shrine of beauty in the Ka`bah of knowability;"
 praised be the one who created and made.
 That was inscribed on the tablet of immortality by the most high pen;
 praised be my Lord, the most high.
 Therein is wisdom from the mysteries that you neither see nor witness;
 praised be the one who created and made.

Source: Baha'u'llah in A. Ishraq-Khavari, Ganj-i Shayigan, pp. 61-64

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrc@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrc@umich.edu/bahai.htm>
 Buy *Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i*
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
 Share what you know. Learn what you don't. From: McKenny Michael <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>
 Subject: Repost of UHJ Letter
 Date: Tuesday, February 16, 1999 2:24 PM

Greetings, Frederick.
 Here, as you request, is the little gem Susan first posted:
 Fare very Well,
 Michael

8 February 1998

Transmitted by email

Dr. Susan Stiles Maneck
 U.S.A.

Dear Baha'i Friend,

The Universal House of Justice received your emails of 21 September and 17 November 1997 and much regrets the delay in responding. It has instructed us to send you the following comments which it trusts will be helpful to you in your endeavour to understand various points made previously to yourself and other friends.

Your email of 21 September covers a number of issues, the first of which relates to methods followed in researching, understanding and writing about historical events, and the elements of these methods which the House of Justice regards as being influenced by materialism. The purpose of scholarship in such fields should obviously be the ascertainment of truth, and Baha'i scholars should, of course, observe the highest standards of honesty, integrity and truthfulness. Moreover, the House of Justice accepts that many scholarly methods have been developed which are soundly based and of enduring validity. It nevertheless questions some presumptions of certain current academic methods because it sees these producing a distorted picture of reality.

The training of some scholars in fields such as religion and history seems to have restricted their vision and blinded them to the culturally determined basis of elements of the approach they have learned. It causes them to exclude from consideration factors which, from a Baha'i point of view, are of fundamental importance. Truth in such fields cannot be found if the evidence of Revelation is systematically excluded and if discourse is limited by a basically deterministic view of the world.

Some of the protagonists in the discussions on the Internet have implied that the only way to attain a true understanding of historical events and of the purport of the sacred and historical records of the Cause of God is through the rigid application of methods narrowly defined in a materialistic framework. They have even gone so far as to stigmatize whoever proposes a variation of these methods as wishing to obscure the truth rather than unveil it.

The House of Justice recognizes that, at the other extreme, there are Baha'is who, imbued by what they conceive to be loyalty to Baha'u'llah, cling to blind acceptance of what they understand to be a statement of the Sacred Text. This shortcoming demonstrates an equally serious failure to grasp the profundity of the Baha'i principle of the harmony of faith and reason. The danger of such an attitude is that it exalts personal understanding of some part of the Revelation over the whole, leads to illogical and internally

-----
-----
Dr. Susan Stiles Maneck
U.S.A. 8 February 1998
Page 2

inconsistent applications of the Sacred Text, and provides fuel to those who would mistakenly characterize loyalty to the Covenant as "fundamentalism".

It is not surprising that individual Baha'is hold and express different and sometimes defective understandings of the Teachings; this is but an evidence of the magnitude of the change that this Revelation is to effect in human consciousness. As believers with various insights into the Teachings converse -- with patience, tolerance and open and unbiased minds -- a deepening of comprehension should take place. The strident insistence on individual views, however, can lead to contention, which is detrimental not only to the spirit of Baha'i association and collaboration but to the search for truth itself.

Beyond contention, moreover, is the condition in which a person is so immovably attached to one erroneous viewpoint that his insistence upon it amounts to an effort to change the essential character of the Faith. This kind of behaviour, if permitted to continue unchecked, could produce disruption in the Baha'i community, giving birth to countless sects as it has done in previous Dispensations. The Covenant of Baha'u'llah prevents this. The Faith defines elements of a code of conduct, and it is ultimately the responsibility of the Universal House of Justice, in watching over the security of the Cause and upholding the integrity of its Teachings, to require the friends to adhere to standards thus defined.

The Universal House of Justice does not see itself obliged to prescribe a new scientific methodology for Baha'i academics who make study of the Faith, its teachings and history the subject of their professional activities. Rather has it concentrated on drawing the attention of these friends to the inadequacy of certain approaches from a Baha'i point of view, urging them to apply to their work the concept which they accept as Baha'is: that the Manifestation of God is of a higher realm and has a perception far above that of any human being. He has the task of raising humankind to a new level of knowledge and behaviour. In this, His understanding transcends the traditions and concepts of the society in which He appears. As Baha'u'llah Himself writes in the Hidden Words:

O Son of Beauty! By My spirit and by My favor! By My mercy and by My beauty! All that I have revealed unto thee with the tongue of power, and have written for thee with the pen of might, hath been in accordance with thy capacity and understanding, not with My state and the melody of My voice.

Although, in conveying His Revelation, the Manifestation uses the language and culture of the country into which He is born, He is not confined to using terminology with the same connotations as those given to it by His predecessors or contemporaries; He delivers His message in a form which His audience, both immediate and in centuries to come, is capable of grasping. It is for Baha'i scholars to elaborate, over a period of time, methodologies which will enable them to perform their work with this understanding. This is a challenging task, but not one which should be beyond the scope of Baha'is who are learned in the Teachings as well as competent in their scientific disciplines.

This brings us to the specific points raised in your email of 17 November 1997. As you well understand, not only the right but also the responsibility

-----
-----

Dr. Susan Stiles Maneck
U.S.A. 8 February 1998
Page 3

of each believer to explore truth for himself or herself are fundamental to the Baha'i teachings. This principle is an integral feature of the coming of age of humankind, inseparable from the social transformation to which Baha'u'llah is calling the peoples of the world. It is as relevant to specifically scholarly activity as it is to the rest of spiritual and intellectual life. Every human being is ultimately responsible to God for the use which he or she makes of these possibilities; conscience is never to be coerced, whether by other individuals or institutions.

Conscience, however, is not an unchangeable absolute. One dictionary definition, although not covering all the usages of the term, presents the common understanding of the word "conscience" as "the sense of right and wrong as regards things for which one is responsible; the faculty or principle which pronounces upon the moral quality of one's actions or motives, approving the right and condemning the wrong".

The functioning of one's conscience, then, depends upon one's understanding of right and wrong; the conscience of one person may be established upon a disinterested striving after truth and justice, while that of another may rest on an unthinking predisposition to act in accordance with that pattern of standards, principles and prohibitions which is a product of his social environment. Conscience, therefore, can serve either as a bulwark of an upright character or can represent an accumulation of prejudices learned from one's forebears or absorbed from a limited social code.

A Baha'i recognizes that one aspect of his spiritual and intellectual growth is to foster the development of his conscience in the light of divine Revelation -- a Revelation which, in addition to providing a wealth of spiritual and ethical principles, exhorts man "to free himself from idle fancy and imitation, discern with the eye of oneness His glorious handiwork, and look into all things with a searching eye". This process of development, therefore, involves a clear-sighted examination of the conditions of the world with both heart and mind. A Baha'i will understand that an upright life is based upon observance of certain principles which stem from Divine Revelation and which he recognizes as essential for the well-being of both the individual and society. In order to uphold such principles, he knows that, in certain cases, the voluntary submission of the promptings of his own personal conscience to the decision of the majority is a conscientious requirement, as in wholeheartedly accepting the majority decision of an Assembly at the outcome of consultation.

In the discussion of wisdom in your email of 21 September 1997, you observe that maybe "Baha'i academics all too often have not recognized that to a great extent failure to exercise wisdom represents a failure of love." The House of Justice agrees that the exercise of wisdom calls for a measure of love and the development of a sensitive conscience. These, in turn, involve not only devotion to a high standard of uprightness, but also consideration of the effects of one's words and actions.

A Baha'i's duty to pursue an unfettered search after truth should lead him to understand the Teachings as an organic, logically coherent whole, should cause him to examine his own ideas and motives, and should enable him to see

-----
-----

Dr. Susan Stiles Maneck
U.S.A. 8 February 1998
Page 4

that adherence to the Covenant, to which he is a party, is not blind imitation but conscious choice, freely made and freely followed.

In many of His utterances, `Abdul-Baha extols governments which uphold freedom of conscience for their citizens. As can be seen from the context, these statements refer to the freedom to follow the religion of one's choice. In the original of a passage to which you refer in your email of 17 November 1997, He gives the following analysis of freedom.

There are three types of freedom. The first is divine freedom, which is one of the inherent attributes of the Creator for He is unconstrained in His will, and no one can force Him to change His decree in any matter whatsoever....

The second is the political freedom of Europeans, which leaves the individual free to do whatsoever he desires as long as his action does not harm his neighbour. This is natural freedom, and its greatest expression is seen in the animal world. Observe these birds and notice with what freedom they live. However much man may try, he can never be as free as an animal, because the existence of order acts as an impediment to freedom.

The third freedom is that which is born of obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Almighty. This is the freedom of the human world, where man severs his affections from all things. When he does so, he becomes immune to all hardship and sorrow. Wealth or material power will not deflect him from moderation and fairness, neither will poverty or need inhibit him from showing forth happiness and tranquillity. The more the conscience of man develops, the more will his heart be free and his soul attain unto happiness. In the religion of God, there is freedom of thought because God, alone, controls the human conscience, but this freedom should not go beyond courtesy. In the religion of God, there is no freedom of action outside the law of God. Man may not transgress this law, even though no harm is inflicted on one's neighbour. This is because the purpose of Divine law is the education of all -- others as well as oneself -- and, in the sight of God, the harm done to one individual or to his neighbour is the same and is reprehensible in both cases. Hearts must possess the fear of God. Man should endeavour to avoid that which is abhorrent unto God. Therefore, the freedom that the laws of Europe offer to the individual does not exist in the law of God. Freedom of thought should not transgress the bounds of courtesy, and actions, likewise, should be governed by the fear of God and the desire to seek His good pleasure.

Education of the individual Baha'i in the Divine law is one of the duties of Spiritual Assemblies. In a letter to a National Assembly on 1 March 1951, Shoghi Effendi wrote:

The deepening and enrichment of the spiritual life of the individual believer, his increasing comprehension of the essential verities

-----
-----

Dr. Susan Stiles Maneck
U.S.A. 8 February 1998
Page 5

underlying this Faith, his training in its administrative processes, his understanding of the fundamentals of the Covenants established by its Author and the authorized Interpreter of its teachings, should be made the supreme objectives of the national representatives responsible for the edification, the progress and consolidation of these communities.

Such is the duty resting on the elected institutions of the Faith for the promotion of the spiritual, moral and ethical lives of the individual believers. Parallel with this, the Baha'i Faith upholds the freedom of conscience which permits a person to follow his chosen religion: no one may be compelled to become a Baha'i, or to remain a Baha'i if he conscientiously wishes to leave the Faith. As to the thoughts of the Baha'is themselves -- that is those who have chosen to follow the religion of Baha'u'llah -- the institutions do not busy themselves with what individual believers think unless those thoughts become expressed in actions which are inimical to the basic principles and vital interests of the Faith.

With regard to the accusation that to make such distinctions borders on restriction of the freedom of speech, one should accept that civil society has long recognized that utterance can metamorphose into behaviour, and has taken steps to protect itself and its citizens against such behaviour when it becomes socially destructive. Laws against sedition and hate-mongering are examples that come readily to mind.

It will surely be clear to you from the above comments that the categories of "issues of doctrinal heresy which must therefore be suppressed" and "the imposition of orthodoxy on the Baha'i community", to which you refer, are concepts essentially drawn from the study of Christianity and are inapplicable to the far more complex interrelationships and principles established by the Baha'i Faith.

It is important for all those Baha'is who are engaged in the academic study of the Baha'i Faith to address the theoretical problems which undoubtedly exist, while refusing to be distracted by insidious and unscholarly attacks and calumnies which may periodically be injected into their discussions by the ill-intentioned. Discussion with those who sincerely raise problematic issues, whether they be Baha'is or not, and whether -- if the latter -- they disagree with Baha'i teachings, can be beneficial and enlightening. However, to continue dialogue with those who have shown a fixed antagonism to the Faith, and have demonstrated their imperviousness to any ideas other than their own, is usually fruitless and, for the Baha'is who take part, can be burdensome and even spiritually corrosive.

The problem which aroused the concern of the House of Justice, and has been the subject of a number of communications, was the systematic corruption of Baha'i discourse in certain of the Internet discussion groups, a design which became increasingly apparent to many of the Baha'i participants and whose first victim, if it were to succeed, would be Baha'i scholarship itself. The element which exacerbated a dispute which had been simmering during the past two decades and erupted on the Internet was the participation of some persons who, while nominally Baha'is, cherished their own programs and designed to make use of the Baha'i Cause for the advancement of these programs. To this end they strove to change the essential characteristics of that Cause. This

-----
-----
Dr. Susan Stiles Maneck
U.S.A. 8 February 1998
Page 6

behaviour has been abundantly confirmed by statements made and actions taken by certain of the involved individuals since they withdrew from the Baha'i community. They sought to use the language, the occasions and the credibility of scholarly activity to lend a counterfeit authority to a private enterprise which was essentially ideological in nature and self-motivated in origin. Even if their original aims were idealistic in nature -- no matter how ill-informed and erroneous in concept -- they had evolved in practice into an assault on the Covenant which Baha'u'llah has created as a stronghold within which His Cause would evolve as He intends. The purpose of some of those responsible would seem to be that, by diminishing the station of Baha'u'llah -- a disservice done to previous Manifestations by people similarly inclined --, by casting doubt on the authority conferred on `Abdul-Baha, the Guardian and the Universal House of Justice, and by calling into question the integrity of Baha'i administrative processes, they would be able to persuade a number of unwary followers that the Baha'i Faith is in fact not a Divine Revelation but a kind of socio-political system being manipulated by ambitious individuals.

Your own familiarity with these same persons' behaviour will have provided you with ample illustration of the violence being done by their public and private statements to Baha'u'llah's teachings, which they profess to honour, and to the cause of scholarship, which they profess to serve. We cannot separate method from spirit and character. In The Secret of Divine Civilization, `Abdul-Baha gives the standard for the "spiritually learned" whom He describes as "skilled physicians for the ailing body of the world" and "the sure antidote to the poison that has corrupted human society":

For every thing, however, God has created a sign and symbol, and established standards and tests by which it may be known. The spiritually learned must be characterized by both inward and outward perfections; they must possess a good character, an enlightened nature, a pure intent, as well as intellectual power, brilliance and discernment, intuition, discretion and foresight, temperance, reverence, and a heartfelt fear of God. For an unlit candle, however great in diameter and tall, is no better than a barren palm tree or a pile of dead wood.

We trust that these comments will help you to see the implications of the points conveyed in the emailed letter of 20 July 1997. The House of Justice asks us to assure you of its continuing prayers on your behalf.

With loving Baha'i greetings,
Department of the Secretariat

Susan Stiles Maneck
History, Stetson University

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

From: Catherine Woodgold <an588@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: UHJ reply to Service of Women paper

Date: Tuesday, February 16, 1999 5:23 PM

The following can be found on <https://bahai-library.org/uhj/women.uhj.html>

WOMEN AND THE UNIVERSAL HOUSE OF JUSTICE

Universal House of Justice to the National Spiritual Assembly of New Zealand

May 31, 1988

We have been informed of a paper, presented at a recent New Zealand Baha'i Studies conference, which raises the possibility that the ineligibility of women for membership on the Universal House of Justice may be a temporary provision subject to change through a process of progressive unfoldment of the divine purpose. We present the following points as a means of increasing the friends' understanding of this established provision of the Order of Baha'u'llah that membership of the Universal House of Justice is confined to men.

The system of Baha'i Administration is "indissolubly bound with the essential verities of the Faith" as set forth in the writings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul Baha. A unique feature of this system is the appointment of authorized interpreters, in the persons of Abdu'l Baha and the Guardian, to provide authoritative statements on the intent of Baha'u'llah's revelation. Writing in The Dispensation of Baha'u'llah, Shoghi Effendi stated that "Abdul Baha and the Guardian" share . . . the right and obligation to interpret the Baha'i Teachings". In relation to his own function as interpreter, he further stated that "the Guardian has been specifically endowed with such power as he may need to reveal the purport and disclose the implications of the utterances of Baha'u'llah and of Abdu'l Baha". The significance of this important provision is that the religion of God is safeguarded and protected against schism and its essential unity is preserved.

The function of the divinely appointed interpreters is evident in the progressive disclosure and clarification of the details of the Baha'i teachings concerning the membership of the Universal House of Justice. Baha'u'llah, in his writings, ordained both the Universal House of Justice and Local Houses of Justice. However, in many of his laws he refers simply to "the House of Justice" and its members as "Men of Justice", leaving open for later clarification to which level or levels of the whole institution each law would apply. Abdu'l Baha, the Center of Baha'u'llah's covenant and the unerring interpreter of his word, not only provided for the establishment of National Spiritual Assemblies, to be designated at some future time as Secondary Houses of Justice, but He also outlined the means by which the Universal House of Justice was to be elected. In His will and testament, the Master wrote:

"And now, concerning the House of Justice which God hath ordained as the source of all good and freed from all error, it must be elected by universal suffrage, that is, by the believers . . . By this House is meant the Universal House of Justice, that is, in all countries a secondary House of Justice must be instituted and these secondary Houses of Justice must elect the members of the Universal one . . . (p. 14)

And in one of His Tablets He had already written:

At whatever time the beloved of God in each country appoint their delegates , and these in turn elect their representatives, and these representatives elect a body, that body shall be regarded as the Supreme House of Justice.<

>

In the following passage, 'Abdu'l Baha referred to membership on the "House of Justice" being restricted to men, without a specific designation of the level or levels of the institution to which this provision applied:

"The House of Justice, however, according to the explicit text of the Law of God, is confined to men; this for a wisdom of the Lord God's which will ere long be made manifest as clearly as the sun at high noon. (Selections from the writings of Abdu'l Baha (rev. ed) Haifa: Baha'i World Center, 1982), p. 80)

Later the Master clarified that it was only the Universal House of Justice whose membership was confined to men. Abdu'l Baha wrote:

"According to the ordinances of the Faith of God, women are the equals of men in all rights save only that of membership on the Universal House of Justice, for, as hath been stated in the text of the Book, both the Head and the members of the House of Justice are men. However, in all other bodies, such as the Temple Construction Committee, the Teaching Committee, the Spiritual Assembly, and in charitable and scientific associations, women share equally in all rights with men. (from a newly translated tablet).

Shogi Effendi, in a letter written on his behalf to an individual believer, provided the following authoritative elaboration on this theme:

"As regards your question concerning the membership of the Universal House of Justice; there is a Tablet from 'Abdu'l Baha in which he definitely states that the membership of the Universal House of Justice is confined to men, and that the wisdom of it will be fully revealed and appreciated in the future. In the local, as well as the National Houses of Justice, however, women have the full right of membership. It is, therefore, only to the International House of Justice that they cannot be elected. . ." (28 July 1936)

'Abdu'l Baha Himself, it should be noted, had, as attested by the above-cited extracts from His Tablets, affirmed that the ineligibility of women for election to the Universal House of Justice had been set out "in the text of the Book" and "in the explicit text of the Law of God". In other words, this provision was established by none other than Baha'u'llah Himself.

Further, in response to a number of questions about eligibility for membership and procedures for election of the Universal House of Justice, the Guardian's secretary writing on his behalf distinguished between those questions which could be answered by reference to the "explicitly revealed" Text and those which could not be. Membership to the Universal House of Justice fits into the former category. The letter stated:

"The membership of the Universal House of Justice is confined to men. Fixing the number of the members, the procedures for election and the term of membership will be known later, as these are not explicitly revealed in the Holy Text." (27 May 1940)

Hence, 'Abdu'l Baha and the Guardian progressively have revealed, in accordance with divine inspiration, the meaning and implications of Baha'u'llah's seminal teachings. Their interpretations are fundamental statements of truth which cannot be varied through legislation by the Universal House of Justice.

The progressive clarification of the details of the laws concerning membership of the Houses of Justice has been accompanied by a gradual implementation of their provisions. For example, based on the texts available to the believers at the time, membership of local Houses of Justice was initially confined to men. When the Master began to elaborate on the difference between the levels of this Institution, He clarified that the exclusion of women applied only to the Universal House of Justice. Thereafter, women became eligible for service as members of Local and National Spiritual Assemblies. Women in the West, who already enjoyed the benefits of education and opportunities for social involvement, participated in this form of service much sooner than, for instance, their Baha'i sisters in Iran who were accorded this right only in 1954, "removing thereby the last remaining obstacle to the enjoyment of complete equality of rights in the conduct of the administrative affairs of the Persian Baha'i Community". It is important to note that the timing of the introduction of the provisions called for by the interpretations of 'Abdu'l Baha and the Guardian in relation to the Local and National Spiritual Assemblies, rather than constituting a response to some external condition or pressure, was dictated by the principle of progressive implementation of the laws, as enjoined by Baha'u'llah Himself. Concerning the implementation of the laws, Baha'u'llah wrote in one of His Tablets:

"Indeed the laws of God are like unto the ocean and the children of men as fish, did they but know it. However, in observing them one must exercise wisdom . . . One must guide mankind to the ocean of true understanding in a spirit of love and tolerance."

As mentioned earlier, the law regarding the membership of the Universal House of Justice is embedded in the Text and has been merely restated by the divinely appointed interpreters. It is therefore neither amenable to change nor subject to speculation about some possible future condition.

With regard to the status of women, the important point for Baha'is to remember is that in the face of the categorical pronouncements in Baha'i Scripture establishing the equality of men and women, the ineligibility of women for membership on the Universal House of Justice does not constitute evidence of the superiority of men over women. It must also be borne in mind that women are not excluded from any other international institution of the Faith. They are found among the ranks of the Hands of the Cause. They serve as members of the International Teaching Center and as Continental Counsellors. And, there is nothing in the text to preclude the participation of women in such future international bodies as the Supreme Tribunal.

Though at the present time, it may be difficult for the believers to appreciate the reason for the circumscription of membership on the Universal House of Justice to men, we call upon the friends to remain assured by the Master's promise that clarity of understanding will be achieved in due course. The friends, both women and men, must accept this with faith that the Covenant of Baha'u'llah will aid them and the institutions of His World Order to see the realization of every principle ordained by His unerring Pen, including the equality of men and women, as expounded in the Writings of the Cause.

the Universal House of Justice

--

Cathy Woodgold TISSATAAFL Ottawa, Ontario, Canada

<https://www.ncf.carleton.ca/~an588/> mailto:an588@freenet.carleton.ca

"Help -- I'm a sentence that's being quoted out of context!"Rid156.htmBack To Messages Page Ridván Message from the Universal House to the Bahá'ís of the World, 156 BE

Ridván 156

To the Bahá'ís of the World

Dearly loved Friends,

Our hearts are aglow with hope as we survey what has been accomplished in the year preceding the fateful, final stretch toward the consummation of the Four Year Plan. From the year's momentous beginning with the Eighth International Bahá'í Convention, the Bahá'í world has sustained a rising pace of activity that has significantly advanced the process of entry by troops. Our community has grown appreciably, its human resources have been richly enhanced. From projects of expansion to endeavours at consolidation, from social and economic development to external affairs, from services of the youth to expressions in the arts, from the World Centre of the Faith to remote villages and towns - in fact, from whatever angle the community is viewed - progress has been made.

The prospects for the Plan are impelling. The momentum generated at the International Convention pervaded the Counsellors' Conference that immediately followed it, further galvanizing the indefatigable participants; and it charged the proceedings of the National Conventions held in May, including those of Sabah, Sarawak, and Slovakia which met for the first time to form their National Spiritual Assemblies. That same energy infused the International Teaching Centre, which has been displaying a remarkable potency in the short time since its sixth term began on the anniversary of the Declaration of the Bab. Concentrating on refining and consolidating their organization, the Counsellor members have refrained from their usual travels during this first year, but they can be expected after this to resume their visits to various parts of the world, so as to reinforce their vitalizing influence on the successful conclusion of the Four Year Plan.

Further to these happenings in the Holy Land, the construction projects on Mount Carmel, beheld with such thrilling astonishment by the delegates to the International Convention, press onward towards their scheduled completion at the end of the century. With the opening since last Ridván of all remaining areas of construction, the speed of work has reached a new peak. The Centre for the Study of the Texts and the Extension to the Archives Building are being readied for occupancy within a few weeks; the exterior of the International Teaching Centre building is fully clad in marble, while finishing work at all levels of its interior is proceeding. The lowering of Hatzionut Avenue, to accommodate the bridge which now connects the Terraces of the Shrine of the Bab on both sides of the road, has been completed and normal traffic restored. The unfolding magnificence of the Terraces has so captured public attention that the nineteenth terrace at the top of the mountain has already been opened to visitors on a daily schedule, evoking the enthusiastic response of a grateful populace. As part of a campaign to attract international attention to the city, the Municipality of Haifa has published a pictorial brochure on the Shrine of the Bab and the Terraces, available in five major languages besides Hebrew.

We feel compelled to mention at least two other developments at the World Centre of a wholly different order: First, the decision to raise the number of pilgrims in each group to 150 -- this to take effect when the revamping, now in progress, of the newly acquired building, situated across the way from the resting place of the Greatest Holy Leaf, has been completed and use can be made of its provision of a pilgrim hall and other facilities for the administration of an expanded pilgrimage programme. Second is the notable headway being made, despite the inevitable slowness of the process, in the plan to translate texts from the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh with a view to publishing a new English volume of His works. Effort is being devoted to providing full versions of such major Tablets as the Suriy-i-Muluk and the Suriy-i-Haykal, as well as complete texts of Tablets addressed to individual kings and rulers. Also scheduled for inclusion are the Suriy-i-Ra'is, the Lawh-i-Ra'is and the Lawh-i-Fu'ad.

The Cause of Bahá'u'lláh marches on resistlessly, quickened by the increasing application of an approach to the development and use of human resources that is systematic. The further creation of national and regional training institutes, now numbering 344, has pressed this development forward, with the result that, apart from North America and Iran where numerous courses have been given, some 70,000 individuals have already completed at least one institute course. All of this is contributing to a growing body of confirmed, active supporters of the Cause. The untold potential of this progression is illustrated in such reports as the one received from Chad, where in an area served by an institute more than 1,000 people embraced the Faith through the individual efforts of those who had received training. Understanding of the necessity for systematization in the development of human resources is everywhere taking hold.

Collateral with the demonstrated efficacy of training institutes is the pragmatic emergence of Regional Bahá'í Councils in selected countries where conditions have made the establishment of these institutions necessary and viable. Where there is close interaction between a Council and a training institute, the stage is set for a galvanic coherence of the processes effecting expansion and consolidation in a region, and for the practical matching of the training services of institutes to the developmental needs of local communities. Moreover, the operational guidelines whereby the Continental Counsellors and the Regional Councils have direct access to each other give rise to a further institutional relationship which, along with that connecting the Councils to the National and Local Spiritual Assemblies, effectuates a dynamic integration of functions at the regional level.

The ever-expanding work in social and economic development is also benefiting from the operation of those training institutes that give attention to such subjects as literacy, primary health care and the advancement of women. The more widespread efforts of the Office of Social and Economic Development to promote a global process of learning about relevant Bahá'í principles are enhanced by the work of these institutes, as well as by the rise of Bahá'í-inspired organizations scattered throughout the planet. Clearly, then, the institutional capacity to administer development programmes is gaining in strength. This is apparent in projects sponsored by Bahá'í institutions or initiated by individuals through the inspiration of the Faith. An outstanding example of the latter is Unity College, which was created by a family in Ethiopia as the first, and since late 1998, the only private college in the country, with a student body that swelled to 5,000 during this past year. Another example, on a smaller scale but of significance nonetheless, is the initiative taken by a family in Buffalo, New York: here, in their home, they have been assisting tens of children and youth from the inner city to develop, through Bahá'í spiritual and moral teachings, patterns of behaviour that will enable them to overcome self-destructive attitudes bred by poverty and racism.

In the area of external affairs, the most energetic actions have been prompted by two tragic happenings in Iran. The sudden execution in Mashhad last July of Mr. Ruhollah Rawhani, the first such official action in six years, registered a shock that provoked a worldwide and unprecedented outcry by governments and United Nations agencies. In late September the government's intelligence agency launched an organized attack on the Bahá'í Institute of Higher Education, involving the arrest of 36 members of the faculty and raids on more than 500 homes across the country. The latter incident inspired a global campaign of protest, still in progress, in which academic institutions and associations, educators, and student groups have been participating, and in which the press has taken a special interest, as reflected in the appearance of substantial articles in Le Monde, The New York Times and other major newspapers. The successful passage in the United Nations General Assembly last December of yet another resolution on Iran, in which the Bahá'ís are distinctly mentioned, must surely have been influenced by these two conspicuous manifestations of an unrelenting religious persecution.

But intensive as has been the demand upon the friends in all parts of the world to defend our beleaguered brethren, much attention was devoted as well to a wide range of external affairs endeavours. The four-month-long mission undertaken by an emissary of the House of Justice, Mr. Giovanni Ballerio, to islands of the Pacific Ocean where he met with 22 heads of state, 5 heads of government and more than 40 other high-ranking officials; the efforts pursued by a number of National Assemblies, at the urging of the Bahá'í International Community's United Nations Office, to promote human rights education; the participation, by invitation, of representatives of South Africa's Bahá'í community in the proceedings of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, at which they were able to recount their record of unflinching support of racial unity throughout the years of apartheid; the recent success of communities in Australia, Brazil, Finland and Portugal in obtaining the decision of educational authorities to include courses on the Bahá'í Faith in the curricula of primary and secondary schools - these, not to mention the public information projects that generated publicity through all forms of the media, are examples of the broadly based enterprises in external affairs that engaged the energies of the community.

A corollary spate of activities involved the use of the arts, of which the musical and other artistic performances associated with the celebration in Paris of the centenary of the establishment of the Faith in Europe were an outstanding instance. The Voices of Baha Choir, composed of 68 members drawn from Europe and the Americas, delighted audiences in eight European cities and introduced the Faith to many. 'Light and Fire', the completed part of an opera/ballet being written by Bahá'í composer Lasse Thoresen of Norway, was successfully performed last September at the prestigious music festival in Poland known as the Warsaw Autumn, which was opened by the Queen of Sweden. The work is based on recent heroic acts of the martyrs in Iran, a fact that exposed the audience to knowledge of the Faith. Europe's apparent lead in these particular endeavours was also marked by the occasion of the Austrian Chamber Music Festival when the Austrian Cross for Sciences and Arts, the highest award of its kind for Austria, was presented by the President of the Republic to Mr. Bijan Khadem-Missagh, a Bahá'í violinist and conductor. A programme at that same Festival featured the recitation of extracts from Bahá'í and other sacred scriptures. But a word, too, must be said in recognition of the prominent part being played by youth all over the world in their employment of the arts in the teaching work; renditions by their dance workshops, in particular, have acquired renown within and outside the Bahá'í community.

To the Bahá'ís of the World 4 Ridván 156

We therefore enter this Ridván season, as a community in a dynamic state of transformation, enjoying a coherence of vision and activity consonant with the aim of advancing the process of entry by troops. And we begin the final year of the Plan with a boost in administrative strength, as three countries in Europe -

Latvia, Lithuania and Macedonia - convoke their first Conventions to form National Spiritual Assemblies and thus raise the number of pillars of the Universal House of Justice to 182. But beyond this festive moment is a chronology of expectations that lists, first and foremost, the conclusion of the Four Year Plan at Ridván 2000. This will be followed by the commencement on the Day of the Covenant of that very year of a new term of office for the Continental Boards of Counsellors, whose members will soon thereafter be called to the Bahá'í World Centre for a conference at which, among other matters, the features of the next global teaching and consolidation plan will be discussed. The Counsellors' Conference will mark the occupation by the International Teaching Centre of its permanent seat, an occasion for which Auxiliary Board members throughout the world will be invited to join the Counsellors in the Holy Land. The Mount Carmel projects will have been completed by this time and the preparations will have been well advanced for dedicatory events, scheduled to take place on 22 and 23 May 2001, to which a number of representatives from each national Bahá'í community will be invited. The details concerning these events are to be announced in due course.

This projection of portentous happenings cuts across the divide in time between the twentieth century and the new millennium, according to the reckoning of the common era. It is a projection that underscores the contrast between the confident vision that propels the constructive endeavours of an illumined community and the tangled fears seizing the millions upon millions who are as yet unaware of the Day in which they are living. Bereft of authentic guidance, they dwell on the horrors of the century, despairing over what these could imply for the future, hardly appreciating that this very century contains a light that will be shed on centuries to come. Ill-equipped to interpret the social commotion at play throughout the planet, they listen to the pundits of error and sink deeper into a slough of despond. Troubled by forecasts of doom, they do battle with the phantoms of a wrongly informed imagination. Knowing nothing of the transformative vision vouchsafed by the Lord of the Age, they stumble ahead, blind to the peerlessness of the new Day of God.

The pitiful conditions implied by such a state of heart and mind cannot but prompt us all to action, unabating action, to fulfil the intentions of a Plan whose major aim is to accelerate that process which will make it possible for growing numbers of the world's people to find the Object of their quest and thus to build a united, peaceful and prosperous life.

Dear Friends: The days pass swiftly as the twinkle of a star. Make your mark now, at this crucial turning point of a juncture, the like of which shall never return. Make that mark in deeds that will ensure for you celestial blessings - guarantee for you, for the entire race, a future beyond any earthly reckoning.

[SIGNED: THE UNIVERSAL HOUSE OF JUSTICE]

From: <nima_hazini@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Liberalism
Date: Sunday, January 09, 2000 8:35 AM

Dear David,

I found this on srb and, with a few major exceptions such as the posters more optimistic appraisal of practices in Iran over the past decade, it beautifully reiterates much of my own views on the chief issues which concern me in this thread. Conscientious Baha'is such as people like yourself, Pat Kohli and Richard Little would do well to heed what the poster is saying about the impression that Baha'is are projecting to the outside world at the very end of the post.

cheers,
Nima

---

According to XXXXX, American Bahai authors are obligated to submit their manuscripts to the authorities for approval prior to publication.

By way of comparison, presently in Iran, a country which is still far from being a democracy, authors who write on Islam are not required to submit manuscripts in advance for approval. Censorship kicks in only after publication in cases where a work is deemed to have crossed a red line. The presence of the red line is unfortunate; but still the line is not drawn so restrictively as to stifle independent thinking about religion, radical re-interpretations of religion, self-criticism, or the criticism of the interpretations of the clergy. Witness the publication of the books of Abdolkarim Soroush, an advocate of rationality and democracy, and opponent of religious authoritarianism, totalitarianism, and intolerance. Witness his criticisms of those in power. (Incidentally, his books were published many years ago, even before the recent trend towards democratization!) Other examples could be mentioned as well.

This brings me to a question about the Bahai faith. How could Bahaism be reconciled with democracy and rationality while it exercises such surprisingly rigid methods of institutional thought control?

Rationality is synonymous with the critical attitude, the critical evaluation of all ideas. Take the critical attitude away, and there is no rationality, no science, no real learning; what remains is blind dogmatism.

The freedom of criticism is intimately linked with democracy as well.

Can the Bahai faith be reconciled with true democracy? Mere voting is not a touchstone of democracy. There is voting in Syria, Iraq, and Egypt too. Democracy requires the clash of ideas, the freedom to criticize authority, and vigorous debate. Without these essential elements, voting is a farce.

Authoritarian minds cannot stand criticism and the clash of ideas. They characterize it as dangerous, since it causes "disunity." Granted, there is indeed a semblance of unity if only one viewpoint is allowed to be voiced. But such unity is hollow and self-destructive, since it leads to stagnation. There is another type of unity that is actually reinvigorating and enriching, and that is the unity that arises when you tolerate differences of opinion (which is definitely not the same thing as saying all opinions are good; one can tolerate a bad opinion), and the kind of unity that arises when vigorous debate on all matters is encouraged and respected.

So, is there a liberal trend within the Bahai faith, like there is in Islam and Christianity for example? Or, are Bahais overwhelmingly authoritarian, i.e. a "closed" society which is not open to improvement through self-criticism? Are there Bahais who genuinely accept the arguments for liberalism in, say, John Stuart Mill's On Liberty, or Karl Popper's The Open Society and Its Enemies, or William Bartley's The Retreat to Commitment?

Over all, I am gradually gaining the impression that whatever some of the original assertions of the Bahai scriptures may be, in practice Bahai institutions and leaders are at heart intolerant, afraid of pluralism and clash of opinions, and advocates of mind control through controlling and containing debates. I am also gaining the impression that Bahai institutions are closed societies, not open societies. The policies of the moderators of this newsgroup, as stated in the FAQ eloquently confirm this point. Example:

To avoid confusion, articles should not contain unpublished, unauthorized translations of Baha'i texts. Instead, authors should paraphrase untranslated materials.

A translation into another language is nothing but an interpretation. To ban "unauthorized" translations is precisely to ban "unauthorized" interpretations of the scriptures. So, instead of debating people who post seemingly problematic translations ("clash of opinions"), the moderators opt for silencing proposed translations! And it really does not matter how much training the poster has had in Persian and Arabic philology and history. If it is not "authorized," it is necessarily "confusing"!

It is interesting that the moderators say that the purpose of such censorship is "to avoid confusion." This is uncannily reminiscent of the type of rhetoric used by the most autocratic of autocrats in the Middle East. The stifling of pluralism is always done in the name of unity, avoidance of confusion, avoidance of deviance and perversion, etc. But the real purpose is always the same: to immunize those in power, their world-view, and their personal interpretations of things against the inconvenience of criticism.

I am afraid of what will become of liberty in the U.S. if one day Bahais become the majority. As a rationalist, liberal, and committed Muslim, I admire the pluralism in the U.S. even though I am not an American. I suspect that most Americans would have similar sentiments if they became familiar with certain Bahai practices. Maybe I am wrong, but I am also gradually beginning to feel that Bahai institutions in the U.S. don't care a whole lot about the impression they impart to non-Bahais. Probably this itself will ensure that I will never *really* have to worry about Bahais becoming the majority (and abolishing liberty).

---

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: <boucarria@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Ex-Bahais: Lack of Pastoral Counselling Date: Tuesday, July 04, 2000 12:32 AM

> "Bahaism works better as a philosophy than as a religion or theocratic > political system, as a world-embracing attitude rather than as an > absolutist, infallible institution."

I agree, however, it does claim to be the Religion and Theocratic essence of a new world order. I joined mainly because of the contact and company. The people were great. However, when they got stuck into the Institutional work, The deploying of the "troops", I was left for dead.

As I have said to many people, I find that the Bahais in general can be summed up as "Administrators Anonymous". They are so caught up in saving the world that the person who needs Pastoral help is left for dead. And this was admitted to me by a vast number of People who are still Bahais.

> interdependence. Then, with a spell of some Bahai writings, these > aspects would become concrete and seem attainable."

"Seem" is the operative word here. The obsession with the deploying of the "troops", and the focus on the Administrative element is just so surreal that I guess it was inevitable that I had to re-sign, since I was never educated in the Faith. And when I did investigate, I turned up way too much that was not to my liking.

> contact with any Baha'is. Not because I do not like them (I still do > like many of the individual Baha'is I have known) but I feel like I am

I totally love the people in the Faith who have supported me. There are various beliefs that are hindrances ( Like if I have an issue with someone, I cannot, and am not allowed to talk this out with another Bahai, I have to talk it out with the Bahai concerned... and this has proven damaging ). The Individual Bahais who I know and have known have been superb, with a few being not exactly spiritually "right"... But that is another story.

Anyway, the positive experiences I have had with Bahais have been great, but the negative have been horrendous .

> healing or help from this community no matter how hard I try; I don't > think the community is healthy; I don't want to become a teaching > clone; I'm not staying for my own sake." "

Same here. And I, until reading this, have felt like a social Pariah, like I did something massively wrong. Basically I think the focus is skewed to an Adminstrative "Utopia".

Campbell.
santeri@eisa.net.au

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com>
To: <FG@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights & Marshall Case
Date: Monday, April 10, 2000 11:37 AM

-----

This message was forwarded to you from Deja.com by patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com. Deja.com offers free consumer information, including ratings and reviews on thousands of products and services. Before you buy, visit <https://www.deja.com/>

-----

(beginning of original message)

Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights & Marshall Case
From: wrldpaul@aol.com (WRLDpaul)
Date: 2000/04/10
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai
Hello,

I have been reading these posts with great interest and would like to ask a question. I myself have been a Bahai' for 13 years, and I was always impressed with the emphasis on diversity of thought within the community. But in all honesty, I see no such thing now after all of these years. One must tell the Bahai' line with much care if one is not to be labeled a renegade or outcast. Where indeed is the diversity of thought within the rank and file? It seems to me that indeed there is some diversity of thought here on these boards, but the diversity seems to originate from those who have left the faith, been spiritually condemned by the House, lost their rights, or removed from membership. I see no hints of diversity or tolerance of differing opinions here. I suspect that some of the responses I get here will say that in regards to unity of races, religions, and other matters explicitly stated in the Writings, there is much room for diversity. But, I ask you, how many ways can one define unity of races, religion, science and faith? Not many. It seems to me that only one mode of thought and intellectual freedom is allowed here. Very disturbing if you ask me.
Then again, perhaps I am missing something.

Paul, pondering on how different he really is.
:)

(end of original message)

-----

You can view this message and the related discussion by following this link:
<https://www.deja.com/dnquery.xp?search=thread&svcclass=dnserver&recnum=%3c20000410053013.18303.00000779@ng-fz1.aol.com%3e%231/1>
We hope to see you soon at Deja.com.
Before you buy.
<https://www.deja.com/>
From: K. Paul Johnson <pjohnson@vlinsvr.vsla.edu>
Subject: House warns of opposition "campaign"
Date: Tuesday, June 01, 1999 4:24 PM

Being discussed heatedly on Talisman at the moment, the following letter was sent to every NSA:

THE UNIVERSAL HOUSE OF JUSTICE
BAHA'I WORLD CENTRE

Department of the Secretariat
7 April 1999

To all National Spiritual Assemblies

Dear Baha'i Friends,

Issues Related to the Study of the Baha'i Faith

In May of 1998, Baha'i Canada reproduced a collection of letters which the Universal House of Justice had written to various individuals on the subject of academic study of the Baha'i Faith. Copies of this compilation were subsequently mailed by the Canadian National Spiritual Assembly to its sister Assemblies. The reprint has now been made generally available in booklet form by the United States Baha'i Publishing Trust. The House of Justice has asked us to forward you a copy of the latter publication with the following comments.

As a number of the friends are aware,, a campaign of internal opposition to the Teachings is currently being carried on through the use of the Internet, a communications system that now reaches virtually every part of the world. Differing from attacks familiar in the past, it seeks to recast the entire Faith into a socio-political ideology alien to Baha'u'llah's intent. In the place of the institutional authority established by His Covenant, it promotes a kind of interpretive authority which those behind it attribute to the views of persons technically trained in Middle East studies.

Early in 1996, the deliberate nature of the plan was revealed in an accidental posting to an Internet list which Baha'i subscribers had believed was dedicated to scholarly exploration of the Cause. Some of the people responsible resigned from the Faith when the Counsellors pointed out to them the direction their activities were taking. A small number of others continue to promote the campaign within the Baha'i community.

In the past, in situations of a somewhat similar nature, the patience and compassion shown by `Abdu'l Baha and the Guardian helped various believers who had been misled by ill-intentioned persons to eventually free themselves from such entanglements. In this same spirit of forbearance the Universal House of Justice has intervened in the current situation only to the extent that it has been unavoidable, trusting to the good sense and the goodwill of the believers involved to awaken to the spiritual dangers to which they are exposing themselves. Nevertheless, certain Counsellors and National Spiritual Assemblies are monitoring the problem closely, and the friends can be confident that whatever further steps are needed to protect the integrity of the Cause will be taken.

As passages in the enclosed reprint make clear, this campaign of internal opposition-- while purporting to accept the legitimacy of the Guardianship and the Universal House of Justice as twin successors of Baha'u'llah and the Centre of His Covenant-- attempts to cast doubt on the nature and the scope of the authority conferred on them in the Writings. When other Baha'is have pointed out that such arguments contradict explicit statements of the Master, persons behind the scheme have responded by calling into question the soundness of `Abdu'l Baha's own judgment and perspective. Gradually, these arguments have exposed the view of those involved that Baha'u'llah Himself was not the voice of God to our age but merely a particularly enlightened moral philosopher, one whose primary concern was to reform existing society.

By itself, such opposition would likely stand little chance of influencing reasonably informed Baha'is. As one of the letters in the enclosed reprint (20 July 1997) points out, the scheme relies for effect, therefore, on exploiting the confusion created in modern thought by the reigning doctrines of materialism. Although the reality of God's continuous relationship with His creation and His intervention in human life and history are the very essence of the teachings of the Founders of the revealed religions, dogmatic materialism today insists that even the nature of religion itself can be adequately understood only through the use of an academic methodology designed to ignore the truths that make religion what it is.

In general, the strategy being pursued has been to avoid direct attacks on the Faith's Central Figures. The effort, rather, has been to sow the seeds of doubt among believers about the Faith's teachings and institutions by appealing to unexamined prejudices that Baha'is may have unconsciously absorbed from non-Baha'i society. In defiance of the clear interpretations of `Abdu'l Baha and the Guardian, for example, Baha'u'llah's limiting of membership on the Universal House of Justice to men is misrepresented as merely a "temporary measure" subject to eventual revision if sufficient pressure is brought to bear. Similarly, Shoghi Effendi's explanation of Baha'u'llah's vision of the future Baha'i World Commonwealth that will unite spiritual and civil authority is dismissed in favour of the assertion that the modern political concept of "separation of church and state" is someone one that Baha'u'llah intended as a basic principle of the World Order he has founded. Particularly subtle is an attempt to suggest that the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar should evolve into a seat of quasi-doctrinal authority, parallel to and essentially independent of the Local House of Justice, which would permit various interests to insinuate themselves into the direction of the life processes of the Cause.

(continued in part two) From: Peter Terry <peterry@megalink.net>
Subject: Ficicchia
Date: Saturday, July 08, 2000 2:55 PM

Dear friends:

Ficicchia is a Covenant-Breaker. In the House's Ridvan 2000 Message it states:
"...in Germany...Christian denominations which had avoided contact with the Faith owing to a book written by a Covenant-breaker...." and goes on to state that the remedy leading to the reversal of this attitude was a 600 page scholarly rebuttal (Make The Crooked Straight). MTCS also refers to his expulsion from the Faith and includes relevant details including his letter to the Universal House of Justice dated April 5, 1978 which culminates in the following threat: "...I declare that you will from now on have me as an embittered enemy who will fight you with all possible means at every opportunity...You have brought upon yourselves my ultimate enmity..." Dr. Udo Schaeffer points out that Ficicchia's attacks, which poisoned the attitude of many in German-speaking countries against the Faith, confirms the dialectic whereby the 'Letters of Negation' involuntarily "...cause the Word of God to be exalted, and spread His signs and tokens far and wide: Were it not for this opposition by the disdainful....- how could news of the advent of the Primal Point and the bright dawning of the Day-Star of Baha ever have reached to east and west?" (Selections from the Writings of 'Abdul-Baha, 195:2).

With best wishes, Peter

Selections from the Writings of Baha'u'llah on Tyranny and Oppression:

Epistle to the Son of the Wolf:

O Shaykh! My Pen is abashed to recount what actually took place. In the land of Sad (Isfahan) the fire of tyranny burned with such a hot flame that every fair-minded person groaned aloud.

Briefly, in every city the evidences of a tyranny, beyond like or equal, were unmistakably clear and manifest, and yet none arose in self-defence!

The Faith of God hath cried everywhere, by reason of thy tyranny, and yet thou disportest thyself and art of them that exult. There is no hatred in Mine heart for thee nor for anyone. Every man of discernment beholdeth thee, and such as are like thee, engulfed in evident folly. Hadst thou realized that which thou hast done, thou wouldst have cast thyself into the fire, or abandoned thine home and fled unto the mountains, or wouldst have groaned until thou hadst returned unto the place destined for thee by Him Who is the Lord of strength and of might. O thou who art even as nothing! Rend thou asunder the veils of idle fancies and vain imaginings, that thou mayest behold the Daystar of knowledge shining from this resplendent Horizon.

We have heard that the provinces of Persia have been adorned with the adornment of justice. When We observed closely, however, We found them to be the dawning-places of tyranny and the daysprings of injustice. We behold justice in the clutches of tyranny. We beseech God to set it free through the power of His might and His sovereignty.

How numerous the oppressors before thee who have arisen to quench the light of God, and how many the impious who murdered and pillaged until the hearts and souls of men groaned by reason of their cruelty! The sun of justice hath been obscured, inasmuch as the embodiment of tyranny hath been stablished upon the throne of hatred, and yet the people understand not. O foolish one! Thou hast slain the children of the Apostle and pillaged their possessions. Say: Was it, in thine estimation, their possessions or themselves that denied God? Judge fairly, O ignorant one that hath been shut out as by a veil from God. Thou hast clung to tyranny, and cast away justice; whereupon all created things have lamented, and still thou art among the wayward. Thou hast put to death the aged, and plundered the young. Thinkest thou that thou wilt consume that which thine iniquity hath amassed? Nay, by Myself! Thus informeth thee He Who is cognizant of all. By God! The things thou possessest shall profit thee not, nor what thou hast laid up through thy cruelty. Unto this beareth witness thy Lord, the All-Knowing. Thou hast arisen to put out the light of this Cause; ere long will thine own fire be quenched, at His behest. He, verily, is the Lord of strength and of might. The changes and chances of the world, and the powers of the nations, cannot frustrate Him. He doeth what He pleaseth, and ordaineth what He willeth through the power of His sovereignty.

O Shaykh! While hemmed in by tribulations this Wronged One is occupied in setting down these words. On every side the flame of oppression and tyranny can be discerned.

Kitab-I-Aqdas:

Do thou remember the one whose power transcended thy power, and whose station excelled thy station. Where is he? Whither are gone the things he possessed? Take warning, and be not of them that are fast asleep. He it was who cast the Tablet of God behind him when We made known unto him what the hosts of tyranny had caused Us to suffer. Wherefore, disgrace assailed him from all sides, and he went down to dust in great loss. Think deeply, O King, concerning him, and concerning them who, like unto thee, have conquered cities and ruled over men. The All-Merciful brought them down from their palaces to their graves. Be warned, be of them who reflect.

Hearken ye, O Rulers of America and the Presidents of the Republics therein, unto that which the Dove is warbling on the Branch of Eternity: "There is none other God but Me, the Ever-Abiding, the Forgiving, the All-Bountiful." Adorn ye the temple of dominion with the ornament of justice and of the fear of God, and its head with the crown of the remembrance of your Lord, the Creator of the heavens. Thus counselleth you He Who is the Dayspring of Names, as bidden by Him Who is the All-Knowing, the All-Wise. The Promised One hath appeared in this glorified Station, whereat all beings, both seen and unseen, have rejoiced. Take ye advantage of the Day of God. Verily, to meet Him is better for you than all that whereon the sun shineth, could ye but know it. O concourse of rulers! Give ear unto that which hath been raised from the Dayspring of Grandeur: "Verily, there is none other God but Me, the Lord of Utterance, the All-Knowing." Bind ye the broken with the hands of justice, and crush the oppressor who flourisheth with the rod of the commandments of your Lord, the Ordainer, the All-Wise.

O people of Constantinople! Lo, from your midst We hear the baleful hooting of the owl. Hath the drunkenness of passion laid hold upon you, or is it that ye are sunk in heedlessness? O Spot that art situate on the shores of the two seas! The throne of tyranny hath, verily, been established upon thee, and the flame of hatred hath been kindled within thy bosom, in such wise that the Concourse on high and they who circle around the Exalted Throne have wailed and lamented. We behold in thee the foolish ruling over the wise, and darkness vaunting itself against the light. Thou art indeed filled with manifest pride. Hath thine outward splendour made thee vainglorious? By Him Who is the Lord of mankind! It shall soon perish, and thy daughters and thy widows and all the kindreds that dwell within thee shall lament. Thus informeth thee the All-Knowing, the All-Wise.

Say: O people, should ye choose to disbelieve in Him, refrain at least from rising up against Him. By God! Sufficient are the hosts of tyranny that are leagued against Him!

Tablets of Baha'u'llah:

Neither the ascendancy of the oppressor nor the tyranny of the wicked hath been able to thwart His Purpose. How glorified is His sovereignty, how exalted His dominion!

Great God! Although His signs have encompassed the world and His proofs and testimonies are shining forth and manifest as the light, yet the ignorant appear heedless, nay rather, rebellious. Would that they had been content with opposition. But at all times they are plotting to cut down the sacred Lote-Tree. Since the dawn of this Revelation the embodiments of selfishness have, by resorting to cruelty and oppression, striven to extinguish the Light of divine manifestation. But God, having stayed their hands, revealed this Light through His sovereign authority and protected it through the power of His might until earth and heaven were illumined by its radiance and brightness. Praise be unto Him under all conditions.

May Our Glory rest upon the people of Bah whom neither the tyranny of the oppressor nor the ascendancy of the aggressor have been able to withhold from God, the Lord of the worlds.
TAJALL Y T (Effulgences)

O thou who dost magnify My praise! Give ear unto that which the people of tyranny ascribe unto Me in My days. Some of them say: 'He hath laid claim to divinity'; others say: 'He hath devised a lie against God'; still others say: 'He is come to foment sedition'. Base and wretched are they. Lo! They are, in truth, enslaved to idle imaginings.

O kindreds of the earth! Incline your ears unto the Voice from the divine Lote-Tree which overshadoweth the world and be not of the people of tyranny on earth-- men who have repudiated the Manifestation of God and His invincible authority and have renounced His favours-- they in truth are reckoned with the contemptible in the Book of God, the Lord of all mankind. KAL M T-I-FIRDAWS YYIH (Words of Paradise)

Well is it with the king who keepeth a tight hold on the reins of his passion, restraineth his anger and preferreth justice and fairness to injustice and tyranny.

The word of God which the Supreme Pen hath recorded on the sixth leaf of the Most Exalted Paradise is the following: The light of men is Justice. Quench it not with the contrary winds of oppression and tyranny.

Justice is, in this day, bewailing its plight, and Equity groaneth beneath the yoke of oppression. The thick clouds of tyranny have darkened the face of the earth, and enveloped its peoples. Through the movement of Our Pen of glory We have, at the bidding of the omnipotent Ordainer, breathed a new life into every human frame, and instilled into every word a fresh potency. All created things proclaim the evidences of this world-wide regeneration. This is the most great, the most joyful tidings imparted by the Pen of this Wronged One to mankind.

Referring to the land of T (Tihir n) We have revealed in the Kit b-i-Aqdas that which will admonish mankind. They that perpetrate tyranny in the world have usurped the rights of the peoples and kindreds of the earth and are sedulously pursuing their selfish inclinations. The tyrant [Prince Mahm d Mirz , the Jal lu'd'Dawlih, Governor of Yazd, Persia.] of the land of Y (Yazd), committed that which hath caused the Concourse on High to shed tears of blood.

But where are to be found earnest seekers and inquiring minds? Whither are gone the equitable and the fair-minded? At present no day passeth without the fire of a fresh tyranny blazing fiercely, or the sword of a new aggression being unsheathed. Gracious God! The great and the noble in Persia glory in acts of such savagery that one is lost in amazement at the tales thereof.

Verily, the birds abiding within the domains of My Kingdom and the doves dwelling in the rose-garden of My wisdom utter such melodies and warblings as are inscrutable to all but God, the Lord of the kingdoms of earth and heaven; and were these melodies to be revealed even to an extent smaller than a needle's eye, the people of tyranny would utter such calumnies as none among former generations hath ever uttered, and would commit such deeds as no one in past ages and centuries hath ever committed. They have rejected the bounty of God and His proofs and have repudiated the testimony of God and His signs. They have gone astray and have caused the people to go astray, yet perceive it not. They worship vain imaginings but know it not. They have taken idle fancies for their lords and have neglected God, yet understand not. They have abandoned the most great Ocean and are hastening towards the pool, but comprehend not. They follow their own idle fancies while turning aside from God, the Help in Peril, the Self-Subsisting.

A year ago an oppressor ruled over this city, and at every instant caused fresh harm. By the righteousness of the Lord! He wrought that which cast terror into the hearts of men. But to the Pen of Glory the tyranny of the world hath never been nor will it ever be a hindrance. In the abundance of Our grace and loving-kindness We have revealed specially for the rulers and ministers of the world that which is conducive to safety and protection, tranquillity and peace; haply the children of men may rest secure from the evils of oppression.

The Great Being saith: O well-beloved ones! The tabernacle of unity hath been raised; regard ye not one another as strangers. Ye are the fruits of one tree, and the leaves of one branch. We cherish the hope that the light of justice may shine upon the world and sanctify it from tyranny. If the rulers and kings of the earth, the symbols of the power of God, exalted be His glory, arise and resolve to dedicate themselves to whatever will promote the highest interests of the whole of humanity, the reign of justice will assuredly be established amongst the children of men, and the effulgence of its light will envelop the whole earth.

There can be no doubt whatever that if the day-star of justice, which the clouds of tyranny have obscured, were to shed its light upon men, the face of the earth would be completely transformed.

The Great Being, wishing to reveal the prerequisites of the peace and tranquillity of the world and the advancement of its peoples, hath written: The time must come when the imperative necessity for the holding of a vast, an all-embracing assemblage of men will be universally realized. The rulers and kings of the earth must needs attend it, and, participating in its deliberations, must consider such ways and means as will lay the foundations of the world's Great Peace amongst men. Such a peace demandeth that the Great Powers should resolve, for the sake of the tranquillity of the peoples of the earth, to be fully reconciled among themselves. Should any king take up arms against another, all should unitedly arise and prevent him. If this be done, the nations of the world will no longer require any armaments, except for the purpose of preserving the security of their realms and of maintaining internal order within their territories. This will ensure the peace and composure of every people, government and nation. We fain would hope that the kings and rulers of the earth, the mirrors of the gracious and almighty name of God, may attain unto this station, and shield mankind from the onslaught of tyranny.

In these days the tabernacle of justice hath fallen into the clutches of tyranny and oppression. Beseech ye the One true God--exalted be His glory--not to deprive mankind of the ocean of true understanding, for were men but to take heed they would readily appreciate that whatever hath streamed from and is set down by the Pen of Glory is even as the sun for the whole world and that therein lie the welfare, security and true interests of all men; otherwise the earth will be tormented by a fresh calamity every day and unprecedented commotions will break out. God grant that the people of the world may be graciously aided to preserve the light of His loving counsels within the globe of wisdom. We cherish the hope that everyone may be adorned with the vesture of true wisdom, the basis of the government of the world.

Be ye warned, O men of understanding. It ill beseemeth the station of man to commit tyranny; rather it behoveth him to observe equity and be attired with the raiment of justice under all conditions. Beseech ye the One true God that He may, through the power of the hand of loving-kindness and spiritual education, purge and purify certain souls from the defilement of evil passions and corrupt desires, that they may arise and unloose their tongues for the sake of God, that perchance the evidences of injustice may be blotted out and the splendour of the light of justice may shed its radiance upon the whole world. The people are ignorant, and they stand in need of those who will expound the truth.

The Faith of God hath cried everywhere, by reason of thy tyranny, and yet thou disportest thyself and art of them that exult. There is no hatred in Mine heart for thee nor for anyone. Every man of learning beholdeth thee, and such as are like thee, engulfed in evident folly. Hadst thou realized that which thou hast done, thou wouldst have cast thyself into the fire, or abandoned thine home and fled into the mountains, or wouldst have groaned until thou hadst returned unto the place destined for thee by Him Who is the Lord of strength and of might. O thou who art even as nothing! Rend thou asunder the veils of idle fancies and vain imaginings, that thou mayest behold the Day-Star of knowledge shining from this resplendent Horizon.

We have heard that the provinces of Persia have been adorned with the adornment of justice. When We observed closely, however, We found them to be the dawning-places of tyranny and the daysprings of injustice. We behold justice in the clutches of tyranny. We beseech God to set it free through the power of His might and His sovereignty.

How numerous the oppressors before thee who have arisen to quench the light of God, and how many the impious who murdered and pillaged until the hearts and souls of men groaned by reason of their cruelty! The sun of justice hath been obscured, inasmuch as the embodiment of tyranny hath been established upon the throne of hatred, and yet the people understand not. The children of the Apostle have been slain and their possessions pillaged. Say: Was it, in thine estimation, their possessions or themselves that denied God? Judge fairly, O ignorant one that hath been shut out as by a veil from God. Thou hast clung to tyranny and cast away justice; whereupon all created things have lamented, and still thou art among the wayward. Thou hast put to death the aged, and plundered the young. Thinkest thou that thou wilt consume that which thine iniquity hath amassed? Nay, by Myself! Thus informeth thee He Who is cognizant of all. By God! The things thou possessest shall profit thee not, nor what thou hast laid up through thy cruelty. Unto this beareth witness Thy Lord, the All-Knowing. Thou hast arisen to put out the light of this Cause; ere long will thine own fire be quenched, at His behest. He, verily, is the Lord of strength and of might. The changes and chances of the world, and the powers of the nations, cannot frustrate Him. He doeth what He pleaseth, and ordaineth what He willeth through the power of His sovereignty.

O `Ali! Woes and sorrows are powerless to restrain thy Lord, the All-Merciful. Indeed He hath risen to champion the Cause of God in such wise that neither the overpowering might of the world nor the tyranny of the nations can ever alarm Him. He calleth aloud betwixt earth and heaven, saying: The Promised Day is come. The Lord of creation proclaimeth: Verily, there is no God besides Me, the Almighty, the All-Bountiful.

How vast the number of places that have been ennobled with your blood for the sake of God. How numerous the cities wherein the voice of your lamentation hath been raised and the wailing of your anguish uplifted. How many the prisons into which ye have been cast by the hosts of tyranny. Know ye of a certainty that He will render you victorious, will exalt you among the peoples of the world and will demonstrate your high rank before the gaze of all nations. Surely He will not suffer the reward of His favoured ones to be lost.

Persevere thou in helping His Cause through the strengthening power of the hosts of wisdom and utterance. Thus hath it been decreed by God, the Gracious, the All-Praised. Blessed is the believer who hath in this Day embraced the Truth and the man of fixed resolve whom the hosts of tyranny have been powerless to affright.

In this Day the Straight Path is made manifest, the Balance of divine justice is set and the light of the sun of His bounty is resplendent, yet the oppressive darkness of the people of tyranny hath, even as clouds, intervened and caused a grievous obstruction between the Day-Star of heavenly grace and the people of the world. Blessed is he who hath rent the intervening veils asunder and is illumined by the radiant light of divine Revelation. Consider how numerous were those who accounted themselves among the wise and the learned, yet in the Day of God were deprived of the outpourings of heavenly bounties.

Hidden Words:

23. O DWELLERS IN THE CITY OF LOVE! Mortal blasts have beset the everlasting candle, and the beauty of the celestial Youth is veiled in the darkness of dust. The chief of the monarchs of love is wronged by the people of tyranny and the dove of holiness lies prisoned in the talons of owls. The dwellers in the pavilion of glory and the celestial concourse bewail and lament, while ye repose in the realm of negligence, and esteem yourselves as of the true friends. How vain are your imaginings!

64. O OPPRESSORS OF EARTH! Withdraw your hands from tyranny, for I have pledged Myself not to forgive any man's injustice. This is My covenant which I have irrevocably decreed in the preserved tablet and sealed it with My seal of glory.

From: "Patrick Henry" <Patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com>

Subject: - bahai - universal house of "justice" - Backbiting Prof. Juan Cole, Dept. of History, The University of Michigan

Date: Friday, September 29, 2000 6:58 AM

3 August 1999

From: Department of the Secretariat
Baha'i World Center

Dear Baha'i Friend,

Clearly, no one would dispute the right of Dr. Cole to write and publish whatever work a publisher is prepared to handle. Nor has anyone questioned the right of a Baha'i who is interested in such a book to purchase it. To suggest that the House of Justice is saying otherwise would be to seriously misconstrue the nature of its concern . . .

As a participant in various Internet discussion groups over the past five years, and particularly in the last year or two, you cannot but be aware from these exchanges that Dr. Cole has embarked on a deliberate assault against the Baha'i Cause, in which he has not hesitated to attack its institutions, to misrepresent its fundamental teachings, and to abuse the trust of Baha'is who had been led to believe that they were engaged with him in a detached and scholarly search for the truth. These same Internet exchanges exposed you, like other participants, to a flood of calumny and invective against a great many of your fellow believers, on the part of Dr. Cole, that is scarcely credible in rational discourse.

Had such a book as Modernity and the Millennium been written by a disinterested non-Baha'i scholar, its misconception of the nature of Baha'u'llah's Mission and its other shortcomings would have represented no more than understandable weaknesses of an honest attempt to explore a religious phenomenon as yet little understood in the West. Indeed, in this context, such an attempt to make the Baha'i Faith comprehensible to the Western academic mind, however inadequate it might appear to knowledgeable Baha'i scholars, would surely have earned its author a measure of genuine Baha'i appreciation for the writing and research skills deployed in devising it.

As you -- like other participants in certain Internet discussion groups -- are well aware, however, the book's author is not a disinterested scholar. Rather, he is a deeply embittered individual who, as his book was in preparation, had just denounced in the most intemperate language an apparent twenty-year allegiance to Baha'u'llah, in the wake of a failed attempt on his part to impose his private ideological agenda on the Baha'i community's study of Baha'u'llah's Message. Modernity and the Millennium represents an effort to provide the current stage of this long-running scheme with the underpinnings of scholarly rationalization.

What is this rationalization? Although distorted by its evasion of Baha'i Texts that contradict its main assertions, and blurred by reliance on speculations peculiar to its author's purpose, the thesis appears to run somewhat as follows: Baha'u'llah's work and Writings represent essentially one of several efforts by Middle East thinkers to work out a "response" to the challenges posed by European modernity in the form of rationalism, revolution, nationalism, economic upheaval, feminism and other contemporary developments. Although Oriental in origin, this particular "response", in contrast to various others, was unusually "progressive", "liberal", "idealistic", even "radical". Because it "grew up" in a congenial modernist era, its Author was able gradually to adjust and revise the ideas with which He had been "grappling", through benefiting (in a manner generally insinuated rather than explicitly stated) from successive interactions with other thinkers and movements. By 1862, apparently in order to deal with the problem of religious exclusivity in the Muslim world, and in response to some form of "private mystical experience", He "decided to make a prophetic claim of his own" . . .

The Covenant, the distinguishing feature of Baha'u'llah's Revelation, has been made the central target of this effort (a maneuver that Dr. Cole's book is at particular pains to shore up). Although forced to acknowledge the appointments of `Abdul-Baha and the Guardian as Interpreters of Baha'u'llah's Message, every effort has been made to call such authoritative interpretation into question wherever it presents a problem for the notions being promoted.

Similarly, although ostensibly acknowledging that the Universal House of Justice is Head of the Baha'i Faith today, this opposition has tried by every means possible to undermine the broad authority conferred in Baha'u'llah's own words and emphasized in the Master's Will and Testament.

(In Dr. Cole's book, this agenda makes its appearance in the conclusion: namely, that the Faith founded by Baha'u'llah has failed in its mission because, like "the Khomeinist state in Iran", it has been somehow captured by "fundamentalists", by which term Dr. Cole has repeatedly characterized the members of the Universal House of Justice.) . . .

With loving Baha'i greetings,

Department of the Secretariat

-----

For his comments and response, see <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/1999/modernit.htm>

--

FG
www.FG.com
The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://members.nbc.com/FG/index.htm>

From: <wahdat@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights & Marshall Case
Date: Wednesday, April 05, 2000 8:05 PM

Reponse for Dermot.

--

My response to Rick is:-

My dear saintly Aunt Tess, God rest her, always advised the necessity of "fully engaging the brain BEFORE putting pen to paper."

I fear I must amplify what Rick has failed to see. Alison and the House of Haifa entered into an agreement whereby she became a member of the Faith and BOTH parties assumed the RIGHTS and obligations associated therewith. Once entered into that agreement she has a RIGHT of membership unless/until she is in fundamental breach of her obligations under that agreement. Juan is quite right in what he has said- Rick has chosen a particularly obtuse interpretation to suit his own ends of "defending the indefensible" rather than seeking truth and justice. (What is all this formality - Dr. Cole, Mr. Ryder - I thought we were all friends on these discussion fora?)

In Anglo Saxon or United Kingdom law the terms of agreement may be actually stated or implied. The terms under which the House of Haifa can terminate the agreement are stated in many many letters and quotations from Scripture. I will go into them, Rick, if you really want me to but as I originally stated I did not want to go into them in detail as I did not wish to insult anybody's intelligence. The House of Haifa has arbitrarily terminated the agreement: -

- a.. It has cited no specific breach or breaches of term(s), whether stated or implied, on her part, contrary to the terms of the agreement.
- b.. It has had no consultation with her of any kind whatsoever in an effort to amend her behaviour and better adhere to whatever rules or standard of behaviour it expects, contrary to the terms of the agreement
- c.. It has neither counselled advised nor warned her that her "pattern of behaviour" was such as to warrant the House terminating the agreement, contrary to the terms of the agreement. Should the House of Haifa wish to amend the underlying conditions of the agreement there is a strong presumption in Common Law that it cannot arbitrarily do so. Rather must it submit amendments to the other parties to the agreement thereby allowing them the right to accept or reject them and terminating the agreement if needs be or must be. I understand that this form of suspension is new to the Bahai Community, is undocumented and hence contrary to Bahai and Common Law and as Juan has so cogently noted, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. It is also a flagrant and reprehensible breach of natural justice - but of course none of these things are important to Rick and the stooges planted here and elsewhere to parrot what the House of Haloed Hallions of Haifa tells them to. My understanding is therefore that this is an arbitrary breach of Alison's rights under a subsisting agreement to which there has been no agreed amendment. The obvious answer is of course to bring it to a Court of Law, which is an independent body and whose judgement Bahais (and others) are bound to accept.

Rick wrote: -

>Are we merely to infer that the action taken in this case had to do >with some >specific breach of rules and not with a pattern of behavior that >demonstrates the extent to which Ms. Marshall no longer qualifies for >membership?

A "pattern of behaviour" encompasses and includes a series of specific behavioural actions which constitute and establish the fact of a pattern. In other words Alison did not breach one or more terms of the agreement - she was in breach of one or more terms on a consistent basis and sufficient in number to constitute a pattern. What were they? Why was she not informed of the breach(es) and given opportunity to change her ways? Was she continually drunk and disorderly? Did she constantly (or noisily) break wind at National Convention or was it something worse? Should she (and we) not have been told? She has after all been humiliated in front of her local community. Has she and they no right to know why?

Above all, had she no right to DEFEND herself of the charges levelled or have we finally reached such maturity that a bunch of elderly "Grumpy Old Men" at the House of Haifa, dependent on a network of "touts" for their information can unerringly and infallibly guide the ways of the world? Supposing the information was wrong - supposing the "touts" are also slimy snakes with an agenda of their own - what then? It was to obviate this kind of abuse that open justice in Civil Courts was established and is so firmly defended. An Appeal is out of the question as the infallibility of the House means it cannot make a mistake in the first place.

In the days of the Holy Inquisition the accused did not know the charges levelled, did not know the accusers, did not know and could not question the witnesses. Is that what we have regressed to? If it is I think that the world should know that the House of Haifa has decided to drag us all, kicking and screaming, back to the Middle Ages! I think we can do much better than that!

Why not face the fact, Rick, that you belong to an organisation that is run by "Daleks" whose only thought is to exterminate those who disagree with them. If I criticise a politician or any institution of government I am merely exercising a right to express a point of view - I don't get thrown into jail for doing it, for civilised society recognises the advantages of free speech and the expression of dissent. That's what makes progress, that's what makes us mature adults, not a diehard cleaving to selected and selective aspects of what Mammy says, because Mammy knows best after all!

You and the House of Haifa would profit from examining the experience here on Craggy Island. We are fundamentally divided - we have to learn to live together - we have started to learn that killing each other is not a solution. We have opted for the path of reconciliation based on respect for each other's legitimate aspirations and interpretation of our history and culture. It is a long hard path beset with difficulty! It is the only way! Expelling Alison is not the way to "Unity in Diversity!"

Were there a shred of intelligence and common sense in Haifa they would have left Alison and all the dissenters alone, much as the Anglican Church tolerates diversity of opinion, and not turned them into modern day martyrs. Bahaidom is increasingly in the position of having to defend its actions - and the House is best at giving its enemies the necessary ammunition! For a missionary faith this is a diabolical situation to be in - far from entry by troops you'll be lucky to raise a platoon.

Needless to say I have "divine assurance" that I am right on my interpretation of this sad and sorry affair - as the vast bulk of the fundamentalist inhabitants of Craggy Island, despite exposure to the Teachings for over fifty years, have, inspired by the Almighty, opted for the Protestant/Catholic fundamentalism, which they grew up with and know to be a proven superior product. Are the Bahais coming in to compete with them in this market place? They haven't a mission!

As dear saintly Aunt Tess would have put it, (she had an answer for everything) -

"Convince a man against his will, He's of the same opinion, still!"

Yours (still) in the bunker,

Dermot

PS Rick concluded:

>I'm afraid the remainder of Mr. Ryder's remarks, while long on >beautiful rhetoric, remain quite irrelevant to the present issues.

Thanks for the compliment on the old rhetoric - your dismissive and patronising comment however does not make it go away. We shall let history and the brothers and sisters on Talisman decide whether Paisley is a better bigot than the House of Haifa or whether or not the principle of "set aside" of Scripture etc. is applicable or not! That you fail to answer and instead, try to patronise me is doubtless an indication that you have no answer.

PPS On reflection, Alison is far too much of a lady to have broken wind at National Convention, so it must have been a much worse deviant pattern of behaviour. Wowee! Can't wait to find out what it was!

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.Path:

rQdQ!rQ66!remarQ70!supernews.com!news.cmc.net!news.gv.tsc.tdk.com!newsfeed.berkeley.edu!newsfeed.usit.net!feed2.onemain.com!feed1.onemain.com!uunet!ffx.uu.net!news2.norlight.net!news2.norlight.net!nntp.chorus.net!news.chorus.net!not-for-mail

From: Henry Patrick <henry@patrtick.com>

Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai

Subject: Re: [BAHAI] uhj lies to US State Dept re Human Rights

Date: Fri, 03 Mar 2000 09:59:34 -0600

Organization: Give me vegamite or give me death!

Lines: 97

Sender: reguser@168.236.254.1

Message-ID: <38BFE165.8FE81F5A@patrtick.com>

References: <sbfrqu97r2a70@corp.supernews.com> <89ahi701f5p@enews4.newsguy.com>

<sbnjiad1jp35@corp.supernews.com> <JuXu4.20$1j4.2147@nsw.nnrp.telstra.net>

<38BC8EF4.6321A752@ameritel.net> <hH1v4.125$1j4.6711@nsw.nnrp.telstra.net>

<89mf3v$573@drn.newsguy.com>

NNTP-Posting-Host: 168.236.254.1

Mime-Version: 1.0

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Trace: news.chorus.net 952099615 21750 168.236.254.1 (3 Mar 2000 16:06:55 GMT)

X-Complaints-To: abuse@chorus.net

NNTP-Posting-Date: 3 Mar 2000 16:06:55 GMT

X-Mailer: Mozilla 4.5 [en] (WinNT; U)

X-Accept-Language: en

Xref: rQdQ alt.religion.bahai:15615 talk.religion.bahai:12814

He should have just posted the url:

https://kevdb.infospace.com/\_1\_4MM5U9B0LUUYOB\_\_info.amtech/kevdb?KCFG=us&OTMPL=/res/r2.html&FF=1&QFM=n&QN=Glaysheer&QF=&QC=rochester&QS=mi&TQA=668+Bolinger+St&TQC=rochester&TQS=mi&QP=&QST=&QHN=&QZ=48307&QK=1&QO=US&QD=&DM=505&&QI=0&jnum=3&jindex=0

I think it's Ameritech owes Fred an appology, not Mark, after all they put his name and phone number on the internet!

Kathy Cole wrote:

> (Just popping in for a sec; I'd unsubbed several weeks ago. Pat, > I got your email but haven't yet had a chance to answer.)
>
> In article <hH1v4.125$1j4.6711@nsw.nnrp.telstra.net>, "Mark says...
> >
> >Pat and all others concerned,
> > I probably misstepped the guidelines by posting Freddys Facts .....
> >but I think it will give Fred a chance to realize that he is not-so > >anonomous anymore and might wish to quit cross-posting.
>
> You owe Fred an apology and you owe him one now. You are welcome > to disclose your own personal contact information whenever *you* > want to. You have no such rights to make those decisions for other > people.
>
> And, as I had repeatedly tried to convey, sinking to his level, or > in this one case, below his level, breeds sympathy _for_ Fred, > which can hardly have been your intention.
>
> Let it go, after posting an apology and cancelling your prior > message disclosing Fred's home phone number. Put him in your > killfile and LEAVE HIM THERE. You're lucky you're not losing > your internet access over this; you may yet if Fred complains.
>
> --
> Kathy Cole ~ kathy@scconsult.com (home)

It is nice to see that Fred can actually write a real posting here. Now if we can get Fred to quit cross-posting to people who don't want to here or see of him. I have an idea. I think Fred needs to quit hiding behind his usual spam postings of Patrick Henry. So ..... here goes..... 'give me liberty or, give Fred a call:
FG , 668 Bolinger Street, Rochester, MI, 48307-2819
(248) 608-6424
and as you can see, I have cross-posted this to all of Fred Preselected news-servers. Let your fingers do the walking.
Mark

Path:
rQdQ!remarQ70!supernews.com!howland.erols.net!news.maxwell.syr.edu!intgwpad.nntp.telstra.net!nsw.nnrp.telstra.net!not-for-mail
From: "Mark Elderkin" <elderkin@nor.com.au>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai
Subject: Get it straight!
Lines: 29
X-Priority: 3
X-MSMail-Priority: Normal
X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 5.00.2615.200
X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V5.00.2615.200
Message-ID: <aFgv4.15$Gw4.3131@nsw.nnrp.telstra.net>
Date: Thu, 2 Mar 2000 09:16:36 +1100
NNTP-Posting-Host: 203.109.233.29
X-Complaints-To: abuse@telstra.net
X-Trace: nsw.nnrp.telstra.net 951948998 203.109.233.29 (Thu, 02 Mar 2000 09:16:38 EST)
NNTP-Posting-Date: Thu, 02 Mar 2000 09:16:38 EST Organization: Customer of Telstra Big Pond Direct Xref: rQdQ alt.religion.bahai:15545
Fred,
You have now raised me to cult status ..... It's funny, I am sitting here in my office in a little town in Australia and have become some kind of rhetorical terrorist. Not! I don't wish anyone anyharm at anytime. I am guilty of having posted Freddys Facts here on the NewsServer. It is my way of saying that you need to come out of the closet and get a life. You seemed to have made a life out of spam-posting sleazy innuendos about people you haven't met, and about a subject that you don't really care about. The Universal House of Justice(God Love Em) has never corresponded with me on any of these issues and I suspect they probably won't. It would be a highlight of my life if they did.

I have only used my little search tools here on the net, and found the many email addresses that you and some members of your family are currently using and then did a quick address search of those email. Hollywood should contact me for the next Bond Film! Mixed... not stirred.

Anyway, I get a bit emotional when freaks like you hide behind your keyboards and think that you can say what you want, write what you want, and then think that no one else has any right to let you know what they think. You change your name, put filters on your email, and then try to hide. Now, the hiding is over. You will probably be little less likely to slander and misquote when you know that people can reach you and tell you exactly that. From now on I will contact you away from this news-server as I fear that it is interrupting the flow of very positive exchange of ideas. Fred .... please don't hesitate to call me on 011 610265842150. Just don't call collect. As far as everyone else concerned ..... love you all.
Mark E. Elderkin

From: "Curious" <Kashani@ozemail.com.au>
Subject: Re: Why I don't respond to bahai fundamentalists
Date: Friday, November 03, 2000 9:52 AM

John McQueed <jmcqueed@qwest.net> wrote in message news:QhkM5.948$QG2.251882@news.uswest.net...

> Patrick,

>

> If you have such a hatred for the members of the Bahai Faith and it's > leaders,

Oh.....I dunno.....Perhaps I haven't been here long enough....but I haven't seen any hatred for the members of the faith.....more of a profound and prolonged distaste for what is being done with, to and in the name of the faith.

> then why the hell don't you resign from the Faith and let this > whole line of crap drop?

Seems obvious the lad is committed to a range of 'core value' issues, justice being not the least.

Seems he is prepared to fight long and hard for those values and his faith.

> "Patrick Henry" <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com> wrote in message > news:svo9pn9ea6uv7e@corp.supernews.com...

> > After over four years of observing the tactics of

> > bahai fundamentalists, I've learnt a few things about > > the way they operate:

> >

> > 1. Always smear and attack the individual.

I have been around (here and the community) long enough to see that take place.

> > 2. Lure into supposed discussion then cut the jugular.

Yea....that too.

> > 3. Work together to create the perception for non-bahais

> > that the individual is unbalanced, aberrant, etc....

Yes.....mad, bad or a CB.

> > 4. Change or ignore the subject.

Without doubt.....standard procedure.

> > Attempting to discuss anything with them is simple a > > waste of time and energy, as long as the uhj uses

> > "review" to suppress all free thought and discussion

> > and encourages such unseemly tactics.

Haven't reached the stage of 'published works'.....don't know.

> > I have many interests in life. Documenting bahai fundamentalism > > is only one of them. Those who desire conversation may find > > it elsewhere or with someone else. Bahai fundamentalists are > > only interested in smearing others, pretending they want to > > talk. An old bahai fundamentalist Technique, well documented > > in "The Baha'i Technique":

> > <https://members.nbci.com/FG/technique.htm>

Tis a fair summary.

There be more than enough grounds for inquiry and discussion on the issues raised.

Is the cause so frail it cannot accommodate the dissenting voice?

Curious

> Others may disagree, fine. I'm busy. There are many hidden >> agendas among my fellow bahais. No one is obligated to >> interact or in specific ways others might want.
>
>> Nobody has to read my reposts who has done so already. My >> Message Rules are full of fundamentalists. Others can use the same >> technology to filter out my reposts.They're intended for the >> uninformed.... And they will be staying on the newsgroups I choose >> as long as bahai censorship continues. It should be evident that >> fundamentalists desire to suppress all knowledge of their >> suppression and coercion of bahais and non-bahais over the >> last decade or more now.

>
>> I doubt most will be able to penetrate the veil of lies and >> smears of my fellow bahais. Perhaps eventually someone will.
>> I hope so. It is my deepest desire to bear witness to the >> distortion of Baha'u'llah's Teachings by the universal house of >> "justice" and their appointed, delegated lackies on >> talk.religion.bahai....

>
>> People are entitled to their opinions. I to mine. I am >> interested in only preserving the record of what bahai >> fundamentalists have done. Others may read it and decide >> for themselves. Again, it is my view that no "meaningful dialogue" >> can take place as long as the uhj imposes censorship under >> "review" and allows and encourages the tactics of character >> assassination and so forth.... I choose not to allow the >> fanatics among my fellow bahais to pull the wool over the >> eyes of outside observers by getting me to play along >> with their charade.... Others may decide these matters as >> they wish. This is my decision.

>
>> I'm not interested in talking TO or WITH bahai fundamentalists. I've >> done that in the past four years. Anyone interested in my views >> may read them in my archives or glean them from my reposts, >> which, in my view, preserve the historical record of how low bahai >> fanatics have been willing to go.... Others may read or ignore them.

>
>> People may judge for themselves on a scanty familiarity >> with the bahai faith, if they wish. The more intelligent and >> perceptive people will look at the EVIDENCE. They are >> the people I am interested in reaching regarding the fanatics among >> my fellow bahais who are desperate to discredit me and its other >> many, many victims, documented on my website. There will be those >> who give talk.religion.bahai and the EVIDENCE a cursory look >> and fail to understand what is really taking place. Many, alas, >> have been duped....

>
>> The fanatics among my fellow bahais will stop at nothing to >> deceive outside observers, the general public, prominent people, >> etc. I can only hope by serving humbly, as the self-appointed >> archivist/historian for talk.religion.bahai and for all the many victims >> of the "universal" house of "justice," that someday someone will come >> along who will dig deep enough into the record that the truth will >> begin to surface. It is my hope that then the distortions of the uhj >> will begin to purged, it will gradually reform itself, acknowledging >> the broad and liberal Teachings of Baha'u'llah that it has >> suppressed now for so long.....

>
>> --
>> FG
>> www.FG.com
>> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
>> https://members.nbci.com/FG/index.htm

From: "Curious" <Kashani@ozemail.com.au>
Subject: Re: Why I don't respond to bahai fundamentalists
Date: Saturday, November 04, 2000 4:07 AM

<patk9018@my-deja.com> wrote in message news:8tv0qr$nu0$1@nnrp1.deja.com...
> In article <4iAM5.14454$SF5.316596@ozemail.com.au>,
> "Curious" <Kashani@ozemail.com.au> wrote:
> > >
> > > If you have such a hatred for the members of the Bahai Faith and > it's > > > leaders,
> > Oh.....I dunno.....Perhaps I haven't been here long enough....but I > haven't > > seen any hatred for the members of the faith.....more of a profound
> and > > prolonged distaste for what is being done with, to and in the name of > the
> > faith.
>
> Often the eyes see what the mind sees already.
Ahhhhhhhhh.....Master Pat....When I can take the pebble from your hand will it be time for me to go?
> You expect disappointment with what Baha'is have done, and you see that.
Do I Pat? Why thank you for the insight. I'm not sure if your 'reading' is based on a new virtual long distance psychoanalysis or just old time parapsychology. Either way...am I required to pay? Is there a psychic hot line number I should ring? (I thought these powers were for the next realm?)
I have a number of expectations of Baha'is, I was not aware that I had ever indicated that 'disappointment was one of them. I thought I was just coming to terms with my preconception of Baha's as a mob "Full of surprises".....now I'm all in a tiz.
Given that you are the third Baha'i who has indicated that their telepathic powers are sufficiently advanced to know my mind, (and to know that my thoughts run counter to my words), I can only bow and genuflect to my spiritual superiors.
>Perhaps it really is there. Others have had difficulties communicating
with > the individual and are now on the long list of contributors he has > dismissed as fanatics and purportedly killefiled.
Do you think (read or channel)(sorry) that there might be any fanatics about
Pat?
It's just that I've started keeping an eye out and I don't want to be caught off guard....or disappointed.
> [https://www.deja.com/\[ST\_rn=ap\]/getdoc.xp?AN=687510146&fmt=text](https://www.deja.com/[ST_rn=ap]/getdoc.xp?AN=687510146&fmt=text)
>
> > Seems obvious the lad is committed to a range of 'core value' issues, > > justice being not the least.
> > Seems he is prepared to fight long and hard for those values and his > faith.
>
> The name "justice" and certainly "conscience" gets tossed about. fred > fought long and hard to get trb formed. When it was formed, the fight > continued w/o notice, he still posted that Baha'is had voted against > trb when his data showed most Baha'is voted for it, that it would not > have passed without the the Baha'i vote. Most readers are confused as > to what his faith may be, but we can definitely see fighting going on.
> Fred fights for the right to crosspost his messages where they are off> topic, such as SCI and SCI. He fights for the right to regurgipost his > messages here, generally ignoring replies. He fights for the right to > libel the adminisitrative order based on his own suspicions. He fights > for the right to set aside the charter he for trb which he helped > draft, when it is obvious he is not interested in discussion, but > dictating.
Oh.....I see.....He's 'Net Offensive'.....a 'virtual bastard' as opposed to a real bastard.
> > > "Patrick Henry" <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com> wrote in message > > > news:svo9pn9ea6uv7e@corp.supernews.com...
> > > > After over four years of observing the tactics of
> > > > bahai fundamentalists, I've learnt a few things about > > > > the way they operate:
> > > >
> > > > 1. Always smear and attack the individual.
> > I have been around (here and the community) long enough to see that > take > > place.
>
> Sure, claim that Susan Maneck has been 'flooding' talk.religion.bahai > in August 2000 (@12 messages) while sending (@36 messages yourself. Not sure that accusations of 'flooding' a forum are what was in mind when "smear and attack the individual" are referred to.....I was thinking more along the lines of "they are Mad, Bad, CBs".....(at least that's what I think I was thinking):-)

> > > > 2. Lure into supposed discussion then cut the jugular.
> > Yea....that too.

>
> Try disagreeing w/ Fred on something.
OK.....Hey!.....Fred!.....Yho!.....Your take on the Cath Freeman loss of rights was way off course....out of left field.....wrong.....and a beat up!.....You...You.....Big Dummy You!
(Clasps hand to throat and waits)

> > > > 3. Work together to create the perception for non-bahais > > > > that the individual is unbalanced, aberrant, etc....
> > Yes.....mad, bad or a CB.
> > > > 4. Change or ignore the subject.
> > Without doubt.....standard procedure.

>
> Try disagreeing w/ Fred on something.
What! Again?!.....Strewth Pat I hope you can see into the future as well as read minds....

(And I think I've run out of points of disagreement.....is it ok to make one up?)

Fred!....Fred!.....Crosposting and Spaming are the tools of Satan. God fearing people will hate you for it and you will burn in several levels of damnation.

> > > > Attempting to discuss anything with them is simple a > > > > waste of time and energy, as long as the uhj uses
> > > > "review" to suppress all free thought and discussion
> > > > and encourages such unseemly tactics.
> > Haven't reached the stage of 'published works'.....don't know.

>
> Fred is telling the world that the AO is suppressing his freedom of > speech. Either his message passed review or it didn't, but Fred IS > getting his message out, even if it seems to disprove his point.
Ahhhh....I think I'm getting a grip on it now Pat. It's not about whether or not 'review' is a legitimate tool for academic writing.... it's about Freds option to take his message onto the net inspite of the review process.....know what I'm thinking now Pat?

> > > > I have many interests in life. Documenting bahai fundamentalism > > > > is only one of them. Those who desire conversation may find > > > > it elsewhere or with someone else. Bahai fundamentalists are > > > > only interested in smearing others, pretending they want to > > > > talk. An old bahai fundamentalist Technique, well documented > > > > in "The Baha'i Technique":
> > > > <https://members.nbc.com/FG/technique.htm>
> > Tis a fair summary.

>
> Projection.
Dam.....and I thought I had my psychic shutters down!
> > There be more than enough grounds for inquiry and discussion on the > issues > > raised.

> > Is the cause so frail it cannot accommodate the dissenting voice?
> >

> > Dissent if fine. Reguripostings of messages which the poster will not > discuss is an annoyance. This group is for discussion.

Yes.....I do agree Pat, it is a bother and a nuisance....my mind comes to two divergent options

a) Attempt to shut him down and shut him up.

b) Give every opportunity for the issues of concern to be discussed openly-fairly,fully and frankly out in the Baha'i community where it counts. Think I'll be disappointed Pat?

> These are my opinions, based on my observations over the years. You > have your observations, and opinions, which may or may not change as > you observe.

I respect your opinions Pat, I truly do.....your psychic abilities?.....well.....

Take care...

Wishing you light,love'n laughter.....

"Till time brings change..."

Curious.

> KN,

> - Pat

> kohli@ameritel.net

>

>

> Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

> Before you buy.

From: "Curious" <Kashani@ozemail.com.au>

Subject: Re: Why I don't respond to bahai fundamentalists

Date: Sunday, November 05, 2000 3:47 AM

<patk9018@my-deja.com> wrote in message news:8u2ofp$hr7$1@nnrp1.deja.com...

> Allahu Abha

>

> In article <4IQM5.15081$SF5.328722@ozemail.com.au>,

> "Curious" <Kashani@ozemail.com.au> wrote:

> >

> > <patk9018@my-deja.com> wrote in message news:8tv0qr$n0

> > $1@nnrp1.deja.com...

> > > In article <4iAM5.14454$SF5.316596@ozemail.com.au>,

> > > "Curious" <Kashani@ozemail.com.au> wrote:

> >

> > >

> > > Often the eyes see what the mind sees already.

> > Ahhhhhhhh.....Master Pat....When I can take the pebble from your > hand will > > it be time for me to go?

>

> I dunno. I've seen complaints repeated for months after the fact when > someone sent someone else pictures in an email.

A bit subtle for me Pat. Is it a Zen parable?.....or?.....I've had my 'whinge' about the absence of due process and now (seeing that it's ancient history) I can wander off now?

(snip)

> I'm sorry. I've expressed myself poorly. I've assumed that you are > like me. I should have written these thing first. I get disappointed > by things that Baha'is have done. When I enrolled a Baha'i warned me > that the biggest challenge would be the friends.

No probs Pat.

I think perhaps the warning can be traced back to the Master....what troubles/disappoints me is when this warning is used as a justification/license for abuse. As if, because we are warned or the behavior is predicted, that some how makes it acceptable as something to be simply endured.

(snip)

>

> > Try disagreeing w/ Fred on something.

> > OK.....Hey!.....Fred!.....Yho!.....Your take on the Cath

> Freeman

> > loss of rights was way off course....out of left > field.....wrong.....and a > > beat up!.....You...You.....Big Dummy You!

> > (Clasps hand to throat and waits)

>

> Brilliant, now have a go with Fred when he regurges on Cathy Freeman.

No one regurges on Cath....she's too quick for that Pat.

> > > Try disagreeing w/ Fred on something.

> > What! Again?!.....Strewth Pat I hope you can see into the future

> as well

> > as read minds....

> > (And I think I've run out of points of disagreement.....is it ok to > make > > one up?)

> > Fred!.....Fred!.....Crosposting and Spaming are the tools of Satan.

> > God fearing people will hate you for it and you will burn in several > levels

> > of damnation.

>

> Hmmm, I appreciate your patience and persistence in trying to find > something you might disagree on, but in the spamming/crossposting vein, > you might suggest to him that some of his beefs with the US NSA are not > relevant on SCI and remind him it is discouraged in the trb charter, > which he co-sponsored.

Next time I bump into him I'll have a quiet word.

> > > Fred is telling the world that the AO is suppressing his freedom of > > > speech. Either his message passed review or it didn't, but Fred IS > > > getting his message out, even if it seems to disprove his point.
> > Ahhhh....I think I'm getting a grip on it now Pat. It's not about > whether or > > not 'review' is a legitimate tool for academic writing.... it's > about Freds > > option to take his message onto the net inspite of the review > > process.....know what I'm thinking now > Pat?

>
> I don't think it is just about Fred going to the net. We are on the > net; its about the repetition, the insistence on cross-posting and the > refusal to discuss. The NGs are supposed to be for discussions.
Perhaps....just having a stab in the dark here Pat....perhaps Fred feels that (in the absence of due process) that annoying Net terrorism is a viable and legit tactic.(Seems to be a fair bit of rock throwing going on in the world at the moment.....shoot them or invite them to the peace table?)

> > > Projection.
> > Dam.....and I thought I had my psychic shutters down!
>
> It could happen to the most street savy survivor once or twice.
>
> > > There be more than enough grounds for inquiry and discussion on
> the > > > issues
> > > > raised.
> > > > Is the cause so frail it cannot accommodate the dissenting voice?
> > > >
> > > Dissent if fine. Reguripostings of messages which the poster will > not > > > discuss is an annoyance. This group is for discussion.
> > Yes.....I do agree Pat, it is a bother and a nuisance....my mind > comes to > > two divergent options
> > a) Attempt to shut him down and shut him up.
> > b) Give every opportunity for the issues of concern to be discussed > > openly-fairly,fully and frankly out in the Baha'i community where it > counts.
> > Think I'll be disappointed Pat?
>
> I'm learning. to answer your question, my crystal ball has just fogged > over. a. Attempts to get Fred to conform with terms of service, etc.
> will provide only temporary effect. Fred has been kicked off of AOL > and other ISPs; it seems to have no effect on him.
Sorry Pat....I think we are talking at cross purposes. I see Freds Net behavior as a symptom of preceding events...I don't know enough about those events to be inclined one way or the other. I do know that one mans 'freedom fighter' is another mans 'terrorist' and that getting people to the table (real table-where it matters-not virtual) is the preferred option.

> This is like your LSA and their advice to accept what you can not change.
No Pat, my LSA advised to ignore what could be changed and (like a good proportion of this forum) turned a blind eye to proposals to facilitate change.
A big difference me thinks.
> Many are frustrated by Fred's conduct, just as you are frustrated by the conduct > of a Baha'i in your real world.
Ahhhh Pat, you underestimate my capacity for frustration....it is not confined to 'a' Baha'i. I expect (as forewarned) to be tested by individuals, I expect to come across all sorts of dysfunctional individual behavior. What I don't expect, what I will not abide, is when the collective response to abusive behavior is either totally inadequate or tends to encourage it.
(ie I am not as shocked by those acts of child abuse perpetrated by Priests as I am by the Institutional response that permits or encourages it to happen again).
> b. This place is open 24/7 for discussion of issues, as well as the > other stuff that goes on.
Yes, but it serves as no more than a media forum in which members of the community might be alerted to and debate particular issues. It is not the forum in which real change will be facilitated or implemented. Fred has obviously decided (right or wrong) that to engage in protracted debate is futile. I have had sufficient encounters to lean me to conclude he might be right in this.

I choose to persist in debate for change. Fred chooses to spam like a Palestinian youth.

I still reckon that the community does not provide forums to address serious and contentious issues.....nor is it inclined to discuss the merits or mechanisms of doing so.

> > Take care...

> > Wishing you light,love'n laughter.....

> > "Till time brings change..."

>

> The change it brings are not always the change we requested.

That's ok.....Gran always said "a change is as good as a holiday".....

(But then again she also said " Don't count your chickens until you've burnt all your bridges behind you".....silly old chook)

Curious.

From: "Mark Elderkin" <mee@tsn.cc>

Subject: >>Freddy's facts.....

Date: Sunday, March 19, 2000 4:07 PM

As I have done before and shall continue to do: I think it is very important for the general public here be able to communicate with Fred. His continual spamming and his attempt to inflame posts between this news server and others, is a clear attempt to disrupt the normal flow of discussion. He needs to be told that his actions are not welcome. With a little research, it is quickly possible to attribute the majority of his presentation as absolute rubbish.

Mr. FG, 668 Bolinger Street, Rochester, MI. 48307-2819

to call: (246)608-6424 in the USA.

From: "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net>

Subject: Re: Arafat Bahais....

Date: Saturday, October 28, 2000 1:59 PM

John

The Baha'i Faith administration uses the techniques made available from Social Psychology to try and maintain its leadership over rank and file Baha'is. One of the techniques is to demonize anyone (former member) who leaves the group or does not follow explicit directions. This is an age old technique that can be followed thru time and place for thousands of years. One might wonder why the BF is not free of it!

If you want to know more purchase a good college text on social psychology.

Sincerely, Randy

--

John McQueed <jmcqueed@qwest.net> wrote in message

news:a6nK5.3584$WG.334011@news.uswest.net...

> I have a good question about this. What reason does the Baha'i Faith have for > victimizing the people named in the quote below? some of them may have been > members of the Baha'i Faith at one time and left it, but that is no reason > for victimizing someone or they may not agree with some or all of the > teachings of the Faith, and that is also no reason for victimizing someone.

> what would the leadership/membership of the Faith find wrong in someone > writing a critique of Baha'i Publishing and why would they victimize that > person for using their constitutional right to freedom of the press?

> What reason would they have for victimizing Cathy Freeman? If she did > anything unethical while participating in the Olympics, it would have caught > the attention of the news media as well as the Baha'i leadership and I > didn't hear anything negative in the news about her. I personally cannot > subscribe to any of the allegations of victimization by the Baha'i Faith

>

From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>

Subject: fw KevinEco Reconsider the NO votes, please.

Date: Monday, December 14, 1998 6:53 AM

I wish to thank Kevin for presenting a very balanced rationale for reconsidering Susan Maneck's call for NO votes against talk.religion.bahai.

Let me say, with all honesty, that my only reason for wanting an unmoderated forum on the Bahai Faith is that Bahais might learn the importance of, and live up to, Abdul-Baha's demanding words:

"These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world."

Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> Talk.religion.bahai voter ballot is on news.announce.newsgroups, news.groups, alt.religion.bahai, or email the votetaker dave@dogwood.com requesting the "trb CFV."

-----

Subject: Reconsider the NO votes, please.
Date: 12/12/1998 8:09 PM Eastern Standard Time
From: KevinEco
Message-id: <19981212200919.08230.00001915@ng-fc2.aol.com>

As the tempest grows wilder, any attempt to present a balanced view on this subject appears more daunting, but now circumstances demand it.

To all of you, whether Baha'i or not, determined to vote NO on talk.religion.bahai, please consider carefully the implications of your decision.

Perhaps you reached this decision because you are annoyed with Fred Glaysher, and you think a NO vote the perfect revenge because it will annoy him. Perhaps you are convinced he has bad motives, and you believe anything that a person with bad motives will fight so hard to get must be a bad thing. Perhaps you don't have a clear idea of your own motives; whenever that happens to me, I always find it wiser to refrain from acting until I can clarify my own motives.

Now, let's consider the worst-case possibility. Suppose for a moment that Fred really is a bad person with bad motives, perhaps even a Covenant-breaker. (Let me state in the strongest possible terms that this is NOT my conviction about Fred; I am sorry to discuss such an accusation even hypothetically, but sadly, the accusation has already been made public, so it has to be dealt with.)

Even if this were true, even IF someone really does have destructive motives and really is hatching some kind of nefarious plot, we must remember that IT IS NOT OUR JOB TO SILENCE SUCH PEOPLE.

The Baha'i Writings tell us that to defend our religion, we are to speak the truth about it when someone makes false accusations against it -- NOT to compel such persons to be silent.

Leaving idealistic principle aside for a moment, let's get more practical. Suppose the talk.religion.bahai proposal really is part of some fiendish plot. Perhaps the fiendish plot is actually calculated to goad as many people as possible into voting NO, creating more evidence for the claim that most Baha'is love nothing more than censorship.

Seem outlandish? Yes, but if you read the exchanges on news.groups, you will see messages from people who are non-Baha'is with no interest in Baha'i matters, who are discussing this only because they follow discussion of every proposed newsgroup. Several such Usenet authority figures have explicitly stated their temptation to vote NO simply because they find Fred's tactics annoying. If we indulge in speculating about motives, we have to include the possibility that this is no accident.

Returning to the level of principle (as the Baha'i teachings require of us) none of us can claim anything other than speculation about the motives of

Fred or anyone else.

There may be tons of circumstantial evidence that someone has bad motives, but the same evidence could also arise from a person who is extremely devoted to a particular principle, and just doesn't have the talent or charisma needed to inspire people's sympathy. In neither case do the Baha'i Writings give us any permission to attack such a person. No, we have an inescapable duty to treat all with love and respect.

For these reasons, let us all consider the following course of action:

- 1. Please stop giving vent to negative emotions regarding Fred Glaysher. Such venting will only drive him deeper into isolation, and as a creation of God he deserves better. If he really is trying to attack the Baha'i Faith, such venting can only strengthen the attack. Focus on issues and facts in every response to him or about him, both for his sake, and for the sake of adherence to correct principles.
- 2. Please reconsider any NO vote on the talk.religion.bahai proposal. If you're still determined to annoy Fred (after all my efforts to stir your compassion), consider that a large NO vote may be just what he's aiming for. A better way to send a message would be an ABSTAIN vote, which would show that you do not support the creation of talk.religion.bahai, but you are unwilling to provide more ammunition to those who claim that Baha'is try to censor everything.
- 3. If you must vote no, please refrain from publicly stating your intention to do so, and please refrain from campaigning for others to vote no. Both actions violate Usenet etiquette and will be interpreted as attempted censorship by many neutral observers.

To anyone who is still reading this longish message, thank you for your time.

If my attempt to present a balanced view of this tangled situation has offended anyone, I offer my apologies, and hope you will be kind when you point out my errors.

Your humble servant,
Kevin

---

Homepage

---

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Selected Messages

From: "John MacLeod" <macleod@beloved.com> Subject: Re: The text or the Interpretation
Date: Monday, January 01, 2001 9:43 PM

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20010101050614.07479.00014296@ng-cs1.aol.com...

> Dear John,

**>

> I'm not saying I couldn't understand what the Writings were saying. I'm saying

> I was having the same difficulties that Karen is currently having, namely > making what is in those texts jive with what I saw (or thought I saw) in real > life.

Yeah, but what I mean is that what Baha'u'llah actually wrote re the Covenant has very little to do with the issues which trouble people. Certainly it is about obedience to God and most particularly the Manifestation, the text, and possibly the succession though I can't find that spelt out. However the idea that authorities can do no wrong or should never be opposed would be hard to deduce from what Baha'u'llah Himself wrote about the covenant.

**>

> >But when one reads all the > >stuff that is written about the covenant nowadays I can't make any sense > >of a lot of it.

> The result is a certain over-reaction and a tendency to > >dismiss the Covenant itself as nonsense.

**>

**>

> Do you really think the stuff that was written three decades ago was any better? I challenge you to go back and read it. No, I think we have to find new > ways of talking about the Covenant to avoid the extremes we see on both sides

> today.

Agreed, my 'nowadays' referred to the last 100 years or so. Actually, outside the confines of these newsgroups and Bahai studies and other bizarre areas I think the believers are developing quite reasonable attitudes about the lesser Covenant (if there is such a thing). I see absolutely no serious challenge to the UHJ as the authority within the Faith. People seem to accept the UHJ for much the same reasons that they accept the authority of say the British or French governments etc. There is a knowledge that there is some history involved, and some of it may be a bit complicated but it is over. There is very little interest in for example the Will and Testament (I actually don't think I have heard it quoted from or discussed in about 10 years outside these newsgroups). Speculation about 'authorised interpretation' and 'the institution of the Gaurdianship' is ignored. The Gaurdianship never existed - Shoghi Effendi was the Gaurdian. Abdul Baha and Shoghi Effendi's Writings are taken as part of Baha'i Scripture (much as Christians take Paul's letters as part of Scripture). The UHJ (normally used with little distinction from World Centre as a whole) is just seen as the leadership and no-one is particularly concerned as to whether they are interpreting, elucidating, or whatever other words are used. I think it all fairly healthy though some parts sadden me personally. The very stability and acceptance of this structure of the Faith probably gives people confidence to question and criticise.

>

> >Nowadays of course 'covenant breaking' seems to mean only challenging the > >rules regarding transfer of authority.

> >Baha'u'llah's most common use 'breaking the covenant' seems to me to refer > >to people who do not accept the new manifestation.

>

> In practice that's what it principally did mean in Baha'u'llah's time.

But when > we get to the Master, the Guardian and now the House, it has different > implications. But the most basic principal which underlies them all is that > which is embodied in the primordial Covenant, the Covenant of Alast when God > addresses all creation with the words, "Am I not your Lord?" and we either > respond or not respond. It is a question of whether we accept the God who comes > to us, or try to create him in our own image.

I am sure we will succeed in creating God in our own image - at least in this life but you are right - we should try not to even though we will fail.

"Men of wisdom, who had but a notion of the revelation of Thy glory, conceived a likeness of Thee according to their own understanding, ....."
(The Bab: Selections from the Bab, page 207)

From my favourite prayer. If men of wisdom so fail what chance have I?

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Subject: Origins of a Modest Proposal

Date: Tuesday, February 06, 2001 12:06 AM

Author: Arfarf5215 <arfarf5215@aol.com> wrote: -

>As I have watched the periodic discussion of the Modest Proposal article over time I have >found it interesting that the origin of the title has rarely been alluded to. It was originally a >"biting" satirical piece written by Jonathan Swift back in 1729 suggesting that the Irish should >put their children to "good use" by eating them. While the proponents of the current day >"Modest Proposal" put forth a veneer of civility, they were in fact fully aware of the swift >article and were setting a tone of clear disrespect and sarcasm with regard to the Institutions of >the Faith. For those who might be interested in perusing the original, it can be found at the >following URL:

>
>.https://art-bin.com/art/omodest.html

>
>I just think it's important to have a little perspective here. There is far more going on besides a >modest proposal.

What the Dean actually proposed was that the landlords eat the Irish children as they had already consumed the parents and the rest of the land. As the authors of "A Modest Proposal" - Bahai style - are erudite and educated persons, I would have little doubt that the tone of the Dean's original was fully understood and the allusion obvious. The AO has consumed the spirit of the BF and left nothing in its place.

The AO attacked the Bahai authors as rabidly as the landlords had ravished Ireland. Where the latter left pestilence and famine the former have created a desert inhabited by reptiles of the variant apologists for it present on this and other similar lists.

Actually, for your information, there is a lot less going on because the Modest Proposal was ignored and spurned.

Dermod.

From: "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net>
Subject: Re: Article on the LA study class
Date: Tuesday, February 06, 2001 12:55 PM

Rick

There was no "dissension or contention" in the study class. The sessions were generally wide ranging discussions no different than you would experience in any college class on any topic. Ask any participant, like David Young.

Most of Kazemzadeh's warnings were rather vague in nature and his main concern as stated on the day he visited seemed to be that the faith of other Baha'is might be severely tested.

On the other hand the nature of the newsletter was mostly just to allow individuals not living in Los Angeles a chance to participate. Most of these individuals were doing graduate level work in history or social sciences. Unfortunately some people had a tendency to allow others to photocopy these newsletters and thus disseminate them to a wider audience than intended by the class but still very small.

Very few Baha'is had ever heard of the study class or ever read a newsletter of the group, still true today I'm sure. There was no intent at all to disseminate anything until of course Dialogue magazine was started as a way of engaging the wider community.

Cheer up Rick, you can't spend all your time putting people down.

>That has to be the most pathetic excuse I've ever seen for not > telling the whole truth.

Randy

--

Rick Schaut <RSSchaut@email.msn.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:95o8r301naq@news2.newsguy.com...

>
> "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com> wrote in message > news:95ntmk$7i2$1@nnrp1.deja.com...
> > In article <95netr0acq@news1.newsguy.com>,
> > "Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@email.msn.NOSPAMcom> wrote:
> > > Your article still manages to leave out significant facts
>
> > There is very little evidence in the written record that references to > > the Writings were made either in the talk given to the group by Dr.
> > Kazemzadeh or the one given by Judge Nelson.
>
> At the same time, the "written record" is far from complete. There is some > correspondence that we know of only because letters from class participants
> refer to them. We don't know what was or was not in those letters.
>
> Also, these class participants were rather well-read individuals. Would
it > have been unreasonable for the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly to presume > that they were familiar with the numerous passages in Gleanings in which > Baha'u'llah condemns dissension in no uncertain terms?
>
> Your claim is a general claim, and isn't limited to what the participants
in > that study class supposedly knew. Are you claiming that you, yourself, are > ignorant of the numerous passages in the Writings relating to conflict, > contention and dissension regarding Baha'i Institutions?
>
> Yes, Karen, you can be faulted for not conveying relevant facts of which
you > do have knowledge even if those facts aren't in the so-called "written > record". That has to be the most pathetic excuse I've ever seen for not > telling the whole truth.
>
> > I am not convinced that either 'Abdul-Baha or Shoghi Effendi meant to > > limit all discussion of community issues to controlled venues.

>
> And, no one is claiming that those texts limit all discussion of community > issues to "controlled venues". The issue has to do with how _criticisms_, > particularly those that have little constructive value, are to be voiced > within the Baha'i community. The National Spiritual Assembly would rather > hear these criticism directly rather than via the proverbial grape vine--a > medium well known for its ability to distort the truth and twist facts.

>
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Article on the LA study class
Date: Tuesday, February 06, 2001 7:55 PM

Rickster wrote: -

>Your article still manages to leave out significant facts, probably most important being the >extent to which the institutions have cited >authoritative Baha'i texts as the basis for their concerns.

Didn't Karen put you right on that - very few quotations (if any) dealing with the subject matter, more a huffing and puffing around the fact that the AO just didn't like the whole idea. After all something positive might have come out of it - Bahais might have learned to think for themselves and there'd be no need for these silly Training Institutes or the prats who run them. And dear old Randy was a participant in the LA Study Group and didn't he put you straight on the whole business too. Once again Rick runs in where fools fear to tread!

>For example, your article states, "At the root of the problem lies the administration's insistence >that the only appropriate forum for expressing concerns about community functioning is within >certain limited arenas..."
The article fails to point out that the basis of these limits lie in the >writings of `Abdul-Baha and Shoghi Effendi, and is not something that Baha'i institutions have >concocted out of some general distaste for criticism and dissidence.

One of these days somebody will put baffles in the void between your ears so that when a concept enters it will at least rattle around a bit and perhaps collide with a brain cell in which it can find rest. As has been amply verified
from Juan Cole to Alison Marshall and back again via Michael McKenny, Dialogue and the whole LA Study Group business, there is no room within the AO for dissidents or people who like to think for themselves. Bahai institutions don't like to be criticised at all and they're prepared to tell lies to try to stop it. Lovely People and all who sail with them!

Now don't forget that perfect system that you've found out there! We're all waiting with tremendous excitement for your pronouncement!!

The Prim Keeper.

From: "Ron House" <house@usq.edu.au>
Subject: Re: Origins of a Modest Proposal.
Date: Wednesday, February 07, 2001 9:45 PM

Karen Bacquet wrote:

> Somewhere in my surfing, I ran into a post where David Langness > actually apologized for the title, and acknowledged that it was a > mistake.

> I ran a search on "A Modest Proposal", and it's surprising how widely > the title is used for various things. Kazemzadeh explained the meaning > of the title at that Convention for those who didn't get it, and people > were horrified. I already recognized the reference, and I think that's > why I remembered the name of the article after all those years.
> However, because of the title, I thought the article itself was > actually some kind of satire,(I also thought the letters from the > Dialogue editors that he read were part of the article.) and that's one > reason I was so shocked when I found it on the web.

Hi Karen, thanks for that info about David.

This fuss by certain parties about the title of the article is, IMHO, a clear indication of much that has gone wrong with the administrative mindset in the Baha'i Faith. Putting the facts about that article and the histrionic responses to it before any rational believer in tolerant, democratic government would be a certain way to poison their attitude towards the Baha'i Faith forever. The article is a subdued collection of suggestions written in a moderate tone of voice, and 'Abdul-Baha guarantees that free speech exists in the Baha'i Faith for all expressions written politely. But the authors chose a title that was a mild satire! How malicious! How subversive! They must be CAMPAIGNING!

The blindness of those making this sort of defence of the AO is mind boggling, and their complete inability to see how this would be seen by rational non-Baha'is is even more staggering.

It seems to me that there is a belief by administrative thinkers that the AO has some kind of right to introspect about the private thoughts of individuals as indicated by the flimsiest tissue of a hint (such as the harmless title of this article). Actually, Baha'u'llah told _individuals_, not administrators, to search into the hearts. It is an interesting historical fact that this idea currently framing the administrative Baha'i mindset was rejected as immoral over four hundred years ago by a monarch who wasn't always above doing mean things: Queen Elizabeth rejected advice from her ministers for more limitations on Catholics because she didn't want "a window into men's souls."

**--

Ron House    house@usq.edu.au
<https://www.sci.usq.edu.au/staff/house>

A rose grows in the Earth's good soil.From: "Michael McKenny"

<bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA>

Subject: Re: For Michael: "Rebels Within the Cause?"

Date: Wednesday, February 07, 2001 11:46 AM

Greetings, Karen.

Many thanks for letting me read this article. It was fascinating. What a sad tale. You may not be aware that one of the accusations that was hurled at liberals on Talisman was that we'd been infected by this LA study class. I replied at the time that the closest I'd been to LA was Edmonton, Alberta (April 1972) and Chicago (July 1975), so Juan and I couldn't have been having tea together in LA at the time of this study class (an allusion to Muslim allegations that Baha'is were putting something in the tea and this explained conversions).

FreeNet claims Themestream articles are improperly addressed, so I'm not able to read them. I would thus be grateful if you posted the ones about the expulsion of Alyson Marshall and Talisman.

Many thanks for this. I think it's a story that should be as widely known as possible. Having independent investigation of truth as an essential principle, declaring this is the age for the maturity of humanity and adopting the slogan of "Unity in Diversity" are not compatible with an imposed doctrine of uniform, thoughtless obedience to each and every dictate of Council, including the rule of censorship.

To Glastnost and Perestroika Within Baha'i,
Michael

Dear Michael,

Thank you for your interest in my article. I pasted this straight from my rough draft, and although I looked it over, there still may be some slight discrepancies between this and the final published version.

Other group members might note that I don't get paid my two cents from Themestream when people read my articles on a newsgroup. It is my hope that this will put the silly charge that I'm doing it for the money to rest.

It is, however, an even greater hope, Michael, that you will enjoy the article. Did you get to see my articles on Alison Marshall's expulsion and the Talisman crackdown? If you are interested and have time to read them, I would be happy to post those for you as well.

Love, Karen

**--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

Sent via Deja.com

<https://www.deja.com/>

**--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)
From: "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net>
Subject: Re: Article on the LA study class
Date: Friday, February 09, 2001 4:01 PM

Rick

I don't think these notes were ever distributed very widely at all before the internet thing. For example every so often one of the Orthodox groups sends out a mailing to all the LSA's in the U.S. Did you know this? Have you ever received one?

Now if the LA Study Group had done something like that with material which questioned say the status of the UHJ in the community then I would have been the first to object. The LA Study Group never sent out "wide" mailings in any sense of the word. They probably would have been smarter not to have mailed anything to someone who didn't regularly attend meetings but that wouldn't have prevented the members from acting to distribute papers to friends or people they thought would be interested in it. At best that would only have delayed what eventually happened by a year or so.

I think what is more relevant is that with the advent of the WWW this very thing has become a crucial sticking point for the entire AO. I think the faith rises or falls on its ability to grant its members freedom of thought, freedom of speech, and freedom of conscience.

Cheers, Randy

**--

Rick Schaut <RSSchaut@email.msn.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:9619le02nb@news1.newsguy.com...

**>
> "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net> wrote in message > news:a3mg6.2795$k06.274136@paloalto-snr1.gtei.net...
> > I guess if they are on the internet everyone can read them now.
**>
> I was hoping to get at some relatively rigorous notion of what "too wide"
or
> "not too wide" a distribution means in this context. If the best we can do
> is say that it's a judgement call, then guess who gets to make that > judgement call?
**>
> > I guess you > > can always forbid people to think if you don't like the results.
**>
> Actually, I think one root of the problem was people not thinking enough, > but that's probably another discussion altogether.
**>
**>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
**>
**>

From: "Ian McCarthy" <ianmcca@tiscalinet.it>
Subject: Bugs in the Software
Date: Saturday, February 10, 2001 7:33 PM

Rick Schaut observed that:

- > Baha'u'llah appointed `Abdul-Baha
- > ....Abdul-Baha appointed Shoghi Effendi
- > ... Baha'u'llah established the Universal House of Justice
- > `Abdul-Baha stated that we are obligated to be obedient to it,
- > We aren't talking about fine points of esoteric questions of mystical spirituality.
- > We're talking about clear instructions.

It seems to me, Rick, that for you religion is just a set of instructions, a software program.

You run it and it doesn't work. You run it again and it still doesn't work. You keep on running it and sometimes it seems that it sort of looks like it's almost going to work (maybe tomorrow) but it never really does what it's supposed to do. But you don't blame the software, because the label says it's infallible. *Thank you for buying the Most Perfect Program. It is indeed Most Perfect. If it doesn't work its not our fault, it's yours*. How about that for a product warranty!

I'm not saying that it should enable you to reach instant enlightenment. I'm not talking about fine points of esoteric questions of mystical spirituality. I don't go in for navel gazing anymore. I'm talking about changing the world. About, for example, growing to a critical mass to be able to have an actual physical effect on the real world out there, to steer it in a certain direction. To ring in the Kingdom. I don't see the Baha'i Faith doing that and I don't see it being able to do it even in the far distant future at current rates of growth and in its current sad condition. And above all with its current inflexible attitude of arrogant self-sufficiency.

The software is not working. The instructions are clear but they don't work. What do you do?

I know! - You blame humanity, you blame everyone else. The Program is Perfect but humans aren't. The software is not corrupt, but people are. They are stupid and they can't understand it. They don't understand how to use it and they haven't the sense to realise that it really is working perfectly even though it looks as if it's doing nothing and going nowhere. But one day many years from now they will all wake up and suddenly understand that it only wasn't working because they didn't believe that it was.

Or not enough of them. If only everyone had been like Good ol' Rick and always read every page of the instruction manual and followed the perfectly clear instructions to the very last letter, then everything would have worked just fine... and suddenly everything will, because they will finally have got the Most Perfect Message!

And I suppose that's all perfectly possible, but would you really expect all reasonable people to agree that it is probable? Isn't it much more likely that there are some bugs in the software? Instead of frantically bashing away at your keyboard and repeating ad infinitum *I'm sorry sir, that's impossible. There can't be anything wrong with the Most Perfect Program. It must be working because it says it is! It must be Infallible because it says so on page 333 of the Most Perfect Manual!*, wouldn't you be better employed listening to the users all around the world who are calling in to report the bugs that they have found?

I mean, really, what kind of way is that to run a religion? *The Customer is always Wrong*.

Most Perfect Regards,

Ian

P.S. Can I be Al Marbig now too?

From: "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net>

Subject: Re: Article on the LA study class

Date: Saturday, February 10, 2001 3:37 PM

Dear Robert--

<rlittle95@my-deja.com> wrote in message news:962rne$io7$1@nnrp1.deja.com...

> This approach to understanding the "AO" and your statement that "I > think the faith rises or falls on its ability to grant its members > freedom of thought, freedom of speech, and freedom of conscience." > posits a mental attitude which I feel reveals what I would term as > childish. I don't mean that in any judgemental way, but rather in the > medical way explained by Dr. Eric Berne (author of Games People Play).

I don't think it's childish at all, in fact I think it is the opposite. I think Baha'is have a right to expect the AO to treat them with not only the same respect and rights that they can receive in ordinary society but in fact even greater rights! If the faith has anything to offer at all to this sorely tried world it must be something superior to whatever we have come to expect in our daily world. As an American citizen I enjoy and expect certain things, as a Baha'i I should have even higher expectations.

Robert have you ever heard of someone saying to a state or city employee "Hey, I'm a tax payer, I pay your salary?" And you know what kind of reply you get from a statement like that? Well that kind of reply from the faith is not good enough for me and I don't think it is good enough for the central figures either.!

> Baha'u'llah gave us an understanding - as best I can understand - of > the human race as being in a constant, progressive state of development > through a series of stages corresponding to the development of a human > individual, starting with birth and ranging up to and beyond a point in > time which separates the childhood of mankind from its maturity, and > then continuing to evolve through successively higher stages of > adulthood to a point where the race achieves all its potential to know > and to love God.

>

> I believe that the Baha'i revelation marks the point in time when the > race crosses over from childhood into adulthood. It is a process, > rather than a particular date, and we are now engaged in that epochal > transformation.

This process should be marked with a greater degree of introspection on the part of the AO. They need to ask themselves at every instance if they are truly serving Baha'u'llah and the faith in the way it needs. The faith pays lip service to the idea of consultation! That is the primary ingredient! Without consultation you have a pretty thin soup, my friend. People today are starving for what the faith has to offer but we aren't doing a good enough good of cooking to live up to the appeal of the cookbook illustrations!

> In my estimation, the viewpoints which Randy expresses reveal an > individual utilizing the mental and emotional tools of a child to > explain and understand the adult it is in the process of becoming. It > is easier to look backward than forward, into uncharted territory.
> Well, not easier, but more rewarding.

I'm sure you think you have a point here, but I'll be damned if I can figure out what it is. Why is it more rewarding to look backward, wouldn't it be easier? Wouldn't it be tougher but more rewarding to look forward in to uncharted territory. Maybe I am looking forward into the uncharted territory and I don't like what I see? Can you prove that each person who becomes a Baha'is also miraculously becomes someone incapable of committing a crime, or wrong doing, or acting in a greedy self-serving fashion? Are some Baha'is above the law? In the U.S. we have managed to get to a place where we say even the President is not above the law, but in the U.S. there are places you can take a problem involving the President to and expect to get a hearing. If you have a problem with a decision of the UHJ where do you take it? I don't think asking this question is out of line for any honest person. This is an honest question that needs to be answered if *non-baha'is* are to learn to love and respect the faith and its institutions. That is the true thrust of my points which you find merely childish. How we present ourselves to the world and how well we live up to that image is the paramount test of maturity.

>

> I think that the relationship between "unfettered search after truth" > and "absolute obedience to everything He hath revealed" is crucial to > understanding and living that maturity which Baha'u'llah promises will > be ours. To a child, one can either obey absolutely, or one can be > unfettered, but not both. However, an adult ought to be able to > understand that life is choice, all choice and nothing but choice, > including the choice of obedience - rational, logical, consistent > obedience to God. This is what Baha'u'llah seems to me to be requiring > of His servants.

I get the sense that you are mixing two or three ideas together here. Is this a kind of stew or goulash? Do you actually expect a child to be absolutely obedient, or would you prefer that the child be obedient in certain things that might jeopardize his life but a little more adventuresome in things that might provide a good learning experience. Does one stay absolutely obedient as an adult? If mankind is transforming from the childhood to an adulthood doesn't that imply that he will become even more capable of making adult like choices? Don't we then get an even greater freedom rather than a diminution thereof or worse yet a complete cessation of? How can obedience to God be rational, logical and consistent? Can love be rational, logical and consistent? I don't think so!

Robert, I think you have some confused ideas on the nature of personal freedom and the idea of obedience to the teachings of God and the institutions. Could this be the result of unresolved childhood conflicts (this is a joke, no need to answer)?

>

> We have seen what can happen when individuals or groups stray into one > extreme or the other. We have inflicted on ourselves numerous societies > which demand total obedience, but examples of societies which require > freedom of conscience have been vanishingly rare. Modern democracies > such as the United States have attempted to achieve that marriage of > faith and freedom which Baha'u'llah so beautifully illustrates, but > their successes have been something less than total.

No problem with that. U.S> democracy is hardly perfect, but it is "free" to attempt to "perfect" itself even if such a state is impossible to achieve.

> The "AO" so often referred to in a disparaging way by critics is in > reality the community of Baha'is. There are people who consider > themselves Baha'is at present who do not participate in the life of > their community, so in a functional way the Baha'i administrative order > is something separate from them and their lives, but for those Baha'is > who do participate in the life and activity of their community, the > reality is that the elected institutions extend outward through > committees, trees, task forces, councils and the like to include every > living Baha'i. It is one organic whole, a composed organism.

This says nothing about honest criticism meant to help the faith grow and mature. When David proposed his Modest Proposal was he expecting an honest debate on his suggestions or a vicious unreasoned attack that would last years and drive him from the faith? How does David participate in the AO now? Do you suppose he attends feast? Do you see him at the annual elections? Can we get Vic Bonds to explain this?

In India they have four castes, and they also have the "untouchables." Casteless persons who are not allowed to touch people of caste or even to look at them in public. If the body politic of baha'i doesn't include everyone, including the critics, then aren't you creating a new class of untouchable? People who the AO says are not *good enough* to be Baha'is?

>

> It is not for the Baha'i administrative order to grant anything. The > very idea is contrary to the central concept of the oneness of mankind > as I understand it.

Well, I'm glad you understand it. It sounds like if the faith is an organic whole then whatever it does is justice, so any punishment it decides on is a just punishment. Correct? Yet we know that the AO can also reverse a decision. If the first decision was in fact perfectly just and correct, what do you call the second decision?

Why would the AO even if it is the entire body politic not be able to grant something to itself? Who will set society's rules if not the AO? Are you saying the the UHJ will never legislate, will never make a decision, will never change any ruling or ordinary law? If something isn't forbidden in the text don't they have the right to grant it?

You act as if you have to oppose something I say not because of what I say but because I say it.

> I obey my House of Justice/Spiritual Assembly not > because the House of Justice tells me I must, but because Baha'u'llah > tells me I must and I have freely chosen to do so. I question my House > of Justice not because I wish to force it to think as I think, but in > order for it's decisions and actions to reflect the very best > understanding possible at that moment. I must both obey and question, > not one or the other, or neither.

I'm with you up to the last sentence. The last thing I would want is for anyone else to think like I think. But your last sentence sounds confused and unfinished in thought. If you question in a halfhearted uncaring way without passion how can you pose the best questions you are capable of? In U.S. law, which is hardly perfect, the accused gets a passionate advocate. English law is different but they still get an advocate. What do we get in Baha'i?

**>
> Any effort to divide and separate the community of mankind, or the > Baha'i community, is an effort which is contrary to the spirit and the > intent of the Baha'i writings. The Baha'i community is highly > imperfect, but it is growing progressively more mature, more obedient > and more questioning. You may decry its faults, or you may strive to > perfect it. Choice.

**>
> From time to time, some individuals will stray over into blind > obedience or into blind lack of faith. Those individuals tend to be > unhappy people, by and large. In fact, I believe that a radiant joy of > life is a fairly good indicator of an individual who is in balance and > on the right path.

**>
> What question did 'Abdul-Baha' invariably ask His listeners while in > America? "Are you happy?" He asked it repeatedly, and asked if we are > not happy in this Day, for what day were we awaiting?

Some people find their happiness in posing questions. Some people who are actually good at this pose difficult questions.

Cheers, Randy

From: "Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au>
Subject: Re: REPOST - Petition for a Bahai Reformation
Date: Friday, February 23, 2001 5:23 PM

Fred,

I think it is about time you stop cross-posting to the others. They assume you are a Baha'i and get pissed off at us. It's about time I get out your address and phone number and I'll cross-post it here and I'll make sure to include every interesting NG I can find. I was presented with a list of para-military groups that have NGs and I'll include those. I've done it before so don't feel I wouldn't again. You need to realise that you are causing harm and we're tired of it.

MEE

**"

From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>
Subject: Re: Theocracy
Date: Friday, February 23, 2001 6:57 PM

Hi Pat,

>The liberal government of the US only recently, the past 35 years, decided
>to >protect the rights of all adult citizens equally. It was not so long ago, >nor >far away, when signs reading "Whites Only" and "Colored" were displayed in >various public facilities on this side of the pond. Drive down the Falls >Road, >for the scenic route in civil tolerance. Ah, the shrines of western >liberalism
>- they smell like smoke, they look like mirages, they sound like Orangemen >marching by their charred victims.

We can justify everything by reference to revealed religious truth - aren't there guys up in the backwoods who advocate their own form of Theocracy, per the Bible, which will entail returning the Blacks to slavery as their proper place in life because, as we all know, black skin is the mysterious mark placed on Cain for the murder of his brother.

You know when we scratch away at every conflict, right there at the heart of it is religious rectitude of the most righteous kind - "My religion is right which means that yours is wrong and therefore I have a God-given right to beat the shit out of you or do anything else to you to convert you to my religion when, in turn, you can also beat the shit out of anybody who doesn't agree with us. And when we get to be 51% of the population or simply take over power by some other way, we can beat the crap out of everybody!"

From Kosovo to Auschwitz, via Bosnia and Rwanda, circling through South Africa, taking in the Klan en route, a detour to the Aboriginal peoples of the Antipodes, marching up the Falls Road, provided you're a good Fenian but

Orange feet shall never walk from Drumcree via the Garvaghy Road <https://www.grandorange.org.uk/> As they say in certain quarters: -

"What's the difference between an apple and an orange?
You'll never find an apple bastard"

Arrogance, superiority, bigotry, hatred - all of these superlative qualities and more are to be found in the organisations which rule every religion. Is the Bahai Faith any different? Most certainly not - it exhibits these qualities in exquisite intricacy. Fortunately it is not in any other position than to gauge enviously at those religions which have achieved the numerical status to actively practice their barbarisms and envisage wistfully the day when it hopes to be able to do likewise.

When we look back we see that when the religions were put in their place all sorts of good things flowed - from schools (Churches never liked an educated flock), to statutorily established social welfare (Churches always liked charities which controlled the flock), to a free press (Churches never liked a press which might expose their corruption) but above all to a society whose government refused to regulate private morality.

So long live the secular state - may it increase in power and influence and succeed in keeping the religious organisations in their proper place - away from anything that would allow them to continue to practise their barbarities. In the West we have had 2 millennia of Christian hatred - it will take time to undo its influence but I, for one, have no intention of seeing Christian bigotry replaced by Bahai brutality.

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au>
Subject: Apology to Mr. Glaysher
Date: Wednesday, March 07, 2001 7:41 PM

I would like to apologise to Mr. Glaysher, publicly, for threatening him with a posting of his name and address on the Usenet NGs. I shall no longer be conversant with Mr. Glaysher in any way. This action, had I taken it, would have compromised my commitment to acting as a Baha'i and to guidance given us by the Universal House of Justice. I can only hope that I learn to recognise my need to communicate within the boundaries of humility and service rather than my own need for personal gratification.
Mark E. Elderkin

From: "Gerald Smith" <gerald.smith38@gte.net>
Subject: Hmmm.... Interesting!
Date: Sunday, March 11, 2001 3:05 PM

Greetings, everybody!

I am Gerald Smith and I was a Bahai for 15 years, though I have no faith whatsoever in that or any other form of Middle Eastern Monotheism. I find it interesting that the dragon's teeth of totalitarianism sown by the leaders of the Bahai Faith are starting to sprout. I was led out of the faith by my awareness of how badly the faith was stagnating in the 1980's, by the obvious inflexible rigidity of the leadership of the faith, parroting the same thing over and over again they are still parroting, by the heavy emphasis on proselytizing combined with lack of any real community spiritual life, and most of all, by spending a year in Saudi Arabia where I got to know some true, enlightened Muslims (none of whom were Saudis) and realized that the best parts of Bahai were stolen wholesale from Islam.

It doesn't surprise me that the seedlings of what I saw ten years ago are bearing fruit now. It is obvious to me that the Covenant is dead, the Bahai Faith a mere cult of no real importance that will doubtless linger for a long time but has lost its chance to become a first-class world religion. I believe it was Shoghi Effendi himself who said the Faith would have poor chances at long term survival if it were deprived of the Guardianship and he was right, but the fault is largely his for not writing a will, not having children and excommunicating every relative who could have succeeded him. The faith has effectively been dying since and has largely already accomplished the little further that could be expected of it. Now that the "dirty linen" the leaders of the faith so long successfully hid from the public is being prominently displayed, only long term decline can be foreseen.

I don't regret the time that I spent as a Bahai, but it is too bad the faith has been so ill-served by its leadership. Has anyone noticed how closely the organization of the Bahai Faith as instituted by Shoghi Effendi parallels that of the Communist Party? Right down to dictatorial control of the center by a self-perpetuating oligarchy, "democratic centralism" and multi-year plans. This is a great way to organise a small, power-hungry core of disciplined fanatics into a totalitarian regime, but as with Marx-Leninism it will guarantee the long term decline and eventual disappearance of the faith.

Oh well, please keep in mind there is no one true religion and there are plenty of other faiths you can explore in your spiritual seeking. I could recommend the more liberal and enlightened forms of Sufi but I myself am Pagan and polytheistic and more interested in the Primordial religions of the Earth.

Peace and Joy to you, Pilgrim!

JerryBear

From: "Gerald Smith" <gerald.smith38@gte.net>
Subject: Re: Hmmm.... Interesting!
Date: Sunday, March 11, 2001 9:19 PM

Hmmm..... Even more interesting!

Well, Mr. Elderkin, It would seem YOU are the one who is out of place here. This place is dedicated pretty much to those critical of the Way Things Are in the Faith. You are the one supporting Orthodoxy on here against us infidels, apostates and assorted heretics. I have to congratulate you on your mastery of being nice in a nasty way or being nasty in a nice way. It seems to be one of the major accomplishments of Fundamentalist Bahai's such as yourself, you raise hypocrisy to a fine art indeed!

In the beginning of the Faith in this country, Bahai was to a large extent seen as a personal mystical path by quite a lot of the earliest American believers. I believe that in the long run, a return to this tradition may be the salvation of the Cause. The current attempt to garner political power on the part of the current institutions is increasingly pathetic and doomed and endangers the future of everything the Founders of your Faith attempted to accomplish. This is the real reason behind the hypocrisy and tyranny that increasingly strangles the Living Spirit of the Faith and turns it into a mere cult of political correctness.

I am sorry, but it is increasingly apparent to me that Shoghi Effendi effectively destroyed the Covenant by failing to make provision for another Guardian to succeed him after his death and the Faith has since been cast adrift. The complete and abject failure of the Universal House of Justice to fulfill the original vision of the Founders has become apparent. Shoghi Effendi once said that the Bahais could very well fail completely at their task and it would accordingly be up to the followers of the next dispensation to bring about the Most Great Peace. I would say that his gloomy scenario has pretty much come about, no?

I believe, anyway, that all Gods (and Goddesses, including the "One True God" of the Middle Eastern Monotheistic traditions are ultimately human archetypes. They are attempts to connect to the One, the shadowy inhuman utterly mysterious force that is behind Fate. A really good God archetype may be favored by the One if it supports Its purposes and be given real power. I believe that the Founders of the Bahai Faith had a real sense of the One's future purposes and could have generated a religion of immense power but apparently it didn't quite work out.

All that we really know of the One is the evidences we see of It's Will being worked out in the world. My current preferred tradition, Asatru refers to the One as "Wyrð". My preferred God is Woden, the God of my long ago ancestors and my Goddess is Freya, the Lady. Woden is dedicated to discovering the purposes of Wyrð with a view to ensuring the future survival of the human race and the world. Since the Great Calamity long foreseen by nearly every known tradition (including my own, it is called "Ragnarok") appears to be waiting to happen in this century, I want to be a helper in this great purpose.

The essence of Woden is the ideal of wisdom earned through sacrifice.

I feel, once most Bahais have finally given up the pathetic delusion that they are going to take over the world and feel a need to emphasize spiritual life rather than politics, power and proselytizing, then perhaps they will consider making a reconciliation with the more enlightened elements of Islam, especially Sufi, with whom Bahais otherwise have so much in common.

I

sense that someday Bahais will start to feel the need to get in touch with their Islamic roots. The Bahai Faith is a sort of Islamic version of the Unitarian/Universalist Church.

In my case, I very strongly believe in reincarnation. I have only been a human being 2 or 3 times and I still know what I was in the animal world before I was first born as a human (a bear, of course, for a million years or more). My main task and interest is still solidly located in THIS world and I won't be ready to transcend to whatever it is that lies beyond for many lifetimes yet. Thus, I am a natural follower of Earth-based religions, such as paganism and shamanism.

I have very pleasant memories of the Bahai Faith and I am sorry to see what has happened to it. I would still be willing to help the true spiritual essence of your Faith to survive, and once it has become truly spiritual and democratic and free of its current political pretensions and dictatorial power structures might even be willing to include some of its practices among my own spiritual disciplines, though I would never become a member of it again. Maybe a few dozen lifetimes down the transmigration pipeline...

There you have it Mark, some reasons for my interest in being here. Keep in mind that on here you have absolutely no power to silence or censor anyone, though you of course can attempt to manipulate or intimidate people if you think you can get away with it.

Have a NICE day!

Sincerely,

JerryBear

Mark Elderkin wrote in message <3aabfa3f.0@news.acay.com.au>...

>Dear Gerry,

> I am sorry you have decided to go on your own route, but that is the >way you feel it seems. I hope you relieved yourself here, in some way, and >will now find a news group dedicated to your new convictions.

> Be in peace,

>MEE

From: "Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk>

Subject: Re: Fred's valued contributions - how to killfile Patrick

Date: Saturday, March 31, 2001 10:25 PM

>

> "Stuart Palin" <kweezil@NOSPAMukonline.co.uk> wrote in message > news:_hpx6.6631$u93.932586@news6-win.server.ntlworld.com...

> > Pat Kohli <kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net> wrote in message > > news:3AC6130A.13BB6207@ameritel.net...

> >

> > Welcome to usenet, TRB and ARB, Stuart,

>

Indeed yes! Stuart! Welcome to Hell on Earth! BTW how is Stroke City these days?

>
> Power corrupts. Absolute power is kind of neat.

Mein Gott! The AO speaks the secret of its failure!

>
> Perhaps Mr Glaysher, > if you backed up your venom with facts, rather than grandiose and > unsubstantiated claims I would consider your opinions worthwhile.

As it

> is,
> from a purely objective point of view, you seem to spend most of your time > pouring out tired posts attacking this religion. You reiterate the same > points over and over again under new header and avoid any form of > intelligent debate. Indeed, your own warning signs of fanaticism fit you > like a glove.

>
Well now, Stuart! Before you start making half cocked statements like that I suggest you take a wee trot over to Fred's site and take a long slow look because it is full of FACTS about the unmitigated corruption at
the heart of the AO. No doubt Fred is a tad angry but maybe he deserves that having been treated like dirt by the obsequious venomous toads in the AO.
But
one thing you got to say for him - he has got his facts and the facts of others, similarly treated, well posted at that site together with links to other sites that may just be as interesting and as full of FACTS. Of course nobody expects a BIGS to be able to distinguish the fact that Fred's site is full of FACTS - it's a kind of mental block that years of adherence and subservience to the AO has accomplished.

So! Like! Use yur loaf and tak' a wee dander over there, afore ye open yur bake again, cos ye've blarged intil an area where some folks don't take kindly tae gulpins!

> I only joined this newsgroup today in the hope of some intelligent > discussion, instead I find tired arguments being trotted out for a > peanut-gallery crowd. Such a waste of time, both mine and yours. I hope
> you > all enjoy Mr. Glaysher's spectacle, I certainly won't be staying
for > another > encore.

You sure came to the wrong place. You need the kinder moderated places like SRB where everything is kissing the ring and everybody's pals in
the unmodulated self praise of those who are in the right religion and everybody else is an poor unfortunate or an "enemy of the Faith". If you want intelligent conversation you have no chance here - full of fundie bigots. Of course you might feel at home with that type of client.

Chin Chin

Dermod.

>
>

From: "Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk>
Subject: Re: < bahai > - New Mexico LAWSUIT **against** bahai
Date: Saturday, March 31, 2001 10:33 PM

> "Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message > news:20010331002616.28097.00002915@ng-mi1.aol.com...
> Dear Pat,
>
> She is not going to be able to persuade a judge that there is something > wrong with applauding someone. A judge would like find it nonsensical > that electioneering was termed "rigging." And she says nothing about the > Baha'i teaching that might make this intelligible.
>
> warmest, Susan

Dear Lady,

Are you fishing again? No doubt, when it comes to a hearing, evidence will be adduced to show that "electioneering" is forbidden in the Bahai system. Now the question that will then be posed is, in light of this ban, what actions could constitute electioneering that would be in contravention of the ban?

Now is it conceivable that behaviour that drew particular attention to one individual over and above any other in an atmosphere of quiet and prayerful consideration of the respective merits of all persons in the community, might just be construed as a subtle, but nonetheless, illegal electioneering technique? We must needs await the evidence in a hearing before coming to a conclusion.

As in most things you fundies miss the point - it is inconceivable to you that anybody would, in the name of conscience, oppose the evil fascist empire that you support. Ring out a crisis, see the "enemies of the faith" on the march and out you people come from your lairs like maggots and vultures attracted by the blood of a fresh smelling corpse?

Then the fishing starts and maggots are good bait for coarse fishing! There is information of sorts in the Complaint filed before the Court but if you start appearing critical and incredulous perhaps more information might be gleaned that you can bring back to the Gruppenfuhrers who control you and pull your strings. Sad to say there is no information out here for you to glean. Like I said Yorgos is a sharp cookie who does more with his head than keep his hat up in the air. The guy is playing it close (just enough disclosed to show that there is a case to answer) but I think he has already hoist this LSA and the NSA - after all, no lawyer goes to Court without having a better than fifty per cent chance of winning.

Of course if he is, as Rickster has suggested, a "rookie" he is all the more dangerous. "Rookies" like to win - there are reputations to be made from that. So maybe he is that bit better prepared, maybe he has taken a longer harder look at the evidence, put more hours into it than usual - maybe, if it is his first case he has decided not to take it to Court unless he has a better than 80 per cent chance of winning.

Who knows but that the LSA/NSA have screwed up the preliminaries so much that they have actually handed him a case? The Complaint notes that Ms Buchorn has complained of these matters to the NSA but it has done nothing. It invites the question - has the NSA sat on the complaint for a long time, has it ignored it and is thus caught with its trousers down when the lawyer comes on the scene? Or perhaps the NSA responded to the Complaint with a 'snow' job - the embryonic immaturity sob story that is invariably invoked under option one as a means of dealing with dissent? Been there, seen it - loada waffle!

None of your prattling on this or any other forum about this case is relevant however - like me, you're not involved. Like me you don't have even "hearsay" evidence to proffer. Your comments to date have been naught but ill-informed speculation - efforts to rubbish a case you have no hard information on. Why are you doing it? Are your puppet masters so worried that they have got to try to proffer some defence on this forum or are they already setting the scene for a pre-trial surrender or a post trial humiliation? Are you endeavouring to set up the faithful to view this as another bit of martyrdom inflicted by yet more of these internal enemies of the Faith?

What this case represents is a BIGS standing up for what she believes to be a total abomination of Bahai and civil law, in which it is alleged the NSA has knowingly colluded in failing to take steps to rectify the situation. I note that Nima who has lived in this community has been unable to offer any information contrary to the details noted in the Complaint and I assume that there is weight of evidence ready for Court, otherwise this Complaint would not have been filed in Court. Irrespective of the outcome, the fact that such a Complaint has been filed in Court is a damning indictment of the AO modus operandi.

This is nothing new of course; we have all seen it before - Alison, Michael etc etc. ad nauseam. But ponder this, dear lady: -

"The worst enemies of the Cause are in the Cause and mention the Name of God. We need not fear the enemies on the outside for such can be easily dealt with. But the enemies who call themselves friends and who persistently violate every fundamental law of love and unity, are difficult to be dealt with in this day, for the mercy of God is still great. But ere long this merciful door will be closed and such enemies will be attacked with a madness.. "

Abdul-Baha answers questions asked by Dr. E. C. Getsinger in the Holy Land: Star of the West, Vol. VI, No. 6, p. 45) - Multiple Authors: Lights of Guidance, page 93

Now what was it one the named defendants is alleged to have said? Something about the "voice of God" - is that it?

As ever,

Dermod.

From: "Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au>
Subject: Re: ^^ bahai ^^ - New Mexico LAWSUIT for Fraud & Libel (sound familiar?) - FULL TEXT - against bahai instit
Date: Sunday, April 01, 2001 7:11 PM

Pete,

Whiny or not, listen to what he has to say. The problems he outlines about the Baha'is and their authorities are very REAL. I can testify to them myself.

cheers,
Nima

"PBridge130" <pbridge130@aol.com> wrote in message news:20010331180243.29043.00001194@ng-mr1.aol.com...
>From: "Stuart Palin" kweezil@NOSPAMukonline.co.uk wrote:

>A dead link, like all of your members.nbci.com links. Perhaps Mr Glaysheer...(snip)....Indeed, your own warning signs of fanaticism fit you >like a glove.

Fanatic? I just find him whiny. He reminds me of the socially inept kid in grammar school, the one the teacher had to ask the class to please be nice to.

Now he's all grown up, but he's still looking for an authority figure to make everyone else play nicely with him.

Fred's motto: "Enough about me and my problems -- let's talk about what YOU can do for me and my problems."

From: "Thirinel" <thirinel@email.msn.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - LAWSUIT - ** "Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby" ** - FRAUD & LIBEL
Date: Saturday, April 28, 2001 2:09 PM

Here, Mark is a kleenex to help you get over your emotional damage.

While I don't agree with Fred's posting to other newsgroups and you will note I have removed the non-relevant ones, and I more often than not don't agree with the points he is making, still I think he has as much right as any other to follow his conscience. And I wonder at a Faith that finds it necessary to disenroll someone because of criticism

Alma

Mark Elderkin wrote in message <3aea8bab.0@news.acay.com.au>...

>Everytime I read through ARB/TRB I suffer emotional damage from posts by >Fred Glaysher. At least now, some of the responders from other NGs are >seeing you for your antics and are realising that you have no connection >with the Baha'i Faith. It is a real shame that a grown man, while claiming >some academic attributes, can't find something better to do. Why don't you >work on your website.....?

>M

>> 44. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

**>

**>

**>

From: "Mr Mahdi" <mrmahdi@aol.com>

Subject: Maneck slanders Fred on AOL bahai message board

Date: Wednesday, June 13, 2001 2:29 AM

Susan Maneck has gotten away with slandering Fred Glaysher on the AOL
bahai
message boards by claiming that he hates the bahai faith:

Subject: Re: Suing bahai KGB on AOL

Date: 6/13/01 12:44 AM Central Daylight Time

From: Smaneck

Message-id: <20010613014429.13674.00007438@ng-ch1.aol.com>

**>

>You are using Mahdi as an example! Now THAT is funny.

**>

Yeah, ironic isn't it? I don't know that Fred and Mahdi have anything in common other than their mutual hatred for the Baha'i Faith. One is a libertarian while the other is a rigid fundamentalist.
warmest, Susan

<https://www.susanmaneck.com>

Mahdi Muhammad

<https://members.xoom.com/mrmahdi/caliphate.html> pdodenhoff

7/1/01 10:30 AM 33 out of 35

PK,

Though I'm certain it will have no effect on you, I just want to say that my reasons for speaking of *my* experience as an assistant have nothing to do with bragging about having an *in* with the AO. Those who know me personally, *and who are still Baha'is* can vouch for my character.

I did not base my response to you on your single post, but rather from the very obvious attitude you *took* in that post. I did not attack you, *you* attacked me because it is clear that you are an example of the type of individual (Baha'i or not) who cannot bear questioning or criticism of *anything.* You did not answer any of the questions posed by me or others in this thread. You just jumped in with your perceived sword of righteousness swinging in all directions.

Yes, it is people like you who force others from their faith.

Your last post is simply another example of the fundamentalist, fanatical, behavior that is leading the Baha'i Faith down the road of parochialism and cultism, a road on which everyone must march "lock-step" with you and other fundamentalist-minded individuals or be stepped on, shoved out of the way, or worse.

Personally, I don't believe you will succeed. While I may disagree with some Baha'i teachings and left because of them (oh, thanks for the left-handed compliment by the way) we are still very friendly with many Baha'is who recognize the teachings of Baha'u'llah as something far above the sectarianism you are trying to turn it into.

And it is to *those* Baha'is I direct my questions and comment, those who can be civil and to whom I will be civil in kind.

I checked out these threads because RM had posted here and found some interesting discussions happening. When I read your response initially my reaction was simply to leave. But though I think you would prefer that, I will not. Instead, I'll just ignore you. Will that be good enough for you?

Paul

From: "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net>

Subject: Re: common ground

Date: Friday, January 12, 2001 12:18 AM

Karen

Questioning people's motives has been the critique du jour of the Baha'i community since the beginning of the Guardianship. It is the single modus operandi for eliminating those with ideas that are out of joint with the conservative fundamentalist clique that runs the U.S. NSA and the UHJ. It was used a lot by the U.S. NSA members starting in the 1920's and they have never stopped using it. I doubt that they ever will because they are clearly unable to come up with real ideas and real concerns that would justify their actions. Also it has worked well for them all these years (at least until the advent of the internet).

Basically when the good Doctor runs out of rational arguments she tends to get really really worried about your motives. I am sure she is worried about my motives right now!

Cheers, Randy

**--

Karen Bacquet <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu> wrote in message news:93lo32$9k5$1@nnrp1.deja.com...

> If Dr. Maneck would care to condescend to look through the recent > archives of this newsgroup, she would see that I have, in fact, > enumerated my motives, since they were so recently called into > question. In fact, I think that post may be somewhere in this "common > ground" thread.

>
> I don't think my critics care much about my motivation at all. I think > they just don't like the fact that I write articles about current > Baha'i issues. The questioning of my motives is just an attempt to > destroy my credibility. It's a whole lot easier than writing articles > expressing the opposite point of view, or facing that what I have to > say makes sense to a whole lot of people. (My articles have over 1000 > hits now.) I am currently the highest rated author in Themestream's > Baha'i category, with seven of the top ten articles being mine. And I > didn't do that -- the readers did that, because they are the ones that > rated me. If people didn't like what I was saying, those articles > would sink like a rock to the bottom of the list and be heard from no > more.

>
> I think there are some people here who, if they are concerned about > motives, would benefit from consulting a mirror.

>
> Karen

>
> bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA (Michael McKenny) wrote:

> > Greetings, Susan.

> > This is a fascinating position. You seem to argue that the UHJ > judges

> > individuals on the basis of the motives of these individuals and that
> the > > individuals themselves do not know what their own motives are.

> > This justification of inappropriate behaviour by authority is a > Most

> > Great Unacceptability for any decent society.

> > And with that this green Druid slips back into the verdant woods.

> > To Life,

> >
> Michael

> >
> > Susan Maneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

> > >

> > > Yeah, it mostly has to do with motive which is sometimes not all > that easy to > > > discern.

> > >

> > > Well, since Karin has removed herself from the Baha'i community she > really > > > isn't subject to Baha'i standards of conduct anyhow, so I don't > know that it > > > much matters. As for Karin's motives, I'm not sure she knows what > they are.

> > >

> > > warmest, Susan

> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > "And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, > with no time
> > > left to start again . . "
> > > Don McLean's American Pie
> > > <https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>
> > >
> > >
> > --
> > "My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
> > (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)
> >
> >
>
>
> Sent via Deja.com
> <https://www.deja.com/>

From: "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net>
Subject: Re: something Fred posted on Beliefnet
Date: Friday, September 14, 2001 1:24 PM

Dave

I think you need some counseling help.

Sincerely, Randy

--

Dave Fiorito <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0109141001.2fd2b8c@posting.google.com...

> Little Better Than the Terrorists
>
> FG
> 9/14/01 7:51 AM 1 out of 2
>
> Sad fact, sad fact.... Having betrayed the moderation > articulated in the Writings....
>
> FG
>
>
>
>
> -----
>
> To: Fred
> From: the white hot ball of anger in my gut.
>
>

Snip
make me sick.

From: "Curious" <Curious_105@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: something Fred posted on Beliefnet
Date: Monday, September 17, 2001 12:32 AM

NightShadow <seals_jay@hotmail.com> wrote in message
news:3ba302b8.758896975@news...

> There was someone named "Curious" <Curious_105@hotmail.com> who once
Snip

>. Most of the time I will try to respond to > messages addressed to me, but if I smell bait, I try to shy away- I > don't like hooks getting caught in my mouth. In some of your responses
> I smelled bait, so I didn't respond. In other portions, I simply > haven't had the time to.

You feel 'baited'? Apprehensive that someone/me is out to 'hook' you?
Mate, I have been 'fishing' for explanations and answers for years.
The initial 'lure' I cast within the community- "What constitutes Baha'i due process" was ignored, over and over again, for years.
So, eventually, I came here, onto the net. Changed fishing hole, changed questions, lures and baits.....same response.....nothing.

Yes, I am baiting the Baha'i community, independently fishing for the truth.
Nobody is prepared, willing or able to answer basic questions.
"Why are the fundamentals of due process denied to members of the Baha'i
community".
There is no 'hook'.....just a question that deserves an answer.

> Please don't be condescending with me. I have not been so with you.

No, you have been evasive or absent in response to the questions... and I have been patient with the Baha'i community too long. If Baha'is, as a community or as individual representatives on the net cannot, over a prolonged period, 'condescend' to explain, justify or rectify the absence of fair due process.....then yes.....my indignation inclines me to condescending and demanding language.

> I
> am an individual. Despite the "fundie" mudslinging that goes on here, > and sometimes in my general direction, you will find that I am content > to listen to rational commentary as long as it isn't personally > insulting or repugnant.

I have not called or inferred that you are a "fundie".
If am unaware of anything that might be considered 'insulting' or
'repugnant'...
.....a fart reference perhaps?;-). By all means, cite or repost any such behavior.

> I do not find evidence of a lack of due process, according to your > wishes, to be embarrassing.

In a community that proclaims Justice to be the best beloved of all things?
The absence of due process is not embarrassing?
I'm a Baha'i.....I find it profoundly embarrassing, repulsive and unnecessary.

> I DO find it unfortunate, and I am > investigating some stories on my own, but I don't do it out of > embarrassment. I am learning- which takes audacity and patience.

With respect....How long does it take to determine, as I believe you have conceded, the absence of due process? What further 'learning' is required?
Why is there such 'audacious' silence on the issue?
What stands in the way of simple action and implementation?
(Beyond the current 'culture of denial and avoidance ;-)

> >1/ You could be thinking about it? What's there to think about? Whether > >or not you as a Baha'i want justice in the community?
>
> Don't try to bait me, please.

What makes the above question 'bait' mate? It is honest, open, simple and straightforward.....no 'hooks', no secret or hidden agendas.....I want to know.....so I ask.....you infer something unpalatable or deceptive about the questions.....you take the time to talk about and around the questions.....but....in accord with all my previous experience....you do not address or answer the questions.
Why?

Snip

>Of course I want > justice in the Baha'i community- any sane Baha'i would. That is not to > say that I think justice is overwhelmingly lacking, but I concede that > is HAS lacked at times.

No Baha'i, over a ten year period, has been able to delineate the 'processes' (not 'principles') by which Justice is determined and achieved within the faith.

In those circumstances it must be concluded that any justice achieved has been the happenstance consequence of 'good luck' and 'good will/intention'. We have no statistics on outcomes, only the growing number of disillusioned, disenfranchised and ex Baha'is who object to the absence of fair due process.

Why equivocate, why not act?

>Don't presume that I haven't thought about it-

I don't, I presume-on the basis of your posts- that there is something more that needs to be known or determined or some passage of time that needs to transpire before some basic action can take place.

I reject all the rationales, excuses, explanations and justifications that I have heard thus far.

> I am also investigating on my own, to make sure that my thoughts are > valid. I go at my own pace. And forgive me if it *sounds* insulting, > but I'm not likely to take anyone else's word for anything without > backchecking their info- that includes you, so posting anecdotes of > other people's experiences is mere conjecture to me... heresay.

Then I invite you to rely upon and examine no more than the administrative procedure handbooks themselves....there you will find no reference to the basics of fair due process. That is not 'conjecture' or 'hearsay'...that is examination of determinable facts. There is nothing in the Baha'i procedures that ensures the provision of a fair hearing.

> >2/ You agree with the majority of what I posted? Hmmmmmm;-)?
>
> Agreement is not necessarily to be equated with belief. I agree that > there *might* be potential for the Baha'i AO to blunder unjustly-> which, I believe, is at the heart of your concerns...

No, that is not the "heart of my concerns". It is far from a case of *might* be "potential" for the AO to "blunder unjustly"....It is that in the absence of due process the AO *must* and unavoidably *has* blundered *repeatedly*. How could it possibly be otherwise?

You might as well tell me that a Surgeon who never follows the procedure of washing his hands or instruments before operating *might* expose *some* patients to infection. I don't care how well intentioned or prayerful he might be....no sane/modern person would.....it is dangerous neglect....pure and simple....and the cause of hearty and reasonable concern.

>not that the AO > *has* been unjust so much that it might become more so if things don't > change or at least get acknowledged. Of course, I understand your > concern that the AO *has* been unjust in the past- who wouldn't be?- > but each case is unique and should be looked at with a spiritually > discerning eye.

With all the respect and restraint I can muster.....this is bunk, piffle, crap.

I cannot express sufficiently my dismay and disgust for the propensity of Baha'is to invoke 'Spiritual Principles' in response to the absence of 'Procedural Safeguards'. It is offensive in the extreme. In the past I have gone so far as to deem such behavior as constituting no more than 'Spiritual Masturbation' and I do so again here.

Here is the "core" of my concern....played out again as it has been so many countless times before....I speak to you of broad fair due process-and you evoke the need for a case specific "spiritually discerning eye".

There in a nutshell is the core of 'Baha'i Think'...."if there is something wrong it must be a 'spiritual' problem requiring a 'spiritual' investigation and the application of an individual 'spiritual' solution.....SPIRITUAL MASTURBATION.

From day one, years ago, when I first experienced a serious unsubstantiated allegation from a fellow Baha'i...found myself surrounded by 'spiritual people' who embraced 'quietude' in the face of abuse of a fellow member....found myself denied the opportunity to respond to the allegation...found my self in a community that immediately reached for the 'spiritual solution' and invited all, aggressor and victim, to "Hold hands and visualize the purifying white light of the love of God".....and then watch the abuse take place again.....and again.

I hold the application of such 'spirituality', then and now, to be contemptible.

>To make blanket accusations, that the Baha'i AO is > categorically unjust, is an unjust statement in and of itself, IMHO.
> There is a fine line between what I agree with and what I believe.

Again.....I never made such a 'blanket accusation' and I am prompted to wonder why you might have abundant time and energy to respond to statements that I have not made and so little time for the questions I have asked?

I state, 'categorically' that there is nothing within Baha'i procedures to ensure basic fair due process. That renders the pursuit of justice to be a matter subject to chance and good intentions....any organization operating on such a basis can only be described as derelict in its duty of care.

> >3/ Somebody beat you to the punch? I must have blinked....who, has ever, > >responded to the issue and clearly delineated due process?
>
> I told you already, that I have no answer for that question as I am > unqualified. That should suffice, should it not? Who knows what > someone else's answer might be in the future? All I can tell you is > what *I* know- and I know that I can't answer that question. In > regards to due process, I am abdicating any supposition on what should > be done in favor of more educated minds. Perhaps YOU could answer it > better than I.

And I have already answered that question....and....ignored as it is, time and again....I invite any 'sane' Baha'i to turn their 'spiritual eye' to the obvious absence of procedures that would ensure fair due process AND BEGIN TO ACTIVELY ADVOCATE THEIR IMPLEMENTATION!!!! Starting with...."No Baha'i shall be subject to an unsubstantiated allegation or be denied the opportunity to know the nature or origin of a charge nor denied the opportunity to a fair and open hearing".

These basics require no more than the *will* to implement... That will is obviously absent.

> >> Do not mistake silence for ingorance.
> >
> >I don't, in this context I take it to be rudeness.
>
> It is nice to know that there are people out there who can judge, from > silence, the intentions of another person's mind.

As I advised Rick....my assessments and predictions are based on observed behavior not on psychic ability. The pattern of denial, silence, obfuscation and platitude is, as far as I am concerned,.....rude.

> Perhaps your crystal > ball isn't as broken as you think. When I am rude, you'll know it-> it'll be as clear as day-glo.

Have you considered the possibility that you have already been rude and that 'you' did not know it?
Can you endeavor to grasp just how offensive the notion of "turning a spiritual eye" to a basic procedural issue is? Is it conceivable, that in the context of this issue and discussion and in the light of the prior objections, to utter and evoke the 'spiritual eye' is a denial of Baha' u' llahs call to 'Justice'?.....Potentially as 'insulting' as a response could be?

> >If I am called out or over to discuss an issue and, having engaged the > >subject, > >simply turn away without word or explanation....I would consider that > >a lapse in good manners and a failure of intellectual integrity.
> >(At least Rick tells me he is going to cut and run before he does so....then > >he will even come back to tell me he is going to do it again;-)
>
> It's refreshing to meet someone who doesn't always want the last word.

I never requested the "last word"....I would have been content with advisement of other obligations or the end of conversation.

> But, sometimes, you should be grateful for it. Furthermore, you've > given me food for thought. Let me chew on it and stop rushing me! You > don't want me to get the spiritual/mental equivalent to acid > indigestion, do you?

Yes.....I want your, and every Baha'is, gut to burn with righteous indignation and outrage. People are leaving the faith almost as fast as they come in...often as a consequence of the absence of basic justice procedures.

HURRY UP.....there is no reason to delay or time to waste.

> >>Silence CAN be thoughtful.

> >

> >In the context of this discussion...am I to take it that the Baha'i

> >community

> >has been 'thinking' about whether or not it wants the procedures that will > >facilitate justice for over two decades?!?.....For it has certainly been > >'silent'

> >on the issue;-)

>

> No. In the context of MY reply, you are to take it that *I* prefer to > remain silent when I have nothing to respond with. I am not perfect in > this, but I do not like to engage in discussions when I KNOW what I > *don't* know. I can't answer what's on the mind of the entire Baha'i > community, or the AO- I'm simply not that perceptive. I'm all for > justice, man, but I cannot mete out justice on the scale which would > suit you because I am one amongst many.

"Mete out justice on the scale which would suit me"? Again we are dealing, not with what I have said, but with what is 'projected' upon what I have said.

I would be satisfied if I could find 'one' Baha'i....in the community or on the net

...who would take a stand for or active role in the implementation of the 'basics' that precede the dispensing of justice.

"One amongst many"? Jay.....each 'one' I speak to is reflective of the 'whole body' in common preparedness to evoked the 'spiritual' in place of the practice, pragmatic and essential.

(What do Baha'is do when their car runs out of petrol? Pray for mobility none the less?;-)

> >Silence CAN be thoughtful. It CAN also be rude, evasive, a sign of > >embarrassment,

> >intellectual and moral defeat and confusion.

>

> It's all a matter of perspective- yours or mine... and I'm kinda > partial. Attribute whatever views you wish to me, but in the end only

> I know what's going on with me. Judge not, lest ye be judged.

I 'judge' the inadequacy and dysfunction of current procedures, I 'judge' the collective denial, silence, obfuscation and platitude, I 'judge' each individual response to be either reflective of the culture of denial or indicative of a desire for change, a fair go and justice. Thus far I have found no Baha'is active and satisfied within the faith who are prepared to seriously take on board the need for reform or willing to advocate same. Yet many on the fringe, inactive or ex who hold the issue to be obvious, urgent and consistently denied from within. I 'judge' that to be a matter of profound sorrow.

> >If the sudden silence is never preceded or followed by an explanation....who > >would > >know?;-)

>

> I dunno. Next time, try asking politely and you might get an answer.

> This is not to say that you haven't asked me politely... you haven't > asked me at all, before now. You merely drew your own conclusions > about me and my thoughts before being armed with information about me.

Did I? Or did I offer a range of potential explanations for and readings of the absence of response? Did I draw a conclusion about you or have you extrapolated that from the 'potential range'? Feel free to cite;-)

The last word is yours;-)

Rod.

> It is not my responsibility to tell you what's going on in my own head

> ALL the time- and it's not your right to know all the time, either.

> But if you'll ask, I'll generally answer- especially if I am able. If

> I don't respond fast enough for you, it's safe to ask me why.

>

> Jay

From: "Mr Mahdi" <mrmahdi@aol.com>

Subject: Impact of Fred's website and efforts

Date: Friday, September 21, 2001 11:19 AM

Greetings,

I would like for people here to discuss the impact Fred Glaysher has created by his efforts in informing the public of certain elements within the bahai faith he believes have twisted and perverted its teachings. From my perspective, I have seen that Fred' website and of course the creation of alt.religion.bahai and talk.religion.bahai has brought in a new age in the bahai faith. For the first time I believe in the history of the bahai faith, the bahai faith is being critically reviewed in a forum (the Internet) where there is basically no control. This created more dissenting voices and further insight into the bahai faith as well as the lives of bahais and ex-bahais.

I personally believe that what Fred has done will have long term ramifications and will even cause a revolution of change or at least widespread awareness of many issues in the bahai faith that will be subject to criticism and attempts to rectify it.

I would like to thank Fred for providing and advocating forums where knowledge about certain opinions and interpretation of the bahai faith are available and where people who are critical, whether they be bahai or not, can voice their sentiments without free of being censored.

Mahdi Muhammad

<https://members.xoom.com/mrmahdi/caliphate.html>From: "Dermod Ryder" <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com>

Subject: Re: Impact of Fred's website and efforts

Date: Friday, September 21, 2001 4:57 PM

Dave,

Before coming to the Internet I thought that I was the only one in the world who saw the potential for and actual corruption within the AO. The first site I found on the Internet was Fred's. you cannot imagine the reaction when I found I was not alone. I think that anybody with an enquiring mind is bound to have second thoughts about the platitudes of the AO after he has seen Fred's site and explored the many links - especially that of a certain Professor of History.

We all know that you think the AO is just wonderful. Fortunately not everybody is like you!

Dermod.

"Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0109211315.ab77b7f@posting.google.com...

> The internet is rapidly acquiring the reputation for being a very > unreliable source of information. Quantity can not substitute for > quality. You can find every shade of opinion on the net. That does > not make them all valid.
>
> I have sent several seekers to Fred's site. They read it and walked > away with a bad taste in their mouth. Not about the Baha'i Faith but > about Fred. They have seen the Baha'i Community close up and none of > the posts on Fred's site related to their experience with the Baha'is.
>
> Fred is a single voice. He is a confrontational voice. His methods > have driven many people away from him. So I hope he keeps talking > because it will only make the experiences people have with the Baha'is > seem that much better.
>
> Fred's impact in my view has been positive because he is the negative > to the Baha'i positive.
>
> Cheers,
>
> Dave

From: "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net>

Subject: Re: Due Process and Consultation - resources

Date: Friday, October 05, 2001 12:29 AM

In fact what really saps the strength of the Faith is not

>The continued assertions by some few > people of the errant direction taken by the Baha'i Faith in these newsgroups

but rather the fact that these views are not engaged by the wider community and discussed in the manner of consultation. The rulers of the Faith have chosen to try and cut off certain groups and points of view rather than discuss them.

Without that it might be possible to see some of the persistent "ownership of points of view" cease!

Cheers, Randy

--

Robert Little <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message news:CS6v7.11600$SO.2080787@typhoon.we.rr.com...

> A couple of days ago I quoted some passages from Stars of the West > concerning this very issue. The writings clearly demonstrate that even if > you're right, if you dispute and persist in retaining ownerhsip of your own, > personal point of view, you're wrong. The continued assertions by some few > people of the errant direction taken by the Baha'i Faith in these newsgroups

> is an onslaught on the very unity that this Faith is designed to generate.
>

> It might be instructive to look at a logic string, if that is the correct > term, starting with Baha'u'llah, to 'Abdul-Baha', to Shoghi Effendi. The > goal of unity overrides all other principles, no matter how compelling
they > might initially appear.

>

> Baha'is must deepen on the process of consultation, for it is the only > process by which that unity can be attained. Violation of its principles, no > matter how nobly that violation is couched, nor how elegantly that deviation > defended, leads us (back) into division.

>

> Robert A. Little

>

> "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net> wrote in message

> news:sm0v7.254$E51.58521@dfiatx1-snr1.gtei.net...

> > Who decides what is what? Cultural differences anyone?

> >

> > Randy

> >

> > --

> >

> > Robert Little <rlittle1@socal.rr.com> wrote in message > > news:cSUu7.8777$SO.1627964@typhoon.we.rr.com...
> > > Arguing is itself a significant problem, and not part of consultation.
> > >
> > >
> >
> >
>
>

From: "Ron House" <house@usq.edu.au>
Subject: That's right: Opinions are not banned!
Date: Thursday, October 25, 2001 11:28 PM

Dave Fiorito wrote:

>
> Karen,
>
> > > That is not what I am saying. I am saying that there is a line > > > between voicing an opinion and calling for others to accept that > > > opinion as the truth. It is a line that should not be crossed.>>
> >
> > And exactly how is a person supposed to know where that line is? That's why
> > I find the situation so unjust. I don't approve of them pouncing on people > > because of their opinions, but if they are going to do that, they at least > > ought to be clear about what opinions are banned.
>
> Opinions are not banned. Methods of expressing an opinion that cause > disunity or the undermining of the AO is the problem.

I am sorry Dave, but it is not necessary, as others seem to be doing, to defend whether they are on one side or the other of some imaginary line. It is you and the unreflective persons in the administrative order, who "just don't get it": If you don't like what someone says, that is just too bad! Go and say some prayers until you learn the skills necessary to deal with living in the human race. "From the clash of differing opinions" comes the spark of truth. From the stimulation of hearing others of differing views trying to convince us - Yes! Trying to convince us they are right! - it is from that challenge that we ourselves hone our own thinking, discover our own oversights, and come to a better understanding of reality.

Now, your big, big problem in the various questions discussed commonly here is, to put it bluntly, that the UHJ is wrong and its critics (excepting one particular person) are mostly right - to the nearest one-sentence approximation. Therefore any reasonable attempt to provide evidence in support of any of the usual criticisms will naturally sound like an overwhelming argument and, if one has a religious mind-block that prevents one accepting the clear consequences of the evidence, then it will of course sound like 'disunity' and 'undermining'. The truth is the truth, though, so the more you push this barrow the sooner the wheels will fall off.

In case you are wondering what I mean by 'the critics are right', here is a short list of some points that come to mind as I write this over a quick tea break. I regard the following as proven beyond reasonable doubt:

1. The NZ NSA lied about Alison Marshall being 'counselled', and the UHJ has, culpably and dishonestly, never corrected the lie.
2. There are widespread problems in the Baha'i administration in the USA, and a great many heavy-handed outrages contrary to the fundamental principles of unity have occurred, such as the denunciation of the Dialogue magazine and the inquisition of Juan Cole. The UHJ is curiously inactive in ever bringing any of this activity to heel.
3. By heavy-handed authoritarian tactics, the UHJ has brought continuing criticism upon itself that is surely much worse than the original problems; I am thinking of the various carpetings and, worse, the expulsions from the Faith for such trivial reasons as Michael thinking (like most Baha'is, incidentally, but saying so just a bit more vociferously) that women should serve on the UHJ.
4. The scope of freedom of thought, belief, and expression within the Baha'i Faith has been narrowed tragically from the wide, generous horizons envisioned by Baha'u'llah, until the modern typical believer is scared of his own shadow, always careful to 'vet' every comment in case it offends some dictum from on high. The very notion that others' comments have to conform to some standard that the AO is authorised to lay down as to 'tone' and 'methods of expression' is contrary to Baha'u'llah's clear teachings regarding freedom of speech. Yes, Baha'u'llah gives us a lot of guidance as to how to speak wisely, but that guidance does not constitute a right for _someone else_ to vet the contents or style of any person's speech.

So, Dave, a good person like you will sooner or later run into this conundrum. On the one hand you see and are inspired by the wonderful truths in Baha'u'llah's revelation, but on the other, you have no good arguments to offer to defend the current-day administrators who run the religion. Therefore you fall back on inspecting people's 'tone of voice', or their 'method of expression', or some such irrelevancy. That sidetrack will only take you so far, and one day you will have to face the actual problem. When you do, you will have a choice of being true to reality, or taking the path of least resistance by rationalising the wrongs that have been publicised here. If you take the latter path, you will destroy your own integrity. You might not know you have done so, but everything you think or do from then on will be compromised by the built-in paradox in your own soul. If, however, you take the former path, then expect life to be hard: for a start, the current problems will be a severe challenge to your faith in Baha'u'llah and, perhaps, even in God. But you will be a whole person, your mind will be sound, and you will have grace in God, which, eventually, will result in the real answer to every question, the true answer that wipes away every tear, being given unto you.

--

Ron House    house@usq.edu.au

https://www.sci.usq.edu.au/staff/houseFrom: "Dermod Ryder"

<grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk>

Subject: Morals of a Mole

Date: Monday, January 15, 2001 4:07 AM

Dear Lady,

Nima wrote about she who is variously known and described, few of which comments are complimentary: -

>Btw, Susan,

>speaking of hypocrisy. You really think I >believed that your mole on >Zuhur19 was actually Cal Rollins?? Good >attempt at obfuscation, babe

Should not the world know, or at least the honourable members of these august fora, that she who is amongst the most vociferous in condemning the forwarding of private correspondence, does not fail to stoop to the same underhand stratagem when it serves her own purpose. Last week we had the spectacle of her publishing a private letter which had been sent to her by Cal Rollins. What we did not have was the explanation that this had been sent to her by mistake and that Cal had written to her, on realising that a mistake had been made, asking her to disregard the letter sent. The dear lady being of a dishonourable nature and finding the gossip contained in the same letter, "too too delicious" and irresistible therefore ignored this message and went ahead and published, thinking thereby that she had exposed the secret of Al Marbig, the evil genius behind Brave New World and, incidentally, put one over on Mr Mahdi, never mind enhancing her own reputation and electoral prospects in the dreadful AO of the cult to which she has the misfortune to belong.

The dear lady also omitted to inform the honourable members that the said letter had been a part of an operation to expose her "mole" on Zuhur 19. As I made clear to her in private correspondence this had been "bait" and like all "bait" had to be attractive - in this case, there was more than a semblance of truth behind the letter. I had indeed been a part of the creation of BNW in 1994 (along with others) in Northern Ireland. Furthermore what had appeared in the original appeared, 6 years later online, unaltered in substance.

Cal had been asked to forward this letter to Zuhur - instead he forwarded it to some of the members and, inadvertently, had included the dear lady in this. The message was intended to be picked up by the dear lady's mole and utilised by her, to prove that she had a mole there and to identify that mole. Both objectives were achieved.

Whilst the dear lady might have gotten away with utilising the letter sent to her by Cal, such is her incompetence that she also quoted verbatim from a post only made to Zuhur. Her intent was of course to place the blame on Cal, whilst, of course proffering no proof of this by forwarding the message received from him enclosing the relevant post. To do so would, she thought not be necessary. Sufficient that Cal would get the blame, be expelled but her "mole" would still be safe in place and able to continue to feed the dear lady, or "M" as she prefers to be known, the delicious little titbits of gossip that are her spiritual sustenance and modus operandi.

Sadly this didn't work - make no mistake, dear lady, your "mole" is known and has two options - to heed my advice and quietly unsubscribe from Zuhur OR be named on this forum. Now, being a particularly vindictive person, with somewhat of a sense of good theatre, I am not going to come straight out and name your mole. I think it would be much more fun if we did it bit by bit, clue by clue. This, of course, gives you the chance, if the clues are wrong and indicate an innocent person, to opt for the sake of justice to publish the post from Cal in which he leaked the information from Zuhur to you. I don't expect you to do that of course - right or wrong, you will remain silent. If I get it right, the "mole" is expendable - you'll look for another one. If I get it wrong - the innocent person is expendable to protect your "mole." Do, of course, remember dear lady that you gave me the information in the first place - like the fact that the "mole" is a "frilly," of the female gender as, naturellement, you are yourself!

As ever,

Dermod.

From: <almarbig@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Morals of a Mole
Date: Thursday, January 18, 2001 8:17 PM

The only reason that my name cropped up was because you effectively said it Nima. You did everything but say my name, right from the moment you said (on public newsgroups) I wasn't Iranian and then dropped every hint under the sun so that I would be revealed. I finally owned up to put at end to the blasted speculation. Two people were entrusted with a confidence and you both dropped me in it, the minute it suited you. I'm sorry that the Baha'is started persecuting "innocent" people so that the "guilty" person would stand up - that's pretty poor, not to mention totally unbecoming a group that is supposed to be divinely guided - but if you hadn't have known who I was, then you wouldn't have had the ability to reveal it so that you could come up trumps over Mahdi and the rest. Knowledge is power, and you had the knowledge Nima.

I do not believe that BNW is the reason why the Australian Baha'is are after you, (not that I agree with the Australian NSA for what it wrote in the Bulletin), but if it had ever come to court I would *in those conditions* testify that you didn't have anything to do with BNW - not have it bandied about on some newsgroup for your own power trip.

BNW was a satirical magazine. I thought it wasn't a half bad effort for a few amateurs. I'm a big fan of Monty Python (BNW didn't come anywhere close, of course) and "Life of Brian" is my favourite Python movie. When I re-read over BNW, I realize that apart from the brouhaha raised over it, it's pretty innocent, and it raised some important issues in a light-hearted way, that hopefully will have made some people think. For the record, my favourite is the 'dropping of the International Library from the Lesser Peace Arc prophecies' piece because the pesky Haifan residents won't give up their homes.

At the end of the day, one of the list members had it right when they pointed out that satirical material like this is cathartic for ex-members. It was for me. I think I've finally gotten it into my head that when I have anything to do with 'Baha'i', it only results in me getting spiritually bogged down. I shouldn't have done BNW, not because it's uncomfortable for the Baha'i organization, but because I'm not a part of the Baha'i world.

Don't get me wrong, I still think some individual Baha'is that I have come across have been wonderful people. More power to them. (There are, even, a few floating around on the internet, a rare species indeed.) However, like the Jehovah's Witnesses, the official Baha'i organization will fall on its own merits because it shows all the classic symptoms of a movement that has become a religious Amway clone. M. Scott Peck was right when he said that God doesn't reside inside organizations. The Official Baha'i Faith™ fails all the tests of what marks a spiritually nourishing community: it is closed and exclusive; it sees enemies in an us/them world; it is not a group of all leaders; it is firmly entrenched in hierarchy; it is not a safe place for disarmament; it doesn't tolerate natural clashes of opinion; it doesn't assess the state of its own health in admitting to weaknesses; it doesn't have joy.

On another side of things, the Talisman and Zuhur lists produce the same actions but do it in reverse. They see the "us/them" world from the other side of the Baha'i coin.

It appears that the Baha'i religion would seem to produce individuals who aren't committed to basic ethics and morals – myself I sadly conclude as well. I got a bit *too* much fun out of producing BNW and I am sorry if I have contributed to harming anyone's spiritual growth. I freely admit, my time would have better been spent in prayer and consolidating my Muslim faith. I have not been a good apologist for Islam.

I took BNW off, finally, because I came to the conclusion that God was hitting me over the head with the message that it wasn't good for me to be involved in anything Baha'i: be it the "official" version of it, or the "liberaldissident" lists. My being outed was the straw that broke the proverbial.

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Jenifer Tidwell"](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

<jtidwell@animato.arlington.ma.us>

Subject: Re: Jenifer Tidwell - Letter to the LSA.

Date: Saturday, January 27, 2001 1:18 AM

My goodness. I posted this letter a year and a half ago, and I'm shocked -- shocked! -- that it took Fred this long to find it. :-)
(Fred, I'm sorry I didn't tell you about it earlier. I remember you encouraged me to post it publicly back when I wrote it, but I wasn't ready to do so then. It took me a lot of time to get to that point, and when I did post it, I did so quietly.)

In the past couple of days, your public discussions and private letters have touched me deeply. Thank you, everyone, for your support, love, and willingness to discuss these issues. Karen, it sounds like you and I really are on the same wavelength; I agree with much of what you say. Susan, your wisdom is welcomed (though I haven't gotten back to you yet). And thank you, both Susan and Abelard, for not writing me off. :-)

In private email, someone asked me for a followup: What happened as a result of that letter, and what has it been like since I left?

First, the individuals in my local community handled the situation very well. I have seen them occasionally in the time since I left, such as at a town interfaith celebration, and we remain on very good terms, just like old friends ought to be! One of them has since had trouble with the Faith and spoke to me about it -- I'm afraid I wasn't of much help to him, but apparently he's been dealing with some of the same issues, and maybe my letter helped him work them out.

I have not encountered any hostility. None. That speaks so well of the Baha'is, doesn't it?

On the other hand, no institution has responded to any of my specific points. In fact, National never send me any acknowledgement of the letter at all (though the local LSA did) -- I just stopped receiving mail from them, and that was that. Odd, but typical, I thought: wonderful individuals and community, yet unresponsive institutions.

So... where am I now?

My husband and I both attend the church I spoke of in the 1999 letter, and we've been active members since we started. It's a very liberal place, with a female priest (who is a lesbian, by the way), lots of strong women and young families and diverse ethnicities in the congregation, plenty of opportunities for participation and service, openness about the community's strengths and weaknesses, and plenty of art and music (both of which I help create).

I am still learning so much about the Christian revelation that it sometimes makes my head spin. One of our parishioners is a Harvard professor who studies the Gospel of Mary. (Did you know that existed? Along with the Gospel of Thomas, and other non-canonical books. Fascinating stuff.) And our priest finds interpretations of old, familiar stories that stand the traditional meanings on their heads. It's confusing, and it's wonderful.

Among this church's many blessings is the fact that my husband and I are both in the same faith community! I had missed that terribly when I was a Baha'i and he wasn't. Our marriage was already good, but I think this has made it even better. Likewise, I have become closer to my Episcopal parents, simply because we have more in common to talk about now.

Another blessing is the new freedoms I have. For instance, I no longer feel any hesitation about taking sides on political issues. In fact, I feel now that if we *don't* take part in the political process -- both individually and corporately -- we're not living up to our responsibility to do God's work in this world. (I'm talking more about social justice, peace, and environmental issues than the nastier right-wing stuff, don't worry. But, ironically, I understand the religious right better now.)

Oh -- and good wine tastes fabulous. In moderation, of course. :-)

Talking to friends and family about religious issues is easier for me, now that I'm not under pressure to teach. It comes much more naturally. Funny how that works.

The rituals that we go through every week at church still work for me. They are rock-solid, ever-changing, comforting, disquieting, and everything else I said in my original letter.

I believe (as I think I always have) that gay and lesbian couples are wonderful, strong families that should be given all the love and support they deserve. There are several at our church, including couples with adopted children. It would be utterly inhumane to tell these couples and families that their existence is morally wrong. Or to prevent them from forming in the first place.

I have been better able to reconcile my love of the outdoors with Christian theology than with Baha'i theology. I won't go into the details of that here, but I find God's Word written into the woods, rock, snow, and mountains as much as it is written into Revelation. That's a personal thing; I don't doubt there are Baha'is who feel the same way.

I don't read the Writings that often anymore, though occasionally, in meditative moments, the daily obligatory prayer comes unbidden. (Christian prayers do, too, sometimes.) Now that I think about it, I do miss the Writings. But I can't read them in quite the same way now that I used to. Nevertheless, I am willing to believe I was wrong about them having "pat answers for everything," and I'm reading this netnews discussion with eagerness...

Finally, let me share a story with you. Last summer, having been out of the Faith for a long time, my husband and I were driving up the Maine coast near Kittery on a sunny afternoon. I suggested we take a certain back road instead of the main highway, just because it looked interesting. As we drove down the road, it began to look familiar.

Part of me gradually became aware of why. I was not surprised when we saw the sign for Greenacre finally appear before us.

"Let's go in," I suggested. I expected that there would be some weekend program going on, but I wanted to see the buildings again, having not been there in many years. As soon as we parked the car, we saw people we knew! And in the inn, more old friends! We hung out talking with them for a while, then wandered around the grounds, soaking up the Maine sunlight. I swear I have never seen Greenacre that beautiful. It was one of those mysterious, perfect events that could never have been planned.

I'm not sure what God was trying to tell me that day. It might have been, "Come back to the Faith," but it might also have been, "It's OK to be where you are. This Faith will always be here if you need it, even if you remain outside it for a while."

Someday I'll know.

God bless all of you who seek to understand.

- Jenifer Tidwell

P.S. Please, continue the discussion; this is fascinating!

From: "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net>

Subject: Re: question about conflicts among Bahais

Date: Sunday, January 28, 2001 5:20 PM

Paul

You've hit the nail on the head with your comment below. The official "one and only" Baha'i Faith only accepts people who are willing to enroll with them and then be willing to forever turn off their brains from thinking or criticizing anything or anyone in the Organization for the rest of their lives.

Some on this NG repeat over and over that only those who maintain absolute obedience to the Organization are really to be considered Baha'is. Any one who publicly criticizes a decision or an act of this Organization faces delisting or shunning. There are no other choices as far as the Organization goes.

Cheers, Randy

**--

Paul Hammond <pahammond@onetel.net.uk> wrote in message news:3a746fd2@news-uk.onetel.net.uk...

> Anyway, I think the problem with Roger's view, above, is that > it is tantamount to defining the problem out of existence. In this > case, the definition of a Baha'i would be of a person who is > registered with the Baha'i organisations - which certainly makes > sense legally, and has scriptural basis (Baha'u'llah explicitly disallowed > the formation of rival sects in this age of increasing unity).

> But, someone who stays in the organisation, is > virtually by definition not going to be someone who argues against > the present direction of the organisation. This seems a little > unfair to the people who have dropped/been pushed out.
>
> Hmm. Maybe I haven't expressed that quite clearly. Certainly, > it is possible to remain a member of an organisation, and attempt > to change its direction from within. Abdu'l Baha, Baha'u'llah's son > and appointed successor, is often quoted as saying that the > spark of truth only emerges from the clash of differing opinions, > so criticism within the Faith should be possible.
>
> All I am saying is that some people who still consider themselves > to be Baha'is have found themselves unable to remain members > of the Faith (or in a small number of cases have been expelled > against their will).
>
> Best Wishes,
>
> Paul
>
>

From: "Ian McCarthy" <ianmcca@tiscalinet.it>

Subject: Re: That may be the road of becoming a Real Baha'i.

Date: Thursday, February 01, 2001 1:10 PM

"Susan Maneck " wrote

There was no sentence. Otherwise, she would have either lost her administrative rights or have been declared a Covenant breaker. It was instead decided that she did not sufficiently meet the qualifications of membership within the Baha'i community to be held responsible for her actions, in that sense.

An iron boot in a velvet slipper! She was kicked out after many years in the community and despite a deep faith in its founder! Dehumanised, defined as mentally unbalanced, "not responsible for her actions"! Not obedient enough to be a Baha'i because obedience is all, and free thought is by definition dangerous nonsense.

But this is wrong, Susan, it must be wrong. What kind of a community are you trying to create if there's no room in it for different points of view?

Can't you see it's no way to unite the world? There are few enough people becoming Bahai's as it is, without kicking the best of them out for speaking their minds. The only reason I haven't given up altogether on the Baha'i Faith and gone off in a huff is because of the existence of a few sensitive and spiritually awakened souls who have made me see the finer side of the Faith when I was washed up on the shore of Zuhur Island after a tempest out in the sea of TRB. And these are the people who have been marginalised and excluded by you and your heavy friends, these castaways, flotsam and jetsam of the New World Order. You and your friends have built the walls, you have shown them to the door, you have made them walk the plank. You have made enemies of them and thus you have created another schism in the world, if not yet officially in the Faith, which is hardly important in comparison.

But we should all be together on this roller coaster ride to the Kingdom of Heaven.

Aren't there already enough selfish people around without creating divisions among (slightly more) spiritual souls and world servers? Why don't you say you're sorry and let them back into your heart and your Faith? Indeed, why don't we all stop for a moment and give thanks for the richness of our diversity and the learning that it brings?

When are we going to stop dividing the world into Them and Us?

Janji

-----
'And as I watched him on the stage
My hands were clenched in fists of rage
No angel born in hell
Could break that satan's spell...'

From: <starjo8853@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Censorship foiled?
Date: Saturday, February 03, 2001 4:43 AM

Yes Fred I was behind you when you went for this unmoderated list because I knew how the moderators thought and what their limited guidelines were for presenting ONLY PARTY LINE THOUGHT....and I think it is vital to have true feelings, thought, and knowledge shared. You are a *hero upon hero's* to me in this respect. (You can see how awful I felt when T2 came under the same kind of moderation as SRB - I gave it a try but the same ugly pattern quickly emerged with specific culling orders put out on me because I would not let the INEQUALITY OF WOMEN issue drop as the top guns ordered). Of course trb attracted the filibustering scoundrals paid by the AO to try and destroy you and it by attacking posts and posters (as you know they still live here - but the job pays). Interesting the way the T2 girls are palsyng up with the fundies here when they had no regard for them elsewhere. Hypocrites everywhere.....not a favorite with Baha'u'llah but they don't seem to care.

Star*

In article <Z_De6.273015$hD4.66223627@news1.rdc1.mi.home.com>,
"Patrick Henry" <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com> wrote:
> Star,
>

> I understand your experience because I've witnessed > Juan, Susan, and other liberals and fundamentalists, in and > out of the faith, in and out of the academic world, silence > people for opinions they really don't want to have heard.
 > Such experiences were crucial to why I fought for years > to help create talk.religion.bahai and why I believe it > is still the only forum in existence on the bahai faith that > is not in effect censored at times in one way or another.
 >
 > Fred
 >
 > <starjo8853@my-deja.com> wrote in message > news:95eeas$ssq$1@nnrp1.deja.com...
 > > Fred it is even worse than just censorship as the end result was > > *shunning* a practice the people on the list say they don't > do....but > > when you don't have a voice you are shunned. BTW Juan is always > saying > > the Faith is founded in Islamic verities as a base and my post > simply > > supported the Iranian influence in the Faith. I suppose Milissa > wants > > to say the Faith has no Iranian influence ---hahahahahaaa that is > plain > > lying. Why should Iranian Baha'is feel slurred to know that they > > largely influence the Faith praytell? Where WAS Milissa really > coming > > from - the same place as her sister susan (of course milissa isn't > > enrolled anymore so they may not be sisters).
 > >
 > > Thank you for understanding what I ran into in a place that I > thought > > was free of that kind of behaviour towards its members. This is not
 > to > > say that I did not benefit from the list - because I did. It was > > educational and inconclasting of myths at times...till the killer > > spirit of moderation showed its ugly side.
 > >
 > >
 > > In article <37he6.270658$hD4.65500175@news1.rdc1.mi.home.com>,
 > > "Patrick Henry" <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com> wrote:
 > > > Star is quite right here about the bias on talisman and > > > other mailing lists devoted to the bahai faith, liberal > > > or otherwise. Why anyone bothers to subscribe to > > > any of them is beyond me. All of the "moderators" have > > > their own little pet causes and protect them zealously....
 > > >
 > > > What Star states about Iranian bahais is no more than > > > the truth which is banned in politically correct fundamentalist > > > and liberal bahai newsgroups. Invariably "moderation" becomes > > > a cover for censorship. The "liberals" are almost as guilty as > > > the fundamentalists when it comes to suppressing views they > > > don't want to hear....
 > > >
 > > > --

> > > FG
> > > www.FG.com
> > > The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
> > > <https://members.nbc.com/FG/index.htm>
> > >
> > > "Milissa Boyer Kafes" <milissa8320@my-deja.com> wrote in message > > > news:95bucb$u$1@nnrp1.deja.com...
> > > > Thanks for posting the correspondence. I think it shows I acted in > > > > good faith.
> > > >
> > > > mbk
> > > >
> > > > In article <95bn8j$gg1$1@nnrp1.deja.com>, > > > > starjo8853@my-deja.com wrote:
> > > > > Hi Milissa
> > > > > Seems like you still have the same problem not being able to read
> > > the > > > > message....and still trying to pin racism on me to all these good > > > > > folks. Yes I called you three women (Juan's girls) here on trb in > > my > > > > original message so I knew who you all were and what your > > prejudices > > > > are toward me and why (speaking my mind). Here is your great > > powerful > > > > reject letter and what Juan did about it and why it was no longer
> > any > > > > good to try and get ANY message past you hypocritical moderators > > > > > throwing your power around....believe you passed much worse
than
> > > > > this...when you wanted.
> > > > >
> > > > > Dear Star:
> > > > >
> > > > > It doesn't matter what I think.
> > > > >
> > > > > The proper procedure is to jointly email Alison, Milissa and > > Rachel
> > > > with > > > > > your appeal and ask them to formally vote on the matter.
> > > > >
> > > > > In general, I think our moderators are doing their best and their > > > > > instincts > > > > > on these matters should be respected. I think there are ways
for > > > > > Anglo
> > > > > Australian Baha'is who feel swamped by the immigrant Iranians
to > > talk

> > > > > about > > > > > the problems without appearing to be racists. Milissa doesn't > > think
 > > > > you > > > > > have succeeded, and she is the one on deck. If you really want to > > > > > formally > > > > > appeal this, you know how to proceed. The active moderators' > > decision
 > > > > > will > > > > > be final.
 > > > > >
 > > > > > cheers Juan
 > > > > >
 > > > > > At 01:52 PM 1/28/00 +0800, Star* Saffa wrote:
 > > > > > >MY CONTRIBUTIONS WAS NOT A FLAME BUT AN OBSERVATION -
 you said we > > > > > would be > > > > > >able to post our ideas.
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > >Dear Juan
 > > > > > >Do you agree with the rejection of my post observing the > > sociology of
 > > > > > the > > > > > >behaviour of Persian's educated outside of Iran? Come and live
 > > with > > > > > second > > > > > >and third generation Persian Baha'is living in Australia. I > > know the > > > > > post > > > > > >doesn't support what you wrote.....I don't think it is a flame
 > > and > > > > > should > > > > > >not be allowed to be said in relation to the discussion.
 Star*
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > >-----Original Message-----
 > > > > > >From: Milissa Boyer Kafes <mbkafes@bestweb.net>
 > > > > > >To: starjo@arach.net.au <starjo@arach.net.au>
 > > > > > >Date: Thursday, 27 January 2000 10:35
 > > > > > >Subject: Talisman9 post
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > >
 > > > > > >>
 > > > > > >>Hi Star--
 > > > > > >>
 > > > > > >>This message is to let you know that your latest submission
 to > > > > > Talisman9,
 > > > > > >"UHJ > > > > > >>members" cannot be forwarded to the list. It will be perceived

 > > as > > > > > anti-Persian > > > > > racism by the list and, as such, would be considered a flame by > > > many,
 > > > > many > > > > people.
 > > > > >
 > > > > >
 > > > > > > This is not to judge the validity of your comments one way or
 > > the > > > > other
 > > > > > but,
 > > > > > as moderator, I feel I cannot approve a post that would only > > hurt > > > > feelings.
 > > > > > Thanks for your understanding.
 > > > > >
 > > > > > Peace
 > > > > > Milissa
 > > > > >
 > > > > > "You can take the boy out of the country but you CAN'T take
 the > > > > > country out > > > > > of the boy" Just put "Iranian" in front of boy.....Take a close > > > > study
 > > > > > of > > > > > the Persian's educated all over the world....and you will find a > > very > > > > close > > > > > link to the mother culture in the earliest memories, alliances
 > > and > > > > > hierarchies. Not many marry out of their culture and set up > > their > > > > > households > > > > > differently than the mother country.....For all purposes we > > have a > > > > > majority > > > > > of Iran-think on the UHJ.....Star*
 > > > > >
 > > > > > Let the good times roll-----Star*
 > > > > >
 > > > > > In article <959ba5$f49$1@nnrp1.deja.com>,
 > > > > > Milissa Boyer Kafes <milissa8320@my-deja.com> wrote:
 > > > > > Hi Star--
 > > > > >
 > > > > > In article <94bs7h$b22$1@nnrp1.deja.com>, > > > > > starjo8853@my-deja.com wrote:
 > > > > > > Well Nima (fyi) while I have experienced this myself on SRB

> > (which > > > > > one > > > > > > could expect) I also experienced it on Talisman2.
> > > > >
> > > > > I cannot speak for the other moderators, only for myself, of > > course, > > > > > but I remember rejecting a post of yours that I felt was racist
> > (it > > > > > was > > > > > > bashing Iranians)
> > > > >
> > > > > > I felt SO SHUNNED as I was very fond of the > > > > > > people at T2 and in sympathy with many of the arguments > > presented.
> > > > >
> > > > > > Didn't you resubscribe to T2 under a different name?
> > > > >
> > > > > > So
> > > > > > the people that are complaining about the unjust behaviour in
> > the
> > > > > Faith
> > > > > > carry out the same injustices when it suits them to advance
> > their > > > > > own
> > > > > > claims and wish to silence outspoken women.
> > > > >
> > > > > > Sorry, sister, this won't work. The moderators at the time > > were all > > > > > women.
> > > > >
> > > > > Peace,
> > > > > Milissa
> > > > >
> > > > > Sent via Deja.com
> > > > > <https://www.deja.com/>
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > --
> > > > > "Look within and you will find Me standing there Mighty, > > Powerful, and > > > > > Selfsubsisting" .....Baha'u'llah, Arabic HW #13
> > > > >
> > > > > Sent via Deja.com
> > > > > <https://www.deja.com/>
> > > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > Sent via Deja.com
> > > > <https://www.deja.com/>
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >

> > --
> > "Look within and you will find Me standing there Mighty, Powerful,
and > > Selfsubsisting".....Baha'u'llah, Arabic HW #13
> >
> >
> > Sent via Deja.com
> > <https://www.deja.com/>
>
>

--
"Look within and you will find Me standing there Mighty, Powerful, and Selfsubsisting".....Baha'u'llah, Arabic HW #13

Sent via Deja.com
[https://www.deja.com/From: "Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk>
Subject: Al Marbig & BNW
Date: Thursday, January 04, 2001 2:19 PM](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

Dear Dr Manek, Mr Mahdi, Moojan Momen (in absentia),

For personal reasons I had left Zuhur and Talisman in early December, a fact which can be confirmed by Nima et al. and expected to be off for a very considerable period of time. However I was advised that my name had come up in speculative posts on TRB/ARB linking me to Al Marbig and BNW.

Indeed yesterday I received, along with some others, mail from Mr Momen stating that he thought that an "ex-Bahai from Northern Ireland" was involved in BNW. In as much as I was the only "ex-Bahai from Northern Ireland" to whom the mail was addressed I am driven to the conclusion that I am indeed that "ex-Bahai from Northern Ireland" to whom he refers. The speculation is indeed fascinating and extremely flattering! It is indeed an honour to be hailed as the evil genius who has diverted you all, from your most important work for the AO, to the hunt for Al Marbig and/or the perps of BNW. I thank you, most sincerely and humbly, for the compliment implied.

Mr Momen doubtless has contacts amongst the local yokels who can testify as to my charecter. To them, I am indeed evil incarnate, a combination of the Gorgon and Medusa, complete with trident, horns, fangs, claws and cloven hooves. Some seem to believe that, indeed, I am he, of whom it was prophesied, "And I looked and beheld a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death and Hell followed with him" - Revelation - Chapter 7 Verse 8. (More perceptive BIGS can see the clear allusion of this prophecy to me you know, the whole "Ryder/Grim Reaper" thing). Those who know me know that I do not bend the knee before the AO. Were I the evil genius behind BNW it would still be on the Web but you can all go along and look at <https://www.bahai.us.com> and https://www.geocities.com/bob\_along\_henderson/ and see for yourselves that BNW has disappeared without trace. Kind of wrecks your theory - does it not?

I think that BNW was plotted by an ambitious AOnik - after all the kudos of apparently locating Al Marbig and/or removing his appalling organ from the Net must augur well for promotional hopes within the pit of the AO. Put up a scurrilous mag which really gets up the noses at Haifa etc. (using anonymisers for safety) - scour the Net looking for yourself, announce you've discovered the dreadful liberal culprit who is "ex-Bahai from Northern Ireland" and that you have prevailed upon him to take the mag off the Net. Oh Joy! Oh Rapture! A standing ovation (and votes) at National Convention for the hero of the hour who smote the dreaded ones. Triple Brandies (or equivalent - sorry! but I don't know how BIGs celebrate or, indeed, if they do celebrate) all round! I could be wrong of course! It's only a theory but it's a damned good one, although I say so myself. Only mistake was to take BNW down - you can't pin it on me then as I am a well known mad dog who wouldn't urinate on an AOnik if he was on fire!

Now people - don't bore me anymore. I have pressing reasons to be away from this accursed spot and the assorted AOniks and fundie dross. Unlike most of you I have experience, up close and personal, of the type of religion that divides - you know the kind that Abdul Baha abhorred, driven by fundie control freaks and purveyors of hatred. Your BF can't even unite its own - how the blue bloody blazes are you going to unite the world? As for you Mr Mahdi - people like you make people like me hate people like you, which, in all probability, is what you have set out to achieve in the first place - so, take a well deserved bow!

Go bpléasca an diabhal do dhiosca crua

As ever,

Dermot.

July 13, 2001

Re: Second Judicial District County of Bernalillo, State of New Mexico, Deborah Buchhorn, for Herself and for Minority Members of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of Albuquerque, New Mexico, Plaintiffs, Vs. No. Cv 2001-01978 Trustees of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of Albuquerque, New Mexico, and The Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of Albuquerque, New Mexico, a Non-profit Corporation, and the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of the United States, an Illinois Corporation, Defendants.

I

I request the Court to consider my testimony as amicus curiae on July 18, 2001, in the Motion to Dismiss Deborah Buchhorn's lawsuit against the Bahai Local Spiritual Assembly of Albuquerque and the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States.

I converted to the Bahai Faith in 1976 and have never withdrawn from it nor been notified otherwise by the Bahai administration.

II

I, like many Bahais, was and am attracted to the teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha by the progressive and liberal tenor of their writings. Relevant to Deborah Buchhorn's lawsuit are the almost numberless passages that are well represented by two brief quotations:

These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world. Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

When freedom of conscience, liberty of thought and right of speech prevail--that is to say, when every man according to his own idealization may give expression to his beliefs--development and growth are inevitable. Abdul-Baha, The Promulgation of Universal Peace, 197.

Like many Bahais, the young person I was more than twenty-five years ago trusted these words indicated how the Bahai Faith itself would conduct its own affairs. Unfortunately, Deborah Buchhorn's experience, suggested through the details of her lawsuit, demonstrate the lived reality of everyday Bahai community life for all too many of its members.

III

The many other victims of fundamentalists among my fellow Bahais include Indiana University

Professors Linda and John Walbridge, editor of Dialogue magazine Stephen Scholl, its other editors, the Bahai Encyclopedia editors who resigned in protest over the distortion of many historical facts, David Langness, Professor Juan Cole of the Department of History of the University of Michigan, Canadian writer Michael McKenny, Nima Hazini, former Assistant to the Auxiliary Board Paul Dodenhoff, New Zealander Alison Marshall for writing a critique of Bahai publishing and censorship, and Australian Olympic champion Cathy Freeman.

I urge the Court seeking to understand the Bahai Faith to consider the experience and views of the Bahais and ex-Bahais mentioned above. Many of their testimonies may be found on my website, The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience, which I created in May of 1998 as a means of documenting the pervasive abuse of the liberty and freedom of conscience extolled by the Founders of the Bahai Faith. The over 30 megabytes of information that I have collected can leave little doubt for a fair-minded person that there are indeed very serious reasons for concern about the wide discrepancy that exists between the written and publicly proclaimed aims and goals of the Bahai Faith and the actual experience of many such Bahais, like Deborah Buchhorn, with persistent fraud and character assassination.

Since Bahai fundamentalists have always relied on their ability to operate one way in one country and another elsewhere, and because the Internet now no longer makes it possible with impunity, they have mounted for several years a concerted campaign of fraud and libel on such sites as AOL, the Usenet newsgroups soc.religion.bahai, talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, www.beliefnet.com, many email lists, and elsewhere to discredit and malign independent and diverse voices. Again, the details of Deborah Buchhorn's allegations merely read like more of the same old story.

IV

Far from the Court dismissing Deborah Buchhorn's lawsuit, it is the ardent wish of this Bahai, and I know of many Bahais and non-Bahais, that justice receive a hearing. While her allegations may surprise the inexperienced and uninformed about the Bahai Faith, every single detail of Ms. Buchhorn's lawsuit reads like old news to me, and I'm sure many other Bahais. In my opinion nothing she alleges hasn't already happened many, many times to other Americans, and Bahais elsewhere in the world, and has been documented repeatedly. What is unusual in her case is that she and her attorney Yorgos Marinakis have the stamina, courage, and strength of character to withstand the ferocious onslaught of fraud and libel so routinely meted out by the most fanatical and intolerant elements of the Bahai administration.

I appeal to the Court to grant Deborah Buchhorn a just and full hearing.

FG

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
https://members.nbci.com/\_XMCM/FG/index.htm Subject: NM Lawsuit - Amicus Curiae
Date: 7/27/2001 12:55 PM Eastern Daylight Time
From: Glayshf
Message-id: <20010727125547.18827.00000008@mb-mv.aol.com>

FEDXed to the Second Judicial District County of Bernalillo, State of New Mexico:

July 13, 2001

Re: Second Judicial District County of Bernalillo, State of New Mexico, Deborah Buchhorn, for Herself and for Minority Members of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of Albuquerque, New Mexico, Plaintiffs, Vs. No. Cv 2001-01978 Trustees of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of Albuquerque, New Mexico, and The Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of Albuquerque, New Mexico, a Non-profit Corporation, and the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of the United States, an Illinois Corporation, Defendants.

I

I request the Court to consider my testimony as amicus curiae on July 18, 2001, in the Motion to Dismiss Deborah Buchhorn's lawsuit against the Bahai Local Spiritual Assembly of Albuquerque and the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States.

I converted to the Bahai Faith in 1976 and have never withdrawn from it nor been notified otherwise by the Bahai administration.

II

I, like many Bahais, was and am attracted to the teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha by the progressive and liberal tenor of their writings. Relevant to Deborah Buchhorn's lawsuit are the almost numberless passages that are well represented by two brief quotations:

These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world. Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

When freedom of conscience, liberty of thought and right of speech prevail--that is to say, when every man according to his own idealization may give expression to his beliefs--development and growth are inevitable. Abdul-Baha, The Promulgation of Universal Peace, 197.

Like many Bahais, the young person I was more than twenty-five years ago trusted these words indicated how the Bahai Faith itself would conduct its own affairs. Unfortunately, Deborah Buchhorn's experience, suggested through the details of her lawsuit, demonstrate the lived reality of everyday Bahai community life for all too many of its members.

III

The many other victims of fundamentalists among my fellow Bahais include Indiana University Professors Linda and John Walbridge, editor of Dialogue magazine Stephen Scholl, its other editors, the Bahai Encyclopedia editors who resigned in protest over the distortion of many historical facts, David Langness, Professor Juan Cole of the Department of History of the University of Michigan, Canadian writer Michael McKenny, Nima Hazini, former Assistant to the Auxiliary Board Paul Dodenhoff, New Zealander Alison Marshall for writing a critique of Bahai publishing and censorship, and Australian Olympic champion Cathy Freeman.

I urge the Court seeking to understand the Bahai Faith to consider the experience and views of the Bahais and ex-Bahais mentioned above. Many of their testimonies may be found on my website, The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience, which I created in May of 1998 as a means of documenting the pervasive abuse of the liberty and freedom of conscience extolled by the Founders of the Bahai Faith. The over 30 megabytes of information that I have collected can leave little doubt for a fair-minded person that there are indeed very serious reasons for concern about the wide discrepancy that exists between the written and publicly proclaimed aims and goals of the Bahai Faith and the actual experience of many such Bahais, like Deborah Buchhorn, with persistent fraud and character assassination.

Since Bahai fundamentalists have always relied on their ability to operate one way in one country and another elsewhere, and because the Internet now no longer makes it possible with impunity, they have mounted for several years a concerted campaign of fraud and libel on such sites as AOL, the Usenet newsgroups soc.religion.bahai, talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, www.beliefnet.com, many email lists, and elsewhere to discredit and malign independent and diverse voices. Again, the details of Deborah Buchhorn's allegations merely read like more of the same old story.

IV

Far from the Court dismissing Deborah Buchhorn's lawsuit, it is the ardent wish of this Bahai, and I know of many Bahais and non-Bahais, that justice receive a hearing. While her allegations may surprise the inexperienced and uninformed about the Bahai Faith, every single detail of Ms. Buchhorn's lawsuit reads like old news to me, and I'm sure many other Bahais. In my opinion nothing she alleges hasn't already happened many, many times to other Americans, and Bahais elsewhere in the world, and has been documented repeatedly. What is unusual in her case is that she and her attorney Yorgos Marinakis have the stamina, courage, and strength of character to withstand the ferocious onslaught of fraud and libel so routinely meted out by the most fanatical and intolerant elements of the Bahai administration.

I appeal to the Court to grant Deborah Buchhorn a just and full hearing.

FG

the Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Subject: Baha'i Epochs

Date: 1/29/2001 2:46 AM Eastern Standard Time

From: Smaneck

Message-id: <20010129024623.05802.00003149@ng-cg1.aol.com>

Dear friends,

Earlier someone had asked about the various Baha'i Epochs. I was able to locate the following article on this topic.

warmest, Susan

Epochs explained

(From Rodney Clarken's education list, <https://www-instruct.nmu.edu/education/rclarken/>)

Since the House announced the Fifth Epoch of the Formative Age, I have had several people ask about what it means and for background on the epochs. Below is the best description I have come across and refers to references where the House has explained earlier epochs.

Forwarded by Riaz Khadem via Shahla.

---

A number of the friends have inquired into the meaning of the Universal House of Justice' announcement of the beginning of the Fifth Epoch of the Formative Age of the Faith. While the full meaning of this announcement will be revealed with time, it is instructive to read the description of the previous epochs of the formative age as described by the House of Justice itself in *Messages from the Universal House of Justice, 1963-1986.***

"Epoch" is a term used by the Beloved Guardian to describe progressive stages in the evolution of the organic Baha'i community and signal the maturation of its institutions, allowing the Faith to operate at new levels and to initiate new functions. Here is a description of the stages in the evolution of the Faith, using these epochs as demarcations of maturation:

The Epochs of the Apostolic & The Heroic Age of the Dispensations of the Bab and Baha'u'llah:

1844-1853: The Epoch of the Bab

1853-1892: The Epoch of Baha'u'llah

1892-1921: The Epoch of Abdul-Baha

The Epochs of the Formative Age of the Dispensation of Baha'u'llah:

1921-1944/6: The First Epoch

Birth and the primary stages in the erection of the framework of the Administrative Order of the Faith, with the formation of local and national institutions in all five continents. Began with naming of Shoghi Effendi as the Guardian of the Cause, his careful instruction of the community in the principles of Baha'i administration, and led to the inception of the First Seven Year Plan (1937-1944) of the North American Baha'i community, the first systematic teaching campaign in the history of the Faith, which inaugurated the execution of the Tablets of the Divine Plan.

1946-1963: The Second Epoch

Under the guidance of Shoghi Effendi, involved the formulation of a succession of national teaching plans designed to facilitate the development of the Faith beyond the confines of the Western Hemisphere and the continent of Europe. Marked by the inception of the second Seven Year Plan in America (1946-1953) and the worldwide Ten Year Crusade (1953-1963), involving twelve national plans, and achieved the appointment of the Hands of the Cause, the appointment of Auxiliary Boards, and the establishment of the International Baha'i Council, concluding in the election of the Universal House of Justice.

1963-1986: The Third Epoch

Led by the Universal House of Justice, witnessed the emergence of the Faith from obscurity, the initiation of activities designed to foster social and economic development, the creation of the institution of the Continental Boards of Counsellors and the International Teaching Centre, the appointment of assistants to Auxiliary Board Members, and the construction and occupation by the Universal House of Justice of its Seat on Mt. Carmel. Launched three worldwide plans: the Nine Year Plan (1964-1973) the Five Year Plan (1974-1979) and the Seven Year Plan (1979-1986).

1986-2001: The Fourth Epoch

Witnessed the formulation of the specific goals for each national community through consultation of the National Spiritual Assemblies and the Continental Boards of Counsellors. Began with the Six Year Plan (1986-1992), and continued through the Holy Year (1992-1993) to the Three Year Plan (1993-1996), the Four Year Plan (1996-2000) and the Twelve Month Plan (2000-2001).

2001- : The Fifth Epoch

Via internalizing and integrating the lessons and experiences of systematization witnessed an unparalleled unity of thought in the institution of the Counsellors. Saw the completion of the Arc on Mt. Carmel, a change in the Baha'i culture due to the emergence of training institutes, and the synchronization of institutional collaboration with the external processes toward world unity.

**All the Epochs are described in length in *Messages from the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986,* Pgs 710 -716 Para 451.1 - 451.14

As we reflect upon the significance of this Fifth Epoch, we may wish to contemplate what marvels will mark this period as the Baha'i community extends to its grassroots-at the level of the Local Spiritual Assemblies and the Auxiliary Board Members and their assistants in a united, systematic process of growth-the collaboration between the institutions of the rulers and learned in the training institutes which have contributed to a dramatic change in the culture of the Baha'i community around the world.

warmest, Susan

<https://www.susanmaneck.com>

AOL's allowing the fundamentalists among our fellow bahais to run the messages boards is neither FUN nor ENTERTAINING....

Please stop the basic violation, year after year, of our very basic constitutional rights, both those of fellow Bahais, such as myself, and non-Bahais on AOL....

The bahai community leader is harassing me trying to suppress all knowledge and discussion about the major lawsuit against the bahai faith recently filed in New Mexico. Please ask him to desist.

FULL TEXT:

New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD & LIBEL 3/2/2001

https://members.nbc.com/\_XMCM/FG/NMLawsuit.htm

https://members.nbc.com/\_XMCM/FG/NMLawsuitResponse.htm

This volunteer leader regularly abuses his position and uses it to silence and attack people with whom he and the more fundamentalist-minded among my fellow Bahais disagree.

Professor Juan Cole, of the University of Michigan, discusses related issues in his journal article "The

Baha'i Faith in America as Panopticon, 1963-1997":

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/1999/jssr/bhjssr.htm>

It should be noted by the non-bahai observer, especially anyone involved with AOL, that the "community leader" regularly TOSes or removes links from people whose views he opposes but allows other fundamentalists to post links to fundamentalist sites and events....

A clear example of the way AOL is manipulated and freedom of speech and conscience are regularly DAMAGED by AOL's indulgence.

--FG

www.FG.com

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

https://members.nbc.com/\_XMCM/FG/index.htm

From: "BIGS - Bahai In *Perfectly* Good Standing"

<patrick_henry@liberty.com>

Subject: bahai - Victim Rollcall

Date: Friday, April 27, 2001 7:14 AM

The latest victim is Deborah Buckhorn. Her story may be read at New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD & LIBEL 3/2/2001 https://members.nbc.com/\_XMCM/FG/NMLawsuit.htm

The many other victims of bahai fundamentalists include Indiana University Professors Linda and John Walbridge, editor Stephen Scholl, other editors of Dialogue magazine, the Bahai Encyclopedia editors who resigned in protest, David Langness, Professor Juan Cole of the History Department of the University of Michigan, writer Michael McKenny, Nima Hazini, former Assistant to the Auxiliary Board Paul Dodenhoff, Alison Marshall for writing a critique of bahai publishing and censorship, and most recently Australian Olympic champion Cathy Freeman....

David Horowitz's observations in his book Radical Son apply equally well to bahai fundamentalism: "I, too, had to face the savage personal attacks by my former comrades that were designed to warn others to remain within the fold" (2).

I urge the perceptive reader seeking to understand the bahai faith to consider the experience and views of the bahais and ex-bahais mentioned above. Many of their testimonies may be found on my bahai webpage below.

Since bahai fundamentalists have always relied on their ability to operate one way in one country and another elsewhere and the Internet now no longer makes it possible, they have mounted a concerted campaign on Usenet to discredit and malign diverse voices.

Their slandering me for "spamming" won't prevent perceptive people who even glance at the record from realizing what's really going on in their desperate attempt to prevent people in Israel, Iran, and elsewhere from knowing what is actually taking place in bahai circles around the world.

--

FG

www.FG.com

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

https://members.nbc.com/\_XMCM/FG/index.htm

From: "Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com>

Subject: An Apology to Fred

Date: Monday, September 17, 2001 12:51 PM

Fred,

After some careful thought I wish to apologize for the harsh language and tone of my recent posts. I was speaking from a place of anger and used words that showed neither tact nor wisdom.

I am sorry.

Cheers,

DaveFrom: "Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com>

Subject: Re: something Fred posted on Beliefnet

Date: Monday, September 17, 2001 10:23 AM

"BIGS - Bahai in *Perfectly* Good Standing" <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote in message news:<9nviii$9oik9$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de>...
> <https://www.angelfire.com/mi3/bahai/hate15.htm>

Fred,

You do not have my permission to reproduce that post. You are violating my copyright and you must remove it from your website or you will be hearing from my lawyer.

Dave

----- Original Message -----

From: "Dave Fiorito" <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com>

Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai

Sent: Friday, September 14, 2001 1:01 PM

Subject: something Fred posted on Beliefnet

> Little Better Than the Terrorists

**>

> FG

> 9/14/01 7:51 AM 1 out of 2

**>

> Sad fact, sad fact.... Having betrayed the moderation > articulated in the Writings....

**>

> FG

**>

**>

>
>
> -----
>
> To: Fred
> From: the white hot ball of anger in my gut.
>
>
> In the past you were just a pain. I welcomed your voice as proof that > the First Amendment works. I never did agree with you but that is the > way of this world. I never wanted you to go away. You are the > negative to the Baha'i positive.
>
> Not now. Not after that comment above. You are a fucking asshole.
> You are a egomaniacal sociopathic shit head of the highest order.
> This is not character assassination because you have no character to > assassinate. You are worthless.
>
> How dare you compare people who are at this moment gathering their > resources to help rescue their fellow world citizens from the twited > wreckage left in the wake of that horrifically evil deed. Baha'is in > NYC and in New Jersey have gone to Manhatten to volunteer. Others are > gathering goods and money for the tough task of recovery. Baha'is are > working to heal the wounds.
>
> All you want to do is inflict more pain.
>
> You are evil.
>
> You are a fucking coward.
>
> You make me sick.

From - Mon Apr 07 07:52:57 1997

>From 72110.2126@compuserve.com Mon Mar 31 08:02:54 1997

Received: by dub-img-4.compuserve.com (8.6.10/5.950515)

id LAA02277; Mon, 31 Mar 1997 11:03:08 -0500

Date: 31 Mar 97 11:01:49 EST

From: David Langness <72110.2126@CompuServe.COM>

To: <FG@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re: Open Letter: UHJ (Universal House of Justice): talk.religion.bahai

Message-ID: <970331160148_72110.2126_JHR55-1@CompuServe.COM>

X-Mozilla-Status: 0014

Content-Length: 2730

Dear Frederick,

Your letter to the House made me want to write to you and tell you that I admire your commitment to expressing the truth as you see it. I, too, have had a very difficult time remaining a Baha'i in the face of administrative campaigns to silence and slander me when I attempted to facilitate open dialogue within a Baha'i context.

I did not hear, perhaps because I've been on vacation, what the final outcome of the vote for talk.religion.bahai turned out to be. I'm assuming from your letter to the House that it was not favorable. And since I just returned from a visit with my family to Harper's Ferry, where John Brown's revolt on behalf of the slaves was met with scant slave support, that decision resounds with a deep irony for me. The Baha'is at large have no idea about the extent to which speech and writing are coerced and censored within the Faith, so they themselves are able to vote for the status quo without a clue as to how such tactics have hampered the growth of the Faith. Sad indeed.

But Brown's revolt, while tactically unsuccessful, helped start a process of conflict and awareness that culminated in the Civil War and in the eventual abolishment of slavery. Hopefully those of us who recognize the need for change within the culture of the Faith can accomplish something similar if we only persevere. Accordingly, I hope that your letter to the House, along with the 200 or so I know they have received recently on similar subjects, will help move people in the direction of freedom and open expression.

I would advise you to be careful about any meetings, calls or correspondence with Hoda Mahmoudi, who used to be an ABM here in Southern California. She is quite conservative, and sees herself -- as do many of the appointed branch, sadly -- as a staunch defender of the Faith and the faithful, able and more than willing to marginalize people like you and I to discredit our ideas. This cultlike practice of shunning and casting out any dissidents has unfortunately become the chief tactic of those fundamentalist Baha'is bent on maintaining the current leadership. My worry is that the more progressive Baha'is like Juan Cole and Steve Scholl and yourself will all leave the Faith and thereby increase the power of the conservatives.

So I hope that your letter to the House doesn't indicate that you are withdrawing from the Faith, although it seems to hint in that direction. I hope that you can find a way to stay in and help us progressive types in our struggle -- but I will certainly understand if the fascists force yet another one out. My best to you in this difficult and troubled time.

Love,

David Langness

From: "Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au>

Subject: Re: Yes but, who are the Fundamentalists anyway?

Date: Tuesday, September 25, 2001 4:35 AM

<long essay snipped>

**--

It looks like I'll have to trot out a version of this post from time to time as a permanent feature of this NG.

The 9 typologies of Fundamentalism (according to the high 'doyens' of Fundamentalism studies in the Academy, Marty/Appleyby):

- 1) Fundamentalism mounts a protest against the marginalization of religion in secularizing societies.
- 2) Fundamentalism *selectively* reshapes the religious tradition (i.e. it may represent itself as a restatement of the essence of the religion, but in fact it picks and chooses from the tradition) and it accepts some aspects of modernity while rejecting others.
- 3) Fundamentalism sees the moral world as divided sharply into good and evil.
- 4) Fundamentalism emphasizes the absolutism and inerrancy of its scriptures (and thus rejects Western critical academic scholarship on that corpus).
- 5) Fundamentalism has a millennialist emphasis.
- 6) Fundamentalism has an elect, chosen membership.
- 7) Fundamentalism draws sharp boundaries between the saved and the sinful.
- 8) Fundamentalism maintains an authoritarian, charismatic leadership structure.
- 9) Fundamentalism has strict behavioral requirements for its people.

In another important work on the fundamentalist phenomena in Christianity, Judaism and Islam, i.e. _The Defenders of God: The Fundamentalist Revolt Against the Modern Age_ (Columbia SC: 1995), Professor Bruce B. Lawrence of Duke University (Religious Studies) points out that,

Fundamentalism is the affirmation of religious authority as holistic and absolute, admitting of neither criticism nor reduction; it is expressed through the collective demand that specific creedal and ethical dictates derived from scripture be publicly recognized and legally enforced (p. 27).

Earlier he pointed out,

Fundamentalism is shaped both by its interaction with modernity and its reaction against modernism. It is a two-way, not a one-way, exchange. It affects "secular humanists" as well as their fundamentalist opponents. And it is an exchange that has taken place, and continues to take place, on a global scale, drawing into its orbit all religious traditions not just Islam [Judaism or Christianity] (p xiv).

Later on he notes,

...Fundamentalist challenges have arisen in several traditions. One could locate cadres that are Sikh or Buddhist, _Baha'i_ [he references Denis Maceoin's "Baha'i Fundamentalism and the Western Academic Study of the Babi Movement"] or Hindu (p. 6).

On pp. 100-101 Lawrence delineates the common "traits" of fundamentalists:

1. Fundamentalists are advocates of a pure minority viewpoint against a sullied majority or dominant group. They are the righteous remnant turned vanguard, and even when the remnant/vanguard seizes political power and seems to become a majority, as happened in Iran in 1979, they continue to perceive and project themselves as a minority.
2. Fundamentalists are oppositional. They do not merely disagree with their enemies, they confront them. While the evil Other is an abstract sense of anomie or uprootedness, it is located in particular groups who perpetuate the prevailing "secular" ethos. Fundamentalists confront those secular people who exercise political or judicial power. Often they also confront "wayward" religious professionals [or perceived "wayward" scholars or intellectuals].
3. Fundamentalists are secondary-level male elites. They claim to derive authority from a direct, unmediated appeal to scripture, yet because interpretive principles are often vague, they must be carried by charismatic leaders who are invariably male. Notions of a just social order in Iran, or a halakhic polity in Israel, or a Christian civilization in America require continuous, repeated reinterpretation. In each instance what seems to an outsider to be arbitrary retrieval of only some elements from a common past is to fundamentalists the necessary restoration of an eternally valid divine mandate. And it is a mandate mediated through exclusively male interpreters.
4. Fundamentalists generate their own technical vocabulary. Reflecting the polysemy of language, they use special terms that bind insiders to each other, just as they preempt interference from outsiders. Halakha for Jews, shari'a for Muslims, [the "covenant" or "infallibility" for Baha'is], and "creation" for Christians represent...[four]...terms, each of which would be open to several interpretations but which fundamentalists invest with particular meaning that exceptionalizes, even as it appears to validate, their ideological stance.
5. Fundamentalism has historical antecedents, but no ideological precursors. As Marc Bloch warned, one should never confuse ancestry with explanation. Though the antecedents of fundamentalism are varied and distant - Maccabean revolt for Jews, the Protestant Reformation for Christians, the Wahhabi revolt for Sunnis Muslims, the martyrdom of Husayn for Shi'is - fundamentalism as a religious ideology is very recent. It did not emerge in Protestant America until the end of the last century. It has only become apparent in Judaism during the last fifty years, and since it represents a delayed reaction to the psychological hegemony of European colonial rule, it could only occur in majoritarian Muslim countries after they had become independent nation-states, that is, in most instances, after World War II.

So given all this, it is a rather big non sequitor (i.e. fallacy of reasoning) to assert that fundamentalism is merely a Western boggeyman play or that Armstrong and others who are studying the phenomena are conflating or misconstruing nationalism and religious identity assertion and lumping them all under a tenuously common rubric. For the reasons stated above, the global phenomenon of fundamentalism is a very real one and one only need look at the the IRI or the Taliban regime as two sore thump examples of its presence and existence.

The discourse of Liberalism (as opposed to Fundamentalism) makes the following set of assumptions,

- 1. Discursive dynamicity (i.e. liberal discourse) is the product of a continuous process of rational discourse.
- 2. Rational discourse is possible even among those who do not share the same culture, religion, belief system nor even the same ideological consciousness.
- 3. Rational discourse can produce mutual understanding and cultural/philosophical consensus, as well as sometimes agreement on particulars.
- 4. Consensus permits of stable social arrangements, and is the rational basis of the choice of coherent strategies.
- 5. Rational strategic choice is the basis of improving the human condition possibly through collective action.
- 6. Liberalism as such can exist only where and when its social and intellectual prerequisites exist.

What is Baha'i Fundamentalism

The first major ideological characteristic of fundamentalism, is a reaction against the marginalization of religion in secular societies. Among Baha'i fundamentalists, this reaction takes the form of a belief in a future theocracy, in which they expect Baha'i ecclesiastical institutions to take over the civil state, and which differentiates them from Baha'i liberals and moderates. The belief appears to be rooted primarily in oral traditions attributed to Shoghi Effendi and letters written on his behalf by secretaries, since although he does speak of a future Baha'i commonwealth in his published works, its character remains vague. Hand of the Cause John Robarts reported his version of a long conversation with Shoghi Effendi expatiating on this idea (Robarts 1993). Some Baha'is believed that he held that a melding of religion and state would not occur during the thousand-year dispensation of Baha'u'llah himself, but only toward the end of the Baha'i "cycle," of some 500,000 years (Hofman 1953). There are two problems for Baha'i fundamentalists. The first is that Baha'u'llah's own writings, and those of `Abdul-Baha are frankly anti-theocratic. The second is that in Baha'i law, oral traditions are supposed to be discounted in favor of written texts. Fundamentalists thus tend to hew to generalities when explaining their belief, lacking scriptural support.

The second feature of fundamentalism is selectivity. Fundamentalists select and reshape aspects of the tradition, all the while asserting that they have recaptured its pristine essence. They are also selective in their responses to modernity. They embrace some aspects of it (such as certain types of technology), while vehemently rejecting others. Baha'i fundamentalists engage in all three types of selectivity as well. They frequently make a claim to be engaging in traditional practices that are in fact innovations, and can do so with some success because the history and texts of the Baha'i faith are relatively little studied and authorities have often actively suppressed historical sources. We have already mentioned the problem that theocratic beliefs are unscriptural. That is, the scriptural tradition in the Baha'i faith strove for a separation of religion and state as a way of making room for liberty of conscience for Baha'is in Shi'ite Iran (McGlinn 1999, Cole 1998c:17-47). In his Treatise on Leadership of the early 1890s 'Abdul-Baha said that religious institutions, including Baha'i ones, are never to intervene in affairs of state or political matters unbidden, and that whenever in history they have done so it has resulted in a huge disaster. ('Abdul-Bahain Cole 1998a). He clearly envisaged the state and religious institutions as complementary, "like milk and honey."

Baha'is, including Baha'i fundamentalists, have for the most part embraced modernity. They have a vision of building a peaceful global society and for the most part have a positive view of technological advances. Still, the selectivity of Baha'i fundamentalists toward modernity can be witnessed in the severe misgivings that some of them have expressed about the Internet" or such issues as democracy and the separation of religion and politics.

Fundamentalist Baha'is put special emphasis on moral Manichaeism. They see the world as comprised of a small cadre of those "firm in the Covenant." They....admit a larger number of Baha'is who are "infirm" but perhaps not dangerously so. They worry about smaller numbers of "liberal" or "dissident" Baha'is who [they believe] attempt to "undermine" the Covenant.

Baha'i fundamentalism puts great emphasis on the absolutism and inerrancy of scripture. This belief is quite widespread but not universal. It is tested most fiercely with regard to issues such as evolution. 'Abdul-Baha maintained, in Sufi and Neoplatonic fashion, that human beings have always been a distinct species and that human beings are not animals, insofar as they are endowed with a soul. He also argued that the morphological similarities between humans and apes might be merely functional (e.g, sharks and porpoises resemble one another but are not immediately related), and maintained that "the missing link" would never be found. These assertions have foundered against the DNA revolution, which has found that humans, chimpanzees and bonobos share 98 percent of the same genes and are clearly closely related. During a discussion of his statements on evolution, a typical poster to SRB wrote, "Dear all, On the topic of evolution: Clearly we should understand as clearly as possible what 'Abdul-Baha says on this subject. Because we believe His statements on matters pertaining to the Revelation of Baha'u'llah and all of creation are infallible, we must be clear about what it is we believe, or are accepting" (SRB 6 July 1997).

Baha'i fundamentalists emphasize belief in an imminent catastrophe they refer to as "the Calamity" (Smith 1982). One contributor to a Baha'i-only list wrote, "I would like to open a discussion on a subject which many of us are somewhat unwilling to address - namely, the impending (year 2,000) calamity which is supposed to create grave upheaval (literally) not only here in California, but also on the East Coast, and other parts of the world . . ." (Pers. Comm, March 14, 1994).

Fundamentalist Baha'is have an authoritarian view of how the Baha'i "administrative order" should function. There is a great emphasis on obedience. The typical logic of Baha'i fundamentalists roots obedience in the legitimacy of authority, disallowing a rational examination of the substance of a command or an inquiry into whether the body giving the command has the "constitutional" prerogative to give it. In this way, arbitrary commands by Baha'i bodies are made to be an either-or proposition. If one accepts Baha'u'llah, one accepts his administrative order, and must obey whatever it orders one to do, whether one agrees in conscience or no. Rejection of the command, ipso facto, represents a rejection of Baha'u'llah (Semple 1991). Thus, fundamentalist Baha'is secretly consider liberals and some moderates "not Baha'is" at all because they do not demonstrate sufficient willingness to immerse their wills in the authority of the Baha'i administration.

Fundamentalist Baha'is believe that Baha'i institutions such as the local assembly or the NSA can be divinely guided, and that the Universal House of Justice is infallible. The technical terminology in Persian is not unambiguous, and Baha'i texts make distinctions that this approach disregards. Contemporary Baha'i fundamentalists avoid thinking constitutionally about such issues, asserting the infallibility of the House of Justice in an undifferentiated manner. [One] American Baha'i and mystery writer...wrote, "The Guidance and infallibility of the Universal House of Justice are assured and promised. We are specifically directed, as an act of faith, to offer instant, exact, and complete obedience to Baha'u'llah's House of Justice. We are warned of the dire spiritual dangers inherent in ignoring this directive, and we are admonished to be vigilant, firm, and uncompromising in our loyalty, support, obedience and love for the this Divinely Ordained Institution." (Talisman9 Archives, 23 May 2000).

Fundamentalist Baha'is view "the member's time, space and activity" as "a group resource, not an individual one" (Almond et al. 408). In some communities enormous pressure is put on individuals by fundamentalists to "teach the faith" or proselytize others. Some more liberal (or just shy) Baha'is report being extremely uncomfortable with this pressure and cite it as a reason they became inactive or withdrew from membership. Constant appeals are also made for Baha'is to donate money, to "give till it hurts," and most of these donations appear to go to monumental building projects at the Baha'i world center in Haifa or to bureaucratic purposes at the National Baha'i Center in Wilmette. The Baha'i administration appears to do almost no charity work (measured as a percentage of their budget), especially for non-Baha'is. Although Baha'is do not have a distinctive form of dress, they do have special ritual forms of prayer, and they fast in the Muslim way. They are under surveillance for behavior that might contravene Baha'i law.

The following article appeared in an Israeli paper.

You can also read the article directly from the newspaper at this link:

<https://www.haaretz.co.il/hasen/pages/ShArt.jhtml?itemNo=69711&contrassID=2&subContrassID=16&sbSubContrassID=0&listSrc=Y&itemNo=69711>

Saturday, September 01, 2001 Elul 13, 5761 Israel Time: 03:06 (GMT+3)

Bahai feel bashed by local media
By Charlotte Halle

CONTROVERSIAL: Haifa newspaper claims Bahai center received irregular tax breaks.

The Bahai movement, which plowed $250 million into re-landscaping the gardens of its Haifa world headquarters, charges that it has been unfairly treated by the local media.

Articles have appeared in the local and national press accusing the Bahai World Center of receiving government tax reimbursements which it is not entitled to, of having unethical links with the Labor Party, of using excessive amounts of water to maintain the gardens and, most absurdly, of worshipping idols and using incense during religious practices.

Officials are particularly furious about an "untrue and unfair" article that appeared in the Haifa weekly newspaper Zman Haifa earlier this month, which claimed that the world center had received millions of shekels in irregular payments from the Israeli government. The Bahais are particularly distressed because they say the newspaper gave them just one hour to respond to the allegations before the article went to press. "It upsets us that people look for an ulterior, negative motive in what we are doing," says Glen Fullmer, senior information officer at the center. He attributes the attacks to the Bahai community's dramatic shift from "obscurity" to "high-profile" target for media coverage following the opening of the new garden project.

"We were silent citizens," he says, "and sometimes the story we have to tell - that we are beautifying our holy places with voluntary contributions from Bahais around the world on a nonprofit basis - just doesn't seem to add up."

Based on an acceptance of all world religions, the Bahai faith supports the unification of humanity and the emergence of a global civilization. Its principles forbid accepting donations from any individual or institution outside of the faith.

The opening of the gardens surrounding the world-famous golden-domed Shrine of the Bab - a tranquil haven for visiting pilgrims - is the result of 15 years of planning and construction, and a $250-million investment by the Bahai community. The center signed an agreement with the Israeli government in 1987, entitling it to tax exemptions on the basis of the fact that it is an international religious, nonprofit organization. The center stands to receive a tax refund on the order of $20 million.

The Zman Haifa article was based on questions about tax reimbursement that were submitted by an independent auditor to the Ministry of Tourism.

Bahai sources claim that all the auditor's queries were satisfactorily answered, and that it was "defamatory" and unfair of the newspaper to portray the questions as based in fact. Furthermore, the world center placed a full-page advertisement in the newspaper a week later, refuting the paper's claims with quotes from Ministry of Tourism and Ministry of Finance officials. The Bahai center is still considering taking legal action against the newspaper for the "malicious and unprofessional" article.

Zman Haifa editor Sharon Gal told Anglo File that reporters had given the Bahais about seven hours to respond to the claims. Due to a "technical error," their response to the allegations had not appeared, but added that a response was printed in full the following week, the same week the full-page advertisement was published. He added that many editors would not have agreed to print the advertisement of the Bahais because it was so overtly critical of the newspaper.

Murray Smith, deputy secretary-general of the Bahai World Center, says the gardens have given a "big boost" to the social and economic life of Haifa, with almost 35,000 Israelis visiting the site every week since June. This represents a radical rise in the number of day visitors to the city, at a time when tourism is at an all-time low. He emphasized that entrance to the gardens is free and that they are open daily. The opening of the gardens, Smith adds, has forced the Bahais into the "limelight," although they prefer to keep a low profile, to avoid "upsetting people in a way that will be of negative consequence to Bahais in other countries."

Smith dismisses as "completely false and erroneous" the claims in the media that the Bahais worship idols and use incense. He also outlined the world center's strict regulations - built into the planning of the gardens - stipulating avoidance of water-intensive plants, and use of state-of-the-art irrigation technology. He adds that many "positive" articles also appeared in the press following the opening of the gardens.

In general, says Smith, the Bahai center has enjoyed good relations with all Israeli governments, a fact that has not escaped the attention of the government of Iran. There, Bahai believers are persecuted under the fundamentalist Islamic regime, which accuses them of being Zionist collaborators. Baha'u'llah, the founder of the monotheistic Bahai faith - which broke off from Islam 150 years ago - arrived in the Holy Land from Iran as a prisoner of the Ottoman Empire in 1868 and died near Acre in 1892. According to Smith, when the Bahais arrived in Palestine, Baha'u'llah instructed his followers that they must not seek or accept converts here, a rule which is still strictly observed today.

The elected governing body of the world's Bahai community, the Universal House of Justice, has its seat in Haifa on Mount Carmel, adjacent to the Shrine of the Bab and the new gardens. Haifa and Acre together comprise the international spiritual and administrative center for the five million followers of the Bahai faith, of whom 800 live in Israel, volunteering for a time at the Haifa headquarters before returning home.

FULL TEXT:

New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD 2001

<https://members.nbc.com/FG/NMLawsuit.htm>

See my comments interspersed throughout below.

**--

FG

www.FG.com

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://members.nbc.com/FG/index.htm>

SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT COUNTY OF BERNALILLO
STATE OF NEW MEXICO

DEBORAH BUCHHORN, for herself and for MINORITY

Versus

TRUSTEES OF THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHAIS OF ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, and
THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHAIS OF ALBUQUERQUE,
NEW MEXICO, a non-profit corporation, and the NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHAIS OF THE UNITED STATES, an Illinois Corporation,

What I don't understand is why isn't the "universal" house of "justice" also named here? They're the ones pulling the strings of the local Bahai administration and the bootlickers on talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai, for that matter....

Please notice the bahai fundamentalists are failing to respond to the details of the lawsuit charges. Yes, the ruse has been to ignore the facts and pretend there's no "detailed information" and evidence. While we know the very soiled record of bahai institutions on many counts, alas, there are many wandering into talk.religion.bahai who might be duped by such duplicity. The details of the lawsuit are really quite appalling and read like the more than a decade of oppression committed against many, many individuals, as we know, and documented on my and Cole's websites and elsewhere....:

- 2. Plaintiffs allege that Trustees breached their duties as corporate officers.
- 3. Plaintiffs allege that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their duty of deciding appeals owed to Plaintiffs.
- 4. Plaintiffs allege that the literature review policies of the Local Spiritual Assembly and the National Spiritual Assembly, which lie in privity, unlawfully prevent shareholders from their right to communicate with other shareholders.
- 5. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants failed to execute their duties under their corporate by-laws.

THOSE are the charges, being ignored by the lackies who handled damaged control on talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai

I would think the lawyer representing the plaintiffs might find many similar stories, during the last decade or so, documented on my bahai webpages, as well as perhaps many potential witnesses to the manner in which the bahai administration now operates....

FACTS

- 11. In the particular situation between the Trustees of the Spiritual Assembly of Bahais of Albuquerque, New Mexico, Defendants Trustees controlled what member activities Plaintiffs were able to engage in and what members they were able to talk to. They stopped them from interacting with friends at member events. They stopped Plaintiffs from serving on committees and stopped their individual activities for personal reasons. They made all the decisions relating to Plaintiffs' membership-related activities. They told named Plaintiff that opinions she may personally hold were bad and implicitly threatened to curtail her presence at member functions. They acted as if the abuse were no big deal, that it was Plaintiff's fault, and denied doing it. They failed to act when one member was physically threatened and shoved by another member.
- 12. Although Plaintiffs have consistently complied with Defendant Trustees' demands, they have also consistently filed complaints against them with the National and International Bahais authorities. This has enraged the Defendant Trustees.
- 13. Defendant Trustees have never made specific accusations or informed Plaintiffs of wrongdoing, other than vague statements such as "you have issues with the Spiritual Assembly."
- 14. Therefore, deep-seated animosities and distrust have arisen between Plaintiffs and the Trustees, which are incapable of resolution and thereby present an irreconcilable barrier to the ability of the corporation to function as is.
- 15. Plaintiffs' reasonable expectations that they would be able to participate in the management and activities of their corporation, as minority shareholders, have been thwarted since at least 1995.
- 16. Article IV of the LSA by-laws provides that the LSA shall compose differences and disagreements among members of the community. Article VII, section 9 of the NSA by-laws provides that any member of a Bah 'i community may appeal from a decision of his LSA to the NSA.

No surprises here, either. Professor Juan Cole's website and mine are full of such FACTS....

The New Mexico lawsuit reads:

Failure to Allow Inspection of Books and Records

17. The books and records of the corporation have been maintained in an inaccurate and inequitable manner.

18. The year 2000 annual meeting showed a 10%, $10,000 discrepancy in the corporate books.

19. In a letter dated September 3, 2000, named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn informed the Local Spiritual Assembly that she desired to inspect their financial books. Defendants refused.

https://members.nbci.com/\_XMCM/FG/NMLawsuit.htm

What I'd like to know is WHICH bahai administrator stole the money and what did he or she do with it? Did he act alone, or were other officials involved and benefiting from the crime? Why have only attempts been made to cover it up by the bahai administration? Were they involved in it in some way?

Of course this isn't the first time large sums have been stolen from bahai coffers. There was also about $10,000 stolen from the local spiritual assembly in St Louis and large sums from the Isa in Los Angeles. And there have been other incidents, such as employees in Wilmette stealing monthly contributions....

Fraudulent Oppression and Prevention of Communications between Shareholders

21. On April 19, 1998, Defendant Trustees ordered named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to refrain from discussing her "issues" with anyone but Auxiliary Board member Brent Poirier and the Local Spiritual Assembly. Plaintiff complied and appealed to Brent Poirier and the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action. Defendant LSA has wrapped many of their dealings with members in the cloak of secrecy in a like manner.

Many people have said, in one way or another, that various cults operate in this way, i.e., suppress and prevent communication between members, thereby distorting their perception and understanding of what is actually taking place, etc....

"VIOLATED THE RIGHTS OF CORPORATE MEMBERS" to communicate with others.... This too is a quite predictable pattern the uhj has used often to silence and isolate people of conscience. It has been done on AOL, soc.religion.bahai, and elsewhere on and off line.

Electioneering

22. At the Annual Meeting Feast of 1999, Defendant Trustees fraudulently rigged the election of Trustee Nelson Sapad by calling for applause for him three times prior to an election of corporate officers. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

23. Defendant Trustees or their agents fraudulently rigged the election of Harry and Sondra Day, by introducing them and calling for applause moments before an election of corporate officers.

24. Trustees do not ensure secret balloting at the Annual Meeting Feast.

The usual practice is not to use a ballot box, but for members to lay their ballots on a plate or in a basket in plain sight of the election tellers.

Ms. Buchhorn appealed to Brent Poirier on at least one election. Mr. Poirier responded by handling the collection basket himself.

25. In the member newsletter and prior to the annual election and during the Annual Meeting Feast, Trustees have used scriptural quotes to draw attention to persons serving on certain committees.

Well, that's the way it's done.... I've witnessed it myself at a US national convention to "elect" the nsa members....

Fraudulent and Oppressive Behavior Relating to the TV Show "Spiritual Reality"

26. Plaintiffs conceptualized and produced a TV show named "Spiritual Reality." After 100 showings, during which Defendant Trustees only complimented Plaintiffs, Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, mandated major changes in the show. Plaintiffs complied and appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

27. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered Plaintiffs to "temporarily postpone" their television show, "Spiritual Reality." Plaintiff complied, and Defendants never specifically informed Plaintiffs what they had done to precipitate the arbitrary and capricious termination. The effect of this order, namely the termination of the TV show, violated the right of shareholders to communicate with other shareholders.

28. Trustees fraudulently and under false pretences stated that the reasons for termination would be fully discussed at a later meeting, at which meeting those reasons were never discussed. Defendant Trustee Kambiz Victory, employee of channel 41, knew or should have known that a television program cannot be "temporarily postponed." Plaintiffs appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action.

29. Defendant Kambiz Victory, a Trustee, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, told named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn in regards to her television show that "Your teaching can have no effect because you are not in unity with the Spiritual Assembly." Defendant knew that Ms. Buchhorn's television show brought in 15% of the information requests during an unrelated major regional advertising campaign by Defendants. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action.

30. Defendant Trustees fraudulently and under false pretences set-up Plaintiffs to a "confession" of their animosity towards Defendant Trustees. Named Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action.

Given the way the fundamentalists among my fellow bahais behave on alt.religion.bahai and talk.religion.bahai, as well as elsewhere in cyberspace, I find these allegations quite believable and convincing....

Other Oppression

31. As an act of individual initiative, named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn organized a Bah 'i parade float for several years for the New Mexico State Fair Parade. In 2000, Defendant Trustees convened a task force to organize the parade float for that year. On August 22, 2000, approximately 19 days before the parade, Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, instructed Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to terminate her parade float activities. A false reason for this termination was published in the membership newsletter by Defendant Trustees, causing Plaintiff embarrassment. Plaintiff complied, and Defendant never informed Plaintiff as to the reason for that termination. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

32. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to receive instruction on the Bah 'i Covenant. Plaintiff complied and attended that "instruction," which in fact consisted of three (3) hours of interrogation by Trustee Owen Creightney, and John and Ok-Sun McHenry. It became apparent at this meeting that Trustee Creightney had lied to the Trustees in order to oppress named Plaintiff. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

33. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to resign from the Bah 'i gospel choir. Plaintiff complied, and Defendant never informed Plaintiff as to the reason for that termination. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

34. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, undermined named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn's Saturday Night Coffee House and in effect stopped her Coffee House. Defendant never informed Plaintiff as to these circumstances. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

35. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, have ordered numerous Bah 'is to shun Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn.

36. Defendant Trustee Kambiz Victory told a Plaintiff "I am the voice of God in this community."

"Fraudulently and with intent to oppress," "interrogation," "lied," all sounds like what I've witnessed during my more than 20 years as a member of the bahai faith....

Sound familiar? Anyone ever hear of anything like this having been done to any other bahai?

Any names come to mind?

Libel

37. Defendant Trustees knowingly published false and defamatory information about Plaintiffs in the Albuquerque Bah 'i newsletter, specifically relating to the parade banner.

No one who's been a bahai for very long, and an honest and mature adult, has failed to perceive this type of thing happening....

Unlawful Prevention of Communication between Shareholders

38. Defendant National Spiritual Assembly has the policy that Local Spiritual Assemblies are responsible for reviewing pamphlets and newsletters and materials that mention the Faith such as songs, play scripts, souvenir items, and greeting cards, intended for publication or distribution within their communities, whereas the National Spiritual

Assembly is responsible for review of those same materials intended for nationwide publication.

Surely this allegation must be false. There's never been ANY attempt to prevent communication, as we all know, by the fundamentalists among my fellow bahais, in cyberspace, such as on AOL, soc.religion.bahai, talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, BeliefNet, etc., etc., etc....

CAUSES OF ACTION

Count I

40. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly acted and continue to act fraudulently towards the Plaintiffs.

41. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

"REPEATEDLY" appears to me to be one of the key words here, not to mention "FRAUDULENTLY"....

CAUSES OF ACTION

Count II

43. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly libeled the named Plaintiff.

44. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Well, it's certainly the way bahai fanatics and fundamentalists operate online, and I too have seen it used off line to isolate and discredit people who don't echo the dictates of the bahai "administration."

CAUSES OF ACTION

Count III

46. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to act and continue to fail to act in good faith, which failure constitutes fraud.

47. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

"Repeatedly" and "continue" to not "act in good faith." Having observed bahai fundamentalists online for pushing six years, I've certainly witnessed this type of "fraud" many, many times, as have many other bahais and non-bahais.... Alas, their numerous stories are indeed available on my website, documenting beyond a shadow of a doubt the "emotional damages" they have suffered so grievously from the fundamentalists.

CAUSES OF ACTION

Count IV

49. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to act and continue to fail to act with the care an ordinary prudent person in like position would exercise under similar circumstances, which failure constitute fraud.

50. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Without the "care an ordinary prudent person" would exercise in a like position? My, how lacking in "care" that must be, or, I suppose, the charge is, how fraudulent....

CAUSES OF ACTION

Count V

52. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to act and continue to fail to act in a manner they reasonably believe to be in the best interests of the corporation and its members, which failure constitutes fraud.

53. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby

A lot of emphasis on that word "reasonably." It certainly seems to me that they are working unreasonably in the WORST interests of the "corporation and its members."

Count VI

55. The Trustees have repeatedly failed their duty to compose differences and disagreements with themselves and the members, in violation of their by-laws, which failure constitutes fraud.

56. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

My, my, my, it certainly sounds like a whole lot a fraud going on down in the New Mexico bahai "community."

Count VII

58. The National Spiritual Assembly has repeatedly failed their duty to hear appeals from Plaintiffs, in violation of their by-laws.

59. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Such a failure by the nsa is merely standard practice-- i.e., THE bahai fundamentalist method for dealing with views other than their own. Either the person is declared a heretic or tacitly shunned. Appeals are always sweep under the rug in one way or another.... There exists a very long history of this type of treatment of bahai liberals....

Count VIII

61. The literature review policies of the National and Local Spiritual Assemblies violate the rights of corporate members to communicate with other corporate members.

62. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count IX

64. The practice of the Local Spiritual Assembly to direct members not to speak about their dealings with the LSA with other corporate members violates the rights of corporate members to communicate with other corporate members.

65. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

An awful lot of suppression of communication and attempts to control and influence it. This is precisely how the "administration" operates in my experience.

The appeal to the New Mexico Court for relief says it all:

JUDICIAL RELIEF

WHEREFORE, for these reasons, Plaintiffs request that this Court:

- 1. Declare that the Trustees acted fraudulently towards Plaintiffs;
- 2. Declare that Trustees libeled Plaintiffs;
- 3. Declare that the Trustees breached their corporate duties towards Plaintiffs;
- 4. Remove the Trustees from their positions and enjoin them from serving in official Bahai capacities for nineteen (19) years;
- 5. Remove the LSA Directors who are also Trustees;
- 6. Declare that the Local Spiritual Assembly violated members' rights to inspect corporate books and records;
- 7. Compel Defendant LSA to retain an independent certified public accountant to audit the books for the last two years;
- 8. Declare that Defendant LSA violated their corporate by-laws by failing to compose differences and disagreements among members of the community;
- 6. Declare that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their duty of hearing Plaintiffs' appeals;
- 7. Declare that the literature review policies of the Bahais violate United States common law as preventing corporate members from communicating with other corporate members;
- 8. Enjoin Defendants National Spiritual Assembly and Local Spiritual Assembly from enforcing their literature review policy;
- 9. Declare that the secrecy practices of the Local Spiritual Assembly violate United States common law as preventing corporate members from communicating with other corporate members;
- 10. Enjoin Defendant Local Spiritual Assembly from continuing their secrecy practices;
- 11. Award compensatory damages from Defendants to Plaintiffs;
- 12. Award attorney's fees and costs to Plaintiffs;
- 13. Any other relief this Court deems appropriate.

Respectfully submitted,

---

Yorgos D. Marinakis
Attorney for Plaintiffs
P.O. Box 45923
Rio Rancho, NM 87174
505-459-4664
877-430-9550 (fax)
Named Plaintiff's Verification
STATE OF NEW MEXICO )
) ss.

COUNTY OF BERNALILLO)

COMES NOW Deborah Buchhorn, and being duly sworn, states as follows:

- 1. I have read and understood the contents of this Complaint.
- 2. I have personal knowledge of the facts stated herein.
- 3. I attest to and verify their truth and accuracy.

---

DEBORAH BUCHHORN

SWORN TO AND SUBSCRIBED before me this ____ day of _____, 2001.

---

Notary Public
My Commission Expires:

FULL TEXT:

New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD 2001

<https://members.nbci.com/FG/NMLawsuit.htm>Subject: Re: Bahai Center-- Let's Meet!

Date: 6/17/2001 9:33 AM Eastern Daylight Time

From: Glayshf

Message-id: <20010617093336.12744.00004089@ng-cg1.aol.com>

More distortions and falsehoods.

This person's ad hominem fails to conceal her intent of discrediting and maligning me here in the eyes of the uninformed.

I request that the TOSGeneral request that the community leader on the bahai message boards do his duty and prevent this type of personal attack and character assassination or resign. Please note too that this person is allowed to post her URL while I or anyone else who is not a fundamentalist would have our posts removed or reported for TOSs.

FG

>Subject: Re: Bahai Center--Let's Meet!

>Date: 6/17/2001 2:08 AM Eastern Daylight Time

>From: Smaneck

>Message-id: <20010617020846.18659.00009077@ng-mq1.aol.com>

**>

**>

**>>

>>The non-bahai observer might want to note that this claim is a complete >>>falsehood, regularly used by fundamentalists to smear and discredit me:

**>

>Dear Fred,

**>

>You are saying you never told any representative of the Institutions that any >contact with you would be considered harrassment? It seems to me you once had

>the correspondence posted on your website where you did this.

**>

>Or are you denying that the NSA ever took you off the rolls?

>warmest, Susan

**>

><https://www.susanmaneck.com>

**>

**>

**>

**>

**>

**>

**>

**>

>

From: "Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au>
Subject: Re: - bahai - Renewed Harassment
Date: Monday, February 26, 2001 5:02 PM

Let's see..... by harassment you mean I put your real phone number and address on ARB/TRB about a year ago. Yes I did that. NO regrets what-so-ever. I can only hope you heard from some of the people you continually spammed and cross-posted to. Grow up Glaysher..... Your wimpy ranting here every other day have almost no merit. When I posted last year, a few told me that I had broken this and that rule and that it would put me in court and I would lose my ISP and on and on. Nothing at all occurred. ISP couldn't have cared..... No anything. And as far as inspiration I use the posts from other NGs who post here complaining about your antics. And if you think I care about my phone or address being posted here.....

Mark Elderkin 43 Moruya Drive, Port Macquarie, NSW call international: 061265842150

I guess it all boils down to the issue of the morality of your actions..... I don't mind taking responsibility for mine.

MEE

Nima,
I would appreciate your forwarding his phone number and address to me at f_glaysher@hotmail.com
FG

My experience as a member of the Baha'i Faith
By
Dennis James Rogers

I became a member of the Baha'i Faith in the early seventies while an undergraduate at a small private midwestern university. The initial attraction was to the social teachings of the Faith particularly the tenets about gender and racial equality. I had been raised as a Roman Catholic and had attended parochial and public schools, but was not very well versed in Biblical Christianity. Since the sixties and seventies were a time of social upheaval and turmoil, the Baha'i Faith seemed like a rational alternative to traditional religious dogma. My connection to the group was minimal during my college years but picked up after I graduated in 1973. I had "accepted " the Faith based on a conversation with a Baha'i teacher who asked me if I agreed with the basic nine tenets of the Faith, I told him I did and he said I was a Baha'i. This was quite ironic considering that one of the basic tenets is "independent investigation of the truth". I had not taken the time to investigate nor done a thorough examination of it's history or doctrine, something that I would not do until many years later while pursuing a role as a Baha'i apologetic.

In 1974 there was an International Convention held in St. Louis to initiate one of the plans that the Baha'i Administrative Order imposes on the rank and file. The plans originated with Shoghi Effendi, the Guardian of the Baha'i Faith, they are ten-year plans, five-year plans, four-year plans, and seven-year plans or as little as one year plans. The plans have goals for teaching (expansion and consolidation) and "pioneers" which are similar to missionaries with the exception that pioneers are not subsidized by the organization, pioneers are expected to finance their own travel expenses, find employment and establish themselves as part of the city, village or community in which they are pioneering. The pioneer is to teach the faith, find new converts, establish a local spiritual assembly, (a local governing body consisting of nine adults) and then move on to a new pioneering post after the task has been completed. The Universal House of Justice, the international governing body for the Bahá'is, generally established what the goal areas were with input from the National Spiritual Assemblies, the national governing bodies. I must comment that many pioneers I met, rarely if ever established Local Spiritual Assemblies and generally left their "posts" to return home. Pioneering is considered a glorious spiritual station and a certain degree of social pressure is put upon the members to become pioneers. The pioneers I met in the United States who came from the Middle East, primarily from Iran, were people of means, educated and wealthy. The early pioneers of the Baha'i Faith (from the West} were also people of means. This can be verified by the early written Baha'i history of the United States and Canada.

Being a new member of the group, I was not aware of the Baha'i culture, I was first asked to answer telephone calls from people interested in the Faith, there was considerable publicity on television, bill boards and newspapers about the convention with a phone number to call for people interested in finding out more information concerning the Faith. I was to answer questions, secure addresses and phone numbers to send literature for follow up by Baha'i teachers. The older members, not wanting to answer phones, attended the conference, which was presented by the ruling Baha'i elite. The nine members of the Universal House of Justice and the remaining living "Hands of the Cause". The Hands were individuals who had been appointed by Bahá-u-lláh, Abdul Bahá or Shoghi Effendi. The rank and file members, due to their high spiritual station of "servitude", regarded them as spiritual giants. Their main function was to protect and propagate the Faith. They were to protect the Faith from schism, but were apparently unsuccessful after the death of Shoghi Effendi in 1957, the only appointed Guardian of the Baha'i Faith. There have been, since his death, two main splinter groups, the Orthodox Bahá'is and the Bahá'is Under the Provision of the Covenant (BUPC) that I am aware of. I do not know what the other group's membership numbers are or their exact doctrines since contact with them is forbidden. They are to be shunned as "covenant breakers" and are considered "spiritually diseased" by the Baha'i Administrative Order. To be quite honest, I really was not that interested in them.

I attended a general session where several of the "Hands" spoke. Most of the talks were anecdotal in nature, encouraging the members to bring in more converts and step up the "teaching efforts". Though Bahá'is claim they do not proselytize, semantics, all their efforts are aimed at bringing in more new members to establish the "New World Order"; this is to occur when there are mass conversions or "entry by troops". A term I discovered taken from Sura 110 in the Qu'ran entitled. "Help". (Rodwell's edition pg.429). One of the elements that I found disturbing during the conference was an underlying anti-Christian sentiment, which is what eventually contributed to my leaving the Bahá'is later, it was and is something not so overt as much as an arrogant attitude that many Bahá'is feel. There were Christians offering literature outside of the convention center, which were not allowed in, and heavily criticized by the Baha'i attendee's. They consider themselves to be spiritually superior to Christians because Bahá'is believe they have all the answers to humanity's problems for this day. One of the "Hands" stated that most Christians "were dead from the neck up." I purchased this speech on audiocassette tape and had also heard the comment live. This individual was upset that the Christians had more heart and moral fiber than the Bahá'is. Christians were getting into Africa, South/Central America and Asia with missionaries before the Baha'i pioneers could "open" those areas. This "Hand" also felt that Americans were really not worth trying to teach the Faith to, since they were so entrenched in the culture and their churches. They were basically doomed, not worth saving. The Bahá'is should therefore concentrate their efforts on native peoples who did not have so many "veils". A term frequently used by the membership to denote someone who could not accept the station of Bahá-u-lláh as God's savior for the world. After the conference was over, I was introduced to a Baha'i couple that lived in the municipality where I resided. This introduction and my experience with this couple would have lasting implications for me for the rest of my life.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith, as I will call them, were a very charismatic and charming couple, they took me into their home and became my "spiritual parents". Though I did not live with them I spent much time there. They were in their mid forties and had an adult daughter, whom I never met. Mr. Smith was about six foot four and had a very intimidating presence if he chose to and Mrs. Smith was about five foot seven and on the full figured side. She was very soft spoken with a mild southern drawl.

The couple immediately took me under their wing, seeing I was a new young and impressionable recruit gave them license to teach me as they saw fit. We began having "firesides", weekly teaching meetings in their home, for "seekers" as they are referred to (potential Bahá'is). We held public meetings at the local library and community center, picnics at parks, anywhere we could attract attention to the Faith to bring in new members or seekers to invite to firesides. During this time I became a very persuasive teacher under Mr. Smith's tutelage and as a result many young people "declared " their belief in Bahá-u-lláh, including one of my older brothers, his wife and several of my friends. So many people were enrolling in the Baha'i Faith, coming to firesides and meetings that it attracted the attention of the National Spiritual Assembly and they began to send people to investigate our activities. I found out decades later that the more conservative Baha'i administration at that time were alarmed at the number of "long hair hippie types" and African-Americans who were enrolling into the Baha'i Faith. Professor Juan R.I. Cole, a historian and former member of the Bahá'is has gone into this in some detail in a published paper entitled "The Baha'i Faith as Panopticon". The website address is;

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/1999/jssr/bhjssr.htm>

For those wishing to read the article.

The Smiths had me under their control and completely indoctrinated into the Baha'i Faith. I was their "spiritual son" and anything Mr. Smith said I took as truth. He began handing out "fez's", hats like the early Middle Eastern Bahá'is wore, to the younger male Bahá'is in the community. A symbol of his discipleship I suppose. This was alarming to the members of the National Spiritual Assembly who really took offense at this action, but did not confront Mr. Smith about it directly. I on the other hand and the other new young believers thought this was normal, wearing the fez, since none of the other older Bahá'is in the area said anything to him or us about it. At this time I was alienated from my family and former non-Baha'i friends. Everything I did was Baha'i, I felt I had all the answers and refused to listen to anyone else outside of the Baha'i Faith. Mr. Smith began to get verbally abusive and authoritarian with me if I disagreed with him on any issue. He never struck me, but he did on one occasion force me to prostrate myself before him and beg for forgiveness because I had disappointed him. I had wanted to get married and start a family and he wanted me to move away to another state with him. I need to add without going into too much detail that Mr. Smith sometimes would slip drugs into glasses of punch that he would give me and others to drink while we were guests in his home. On several occasions after giving me the "punch", he proceeded to lock me in a small room on the second floor of his house, a prayer closet he called it, and tell me to pray and meditate. Several times I hallucinated while in the "prayer closet" and he would grill me as to what I had experienced. It was some years later that I realized what he had done to me and how sick an individual Mr. Smith really was. To this day I do not know what the nature of the drugs were he had given to me.

The Smiths moved away out of state, as there were enough adult members in the community to form a Local Spiritual Assembly. (LSA). I was elected Chairman of the LSA and had been in that position for less than a year when the Assembly was summoned to a meeting at a local hotel with members of the Baha'i Administration. I must add that when Mr. and Mrs. Smith left the area I was greatly relieved and thought to myself "good riddance". I did occasionally speak to him on the telephone, when he called to see how I was doing.

What happened next when the LSA met with the Administrative representatives was something that I had kept to myself for over twenty years. We, the Local Spiritual Assembly members, thought we were going to be praised for all the teaching activity that had occurred and tripling the number of new believers. On the contrary, we were seated in a large hotel suite and then I was read a list of charges against me which included "conspiring" with Mr. Smith to run the Local Spiritual Assembly from out of state and for "claiming a station", whatever that meant. When I protested and attempted to defend myself, I was told to "sit down and shut up, we know all about you and anything you say will be just lies." I said I was leaving and they locked and blocked the door leading out of the room, there were about seven of them and they forced me and the other members of the Local Spiritual Assembly to listen to them for two hours. This is what the Bahá'is call "loving and frank consultation". I was humiliated, demeaned and my character assassinated in this meeting. Two of the members of the Local Spiritual Assembly came to my defense and stated that the charges were not true and that the picture that was being presented of me by them was inaccurate. My accusers never confronted me; I came to find out later that the National Spiritual Assembly and other Administrative bodies had used members of the Local Spiritual Assembly and the community as "informants". The concept of due process is foreign in the Baha'i Faith.

The result of this "consultation" had me removed from the assembly and ostracized from the community at large. Several of the Local Spiritual Assembly members left the Faith after this incident; as did several people that I had taught the Faith to. I seriously considered it, but decided not to because I was isolated and felt I deserved to be punished because of my association with the Smiths. I was instructed not to ever speak to them or have contact with the Smiths again, but not told why. If they contacted me I was to report it immediately to the Baha'i Administration.

The next step that the Baha'i Administration did was to "reeducate" me in the Baha'i teachings. They arranged for me to attend "deepening classes" (a Baha'i term used to denote in-depth study) with an older Baha'i teacher who had very little regard for me, almost to the point of open hostility. If I questioned him about certain doctrines that did not make sense to me he would become extremely defensive and caustic in speech. One time he hung up on me during the course of a telephone conversation after calling me an arrogant punk when questioning him about a prophetic statement in the Baha'i writings. He stated there was no such passage and when I read it to him over the phone he became very upset and hung up. I did not study with him much after that. Many of the Bahá'is and the Baha'i Administration considered him one of the best teachers in the United States and would rave about him. I found him to be offensive, sarcastic, demeaning to his students and to be without any formal training as an educator. He published a book through the Baha'i Publishing Trust, which I thought was confusing and incoherent, he was in his mid sixties when I met him.

Since many of the new Bahá'is we had taught had left the faith, the numbers in the community went down, so I was reinstated to the Local Spiritual Assembly by default. Much of my time was spent planning firesides, public meetings, picnics and fundraising. In the fifteen years that followed there was very little growth in the community in terms of the numbers of new believers, there was a revolving door so to speak, and people would come into the Faith and then either become inactive or just resign. This was particularly true of the African-American Bahá'is coming from a church background. There was very little structure or community life that resembles a church community. Most, if not all of Baha'i activity centers on meetings, teaching activities and fundraising. There was very little time left to develop interpersonal relationships or socialization.

One last painful episode, which further alienated me from the faith, was the fact that my wife at the time, we are now divorced, developed a close friendship with a "home front pioneer". These are Bahá'is that move to an area for a short time to fulfill some arbitrary local goal of the Baha'i Administration to establish a group or Local Spiritual Assembly. This individual, unbeknownst to me, tried to coerce my wife to divorce me and marry him during his tenure in the community. She told me about the relationship after he left the country to pioneer to South America. She is still on the rolls of the Baha'i Faith to my knowledge.

During the divorce process the community abandoned me, since divorce is frowned upon. An incident that occurred while going through the divorce, (a year of patience is required by Baha'i law), was when I attended a Baha'i Sunday class where I was confronted by several members of the community and chastised in the class for going through the divorce, I did not defend myself, but I must add that a Persian Baha'i man stood up for me and said in my defense that no one knows what goes on between two people and that it was not for anyone to judge. Despite that I did not attend any meetings for the next two years, nor was I contacted by any of the "friends" during that time. The community has a history of abandoning its members when they no longer can attend the meetings or participate in teaching activities.

I cannot truly characterize the Baha'i Faith as a "cult", though in my opinion there are strong social controls in place by the Baha'i Administration. Those controls filter down to the individuals who are afraid of openly questioning the decisions of that administration for fear of being labeled a "covenant breaker". Which is tantamount to being excommunicated from the community. The leadership has used this effectively since the beginnings of the religion to "purge the ranks of the believers". Once a person has been declared a covenant breaker, the Baha'i community shuns that person and contact with such an individual could cause "spiritual contamination" of the "Cause" as it is referred to. There are parallels in the Jehovah's Witnesses and Mormon groups, as I understand it. The discussion of "unquestioning loyalty and obedience" to the Baha'i covenant and administration is paramount to maintaining order within the community. Though membership in the Baha'i Faith is completely voluntary, individuals such as myself who based their entire lifestyle around the faith find it difficult to separate themselves from family and friends who are Baha'i even if they know there are contradictions within Baha'i doctrine. One risks those relationships and being isolated from the community. It took me three painful years to extricate myself and resign as an enrolled member. Since leaving the Baha'i Faith in the fall of 2000, I have had little or no contact with people I had been friends with for many years, friends whose children grew up with my children. Most of them believe I lost my faith in God. Those that I have spoken to are surprised that I am doing fine, that I attend church and perform in a gospel band.

Some of the contradictions that began to surface for me were a result of a radio broadcast I heard by Rev. Robert Pardon of the New England Institute of Religious Research (NEIRR) on a Lutheran radio station in St. Louis. He was giving an overview of the Baha'i Faith and I called to challenge him and his sources. I felt he was misrepresenting the Faith and had gotten his source material from "covenant breakers" or enemies of the Faith. I thought about what he had said and contacted him through his web site, I was finally beginning to investigate the Baha'i Faith after twenty-seven years. He sent me facsimiles of his source material and I began to meticulously go over it. Checking it against what had been presented to me by the Bahá'ís. I also began writing letters and asking questions of Baha'i administrators and academics. I discovered that several contemporary Baha'i historians and academics had been forced out of the Faith because of their research and publications. Baha'i academics have to go through a review process before publishing anything about the Faith. If an author does not pass the review process one is not published. Their work essentially is censored. This is why almost all Baha'i literature and historical works are redundant. All the books and pamphlets are rewritten from the same "approved" source material. As a result of this, most Bahá'ís are unaware of the early history of the Faith, the power struggles that ensued from the founders family members and instead are directed to the Baha'i approved materials. Other sources are considered suspect, labeled as unauthorized or from enemies of the faith.

Though the Faith teaches tolerance for other religions, the truth is taught that the Baha'i Faith is the "Ultimate Truth" for this day. All the previous "Manifestations of God" and revealed religions are essentially null and void. Humanity must follow the Baha'i Faith or suffer severe punishment. Jesus Christ, the Messiah and Savior for the entire human race is reduced to the station of a "Divine Educator". His revelation is no longer considered relevant for this day, in fact Christ's dispensation ended with the coming of Muhammad in the sixth century C.E. The clergy and a misunderstanding of scriptural interpretation have led all Christians astray. Personal salvation is no longer important; the salvation of the human race is the priority now. An intimate personal relationship with God is not possible, "the door leading unto the Ancient of Days is forever closed to man", (paraphrase from the Baha'i Writings). As I began to study the Bible in depth and outside of a Baha'i context, I began to understand the perspective of the Christian objection to the Baha'i Faith. A great deal of the social teachings and all of the spiritual teachings, which the faith presented as new, I discovered in Old and New Testament scripture. Some of the phrases from the Bible I found transcribed into Baha'i prayers. However the main source of contention for me was the arrogance of many Baha'i who became incensed at Christian authors trying to give accurate accounts regarding the Baha'i Faith and its history. Yet they thought nothing of explaining away two thousands years of historical Christianity and exegetical study, while engaging in the worst form of eisegesis.

On a more personal level, I was concerned about my soul and salvation, I never really felt forgiven or saved as a Baha'i or that Bahá-u-lláh was a personal savior. When reading how Jesus taught us to forgive our enemies and to pray for them in the Gospels, I compared that to how the Baha'i Faith historically condemned and shunned its enemies. (Many who were the disciples, spouses and relatives of the central figures of the Faith, even Shoghi Effendi, the Baha'i Guardian, excommunicated his own parents!). I began to ask God to open my eyes and guide me to the truth.

With the help of Rev. Bob Pardon, (NEIRR) Pastor Todd Wilken and Jeff Schwartz of radio station KFUE in St. Louis, I began the task of "testing the spirits" to determine what was true. I tested the Bahá'is by raising questions at Baha'i meetings about historical and doctrinal contradictions as well as prophetic statements in the Baha'i Faith that had not come to pass. Dates had been given where certain events were to have transpired and did not occur. Many Bahá'is were desperately trying to rationalize these unfulfilled prophecies. This line of questioning was making me very unpopular to say the least, particularly when I began to post those questions on the local Baha'i chat list. I started to receive calls from the local Baha'i authorities as well as from some of the "friends". (A term Bahá'is use to refer to each other). I finally officially withdrew my membership and posted it on the chat list. I received numerous calls and e-mails from the "friends" wanting to counsel me, I then posted and requested that I not be contacted, which of course did not occur, finally I posted my reasons for leaving the Baha'i Faith and that I no longer could follow the doctrines or obey the Administrative Order. An Administrative Representative who wished to meet with me concerning my statements contacted me. His real intent was to declare me a "covenant breaker" and therefore have me shunned so as not to "infect" any other Bahá'is with doubt. I agreed to meet with him. He had books with him and was prepared to contend with me. I chose not to engage him on doctrinal issues, I instead stated that I did not believe that Bahá-u-lláh was the return of Christ and relayed to him the incidents I had suffered at the hands of Bahá'is and the Administration. He repeatedly apologized and stated he would ask the Bahá'is to respect my wishes that I not be contacted and harassed about my decision.

I have since accepted Jesus Christ as my personal Savior and have found a peaceful assurance that I had never experienced as a Baha'i. I bear no malice towards the Baha'i Faith or individual Bahá'is. Some of them are very kind, gentle and loving souls. This testimony is intended to help those members of the Baha'i community, who may have experienced similar situations and come to a personal realization regarding doctrinal contradictions. There is hope, peace and life outside of the Baha'i Faith for those who choose to seek it

SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT
COUNTY OF BERNALILLO
STATE OF NEW MEXICO

DEBORAH BUCHHORN, for herself )
and for MINORITY ) MEMBERS OF THE SPIRITUAL )
ASSEMBLY OF THE BAH ' 'S OF ) ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, )

**)
Plaintiffs, )

**)
vs. ) No. CV 2001-01978

**)
)
TRUSTEES OF THE SPIRITUAL )
ASSEMBLY OF THE BAH ' 'S OF )
ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, and )
THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE )
BAH ' 'S OF ALBUQUERQUE, )
NEW MEXICO, a non-profit )
corporation, and the )
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY ) OF THE BAH ' 'S OF THE ) UNITED STATES, )
an Illinois Corporation, )
)
Defendants. )

VERIFIED COMPLAINT FOR FRAUD, LIBEL, BREACH OF CORPORATE DUTIES, AND DECLARATORY AND INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

COMES NOW Plaintiffs by and through their attorney of record, Yorgos D. Marinakis, and for their Complaint states as follows:

INTRODUCTION

1. Plaintiffs file this shareholder or member derivative suit against:
- the Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of Albuquerque, New Mexico (Local Spiritual Assembly, or LSA),
- their Trustees, and

- the Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of the United States (National Spiritual Assembly, or NSA), with whom the Local Spiritual Assembly and its Trustees have privity.

2. Plaintiffs allege that Trustees breached their duties as corporate officers.

3. Plaintiffs allege that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their duty of deciding appeals owed to Plaintiffs.

4. Plaintiffs allege that the literature review policies of the Local Spiritual Assembly and the National Spiritual Assembly, which lie in privity, unlawfully prevent shareholders from their right to communicate with other shareholders.

5. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants failed to execute their duties under their corporate by-laws.

PARTIES

6. Named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn was a shareholder or member of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of Albuquerque, New Mexico, at the time of the incidents stated in this Complaint, and she continues to be a member.

7. The Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of Albuquerque, New Mexico (Local Spiritual Assembly) is a New Mexico non-profit corporation.

Shareholder-members may appeal decisions by the Local Spiritual Assembly to the National Spiritual Assembly.

8. The Trustees of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of Albuquerque, New Mexico (Trustees) individually reside in Bernalillo County, New Mexico, as a condition of their Trusteeship. Trustees are Kambiz Victory, Ok-Sun and John McHenry, Manijeh Kavelin, Nelson Sapad, Harry and Sondra Day, Owen

Creightney, and Carol Caldwell. Jenny Beery was a Trustee during the time of many of these incidents.

9. The Spiritual Assembly of the Bah 'is of the United States (National Spiritual Assembly) is incorporated in and has its principal place of business in Illinois.

FACTS

10. The Bah 'i have no clergy. Instead, each community in the Bah 'i Faith annually elects nine Trustees or a "Local Spiritual Assembly," which acts as an agent or subsidiary of the National Spiritual Assembly. Each National Spiritual Assembly answers to the supreme Bah 'i body, The Universal House of Justice. The Universal House of Justice established the Continental Board of Counsellors (sic) to assist them, and the Countinental Board of Counsellors further has the Auxiliary Board to assist them.

11. In the particular situation between the Trustees of the Spiritual Assembly of Bah 'is of Albuquerque, New Mexico, Defendants Trustees controlled what member activities Plaintiffs were able to engage in and what members they were able to talk to. They stopped them from interacting with friends at member events. They stopped Plaintiffs from serving on committees and stopped their individual activities for personal reasons. They made all the decisions relating to Plaintiffs' membership-related activities. They told named Plaintiff that opinions she may personally hold were bad and implicitly threatened to curtail her presence at member functions. They acted as if the abuse were no big deal, that it was Plaintiff's fault, and denied doing it. They failed to act when one member was physically threatened and shoved by another member.

12. Although Plaintiffs have consistently complied with Defendant Trustees' demands, they have also consistently filed complaints against them with the National and International Bah 'i authorities. This has enraged the Defendant Trustees.

13. Defendant Trustees have never made specific accusations or informed Plaintiffs of wrongdoing, other than vague statements such as "you have issues with the Spiritual Assembly."

14. Therefore, deep-seated animosities and distrust have arisen between Plaintiffs and the Trustees, which are incapable of resolution and thereby present an irreconcilable barrier to the ability of the corporation to function as is.

15. Plaintiffs' reasonable expectations that they would be able to participate in the management and activities of their corporation, as minority shareholders, have been thwarted since at least 1995.

16. Article IV of the LSA by-laws provides that the LSA shall compose differences and disagreements among members of the community. Article VII, section 9 of the NSA by-laws provides that any member of a Bah 'i community may appeal from a decision of his LSA to the NSA.

Failure to Allow Inspection of Books and Records

17. The books and records of the corporation have been maintained in an inaccurate and inequitable manner.

18. The year 2000 annual meeting showed a 10%, $10,000 discrepancy in the corporate books.

19. In a letter dated September 3, 2000, named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn informed the Local Spiritual Assembly that she desired to inspect their financial books. Defendants refused.

20. Following mailing of the demand letter, the LSA offered to allow named Plaintiff to inspect the books and records, but under conditions that the Plaintiff deemed in bad faith.

Fraudulent Oppression and Prevention of Communications between Shareholders

21. On April 19, 1998, Defendant Trustees ordered named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to refrain from discussing her "issues" with anyone but Auxiliary Board member Brent Poirier and the Local Spiritual Assembly. Plaintiff complied and appealed to Brent Poirier and the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action. Defendant LSA has wrapped many of their dealings with members in the cloak of secrecy in a like manner.

Electioneering

22. At the Annual Meeting Feast of 1999, Defendant Trustees fraudulently rigged the election of Trustee Nelson Sapad by calling for applause for him three times prior to an election of corporate officers. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

23. Defendant Trustees or their agents fraudulently rigged the election of Harry and Sondra Day, by introducing them and calling for applause moments before an election of corporate officers.

24. Trustees do not ensure secret balloting at the Annual Meeting Feast. The usual practice is not to use a ballot box, but for members to lay their ballots on a plate or in a basket in plain sight of the election tellers. Ms. Buchhorn appealed to Brent Poirier on at least one election. Mr. Poirier responded by handling the collection basket himself.

25. In the member newsletter and prior to the annual election and during the Annual Meeting Feast, Trustees have used scriptural quotes to draw attention to persons serving on certain committees.

Fraudulent and Oppressive Behavior Relating to the TV Show "Spiritual Reality"

26. Plaintiffs conceptualized and produced a TV show named "Spiritual Reality." After 100 showings, during which Defendant Trustees only complimented Plaintiffs, Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, mandated major changes in the show. Plaintiffs complied and appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

27. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered Plaintiffs to "temporarily postpone" their television show, "Spiritual Reality." Plaintiff complied, and Defendants never specifically informed Plaintiffs what they had done to precipitate the arbitrary and capricious termination. The effect of this order, namely the termination of the TV show, violated the right of shareholders to communicate with other shareholders.

28. Trustees fraudulently and under false pretences stated that the reasons for termination would be fully discussed at a later meeting, at which meeting those reasons were never discussed. Defendant Trustee Kambiz Victory, employee of channel 41, knew or should have known that a television program cannot be "temporarily postponed." Plaintiffs appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action.

29. Defendant Kambiz Victory, a Trustee, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, told named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn in regards to her television show that "Your teaching can have no effect because you are not in unity with the Spiritual Assembly." Defendant knew that Ms. Buchhorn's television show brought in 15% of the information requests during an unrelated major regional advertising campaign by Defendants. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action.

30. Defendant Trustees fraudulently and under false pretences set-up Plaintiffs to a "confession" of their animosity towards Defendant Trustees. Named Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action.

Other Oppression

31. As an act of individual initiative, named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn organized a Bah 'i parade float for several years for the New Mexico State Fair Parade. In 2000, Defendant Trustees convened a task force to organize the parade float for that year. On August 22, 2000, approximately 19 days before the parade, Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, instructed Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to terminate her parade float activities. A false reason for this termination was published in the membership newsletter by Defendant Trustees, causing Plaintiff embarrassment. Plaintiff complied, and Defendant never informed Plaintiff as to the reason for that termination. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

32. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to receive instruction on the Bah 'i Covenant. Plaintiff complied and attended that "instruction," which in fact consisted of three (3) hours of interrogation by Trustee Owen Creightney, and John and Ok-Sun McHenry. It became apparent at this meeting that Trustee Creightney had lied to the Trustees in order to oppress named Plaintiff. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

33. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to resign from the Bah 'i gospel choir. Plaintiff complied, and Defendant never informed Plaintiff as to the reason for that termination. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

34. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, undermined named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn's Saturday Night Coffee House and in effect stopped her Coffee House. Defendant never informed Plaintiff as to these circumstances. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

35. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, have ordered numerous Bah 'is to shun Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn.

36. Defendant Trustee Kambiz Victory told a Plaintiff "I am the voice of God in this community."

Libel

37. Defendant Trustees knowingly published false and defamatory information about Plaintiffs in the Albuquerque Bah 'i newsletter, specifically relating to the parade banner.

Unlawful Prevention of Communication between Shareholders

38. Defendant National Spiritual Assembly has the policy that Local Spiritual Assemblies are responsible for reviewing pamphlets and newsletters and materials that mention the Faith such as songs, play scripts, souvenir items, and greeting cards, intended for publication or distribution within their communities, whereas the National Spiritual Assembly is responsible for review of those same materials intended for nationwide publication.

CAUSES OF ACTION

Count I

39. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

40. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly acted and continue to act fraudulently towards the Plaintiffs.

41. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count II

42. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

43. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly libeled the named Plaintiff.

44. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count III

45. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

46. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to act and continue to fail to act in good faith, which failure constitutes fraud.

47. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count IV

48. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporates all previous paragraphs.

49. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to act and continue to fail to act with the care an ordinary prudent person in like position would exercise under similar circumstances, which failure constitute fraud.

50. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count V

51. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

52. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to act and continue to fail to act in a manner they reasonably believe to be in the best interests of the corporation and its members, which failure constitutes fraud.

53. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count VI

54. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

55. The Trustees have repeatedly failed their duty to compose differences and disagreements with themselves and the members, in violation of their by-laws, which failure constitutes fraud.

56. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count VII

57. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

58. The National Spiritual Assembly has repeatedly failed their duty to hear appeals from Plaintiffs, in violation of their by-laws.

59. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count VIII

60. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

61. The literature review policies of the National and Local Spiritual Assemblies violate the rights of corporate members to communicate with other corporate members.

62. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

Count IX

63. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

64. The practice of the Local Spiritual Assembly to direct members not to speak about their dealings with the LSA with other corporate members violates the rights of corporate members to communicate with other corporate members.

65. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

JUDICIAL RELIEF

WHEREFORE, for these reasons, Plaintiffs request that this Court:

- 1. Declare that the Trustees acted fraudulently towards Plaintiffs;
- 2. Declare that Trustees libeled Plaintiffs;
- 3. Declare that the Trustees breached their corporate duties towards Plaintiffs;
- 4. Remove the Trustees from their positions and enjoin them from serving in official Bah 'is capacities for nineteen (19) years;
- 5. Remove the LSA Directors who are also Trustees;
- 6. Declare that the Local Spiritual Assembly violated members' rights to inspect corporate books and records;
- 7. Compel Defendant LSA to retain an independent certified public accountant to audit the books for the last two years;
- 8. Declare that Defendant LSA violated their corporate by-laws by failing to compose differences and disagreements among members of the community;
- 6. Declare that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their duty of hearing Plaintiffs' appeals;
- 7. Declare that the literature review policies of the Bah 'is violate United States common law as preventing corporate members from communicating with other corporate members;
- 8. Enjoin Defendants National Spiritual Assembly and Local Spiritual Assembly from enforcing their literature review policy;
- 9. Declare that the secrecy practices of the Local Spiritual Assembly violate United States common law as preventing corporate members from communicating with other corporate members;
- 10. Enjoin Defendant Local Spiritual Assembly from continuing their secrecy practices;
- 11. Award compensatory damages from Defendants to Plaintiffs;
- 12. Award attorney's fees and costs to Plaintiffs;
- 13. Any other relief this Court deems appropriate.

Respectfully submitted,

---

Yorgos D. Marinakis
Attorney for Plaintiffs
P.O. Box 45923
Rio Rancho, NM 87174
505-459-4664
877-430-9550 (fax)

Named Plaintiff's Verification

STATE OF NEW MEXICO )
) ss.
COUNTY OF BERNALILLO)

COMES NOW Deborah Buchhorn, and being duly sworn, states as follows:

- 1. I have read and understood the contents of this Complaint.
- 2. I have personal knowledge of the facts stated herein.
- 3. I attest to and verify their truth and accuracy.

---

DEBORAH BUCHHORN
SWORN TO AND SUBSCRIBED before me this __ day of _____, 2001.

---

Notary Public

My Commission Expires:

From: "Pat Kohli" <kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net>

Subject: Albuquerque - the question!

Date: Friday, March 30, 2001 9:34 PM

Allahu Abha!

Nima Hazini wrote:

> Seems he passed the bar in Mass in February 2000, so it's hardly a scant 6 > months (albeit February 2000 is probably scant 6 months by your ridiculous > calculations), and besides the guy has a Ph.D of top of the law degree he's > obtained. Do you know anything about the firm he works for, hmmmm???

Phd in what?

Remember, you said you hears that he was a high-powered lawyer, who successfully sued and won several corporate lawsuits - this seems unlikely - therefore it seems taht you are piping in disinformation - and I don't know why you bring these things in. _If_ it turns out that his Phd is a JD, I sure you are the one that brings the info in.

The real question is not the qualifications of the attorney, it's the stuff in the complaint. That is why there was speculation that the attorney was a goof.

I asked you about the allegations and your response seemed to be along the vein of "yeah, all that". Well, that ain't about SFA! "All that" made no sense so it is hard for me to understand if you are being flip, don't understand the question, don't think I'm interested in the answer, or if it really was the Kenosha community beamed back down in the late 20th century, complete w/foot-washings, shareholders and trustees.

If you really want to say the Albuquerque community was hopelessly whacked out,
please do so in _detail_, not generalizations, not cliches, please, _how_ elections were rigged, how the riggers precluded complaints, _how_ etc.
_what_
etc. _who_ etc. etc. etc.

Blessings!

- Pat

kohli@ameritel.net

No probs, I'll do the same for you when someone is referring to you as Randy Blivitz, "Blivitz" being ten pounds of organic fertilizer in a five pound bag.

Randy Burns wrote:

> Thanks Pat!
>
> I had almost forgotten Rick's nickname!
>
> Cheers, Randy

Ciao!
- Pat
kohli@ameritel.net
Allahu Abha!

Randy Burns wrote:

> Hi Pat
>
> Is your statement what we really mean when we say that the Guardian > interprets the writings? The idea you present below as an example is a new > twist to me. Not that I hadn't heard about the saying of the Greatest Name > but rather that it was a type of interpretation. I always assumed that the > Guardian's interpretation was more directed to the meaning of what > Baha'u'llah said rather than to the timing of the application of it. Though > I'm sure his interpretations also apply to application as well.

What I mean when I say "interpret", I mean that that is what something means.

"The opposite of what it says" is the extreme in interpretation, but it is interpretation.

I think when it comes to consistent (rather than contrary) interpretations, I think the "72" is a good guide; though some may be better than others, than can be quite a few valid interpretations.

The Guardian provided _authoritative_ interpretation, one of those 72 which all could agree was very valuable.

> Is it true > that the UHJ can't change Shoghi Effendi's interpretation on applicability > but can only tell us that it's a good idea?

I'm trying not to get in trouble. Can you give some examples of Shoghi Effendi's interpretation on applicability? I don't think we should burn or brand people for certain crimes until the constitutionally legal routes are followed to established those as punishments, possibly in a society which might provide comparable but different punishments for various serious crimes. Is that where you wanted me to go?

> What about the Huquq?
>

It is in the Kitabi Aqdas, and here is where common sense ought to enter in. Suppose Shoghi Effendi interpreted as not appropriate for a given time, maybe the west in the 1930s. The circumstances change and if there is no authoritative interpreter do we lock ourselves in to a depression era mentality? I don't think so. I would discourage anyone from compelling a Baha'i to overlook an interpretation of the Guardian, but I would not presume that I should not pay the Right of God, described in the Most Holy Book, because of something said before I was born. Furthermore, I would encourage all Baha'is to consider as applicable to them as much as possible of the revelation of Baha'u'llah.

Peace!

- Pat

kohli@ameritel.net

What Rick is referring to is the childish taunting that Nima has been doing.

"Merde" is Spanish for "shit". Nima refers to Rick as "shit". If you want to take on the thankless task of lecturing the contributors on manners, please please please do!

Rick Schaut wrote:

> <multiman@aros.net> wrote in message
news:3ac4ee18.567578@news.aros.net...

> > Such humility! Really for those that lurk and those of us who have > > only begun to post it smacks of conceit.

>

> (snip)

> I will only note that my own > supposed "conceit" doesn't consist of purposefully misstating someone else's > appropriate name or abusing particular pronunciations of their names.

>

> > But perhaps you are better than most who post here.

>

> Perhaps, but I seriously doubt it. Frankly, such questions strike me as > abundantly unimportant. It's rather like trying to decide whether apple pie > is better than chocolate cake. The answer really depends on the cook.

>

> As for whether or not I'm a Baha'i, I think you already know the answer.

> Why did you ask?

Nima,

Mmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmum!

o

Pat

kohli@ameritel.net

"Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net> wrote in message news:QgKw6.355$cj6.145251@dfiatx1-snr1.gtei.net...

> The next step

> after these lawsuits will be Loyalty Oaths signed by all Baha'is just before > the annual elections. I expect changes to the LSA bylaws as well in order > to prevent future lawsuits and

> I would expect an addendum to the Baha'i membership card which new Baha'is
> sign to the effect that the signatory agrees to let all disputes be handled > by arbitration rather than by law courts. This is what big business is > doing all over the country, why not us?

I'm not sure how that follows. Wouldn't this rather depend more on the actual outcome of the lawsuit than it would arise from the filing of a rather poorly done complaint?

Regards,
Rick Schaut

The next step

after these lawsuits will be Loyalty Oaths signed by all Baha'is just before the annual elections. I expect changes to the LSA bylaws as well in order to prevent future lawsuits and

I would expect an addendum to the Baha'i membership card which new Baha'is sign to the effect that the signatory agrees to let all disputes be handled by arbitration rather than by law courts. This is what big business is doing all over the country, why not us?

Expect a major reduction in the individual rights of loyal Baha'is.

No doubt as an enhancement to spirituality!!

Randy

--

Rick Schaut <rsshaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:99vli702u6p@news1.newsguy.com...
>

Dear Pat,

She is not going to be able to persuade a judge that there is something wrong with applauding someone. A judge would like find it nonsensical that electioneering was termed "rigging." And she says nothing about the Baha'i teaching that might make this intelligible.

warmest, Susan

warmest, Susan

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

>Nevertheless, shareholders/members typically do

>have a right to see all the corporate documents,

According to the complaint, she *did* eventually see the documents she requested. Apparently her LSA just grumbled a lot about it.

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

**>

>Sure, _IF_ someone said, let's give a big hand for "___" and named just a few

>of the >friends eligible for election, immediately before an election, I'd be on the

>phone

>myself to the ABM (Prot). Duh!

I would too. Because in a Baha'i climate such behaviour might well be unacceptable. But it's not going to seem wrong to a non-Baha'i judge.

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

Could be a guy from somewhere else who gets thanked for his legal expertise in helping put together a book on wildlife laws which is available at the U of New Mexico web site:

<https://ipl.unm.edu/cwl/fedbook/acknow.html>

> Hi Pat!

**>

> I don't know anything about this guy, but in fact many lawyers take bar > exams when they move to a new state in order to practice law there. Some > lawyers are accredited in several states. Maybe he is a recent arrival in

> NM, or maybe he is a new lawyer, who knows?

**>

> Randy

**>

**> --

**>

> Pat Kohli <kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net> wrote in message

> news:3AC3BE5F.DD90C592@ameritel.net...

> > Allahu Abha!

**> >

> > Nima Hazini wrote:

**> >

> > > You know I was told there is more than one Yorgos Marinakis. This one was > > > Yorgos D.

**> >

> > If the "D" is for Dionysus, then Yorgos D. Marinakis' name might be one of

> the > > ones on the very bottom of the page <https://www.nmexam.org/pas.htm>,
those > who > > passed the test, but have outstanding requirements to meet before > acceptance to > > the bar. But this was some months back so they likely have been admitted
> to > > the bar.
> >
> > Maybe there is more than one lawyer named Yorgos Dionysus Marinakis in New > > Mexico?
> >
Seek and ye shall find

multiman@aros.net wrote:

> Such humility! Really for those that lurk and those of us who have > only begun to post it smacks of conceit.

Rather than dig into the vices of others, consider whether there is merit to the claim. We've read a document variously described as a deposition and a complaint, both might not be right. A lawyer who apparently passed the bar last year has been described as "high powered a corporate attorney . . . successfully sued and won several cases involving big corporations in New Mexico and Massachusettes". Though it is possible that both statements are true, my legal experience has been that cases take months (at least two) and bigger cases take years. To win several cases the same year he passed his bar suggests that he took over cases that others prepared, and in that scenario, it is hard to determine that he is "high-powered".

I don't think Rick is conceited so much as tired of folks insisting that he believe every story that they've heard.

> But perhaps you are better > than most who post here. Are you a Bahai?

Not a better person, just a bit more discriminating about legal stuff.

>

God bless you,
- Pat
kohli@ameritel.net

Apologies if this shows as a double post. I saw that I was addressing two NGs; I did not see the scrollbar was down at the bottom. I inadvertently posted to NGs where I was OT and cancelled.

Rick Schaut wrote:

> "Patrick Henry" <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote in message > news:tc693aqc7rvh33@corp.supernews.com...
> > Please notice the bahai fundamentalists are failing to respond to the > > details of the lawsuit charges:
>
> Please note that the "details" quoted don't allege any actual facts. They > simply allege that some vague violations have occurred.

Generally I'd agree. For example, I don't picture the prohibition on communicating w/ shareholders. There were specific and troubling allegations of electioneering, that the defendants (Albuquerque LSA, LSA trustees (who ARE those people?), and the NSA) "fraudulently rigged the election of Trustee Nelson Sapad by calling for applause for him three times prior to an election of corporate officers. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.
23. Defendant Trustees or their agents fraudulently rigged the election of Harry and Sondra Day, by introducing them and calling for applause moments before an election of corporate officers."

Other stuff like "secret voting at feast" looks more like some of the smoke and rumour that gets spread around TRB by misinformed pretenders to idle claimancy.

By suing the NSA, who failed to take action for their alleged electioneering, it leaves the mistaken impression that they are answerable only to themselves, which is not the case. The LSA should be answerable to the NSA and possibly a regional assembly. The NSA is answerable to the UHJ. IF the NSA rigged the election of Nelson Sapad, Harry and/or Sondra Day, the UHJ should have been apprised.

All in all, it seems to invite a rolling of the eyes and dismissal - NSA rigging election and witness appealing to that same NSA and Brent Poirier - it just seems too implausible.

- Pat
kohli@ameritel.net

Rick Schaut wrote:

> "Patrick Henry" <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote in message
> news:tc693aqc7rvh33@corp.supernews.com...
> > Please notice the bahai fundamentalists are failing to respond to the > > details of the lawsuit charges:
>
> Please note that the "details" quoted don't allege any actual facts. They > simply allege that some vague violations have occurred.

Generally I'd agree. For example, I don't picture the prohibition on communicating w/ shareholders. There were specific and troubling allegations of electioneering, that the defendants (Albuquerque LSA, LSA trustees (who ARE those people?)), and the NSA)

"fraudulently rigged the election of Trustee Nelson Sapad by calling for applause for him three times prior to an election of corporate officers. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

23. Defendant Trustees or their agents fraudulently rigged the election of Harry and Sondra Day, by introducing them and calling for applause moments before an election of corporate officers."

Other stuff like "secret voting at feast" looks more like some of the smoke and rumour that gets spread around TRB by misinformed pretenders to idle claimancy.

By suing the NSA, who failed to take action for their alleged electioneering, it leaves the mistaken impression that they are answerable only to themselves, which is not the case. The LSA should be answerable to the NSA and possibly a regional assembly. The NSA is answerable to the UHJ. _IF_ the NSA rigged the election of Nelson Sapad, Harry and/or Sondra Day, the UHJ should have been apprised.

All in all, it seems to invite a rolling of the eyes and dismissal - NSA rigging election and witness appealing to that same NSA and Brent Poirier - it just seems too implausible.

- Pat
kohli@ameritel.net

Michael McKenny wrote:

> Greetings, Rick.
> Sigh. I'm sure you'll be sad to hear I'm too busy to devote the > attention to this I'd like to.
> For the record, as usual there's a lot here about WHO rather than WHAT.
> Everything to do with who is irrelevant ad hominem. Stick to the issues man.

> That's what you're so powerless to do, since your whole position is at odds > with rational discourse -- you hold that WHO is all that counts. Doug and > his buddies, because of who they are, can define ethics and the good. So, > you carry this over into all discourse, you comment about who, rather > than what.
> Formal logic, in complete agreement with the principles of Baha'i > consultation, holds that who said it is of no consequence; what is said > is the whole point. The issue is what counts.
> I look forward to you addressing issues, but I don't hold my breath.
> To the Essential Baha'i Principles,
> Michael

So, then this would be irrelevant, "The attorney in question is a high powered corporate attorney in New Mexico working for one of the top firms in the state. He has successfully sued and won several cases involving big corporations in New Mexico and Massachusettes"

Whereas the details of why someone would think the deposition, or complaint is a mishmash, would be relevant.

I think Rick knew that.
Allahu Abha!

Nima Hazini wrote:

> You know I was told there is more than one Yorgos Marinakis. This one was > Yorgos D.

If the "D" is for Dionysus, then Yorgos D. Marinakis' name might be one of the ones on the very bottom of the page <https://www.nmexam.org/pas.htm>, those who passed the test, but have outstanding requirements to meet before acceptance to the bar. But this was some months back so they likely have been admitted to the bar.

Maybe there is more than one lawyer named Yorgos Dionysus Marinakis in New Mexico?

Since I don't know any of the facts in the case, I cannot comment on them. However, number 4 below, that literature review prevents access to shareholders seems frivolous and slightly incorrect. I own/started from scratch both a for-profit corp and a 501 c 3 corp, and will say first that personnel issues in either one can be "private." Nevertheless, shareholders/members typically do have a right to see all the corporate documents, so that if the Plaintiff was indeed a shareholder/member, then he/she can see them, and it doesn't necessarily involve literature review. The Plaintiff would easily WIN that case and we will certainly hear about that outcome on trb.

by definition, there is no such thing as a shareholder in a non-profit 501(c)(3) corporation. They are called "members." and they are members merely because they filed the incorporation papers and/or were elected at the annual meeting. They are NOT members simply because they might serve on either an LSA or NSA. Make sense? So there is something incorrect with the way this complaint was filed.... against shareholders? There is no such creature, even if he/she might look like a bear. :)

Therefore, someone who is a Baha'i in a community is NOT a member of the corporation, unless they also happen to be a "member" of the 501(c)(3).

If the Plaintiff is going to carry this into court, he/she/they should carefully define who and what they are suing.

regards,
chas

Patrick Henry wrote:

- > Please notice the bahai fundamentalists are failing to respond to the
- > details of the lawsuit charges:
- >
- > 2. Plaintiffs allege that Trustees breached their duties as corporate
- > officers.
- > 3. Plaintiffs allege that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their
- > duty of deciding appeals owed to Plaintiffs.
- > 4. Plaintiffs allege that the literature review policies of the Local
- > Spiritual Assembly and the National Spiritual Assembly, which lie in
- > privity, unlawfully prevent shareholders from their right to communicate
- > with other shareholders.
- > 5. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants failed to execute their duties under
- > their corporate by-laws.
- >
- > THOSE are the charges, being ignored by the lackies who handled
- > damaged control on talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai

<snip>
Aha!

Thanks for pointing this out that you lived there.

Did you see some of the blatant electioneering which the suite alleges?

Is there any of that other stuff which you might explain, like how the defendants prevent communication with share-holders, why shouldn't the LSA take responsibility for the parade float, what is the TV show "Spiritual Reality" and what was going on on the show that it would be cancelled, or that the LSA has some say in it, were shareholders prevented from watching the TV show (if so, how?)?

Maybe there were problems in that community, but the allegations look more like hole than doughnut.

Blessings!
- Pat
kohli@ameritel.net

Nima Hazini wrote:

> That's not the only complaint in the brief. However, having lived in that > community in the early 90s myself, I can corroborate all of what it states > based on my own experience. In fact, it was thanks to that community and its > loonier than looney LSA that my eyes opened about the cult-like reality of > the Baha'i community and its administration.

>

> cheers,

> Nima

They definitely are NOT shareholders. They are "members" of the corporation,
and

NOT necessarily members of the religion. Shareholders is NOT the correct term.

--chas

for-profit corporations in the US have shareholders non-profit corporations in the US have members.

Michael McKenny wrote:

> I'll overlook your slip about not being shareholders, but believers.

> That's an ad hominem. Share holders expect the corporate directors to > manage the company appropriately. Believers in Baha'i expect the LSA > etc. members to manage the spiritual community appropriately. Under > Baha'i and other jurisdiction, the argument may certainly be made that > direction the corporation/spiritual community as a fundamentalist > exclusivist cult discriminating against women and other activities > at variance to the definition of Baha'i is mismanagement.

>

To the Future,

>

M

>

Sure, _IF_ someone said, let's give a big hand for "___" and named just a few
of the friends eligible for election, immediately before an election, I'd be on the phone

myself to the ABM (Prot). Duh!

If it happened, steps should be taken. I don't think these are the steps and I suspect that it did not happen. I know if the AO asked me about electioneering
in my community, I'd say what I knew. this is why I tend to be suspicious of this single source account.

multiman@aros.net wrote:

> If your By-Laws forbid campaigning in any manner, I think the judge > might just buy the argument. I think Abdul-Baha would have.

>

> On 28 Mar 2001 14:52:58 GMT, smaneck@aol.com (Susan Maneck ) wrote:

>

> >Sorry, Nima. I'd like to see someone trying to persuade a judge that applauding

> >constitutes fixing an election. ;-}

> >

> >"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time

> >left to start again . . "

> >Don McLean's American Pie

> ><https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

> >

Gee, Pat, how does it feel to be kissing Schaut's behind like that??

cheers,

Nima

"Pat Kohli" <kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net> wrote in message news:3AC50C15.5A41AD8A@ameritel.net...

Seek and ye shall find

multiman@aros.net wrote:

> Such humility! Really for those that lurk and those of us who have > only begun to post it smacks of conceit.

Rather than dig into the vices of others, consider whether there is merit to the claim. We've read a document variously described as a deposition and a complaint, both might not be right. A lawyer who apparently passed the bar last year has been described as "high powered a corporate attorney . . . successfully sued and won several cases involving big corporations in New Mexico and Massachusetts". Though it is possible that both statements are true, my legal experience has been that cases take months (at least two) and bigger cases take years. To win several cases the same year he passed his bar suggests that he took over cases that others prepared, and in that scenario, it is hard to determine that he is "high-powered".

I don't think Rick is conceited so much as tired of folks insisting that he believe every story that they've heard.

> But perhaps you are better > than most who post here. Are you a Bahai?

Not a better person, just a bit more discriminating about legal stuff.

>

God bless you,

- Pat

kohli@ameritel.net

Yep. All of it.

cheers,
Nima

"Pat Kohli" <kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net> wrote in message news:3AC3BC8E.DC47BBD3@ameritel.net...
Aha!

Thanks for pointing this out that you lived there.

Did you see some of the blatant electioneering which the suite alleges?

Is there any of that other stuff which you might explain, like how the defendants prevent communication with share-holders, why shouldn't the LSA take responsibility for the parade float, what is the TV show "Spiritual Reality"
and what was going on on the show that it would be cancelled, or that the LSA
has some say in it, were shareholders prevented from watching the TV show (if so,
how?)?

Maybe there were problems in that community, but the allegations look more like hole than doughnut.

Blessings!
- Pat
kohli@ameritel.net

Nima Hazini wrote:

> That's not the only complaint in the brief. However, having lived in that > community in the early 90s myself, I can corroborate all of what it states > based on my own experience. In fact, it was thanks to that community and its > loonier than looney LSA that my eyes opened about the cult-like reality of > the Baha'i community and its administration.
>
> cheers,
> Nima

I have seen many suits being an assitant to a para legal, and it is no worse than most, and if the facts are true, it should prove very interesting.

Plus as I wrote on another site, this can be expected when as Shoghi Effendi stated the administration has been "multilated."

On 28 Mar 2001 05:06:35 GMT, smaneck@aol.com (Susan Maneck ) wrote:

>>Yorgos D. Marinakis
>>Attorney for Plaintiffs
>>P.O. Box 45923
>>Rio Rancho, NM 87174

>

>An actual lawyer wrote this mishmash? It doesn't even make any sense!

>

>"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
>left to start again . . ."

>Don McLean's American Pie

><https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

>

Perhaps some sort of legal defense fund should be created for vicitms of the fundamentalists. Often people have excellent cases but not the where-with-all to pursue justice, the best beloved of all things in His sight....

--

FG

www.FG.com

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://members.nbci.com/FG/index.htm>

"Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au> wrote in message news:99sgtg\$74p\$1@gnamma.connect.com.au...

> The clincher here - which shows how smart this attorney is - is that he's > pursuing the matter based on laws of incorporation and members rights > therein. While Baha'i fundamentalists lately have been hiding behind the red > herring of "the Baha'i faith is a voluntary organization" argument, they > would be hard pressed to argue this one to a judge where the law as spelled > out in this specific case is concerned. If a judge found that a board of > trustees violated their own bylaws and rules in treating incorporated > members, she could rule very decisively against the board of trustees, and > suspect that should this attorney have enough testimony and evidence to

I

that > effect, it could very well happen.

>

> It seems that Shoghi Effendi's insistance in having the Baha'i faith > incorporated as an organization is finally coming back to haunt, at least, > this generation of Baha'i leadership. One could say that the AO has finally > been put on notice. Of course, I say this is all for the good of the Baha'is

> themselves, part of the process of helping the maturation of their > administrative order and all. May there be more lawsuits - and there will -

> to help expedite this process along.

>

> cheers,

> Nima

>

>

> <multiman@aros.net> wrote in message news:3ac1a554.30228214@news.aros.net...

>

> I have seen many suits being an assistant to a para legal, and it is no > worse than most, and if the facts are true, it should prove very > interesting.

>

> Plus as I wrote on another site, this can be expected when as Shoghi > Effendi stated the administration has been "multilated."

>

>

>

> On 28 Mar 2001 05:06:35 GMT, smaneck@aol.com (Susan Maneck ) wrote:

>

> >>Yorgos D. Marinakis

> >>Attorney for Plaintiffs

> >>P.O. Box 45923

> >>Rio Rancho, NM 87174

> >

> >An actual lawyer wrote this mishmash? It doesn't even make any sense!

> >

> >"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no
> time

> >left to start again . . "

> >Don McLean's American Pie

> ><https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

> >

>

>

>

>

>If your By-Laws forbid campaigning in any manner, I think the judge >might just buy the argument. I think Abdul-Baha would have.

If the by-laws state that the plaintiff failed to mention it. . It is not at all clear what connection applauding is supposed to have with electioneering or electioneering with "rigging."

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
left to start again . . "

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

>Uhm, how could there be applauding? When did it happen? Was this when >the names of candidates were read?

Dear Michael,

I believe the complaint indicates they applause came when they were introduced at a meeting.

warmest, Susan

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time left to start again . . "

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message
news:20010331012353.28097.00002934@ng-mi1.aol.com...

> >I can corroborate all of what it states

> >based on my own experience.

**>

> I've read the complaint and still can't figure out *what* it states except that > some people clapped their hands and one person thought he was god. And oh yeah,

> the NSA is really, really slow to answer its mail. Now, that's one complaint

> even *I* can collaborate.

**>

> "And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time

> left to start again . . "

> Don McLean's American Pie

> <https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

**>

>Well, I guess if the directors of a corporation do not respond to the >mail of the members of the corporation, that is a legitimate complaint

Oh, they respond. It just takes forever. > I assume you mean corroborate, or have you really participated in the >slowness of Baha'i authorities to respond?

Only by giving them a lot to respond to. :-)

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time left to start again . . "

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

**>

>It's a deposition. Do you know what a deposition is?

Yes, Nima jan. I've even had a few. ;-} A deposition is an interview made under oath. That's not what this

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time left to start again . . "

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

When the going gets tough, His Holiness Ayatollah Schaut appears from out of the woodwork:

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:99t6gc030k7@news2.newsguy.com...

>Dr. Danesh case where people repeatedly cite one >newspaper article but fail to point out that the facts actually did go to a >trial and that Dr. Danesh was found to have not acted improperly in any way.

So why would he cut a deal never to practice psychiatry ever again? I suppose you also believe OJ Simpson is innocent because he was acquitted on a technicality *grin*.

cheers,
Nima

Ayatollah Schaut speculated:

>First of all, the deal covered Canada, not the world.

If you'd care to pay any attention that is what I said in my earlier post.

> Quitting clinical practice in order to >pursue academic interests isn't unheard of.

Ahh, but why did the good Doktor quit his career in psychiatry and promise never to practice in Canada where the accusations where made?

>None of that changes the fact that the allegations were the subject of a >civil lawsuit, and the allegations were found to be without merit during >that lawsuit.

So what? You still haven't addressed why he will never practice psychiatry in Canada ever again.

>If memory serves, the civil lawsuit against Simpson was successful.

But the criminal trial wasn't.

cheers,
Nima

"Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:99vl0d02tid@news1.newsguy.com...

>Egads. The facts were adjudicated in a court of law, and your response is,
>"So what?"! At that point, your question is irrelevant.

It is irrelevant to you because you do not have an answer. But seems to have been quite relevant to the Canadian board of psychiatry who cut the deal with him.

> No number of speculative questions will > change those facts.

Like the fact that he will never practice psychiatry in Canada ever again.

<spin doctoring snipped>

cheers,
Nima

>

> So why would he cut a deal never to practice psychiatry ever again?

The "deal" had nothing to do with the civil case which was dismissed with extreme prejudice.

But he gave up his license to practice medicine before this came to court because he had already retired and was on his way to Europe at the time. He thought doing this would quiet things down without bringing any embarrassment on the Faith. Obviously he was wrong, and my understanding that the NSA and the House were none too pleased that he handled things as he did.

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

"Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message news:9a577c$516$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> The point I think being made is that the people running Baha'i, > including the current lot on the UHJ, are corrupt because this former > leading Canadian NSA member was doing hanky panky and his buddies took > care of him by placing him in a position of trust. Lovers of the ad > hominem leap to defend him and people can debate whether he was really > at fault (they didn't lock him up) or innocent (but, he agreed not to > practise his profession in British Columbia, or is it Canada, or is it > anywhere any more).
> To me this is ad hominem and beside the significant issue.

That people are reporting only part of the facts for the purpose of casting aspersions and destroying the reputations of other people is "beside the significant issue"! Gosh, let's not allow ourselves to be bothered with a little matter of the truth, shall we?

Leaping to someone's defense in the face of the kind of reporting that's been done here doesn't make one a lover of the ad hominem, Michael. It makes one a lover of truth and honesty.

Truth matters, Michael, because discussing the issues gets seriously bogged down when people phrase the "issues" within a factual context that's filled with half-truths and outright lies. When people assume facts not in evidence, as you have done, then their conclusions are faulty.

> I've said before that Hooper and his buddies can have as many > mistresses as they please (though I'd advise them to have consensual sex) > and that doesn't bother me at all. It's a non-issue.

Of course, that doesn't stop you from referring to the Universal House of Justice as "Hooper and his buddies." Is it OK to be insulting and disrespectful so long as you continue to pay lip-service to the notion that your disrespect and insults are non-issues?

Regards,
Rick Schaut

Greetings, Susan.

The Latin words mean "To the Person". Many today think only negative comments to the person are what is meant. No. It means speaking anything about the person, instead of the issue.

M

>>Lovers of the ad
>>hominem leap to defend him
>
> Michael I believe you have just turned the meaning of ad hominem on its head.

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20010331004111.28097.00002920@ng-mi1.aol.com...

> >
> >So why would he cut a deal never to practice psychiatry ever again?
>
> The "deal" had nothing to do with the civil case which was dismissed with > extreme prejudice.
> But he gave up his license to practice medicine before this came to court > because he had already retired and was on his way to Europe at the time.
He > thought doing this would quiet things down without bringing any embarrassment > on the Faith. Obviously he was wrong, and my understanding that the NSA
and > the House were none too pleased that he handled things as he did.

Oh dear! Oh dear! How things get twisted!

The story as reported in the Toronto Star was: -

"The College of Physicians and Surgeons withdrew charges of sexual impropriety yesterday against a psychiatrist who is past secretary general of the Baha'i faith in Canada.
Charges were withdrawn against Dr. Hossain Banadaki Danesh in exchange for

Danesh's immediate resignation and his "written undertaking not to reapply for another licence to practice medicine in Ontario or to apply to practice medicine anywhere else, at any time."

He has also agreed to post $10,000 security toward costs incurred by the college in paying for therapy for the complainants.

Charges were laid by three former patients.

Danesh, 56, has not admitted to any sexual impropriety with any of his patients."

Another Bahai martyr who paid towards treatment of those who complained of their treatment by him but he did nothing at all, absolutely nothing!

Sounds to me that he was "acquitted" and left the country without any other stain on his charecter.

As ever,

Dermod.

Greetings, Dermod.

Well, I read the story in Ottawa in THE OTTAWA CITIZEN and I'm pretty sure British Columbia was mentioned. But, were I in court I'd have to admit that it happened years ago and my memory is not infallible. The whole issue concerns personality which I consider largely irrelevant, so I'm not going to dig up an old copy of THE OTTAWA CITIZEN, when the basic issue of the personality that he agreed not to practise again and the charges were not pursued is agreed by all parties.

Thrive,
M

"Dermod Ryder" (grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk) writes:

> The story as reported in the Toronto Star was: -

**>

> "The College of Physicians and Surgeons withdrew charges of sexual > impropriety yesterday against a psychiatrist who is past secretary general > of the Baha'i faith in Canada.

> Charges were withdrawn against Dr. Hossain Banadaki Danesh in exchange for

> Danesh's immediate resignation and his "written undertaking not to reapply > for another licence to practice medicine in Ontario or to apply to practice > medicine anywhere else, at any time."

**>

> He has also agreed to post $10,000 security toward costs incurred by the > college in paying for therapy for the complainants.

> Sigh. I'm sure you'll be sad to hear I'm too busy to devote the > attention to this I'd like to.
> For the record, as usual there's a lot here about WHO rather than
WHAT.

Yes. And, of course, it all began when I made a side comment about the apparent competence of the attorney. That particular comment wasn't intended to be probative of anything. Rather, it was based on the rather obvious lack of any substance in the complaint that's been posted here.

It was your friend, Mr. Hazini who, rather than address the point I had raised (i.e. the idea that the complaint is long on allegations but short on alleging any actual facts), chose to single out my side comment and present the rather unfounded thesis that the attorney is supposedly some high-powered chap who has won several cases. If you wish to take anyone to task for not addressing the issues, Mr. McKenny, I suggest you point your Solar Guard's weapon in Mr. Hazini's direction, and not mine.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
news:9a547q$1d6$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> Greetings, Rick.
> Uhm, I assume you mean that it's short on facts.

No. The only thing a complaint does is state allegations. The facts get brought out at trial, should the case ever get that far.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk> wrote in message news:tcea1c75bcdse2@xo.supernews.co.uk...

> "Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message > news:9a5ai50n7a@news1.newsguy.com...
> > "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
> > news:9a547q$1d6$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...
> > > Greetings, Rick.
> > > Uhm, I assume you mean that it's short on facts.

> > No. The only thing a complaint does is state allegations. The facts get > > brought out at trial, should the case ever get that far.

> And no doubt you are praying fervently that it doesn't!

Actually, I'm praying fervently that it does. I'd take quite a bit of pleasure in watching you and Mr. Hazini dine on ample dishes of crow.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk> wrote in message news:tcfjihc2ilf0e4@xo.supernews.co.uk...

> "Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message

> news:9a81g10ia6@news2.newsguy.com...

> > Actually, I'm praying fervently that it does. I'd take quite a bit of > > pleasure in watching you and Mr. Hazini dine on ample dishes of crow.

> But what happens if the lady wins her case? Do you promise us a similar > pleasure?

Absolutely!

So, Dermod, are you up for it?

Regards,
Rick Schaut

<multiman@aros.net> wrote in message
news:3ac4ee18.567578@news.aros.net...

> Such humility! Really for those that lurk and those of us who have > only begun to post it smacks of conceit.

I don't quite see how it would smack of conceit any more than constantly referring to the Universal House of Justice as the 'universal house of injustice', with the inherent stance of placing oneself above that particular institution, smacks of conceit. I will only note that my own supposed "conceit" doesn't consist of purposefully misstating someone else's appropriate name or abusing particular pronunciations of their names.

> But perhaps you are better than most who post here.

Perhaps, but I seriously doubt it. Frankly, such questions strike me as abundantly unimportant. It's rather like trying to decide whether apple pie is better than chocolate cake. The answer really depends on the cook.

As for whether or not I'm a Baha'i, I think you already know the answer.
Why did you ask?

Regards,
Rick Schaut

<snip>.

>As for whether or not I'm a Baha'i, I think you already know the answer.

The answer is no. Rick Schaut is a Nazi, not a Baha'i.

cheers,
Nima

I must admit I may have been a little blunt, but it seems to be the way people are on this site. I do there fore apologize for the question of Faith, I myself am not a Bahai and while investigating it have not found so far that which would appeal to me. Perhaps I will but I am observing the flow and have not found the argument for the hands and UHJ (I will for your sensibilities in this post not use the other appellation which I have so far found more appropriate) as the successors being very compelling.

On Fri, 30 Mar 2001 16:10:40 -0800, "Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote:

>
><multiman@aros.net> wrote in message
news:3ac4ee18.567578@news.aros.net...
>> Such humility! Really for those that lurk and those of us who have >> only begun to post it smacks of conceit.
>
>I don't quite see how it would smack of conceit any more than constantly >referring to the Universal House of Justice as the 'universal house of >injustice', with the inherent stance of placing oneself above that >particular institution, smacks of conceit. I will only note that my own >supposed "conceit" doesn't consist of purposefully misstating someone else's >appropriate name or abusing particular pronunciations of their names.
>
>> But perhaps you are better than most who post here.
>
>Perhaps, but I seriously doubt it. Frankly, such questions strike me as >abundantly unimportant. It's rather like trying to decide whether apple pie >is better than chocolate cake. The answer really depends on the cook.
>
>As for whether or not I'm a Baha'i, I think you already know the answer.
>Why did you ask?
>
>
>Regards,
>Rick Schaut
>
>
>
Greetings, Rick.

As expected this post deals with irrelevant ad hominem. Where's the substance?

M

> I don't quite see how it would smack of conceit any more than constantly > referring to the Universal House of Justice as the 'universal house of > injustice', with the inherent stance of placing oneself above that > particular institution, smacks of conceit. I will only note that my own > supposed "conceit" doesn't consist of purposefully misstating someone else's > appropriate name or abusing particular pronunciations of their names.
>
>
> Perhaps, but I seriously doubt it. Frankly, such questions strike me as > abundantly unimportant. It's rather like trying to decide whether apple pie > is better than chocolate cake. The answer really depends on the cook.

>
> As for whether or not I'm a Baha'i, I think you already know the answer.
> Why did you ask?
>
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut

>
>
>

--
"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

You're the one who crawled out of his hole the moment the message
"New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD"
<https://members.nbc.com/FG/NMLawsuit.htm> was posted and started slinging mud and aspersions against me and others.

Your playing the innocent little lamb isn't going to fool anyone who is even remotely familiar with the despicable things you, and people like you, have done to fellow bahais for years in the name of perverted "truth," on and off line....

--

FG
www.FG.com
The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://members.nbc.com/FG/index.htm>

"Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message <news:9a27up015oa@news2.newsguy.com>...

>

> "Patrick Henry" <patrick\_henry@liberty.com> wrote in message > news:9a215o\$3bd04\$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de...

> > Please note how desperate bahai fanatics and fundamentalists > > are to deny and discredit the FRAUD alleged in the New Mexico > > lawsuit against the local and US national bahai institutions.

>

> Please note that, in Mr. Glaysher's dictionary, pointing out the absence
of > fact constitutes a "denial". I think this is the same dictionary under which

> SPAM is considered a legitimate activity.

>

> > The person I am responding to here, on soc.culture.israel, is widely > > regarded as a notorious fanatic fundamentalist.

>

> Perceptive readers will see this as the ad-hominem that it is.

>

> In the mean time, we still haven't seen any _facts_, and not amount of > Glaysher-made smoke-screen will manage to obscure this. I just wonder if > Mr. Glaysher will demonstrate a similar dedication to truth when this case > gets dismissed.

>

>

> Regards,
> Rick Schaut

>

>

>

>Gee, Fred, what happened to that Baha'i love you keep talking about?

Pot calling the kettle black? How amusing. Certainly Baha'i love does not even remotely emanate from your maladorous direction, Herr Schaut. You wouldn't know what "Baha'i" or "love" was if it bit you.

>Ah, yes. I've done such "despicable" things as call people on their faux >pas.

You've called no ones faux pas, other than the one in your own psychotic imagination.

> I've had the temerity to point out that a complaint is not a >deposition and to question the supposed track record of an attorney who only >passed his bar exam a scant six months ago.

Seems he passed the bar in Mass in February 2000, so it's hardly a scant 6 months (albeit February 2000 is probably scant 6 months by your ridiculous calculations), and besides the guy has a Ph.D of top of the law degree he's obtained. Do you know anything about the firm he works for, hmmmm???

> Nasty, bad, horrible old me.

I can think of a dozen more colorful adjectives.

>Methinks that the real complaint is that I don't just roll over and play >dead

Please do the world a favor and go sailing away into the sunset on your little boat.

>that doesn't actually allege any facts that would constitute a violation of >the law.

Ooh, and you're a New Mexico state judge and would know *grin*. LOL :))

Polly wanna cracker??

cheers,
Nima

"Patrick Henry" <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote in message news:tc9jpgde2vqf45@corp.supernews.com...

> You're the one who crawled out of his hole the moment the message
> "New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD"
> <https://members.nbc.com/FG/NMLawsuit.htm> was posted
> and started slinging mud and aspersions against me and others.

Gee, Fred, what happened to that Baha'i love you keep talking about?

> Your playing the innocent little lamb isn't going to fool anyone > who is even remotely familiar with the despicable things you, and > people like you, have done to fellow bahais for years in the name > of perverted "truth," on and off line....

Ah, yes. I've done such "despicable" things as call people on their faux pas. I've had the temerity to point out that a complaint is not a deposition and to question the supposed track record of an attorney who only passed his bar exam a scant six months ago. Nasty, bad, horrible old me.

Methinks that the real complaint is that I don't just roll over and play dead when someone posts the supposedly damaging "evidence" of a complaint that doesn't actually allege any facts that would constitute a violation of the law.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

Greetings, Rick.

Again, as expected, you are not dealing with issues, but irrelevant personalities. Who is logically irrelevant; what is the issue.

M

"Rick Schaut" (RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom) writes:

**>
> [Snort.] I dare say we wouldn't be in this little thread, sport, had you > actually gone and looked up the information on this attorney rather than > repeating what you'd been told by someone else. Now _there's_ a cracker
for

> you.

**>

**>

> Regards,
> Rick Schaut

**>

**>

**--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Greetings, Rick.

Only ad hominem here, except an allegation without further detail

that the complaint is flawed. How is it flawed.

If you really were concerned with truth and with issues, you'd admit women are equal to men, that the Baha'i vision is inclusive, tolerant, open-minded, universalist, world-embracing, harmonizing. The issues transcend personalities. Mismanagement has divided the religion. Political attitudes and fundamentalism have mutilated it from the vision of its founder. The issue is to live the life: that is, to demonstrate the essential principles in action.

Show us you can do more than speak about personalities. Admit here your belief in what makes Baha'i worthwhile, instead of standing as a political backer supporting the faction in power and the individuals heading it. Forget who and say what. The truth is that any true backer of current leadership would clearly uphold the principles leaders need to elevate as standards for those guided. Well, your move. Can you speak any language, but ad hominem?

M

"Rick Schaut" (rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom) writes:

> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message

> news:9a54kp$1sr$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

>> Again, as expected, you are not dealing with issues, but irrelevant >> personalities. Who is logically irrelevant; what is the issue.

>

> Again, as expected, you take me to task for engaging in a discussion of > personalities when you're absolutely silent when it comes to Mr. Hazini's > attacks on people in this forum. Try using a more even hand about this.

> And, by the way, I have not argued that the complaint is flawed because the > attorney is incompetent. That, of course, would actually be an ad-hominem > argument. Rather, I have argued that the attorney appears to be incompetent

> because the complaint is seriously flawed. So, the only real question is > how you've managed to fail to notice that Nima has yet to address the > _issue_ of the rather obvious flaws in the complaint?

>

>

> Regards,

> Rick Schaut

>

>

>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

"Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:9a80ag0ea6@news2.newsguy.com...

>

> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message

> news:9a5i85$krn$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> > Only ad hominem here, except an allegation without further detail

> > that the complaint is flawed. How is it flawed.

>

> Michael, not only have you managed to turn the definition of "ad-hominem" on > its head (for what purposes one can only guess), but you've also not been > paying attention.
>
> Don't you have a gook to write, or something?

"Gook" - an offensive term used in the US to describe a foreigner, especially a coloured person from Asia.

Now Rickster, are you a racist or do you just churn out this rubbish and never bother to turn on your Spell Check or otherwise check it?

Guess you're gonna have to eat some humble pie ... or is that "crow"?

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:9a3j6q01qoi@news1.newsguy.com...

>
>
> Actually, according to the web site to which I posted a link earlier, he > passed the written portion of the bar exam in September, 2000.
>
> And, note that I didn't just pull that out of my backside.

Unlike the rest of the information you post here and elsewhere? Well! There's a first time for everything and this is obviously the first time!

You now know that the picture of your normal information retrieval methodology will haunt me for the rest of my natural! Can I sue for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder?

"Rick Schaut" <rsshaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:9a81m60iu8@news2.newsguy.com...

>
> "Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk> wrote in message > news:tcea1dcl1u4ae3@xo.supernews.co.uk...
> > "Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message
> > news:9a3j6q01qoi@news1.newsguy.com...
> > > Actually, according to the web site to which I posted a link earlier,
he > > > passed the written portion of the bar exam in September, 2000.
>
> > > And, note that I didn't just pull that out of my backside.
>
> > Unlike the rest of the information you post here and elsewhere?
>
> Ah, yes. Again we hear from the "my mind is already made up, so don't > confuse me with the facts" peanut gallery.

Your mind isn't made up - it's made up for you!

>

> > Can I sue for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder?

>

> If you can find a solicitor to take the case (which usually entails finding > a solicitor who's content with whatever money can be eked out of the > client), you can file a suit for whatever you'd like. Please do. This > could be quite fun.

No problem finding a solicitor. Since I'd have to file suit in Seattle and since your lawyers are accustomed to work under contingency, it wouldn't cost me anything to file. Mind you such a lawyer would need to be satisfied there's a pretty good case before he'd take it on.

You can sleep easy - I'm not going to sue, made of sterner stuff and seen much worse in my life than your retrieving information via the methodology discussed. But if we ever do cross swords in Court, it won't be fun - been to Court on quite a few occasions, haven't lost one yet and have no intention of ever doing so.

>

>

> Regards,

> Rick Schaut

>

>

"Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:9a8u96022j4@news2.newsguy.com...

>

> > Your mind isn't made up - it's made up for you!

>

> Even if that were true, it would be preferable to the constant state of > chaos that accurately describes how well your mind is made up.

My! we are full of opinions but short on fact. Have you any facts with which to back up this assertion? Your assertion seems to not state any facts.

>

> > > Can I sue for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder?

> <SNIP>

> > But if we ever do cross swords in Court, it won't be fun - been

> > to Court on quite a few occasions, haven't lost one yet and have no > > intention of ever doing so.

>

> Oh, it might not be fun for _you_. Me. I think I'd have a grand old time > watching you attempt to prove "Post Traumatic Stress Disorder".

I have PTSD at the moment - no problem in getting medical certification to that. I have the medication and other assorted symptoms - if you care to calculate the GMT equivalent of my messages, you'll see a pattern of insomnia. Now who would you recommend in Seattle to act as attorney for me?

The Prim Sleep(less)er

"Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:9aa8tr08ou@news2.newsguy.com...

**>
> > > Your mind isn't made up - it's made up for you!
>
> > > Even if that were true, it would be preferable to the constant state of > > > chaos that accurately describes how well your mind is made up.
>
> > My! we are full of opinions but short on fact. Have you any facts with > > which to back up this assertion?
>
> I believe you've already supplied all the evidence I need:

Such as - you're long on opinion but short on fact!

**>
> > I have PTSD at the moment - no problem in getting medical certification to
> > that.
>
> Thank you.

Silly boy! What makes you think you're the cause? On that account don't flatter yourself !

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:9aasms0u08@news2.newsguy.com...

**>
> "Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk> wrote in message > news:tchpuql1a161c9@xo.supernews.co.uk...
> > Silly boy! What makes you think you're the cause? On that account don't > > flatter yourself !
>
> Boy, did you miss the point. But, thanks for the chuckle.

Oh! I didn't miss it! Chose to ignore it! Big difference!

Dear Michael

I don't think you fully understand the Baha'i concept of maturity. As it has been explained to me "maturity" means "obedience!" Leave it to the Hitler youth to be the most mature group on the planet! I guess the Nazi's were just ahead of their time.

Cheers, Randy

**--

Michael McKenny <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message news:9a9oe1$3m5$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> Hi, Dermod.

> You wrote:

> "Dermod Ryder" (grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk) writes:

> > Your mind isn't made up - it's made up for you!

**>

> Actually, this is very important. Baha'i principle is that humanity is > arriving at the state of maturity. One aspect of this maturity is that > individuals are no longer, according to Baha'i, to follow whatever is > dictated by fundamentalist leadership, but each individual has the > responsibility to see with his/her own eyes and hear with his/her own > ears. Letting others make up one's own mind is contrary to Baha'i.

> Demanding others comply with what is contrary to Baha'i principle is > mismanagement in a Baha'i view.

> To Baha'i Administrators Doing Their Job,

> M

**> --

> "My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

> (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

**>

Hi, Rick.

What Rick said or what Dermod said is not validated because of who said it. The issue is that in Baha'i freedom of thought and expression is an essential principle, as is the independent investigation of truth and the abhorrence of fundamentalist dictatorship. It is the principles that are the issue, not which individuals order them to be disregarded, nor which individuals disregard them.

To Baha'i,

M.

"Rick Schaut" (rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom) writes:

> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message

> news:9a9oe1$3m5$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

>> "Dermod Ryder" (grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk) writes:

>> > Your mind isn't made up - it's made up for you!

**>

>> Actually, this is very important. Baha'i principle is that humanity is >> arriving at the state of maturity.

**>

> Michael. What were you saying about "to the person" some posts ago?

**>

**>

> Regards,

> Rick Schaut

>
>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Hi, Rick.

Then challenge him to a duel if you wish.

My point is that what you say is not validated by who you are. And, it is not only my point. It is a principle of formal logic and it is a principle of Baha'i consultation. Talking about persons, pretty much all I see from you, is irrelevant to issues.

The main issue is that Baha'i is open-minded, tolerant, favouring the independent investigation of truth, the freedom of thought and expression, the realization that the jewel of spiritual truth is perceived in a rainbow of varying perceptions, according to the divinely endowed diversity of humanity, the equality of women and men, the harmony of faith and reason.

It's a great game to focus discussion on who you are and your character, etc., but that is irrelevant to the issue.

Thrive,
M.

"Rick Schaut" (RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom) writes:

> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
> news:9aak0a$dk9$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

>> What Rick said or what Dermod said is not validated because of who >> said it.

>

> Except when Mr. Ryder makes a remark that's intended to disparage my > character. In which case you reply by saying that this is an important > issue. The double standard strikes again.

>

>> It is the principles that >> are the issue, not which individuals order them to be disregarded, nor >> which individuals disregard them.

>

> Then kindly explain why you happen to notice when some individuals > supposedly disregard those principles and fail to notice when other > individuals blatantly disregard them.

>

>

> Regards,
> Rick Schaut

>

>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Hi, Rick.

Why not try the Michael McKenny approach. I delight in flames and ad hominem. I respond these indicate that the flamer obviously considers my position, my thoughts, my points irrefutable. Rick, rather than thinking, in error, that I've the time to read everything posted here and take everyone to task for ad hominem, why not yourself respond to those maligning your character by saying, well I see my points are irrefutable as Nima, etc. you are not addressing these issues I've been making.

Only problem with that seems to be that I'm still able to ask you what are your points, other than personalities?

Let's see you demonstrate that Baha'i is independent investigation of truth, freedom of thought and expression, harmony of faith and reason, acceptance of the valid variety of personal opinions, the equality of women and men, individual responsibility for ethical action, the abhorrence of dictatorial, closed-minded, intolerant, exclusivist fundamentalism. Then, address every comment about you or other individuals by saying such remarks are invalid logically and according to the principles of Baha'i consultation and merely demonstrate the irrefutability of these Baha'i principles.

Well, now that you're doing that, I can get back to my other duties. I'll check in from time to time to see how you're doing.

Good Luck,
M.

"Rick Schaut" (RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom) writes:

> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
> news:9acbk9$5hp$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...
>> My point is that what you say is not validated by who you are.
>
> Which still fails to answer the question as to why you notice when some > people do this in relatively subtle ways (if at all), but fail to notice > when people do it so blatantly as to astound the senses.
>
> You're exhibiting prejudice, Michael. Your efforts to make this point have > been carried out in an arbitrary and capricious manner.
>
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

>If you can find a solicitor to take the case (which usually entails finding >a solicitor who's content with whatever money can be eked out of the >client), you can file a suit for whatever you'd like. Please do. This >could be quite fun.

I don't think Wendy Momen would be amused.

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

>Aw, Susan! You never let me have any fun!

Gee, and all this time we all thought you were getting off on all this.

cheers,
Nima

Greetings, Patrick.

Many thanks again for all you've done here. The existence of this newsgroup is a bright ray of light upon what some people had wanted kept in the dark. Baha'i principle is for the freedom of thought and expression, for the independent investigation of truth, not blindly imitating what fundamentalist leadership has dictated. You were the major factor in the initiation of this newsgroup. To you goes the credit that censorship (the opposite of Baha'i principle) is not as pervasive as previously. Censors cannot prevent posts here, and every move they make, contrary to Baha'i principle, to punish people after they post should be fully documented and available for all to read. Abdu'l Baha said that an ugly man could call himself handsome and that those failing to live the Baha'i life could call themselves Baha'i, but they fooled no one.

The Baha'i life is freedom of thought and expression, independent investigation of truth, the absence of fundamentalist fetters, the equality of women and men, the balance of faith and reason, openness, inclusion, etc. Thanks for advancing this.

To Baha'i Administrators Living the Baha'i Life,
M.

"Patrick Henry" (patrick_henry@liberty.com) writes:

**>
> It is my hope that the distortions of the uhj will begin to be purged, it > will gradually reform itself, acknowledging the broad and liberal > Teachings of Baha'u'llah that it has suppressed now for so long.....

**>
> --
> FG
> www.FG.com
> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
> <https://members.nbci.com/FG/index.htm>
>

**--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Pot calling the kettle black again, eh Susan?

cheers,
Nima

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20010402223359.27249.00003375@ng-ch1.aol.com...

>After over four years of observing the tactics of >bahai fundamentalists, I've learnt a few things about
>the way they operate:

**>

>1. Always smear and attack the individual.

Hey, did you hear that guys? Nima and Dermot are both fundamentalists!

>4. Change or ignore the subject.

You mean like when Dermot inserted Danesh into the discussion.

**>

>5. Shift to the past and argue over who said what, when, where,

> how, etc....

Are you referring to Nima's last post on Steve Scholl and the Dialogue issue?

Must be.

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
left to start again . . "

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

Merde Man says:

">Their prejudice is rather obvious.

Excuse me - but BWAHAHAHAHAHA! You people have the art of pots calling kettles black down to an art form and you're accusing us of prejudice?
ROTFLMAO

cheers,

Nima

Versus

TRUSTEES OF THE SPIRITUAL ) ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHÁ'Í S OF )
ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, and )
THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE ) BAHÁ'Í'S OF ALBUQUERQUE, )
NEW MEXICO, a non-profit )
corporation, and the )
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY ) OF THE BAHÁ'Í'S OF THE ) UNITED STATES, )
an Illinois Corporation, )

What I don't understand is why isn't the "universal" house of "justice" also named here? They're the ones pulling the strings of these puppets, and the bootlickers on talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai, for that matter....

**--

FG

www.FG.com

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://members.nbc.com/FG/index.htm>

I would assume they're already aware of these newsgroups and perhaps my website or someone else will inform them.

**--

FG

www.FG.com

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://members.nbc.com/FG/index.htm>

<multiman@aros.net> wrote in message news:3ac3ad5d.4412531@news.aros.net...

**>

**>

> Perhaps as a friendly gesture you could get hold of her lawyer and > offer yourself and others as possible witnesses in developing this > pattern she is talking about?

**>

> On Thu, 29 Mar 2001 07:03:15 -0600, "Patrick Henry"

> <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote:

**>

> >Please notice the bahai fundamentalists are failing to respond to the > >details of the lawsuit charges:

**> >

> >2. Plaintiffs allege that Trustees breached their duties as corporate > >officers.

> >3. Plaintiffs allege that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their > >duty of deciding appeals owed to Plaintiffs.

> >4. Plaintiffs allege that the literature review policies of the Local > >Spiritual Assembly and the National Spiritual Assembly, which lie in > >privity, unlawfully prevent shareholders from their right to communicate > >with other shareholders.

> >5. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants failed to execute their duties under > >their corporate by-laws.

**> >

> >THOSE are the charges, being ignored by the lackies who handled > >damaged control on talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai

**> >

> >I would think the lawyer representing the plaintiffs might find many > >similar stories, during the last decade or so, documented on my > >bahai webpages, as well as perhaps many potential witnesses to > >the manner in which the bahai administration now operates....

> >
> > FULL TEXT:
> > New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD 2001
> > <https://members.nbc.com/FG/NMLawsuit.htm>
> >
> > --
> > FG
> > www.FG.com
> > The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
> > <https://members.nbc.com/FG/index.htm>
> >
> >
> > "Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au> wrote in message
> > news:99tuhg$1b$1@gnamma.connect.com.au...
> > I think it says somewhere it was filed on the 22nd of March.
> >
> > cheers,
> > Nima
> >
> > "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
> > news:99talus$6f9$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...
> > Greetings, Nima.
> > Good to see you here again.
> > What's the date of this? Is this going to go to trial and when?
> > By the way, if you replied to my post a while back about my receiving > > your test message I didn't get your reply. That post mentioned my review > > of ARCHAEOLOGY OF THE DREAMTIME, that's Australian. That review was posted > > to a pagan newsgroup, as just now has my review of A GUIDE TO EARLY
IRISH
> >
> > LAW. Hooper and his buddies would have loved that. Women had little legal > > standing and rulers were very difficult to take to task. I'm currently > > working on the 1899 anthropological classic THE NATIVE TRIBES OF CENTRAL
> > AUSTRALIA.
> > As always, here's hoping you're doing very well.
> > Thrive,
> > Michael
> >
> > "Nima Hazini" (lotusapt@wxc.com.au) writes:
> > > It's a deposition. Do you know what a deposition is?
> > >
> > > cheers,
> > > Nima
> > >
> > > "Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message > > > news:20010328000635.13283.00002188@ng-fi1.aol.com...
> > > Yorgos D. Marinakis
> > > Attorney for Plaintiffs
> > > P.O. Box 45923
> > > Rio Rancho, NM 87174

>news:3ac3ad5d.4412531@news.aros.net...

>> >> Perhaps as a friendly gesture you could get hold of her lawyer and >> >> offer yourself and others as possible witnesses in developing this >> >> pattern she is talking about?

>

>> >Well, he could. But, then, the courts tend to not allow hearsay >testimony

>> >as evidence.

>

>> It's not hearsay testimony if he was a witness to the alleged events!

>

>The "you" being addressed above wasn't Nima. It was Fred.

>

>

Oops! I don't see his posts, so it's sometimes difficult to follow the attributions.

Paul

>2. Plaintiffs allege that Trustees breached their duties as corporate >officers.

Too vague an accusation to be meaningful.

>3. Plaintiffs allege that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their >duty of deciding appeals owed to Plaintiffs.

Plaintiff does not state how long she waited for an appeal.

>4. Plaintiffs allege that the literature review policies of the Local >Spiritual Assembly and the National Spiritual Assembly, which lie in >privity, unlawfully prevent shareholders from their right to communicate >with other shareholders.

This is not a for-profit corporation and we are not shareholders. We are believers.

>5. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants failed to execute their duties under >their corporate by-laws.

Too vague.

warmest, Susan

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

> I'll overlook your slip about not being shareholders, but believers.

>That's an ad hominem.

Dear Micheal,

I think you need to look up the word ad hominen. You are making some rather amazing definitions of it lately:

Ad hominen, for your information, is to attack an opponents character rather than answering his arguments. It can also refer to the practice of appealing to the audiences prejudices, emotions, or special interests rather than to their intellects or reason. For instance your referring to Baha'is in good standing as "fundies" or the Baha'i Faith as a "cult" both constitute good examples of ad hominen. As for my argument neither character issues or appeals to sentiment have anything to do with the point I am making which involves the validity, from a legal standpoint of the complaint in question. Whether or not American Baha'is can be considered "shareholders" of the NSA is a purely legal matter and speaks directly to the issue of the validity of this lawsuit.

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

Thanks, Nima.

I'll try to read through this thread on the weekend, though I'm very busy now.

Thrive,
Michael

"Nima Hazini" (lotusapt@wxc.com.au) writes:

> I think it says somewhere it was filed on the 22nd of March.

>

> cheers,

> Nima

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

>

>The person I am responding to here, on soc.culture.israel, is widely >regarded as a notorious fanatic fundamentalist. It should be evident >to perceptive readers that the fundamentalists are attempting to >prevent knowledge of this lawsuit from reaching public officials in Israel, >and elsewhere, whom they regularly lie to about the nature of bahai >institutions.

I'm sure soc.culture.israel would just as soon your not inform them as well.
;-}

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

If this is true, I hope they find for her in every particular. This administration has been going downhill for over 40 years, its what you get when the system has been according to Shoghi Effendi "mutilated".

On Wed, 28 Mar 2001 10:04:37 +1000, "Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au> wrote:

>How sweet it is :)
>
>cheers,
>Nima
>
>
>
>
>"Patrick Henry" <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote in message >news:tc11cr1ip1od57@corp.supernews.com...
>SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT
>COUNTY OF BERNALILLO
>STATE OF NEW MEXICO
>
>DEBORAH BUCHHORN, for herself )
>and for MINORITY ) >MEMBERS OF THE SPIRITUAL )
>ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHÁ'Í'S OF ) >ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, )
>)
>Plaintiffs, )
>)
>vs. ) No. CV 2001-01978
>)
>)
>TRUSTEES OF THE SPIRITUAL )
>ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHÁ'Í S OF )
>ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, and )
>THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE ) >BAHÁ'Í'S OF ALBUQUERQUE, )
>NEW MEXICO, a non-profit )
>corporation, and the )
>NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY ) >OF THE BAHÁ'Í'S OF THE ) >UNITED STATES, )
>an Illinois Corporation, )
>)
>Defendants. )
>
>
>
>VERIFIED COMPLAINT FOR FRAUD, LIBEL, BREACH >OF CORPORATE DUTIES, AND DECLARATORY AND

>INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

**>

>COMES NOW Plaintiffs by and through their attorney of record, Yorgos D. Marinakis, and for their Complaint states as follows:

**>

>INTRODUCTION

**>

>1. Plaintiffs file this shareholder or member derivative suit against:

>- the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Albuquerque, New Mexico (Local Spiritual Assembly, or LSA),

>- their Trustees, and

>- the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States (National Spiritual Assembly, or NSA), with whom the Local Spiritual Assembly and its Trustees have privity.

>2. Plaintiffs allege that Trustees breached their duties as corporate officers.

>3. Plaintiffs allege that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their duty of deciding appeals owed to Plaintiffs.

>4. Plaintiffs allege that the literature review policies of the Local Spiritual Assembly and the National Spiritual Assembly, which lie in privity, unlawfully prevent shareholders from their right to communicate with other shareholders.

>5. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants failed to execute their duties under their corporate by-laws.

**>

>PARTIES

**>

>6. Named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn was a shareholder or member of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Albuquerque, New Mexico, at the time of the incidents stated in this Complaint, and she continues to be a member.

>7. The Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Albuquerque, New Mexico (Local Spiritual Assembly) is a New Mexico non-profit corporation.

>Shareholder-members may appeal decisions by the Local Spiritual Assembly to >the National Spiritual Assembly.

>8. The Trustees of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Albuquerque, New Mexico (Trustees) individually reside in Bernalillo County, New Mexico, >as a condition of their Trusteeship. Trustees are Kambiz Victory, Ok-Sun and John McHenry, Manijeh Kavelin, Nelson Sapad, Harry and Sondra Day, Owen

>Creightney, and Carol Caldwell. Jenny Beery was a Trustee during the time of many of these incidents.

>9. The Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States (National Spiritual Assembly) is incorporated in and has its principal place of >business in Illinois.

**>

>FACTS

**>

>10. The Bahá'í have no clergy. Instead, each community in the Bahá'í Faith annually elects nine Trustees or a "Local Spiritual Assembly," which acts >as an agent or subsidiary of the National Spiritual Assembly. Each National Spiritual Assembly answers to the supreme Bahá'í body, The >Universal House of Justice. The Universal House of Justice established the >Continental Board of Counsellors (sic) to assist them, and the Countinental

>Board of Counsellors further has the Auxiliary Board to assist them.

>11. In the particular situation between the Trustees of the Spiritual >Assembly of Bahá'ís of Albuquerque, New Mexico, Defendants Trustees >controlled what member activities Plaintiffs were able to engage in and >what members they were able to talk to. They stopped them from interacting >with friends at member events. They stopped Plaintiffs from serving on >committees and stopped their individual activities for personal reasons.
>They made all the decisions relating to Plaintiffs' membership-related >activities. They told named Plaintiff that opinions she may personally >hold were bad and implicitly threatened to curtail her presence at member >functions. They acted as if the abuse were no big deal, that it was >Plaintiff's fault, and denied doing it. They failed to act when one member >was physically threatened and shoved by another member.

>12. Although Plaintiffs have consistently complied with Defendant Trustees' >demands, they have also consistently filed complaints against them with the >National and International Bahá'í authorities. This has enraged the >Defendant Trustees.

>13. Defendant Trustees have never made specific accusations or informed >Plaintiffs of wrongdoing, other than vague statements such as "you have >issues with the Spiritual Assembly."

>14. Therefore, deep-seated animosities and distrust have arisen between >Plaintiffs and the Trustees, which are incapable of resolution and thereby >present an irreconcilable barrier to the ability of the corporation to >function as is.

>15. Plaintiffs' reasonable expectations that they would be able to >participate in the management and activities of their corporation, as >minority shareholders, have been thwarted since at least 1995.

>16. Article IV of the LSA by-laws provides that the LSA shall compose >differences and disagreements among members of the community. Article VII, >section 9 of the NSA by-laws provides that any member of a Bahá'í
community
>may appeal from a decision of his LSA to the NSA.
>

>Failure to Allow Inspection of Books and Records
>

>17. The books and records of the corporation have been maintained in an >inaccurate and inequitable manner.

>18. The year 2000 annual meeting showed a 10%, $10,000 discrepancy in
the >corporate books.

>19. In a letter dated September 3, 2000, named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn >informed the Local Spiritual Assembly that she desired to inspect their >financial books. Defendants refused.

>20. Following mailing of the demand letter, the LSA offered to allow named >Plaintiff to inspect the books and records, but under conditions that the >Plaintiff deemed in bad faith.
>

>Fraudulent Oppression and Prevention of Communications between Shareholders
>

>21. On April 19, 1998, Defendant Trustees ordered named Plaintiff Deborah >Buchhorn to refrain from discussing her "issues" with anyone but Auxiliary >Board member Brent Poirier and the Local Spiritual Assembly. Plaintiff >complied and appealed to Brent Poirier and the National Spiritual Assembly, >who took no action. Defendant LSA has wrapped many of their dealings with >members in the cloak of secrecy in a like manner.

>

>Electioneering

>

>22. At the Annual Meeting Feast of 1999, Defendant Trustees fraudulently >rigged the election of Trustee Nelson Sapad by calling for applause for him >three times prior to an election of corporate officers. Plaintiff appealed >to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

>23. Defendant Trustees or their agents fraudulently rigged the election of >Harry and Sondra Day, by introducing them and calling for applause moments >before an election of corporate officers.

>24. Trustees do not ensure secret balloting at the Annual Meeting Feast.
>The usual practice is not to use a ballot box, but for members to lay their >ballots on a plate or in a basket in plain sight of the election tellers.

>Ms. Buchhorn appealed to Brent Poirier on at least one election. Mr.

>Poirier responded by handling the collection basket himself.

>25. In the member newsletter and prior to the annual election and during >the Annual Meeting Feast, Trustees have used scriptural quotes to draw >attention to persons serving on certain committees.

>

>Fraudulent and Oppressive Behavior Relating to the TV Show "Spiritual >Reality"

>

>26. Plaintiffs conceptualized and produced a TV show named "Spiritual >Reality." After 100 showings, during which Defendant Trustees only >complimented Plaintiffs, Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent >to oppress, mandated major changes in the show. Plaintiffs complied and >appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no >action.

>27. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered >Plaintiffs to "temporarily postpone" their television show, "Spiritual >Reality." Plaintiff complied, and Defendants never specifically informed >Plaintiffs what they had done to precipitate the arbitrary and capricious >termination. The effect of this order, namely the termination of the TV >show, violated the right of shareholders to communicate with other >shareholders.

>28. Trustees fraudulently and under false pretences stated that the reasons >for termination would be fully discussed at a later meeting, at which >meeting those reasons were never discussed. Defendant Trustee Kambiz >Victory, employee of channel 41, knew or should have known that a >television program cannot be "temporarily postponed." Plaintiffs appealed >to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action.

>29. Defendant Kambiz Victory, a Trustee, fraudulently and with intent to >oppress, told named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn in regards to her television >show that "Your teaching can have no effect because you are not in unity >with the Spiritual Assembly." Defendant knew that Ms. Buchhorn's >television show brought in 15% of the information requests during an >unrelated major regional advertising campaign by Defendants. Plaintiff >appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no action.

>30. Defendant Trustees fraudulently and under false pretences set-up >Plaintiffs to a "confession" of their animosity towards Defendant Trustees.
>Named Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly, who took no >action.

>

>Other Oppression

>

>31. As an act of individual initiative, named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn >organized a Bahá'í parade float for several years for the New Mexico State >Fair Parade. In 2000, Defendant Trustees convened a task force to organize >the parade float for that year. On August 22, 2000, approximately 19 days >before the parade, Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to >oppress, instructed Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to terminate her parade >float activities. A false reason for this termination was published in the >membership newsletter by Defendant Trustees, causing Plaintiff >embarrassment. Plaintiff complied, and Defendant never informed Plaintiff >as to the reason for that termination. Plaintiff appealed to the National >Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

>32. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered >Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to receive instruction on the Bahá'í Covenant.
>Plaintiff complied and attended that "instruction," which in fact consisted >of three (3) hours of interrogation by Trustee Owen Creightney, and John >and Ok-Sun McHenry. It became apparent at this meeting that Trustee >Creightney had lied to the Trustees in order to oppress named Plaintiff.
>Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly and Brent Poirier, >who took no action.

>33. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, ordered >named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn to resign from the Bahá'í gospel choir.
>Plaintiff complied, and Defendant never informed Plaintiff as to the reason >for that termination. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual >Assembly and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

>34. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, undermined >named Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn's Saturday Night Coffee House and in >effect stopped her Coffee House. Defendant never informed Plaintiff as to >these circumstances. Plaintiff appealed to the National Spiritual Assembly >and Brent Poirier, who took no action.

>35. Defendant Trustees, fraudulently and with intent to oppress, have >ordered numerous Bahá'ís to shun Plaintiff Deborah Buchhorn.

>36. Defendant Trustee Kambiz Victory told a Plaintiff "I am the voice of >God in this community."

>

>Libel

>

>37. Defendant Trustees knowingly published false and defamatory information >about Plaintiffs in the Albuquerque Bahá'í newsletter, specifically >relating to the parade banner.

>

>Unlawful Prevention of Communication between Shareholders

>

>38. Defendant National Spiritual Assembly has the policy that Local >Spiritual Assemblies are responsible for reviewing pamphlets and >newsletters and materials that mention the Faith such as songs, play >scripts, souvenir items, and greeting cards, intended for publication or >distribution within their communities, whereas the National Spiritual >Assembly is responsible for review of those same materials intended for >nationwide publication.

>

>CAUSES OF ACTION

>

>Count I

>39. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.
>40. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly acted and >continue to act fraudulently towards the Plaintiffs.
>41. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.
>
>Count II
>42. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.
>43. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly libeled the named >Plaintiff.
>44. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.
>
>Count III
>45. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.
>46. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to >act and continue to fail to act in good faith, which failure constitutes >fraud.
>47. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.
>
>Count IV
>48. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporates all previous paragraphs.
>49. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to >act and continue to fail to act with the care an ordinary prudent person in >like position would exercise under similar circumstances, which failure >constitute fraud.50. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.
>
>Count V
>51. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.
>52. The Trustees of the Local Spiritual Assembly have repeatedly failed to >act and continue to fail to act in a manner they reasonably believe to be >in the best interests of the corporation and its members, which failure >constitutes fraud.
>53. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.
>
>Count VI
>54. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.
>55. The Trustees have repeatedly failed their duty to compose differences >and disagreements with themselves and the members, in violation of their >by-laws, which failure constitutes fraud.
>56. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.
>
>Count VII
>57. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.
>58. The National Spiritual Assembly has repeatedly failed their duty to >hear appeals from Plaintiffs, in violation of their by-laws.
>59. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.
>
>Count VIII
>60. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.
>61. The literature review policies of the National and Local Spiritual >Assemblies violate the rights of corporate members to communicate with >other corporate members.
>62. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.
>
>Count IX
>63. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate all previous paragraphs.

>64. The practice of the Local Spiritual Assembly to direct members not to > speak about their dealings with the LSA with other corporate members > violates the rights of corporate members to communicate with other > corporate members.

>65. Plaintiffs have suffered emotional damages thereby.

>

>JUDICIAL RELIEF

>

>WHEREFORE, for these reasons, Plaintiffs request that this Court:

>1. Declare that the Trustees acted fraudulently towards Plaintiffs;

>2. Declare that Trustees libeled Plaintiffs;

>3. Declare that the Trustees breached their corporate duties > towards Plaintiffs;

>4. Remove the Trustees from their positions and enjoin them from serving in > official Bahá'ís capacities for nineteen (19) years;

>5. Remove the LSA Directors who are also Trustees;

>6. Declare that the Local Spiritual Assembly violated members' rights to > inspect corporate books and records;

>7. Compel Defendant LSA to retain an independent certified public > accountant to audit the books for the last two years;

>8. Declare that Defendant LSA violated their corporate by-laws by failing > to compose differences and disagreements among members of the

> community;

>6. Declare that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their duty of > hearing Plaintiffs' appeals;

>7. Declare that the literature review policies of the Bahá'ís violate

> United States common law as preventing corporate members from > communicating

> with other corporate members;

>8. Enjoin Defendants National Spiritual Assembly and Local Spiritual

> Assembly from enforcing their literature review policy;

>9. Declare that the secrecy practices of the Local Spiritual Assembly > violate United States common law as preventing corporate members from > communicating with other corporate members;

>10. Enjoin Defendant Local Spiritual Assembly from continuing their secrecy

> practices;

>11. Award compensatory damages from Defendants to Plaintiffs;

>12. Award attorney's fees and costs to Plaintiffs;

>13. Any other relief this Court deems appropriate.

>

>Respectfully submitted,

>

>

> _____
> Yorgos D. Marinakis

> Attorney for Plaintiffs

> P.O. Box 45923

> Rio Rancho, NM 87174

> 505-459-4664

> 877-430-9550 (fax)

>

>Named Plaintiff's Verification

>

>STATE OF NEW MEXICO )

>) ss.

>COUNTY OF BERNALILLO)

>
>COMES NOW Deborah Buchhorn, and being duly sworn, states as follows:
>1. I have read and understood the contents of this Complaint.
>2. I have personal knowledge of the facts stated herein.
>3. I attest to and verify their truth and >accuracy._____
>DEBORAH BUCHHORN
>SWORN TO AND SUBSCRIBED before me this __ day of _____, 2001.
>_____
>Notary Public
>
>My Commission Expires:
>
>
>
>
>
> The Latin means "To the Person". I am using it strictly to mean that; >saying point A is good or bad because of who said it,

Dear Michael,

I'm well aware of that. What you seem unaware of is that none of my arguments had anything to do with the question of "who said it" as far as person is concerned. Now what that person might be as a legal entity (shareholder, etc.) is entirely a different matter and speaks directly to the validity of the case in question. It is not ad hominem to say that someone cannot be tried as a juvenile because they happen to be an adult, for instance.

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

Greetings, Susan.

The Latin means "To the Person". I am using it strictly to mean that; saying point A is good or bad because of who said it, rather than assessing A on the worth of A itself is irrelevant ad hominem. The point is not who said something, but what was said. Here formal logic agrees with the principles of Baha'i administration that one considers what, not who.

M

Susan Maneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

>> I'll overlook your slip about not being shareholders, but believers.
>>That's an ad hominem.
>
> Dear Micheal,
>
> I think you need to look up the word ad hominem. You are making some rather > amazing definitions of it lately:
>
> Ad hominem, for your information, is to attack an opponents

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Greetings, Susan.

Unlike what I've read of Rick, you are addressing what rather than who. You are on topic. Your point is quite valid, though I assume any hearing will have details to substantiate the charge, or it will with justification be tossed out. One cannot be dragged before a judge on the charge of theft without further details -- on such and such a day at such and such a place witnesses observed one making off with the following items not belonging to one; one's fingerprints were found on the item, etc.

So what are these people accused of doing specifically.

I'll overlook your slip about not being shareholders, but believers. That's an ad hominem. Share holders expect the corporate directors to manage the company appropriately. Believers in Baha'i expect the LSA etc. members to manage the spiritual community appropriately. Under Baha'i and other jurisdiction, the argument may certainly be made that direction the corporation/spiritual community as a fundamentalist exclusivist cult discriminating against women and other activities at variance to the definition of Baha'i is mismanagement.

To the Future,
M

Susan Maneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

>>2. Plaintiffs allege that Trustees breached their duties as corporate >>officers.

**>

> Too vague an accusation to be meaningful.

**>

>>3. Plaintiffs allege that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their >>duty of deciding appeals owed to Plaintiffs.

**>

> Plaintiff does not state how long she waited for an appeal.

**>

>>4. Plaintiffs allege that the literature review policies of the Local >>Spiritual Assembly and the National Spiritual Assembly, which lie in >>privity, unlawfully prevent shareholders from their right to communicate >>with other shareholders.

**>

> This is not a for-profit corporation and we are not shareholders. We are > believers.

**>

>>5. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants failed to execute their duties under >>their corporate by-laws.

**>

> Too vague.

**>

> warmest, Susan

**>

**>

**>

> "And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time

> left to start again . . "
> Don McLean's American Pie
> <https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>
>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message
news:9a2fbm01h75@news2.newsguy.com...

> Most of the folks around here seem to not grasp the > distinction.

Really?? Would that be anything like the distinction you once alleged about Steven Scholl and the Dialogue editors?? Remember when you claimed they had circulated a Modest Proposal to all the National Convention delegates and that Scholl had admitted to doing so in his Crisis of Faith letter?? LOL
:))

Next time when you accuse others of not doing their research first pull your head out of your own butt, Herr Ayatollah Schaut.

Polly wanna cracker again??

cheers,
Nima

"Paul Hammond" <pahammond@onetel.net.uk> wrote in message news:3ac4d742@news-uk.onetel.net.uk...

> Rick Schaut wrote in message <9a2fbm01h75@news2.newsguy.com>...

> ><multiman@aros.net> wrote in message
news:3ac3ad5d.4412531@news.aros.net...

> >> Perhaps as a friendly gesture you could get hold of her lawyer and > >> offer yourself and others as possible witnesses in developing this > >> pattern she is talking about?

> >Well, he could. But, then, the courts tend to not allow hearsay testimony
> >as evidence.

> It's not hearsay testimony if he was a witness to the alleged events!

The "you" being addressed above wasn't Nima. It was Fred.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

<multiman@aros.net> wrote in message
news:3ac3ad5d.4412531@news.aros.net...

> Perhaps as a friendly gesture you could get hold of her lawyer and > offer yourself and others as possible witnesses in developing this > pattern she is talking about?

Well, he could. But, then, the courts tend to not allow hearsay testimony as evidence. Most of the folks around here seem to not grasp the distinction.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

**>
>What I don't understand is why isn't the "universal" house of "justice" >also named here?

You can't sue the House of Justice in a US court.

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

**>
>Gee, Fred, what happened to that Baha'i love you keep talking about?
>

Fred, considers Baha'i love part of the 'technique' remember?

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message
news:20010402223359.27249.00003375@ng-ch1.aol.com...

> >4. Change or ignore the subject.

> You mean like when Dermod inserted Danesh into the discussion.

Actually, I believe I was the first to bring it up, as I see a similarity between the posting of this complaint and Dr. Cole's retention of the newspaper article without so much as a hint of any the other evidence we know to exist.

However, I'm still quite amazed at the way some folks will continue to speculate on Dr. Danesh's motives in settling the OCPS case based on nothing more than a newspaper article. That these same individuals also assert that they refrain from speculating in instances of poultry facts is an abundantly specious claim. Their prejudice is rather obvious.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

>After over four years of observing the tactics of >bahai fundamentalists, I've learnt a few things about >the way they operate:
>
>1. Always smear and attack the individual.

Hey, did you hear that guys? Nima and Dermot are both fundamentalists!

>4. Change or ignore the subject.

You mean like when Dermot inserted Danesh into the discussion.

>
>5. Shift to the past and argue over who said what, when, where,
> how, etc....

Are you referring to Nima's last post on Steve Scholl and the Dialogue issue?
Must be.

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
left to start again . . ."

Don McLean's American Pie

<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

After over four years of observing the tactics of bahai fundamentalists, I've learnt a few things about
the way they operate:

1. Always smear and attack the individual.
2. Lure into supposed discussion then cut the jugular.
3. Work together to create the perception for non-bahais
that the individual is unbalanced, aberrant, etc....
4. Change or ignore the subject.
5. Shift to the past and argue over who said what, when, where,
how, etc....

As long as the uhj uses "review" to suppress all free thought and discussion and encourages such unseemly tactics, attempting to disucss anything with them is simple a waste of time and energy.

I have many interests in life. Documenting bahai fundamentalism is only one of them. Many people other than myself have noted
"The Baha'i Technique":
<https://members.nbci.com/FG/technique.htm>

Nobody has to read my reposts who has done so already. My Message Rules are full of fundamentalists. Others may use the same technology to filter out my reposts.They're intended for the uninformed.... And they will be staying on the newsgroups I choose as long as bahai censorship and deceit continue. It should be evident to informed people that fundamentalists desire to suppress all knowledge of their suppression and coercion of bahais and non-bahais over the last decade or more now.

I am only interested in preserving the record of what bahai fundamentalists have done. Others may read it and decide for themselves.

Anyone interested in my views may read them in my archives or glean them from my reposts, which, in my view, preserve the historical record of how low bahai fanatics have been willing to go....

I can only hope by serving humbly, as the self-appointed archivist/historian for talk.religion.bahai and for all the many victims of the "universal" house of "justice," that someday someone will come along who will dig deep enough into the record that the truth will begin to surface.

Impartial nonbahai observers might wish to compare and decide for themselves whether the picture fundamentalists labor so hard to paint of me is accurate or not:

<https://fglaysher.com/bio.htm>

And then ask yourself why would they go to such extremes? What is it they don't want you to know? I submit the answers may be found on my bahai webpages....

It is my hope that the distortions of the uhj will begin to be purged, it will gradually reform itself, acknowledging the broad and liberal Teachings of Baha'u'llah that it has suppressed now for so long.....

**--

FG

www.FG.com

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://members.nbc.com/FG/index.htm>

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:9a3j6q01qoi@news1.newsguy.com...

**>

> "Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au> wrote in message

> news:9a3d3t$asq$1@gnamma.connect.com.au...

> > >Gee, Fred, what happened to that Baha'i love you keep talking about?

**>

> > Pot calling the kettle black?

**>

> Really? Isn't Fred the one who makes it an issue to point out everyone else's lack of "Baha'i Love"?

**>

> > >Ah, yes. I've done such "despicable" things as call people on their faux

> > >pas.
>
> > You've called no ones faux paus
>
> Get back to me on this when you accurately state the difference between a > deposition and a complaint.
>
> > Seems he passed the bar in Mass in February 2000, so it's hardly a scant 6 > > months (albeit February 2000 is probably scant 6 months by your ridiculous > > calculations), and besides the guy has a Ph.D of top of the law degree > he's > > obtained.
>
> Actually, according to the web site to which I posted a link earlier, he > passed the written portion of the bar exam in September, 2000.
>
> And, note that I didn't just pull that out of my backside. I did something > unique and novel: I looked it up! You might try that for yourself some > time.
>
> > Do you know anything about the firm he works for, hmmmm???
>
> Frankly, no. Is there something I'm supposed to know? Tell you what, why > don't you go find a web site that shows which firm he works for, and then > I'll go find information about that firm. I've grown a little skeptical > about your unsupported statements about someone's supposed qualifications > (particularly when this someone writes a complaint that looks like it came > from a first-year law student).
>
> > > Nasty, bad, horrible old me.
>
> > I can think of a dozen more colorful adjectives.
>
> I'm sure you can. I'm also sure that they're about as accurate as your > description of this attorney's accomplishments.
>
> > >Methinks that the real complaint is that I don't just roll over and play > > >dead
>
> > Please do the world a favor and go sailing away into the sunset on your > > little boat.
>
> Do you know the difference between a "boat" and a "yacht"? (Old sailor's > joke. The quick-witted will be able to guess the punch line.)
>
> > >that doesn't actually allege any facts that would constitute a violation
> of > > >the law.

>
> > Ooh, and you're a New Mexico state judge and would know *grin*.
>
> I don't recall claiming to be a New Mexico state judge, but, then, one > doesn't need to be any kind of judge in order to have sufficient knowledge > to point out the flaws in a basic complaint. This is a relatively simple > tort. Most folks who've taken one course in business law can figure out
that > this complaint is pretty pathetic.
>
> > Polly wanna cracker??
>
> [Snort.] I dare say we wouldn't be in this little thread, sport, had you > actually gone and looked up the information on this attorney rather than > repeating what you'd been told by someone else. Now _there's_ a cracker
for
> you.
>
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

"Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message
news:20010402222849.27249.00003372@ng-ch1.aol.com...

> > If you can find a solicitor to take the case (which usually entails finding > > a solicitor who's content with whatever money can be eked out of the > > client), you can file a suit for whatever you'd like. Please do. This > > could be quite fun.

> I don't think Wendy Momen would be amused.

Aw, Susan! You never let me have any fun!

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
news:9af6c7$hsk$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> Hi, Rick.
> Why not try the Michael McKenny approach. I delight in flames and > ad hominem. I respond these indicate that the flamer obviously considers > my position, my thoughts, my points irrefutable.

I'm afraid you've failed to notice that this is precisely what I've been doing in my recent responses to your messages. You see, rather than focussing on discussing the issues I've raised, you've focussed on my behavior. By your own definition, that's ad-hominem. And, by your own argument, you now understand the implications of your repeated, and very one-sided, attempts at discussing my behavior.

Thank you, Michael.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
news:9acbk9$5hp$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> My point is that what you say is not validated by who you are.

Which still fails to answer the question as to why you notice when some people do this in relatively subtle ways (if at all), but fail to notice when people do it so blatantly as to astound the senses.

You're exhibiting prejudice, Michael. Your efforts to make this point have been carried out in an arbitrary and capricious manner.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
news:9aak0a$dk9$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> What Rick said or what Dermot said is not validated because of who > said it.

Except when Mr. Ryder makes a remark that's intended to disparage my character. In which case you reply by saying that this is an important issue. The double standard strikes again.

> It is the principles that > are the issue, not which individuals order them to be disregarded, nor > which individuals disregard them.

Then kindly explain why you happen to notice when some individuals supposedly disregard those principles and fail to notice when other individuals blatantly disregard them.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
news:9a9oe1$3m5$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> "Dermot Ryder" (grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk) writes:

> > Your mind isn't made up - it's made up for you!

> Actually, this is very important. Baha'i principle is that humanity is > arriving at the state of maturity.

Michael. What were you saying about "to the person" some posts ago?

Regards,
Rick Schaut

Hi, Dermot.
You wrote:

"Dermod Ryder" (grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk) writes:

> Your mind isn't made up - it's made up for you!

Actually, this is very important. Baha'i principle is that humanity is arriving at the state of maturity. One aspect of this maturity is that individuals are no longer, according to Baha'i, to follow whatever is dictated by fundamentalist leadership, but each individual has the responsibility to see with his/her own eyes and hear with his/her own ears. Letting others make up one's own mind is contrary to Baha'i. Demanding others comply with what is contrary to Baha'i principle is mismanagement in a Baha'i view.

To Baha'i Administrators Doing Their Job,
M

**--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

"Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk> wrote in message
news:tchpuql1a161c9@xo.supernews.co.uk...

> Silly boy! What makes you think you're the cause? On that account don't > flatter yourself !

Boy, did you miss the point. But, thanks for the chuckle.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk> wrote in message news:tcgoagen9osad9@xo.supernews.co.uk...

> "Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message

> news:9a8u96022j4@news2.newsguy.com...

> > > Your mind isn't made up - it's made up for you!

> > Even if that were true, it would be preferable to the constant state of > > chaos that accurately describes how well your mind is made up.

> My! we are full of opinions but short on fact. Have you any facts with > which to back up this assertion?

I believe you've already supplied all the evidence I need:

> I have PTSD at the moment - no problem in getting medical certification to
> that.

Thank you.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk> wrote in message news:tcfjigbc9jmue3@xo.supernews.co.uk...

> "Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message

> news:9a81m60iu8@news2.newsguy.com...

> > Ah, yes. Again we hear from the "my mind is already made up, so don't > > confuse me with the facts" peanut gallery.

> Your mind isn't made up - it's made up for you!

Even if that were true, it would be preferable to the constant state of chaos that accurately describes how well your mind is made up.

> > > Can I sue for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder?

> > If you can find a solicitor to take the case (which usually entails > > finding a solicitor who's content with whatever money can be > > eked out of the client), you can file a suit for whatever you'd like.
> > Please do. This could be quite fun.

> No problem finding a solicitor. Since I'd have to file suit in Seattle
and > since your lawyers are accustomed to work under contingency, it wouldn't > cost me anything to file.

Now _that's_ funny. Yes, my attorney's are quite accustomed to working on contingency, meaning, of course, they get paid from the damages that have been recovered.

> But if we ever do cross swords in Court, it won't be fun - been > to Court on quite a few occasions, haven't lost one yet and have no > intention of ever doing so.

Oh, it might not be fun for _you_. Me. I think I'd have a grand old time watching you attempt to prove "Post Traumatic Stress Disorder".

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk> wrote in message news:tcea1dcl1u4ae3@xo.supernews.co.uk...

> "Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message
> news:9a3j6q01qoi@news1.newsguy.com...
> > Actually, according to the web site to which I posted a link earlier, he > > passed the written portion of the bar exam in September, 2000.

> > And, note that I didn't just pull that out of my backside.

> Unlike the rest of the information you post here and elsewhere?

Ah, yes. Again we hear from the "my mind is already made up, so don't confuse me with the facts" peanut gallery.

> Can I sue for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder?

If you can find a solicitor to take the case (which usually entails finding a solicitor who's content with whatever money can be eked out of the client), you can file a suit for whatever you'd like. Please do. This could be quite fun.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk> wrote in message news:tcfjfb2dcdue2@xo.supernews.co.uk...

> Now Rickster, are you a racist or do you just churn out this rubbish and > never bother to turn on your Spell Check or otherwise check it?

> Guess you're gonna have to eat some humble pie ... or is that "crow"?

My apologies to anyone who might have been offended.

Of course, if you bother to check your server about now, you'll likely find that said message no longer exists.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message news:9a5i85$krn$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> Only ad hominem here, except an allegation without further detail > that the complaint is flawed. How is it flawed.

Michael, not only have you managed to turn the definition of "ad-hominem" on its head (for what purposes one can only guess), but you've also not been paying attention.

Don't you have a book to write, or something?

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message news:9a54kp$1sr$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> Again, as expected, you are not dealing with issues, but irrelevant > personalities. Who is logically irrelevant; what is the issue.

Again, as expected, you take me to task for engaging in a discussion of personalities when you're absolutely silent when it comes to Mr. Hazini's attacks on people in this forum. Try using a more even hand about this.

And, by the way, I have not argued that the complaint is flawed because the attorney is incompetent. That, of course, would actually be an ad-hominem argument. Rather, I have argued that the attorney appears to be incompetent because the complaint is seriously flawed. So, the only real question is how you've managed to fail to notice that Nima has yet to address the _issue_ of the rather obvious flaws in the complaint?

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au> wrote in message
news:9a3d3t$asq$1@gnamma.connect.com.au...

> >Gee, Fred, what happened to that Baha'i love you keep talking about?

> Pot calling the kettle black?

Really? Isn't Fred the one who makes it an issue to point out everyone else's lack of "Baha'i Love"?

> >Ah, yes. I've done such "despicable" things as call people on their faux > >pas.

> You've called no ones faux pas

Get back to me on this when you accurately state the difference between a deposition and a complaint.

> Seems he passed the bar in Mass in February 2000, so it's hardly a scant 6 > months (albeit February 2000 is probably scant 6 months by your ridiculous > calculations), and besides the guy has a Ph.D of top of the law degree
he's > obtained.

Actually, according to the web site to which I posted a link earlier, he passed the written portion of the bar exam in September, 2000.

And, note that I didn't just pull that out of my backside. I did something unique and novel: I looked it up! You might try that for yourself some time.

> Do you know anything about the firm he works for, hmmmm???

Frankly, no. Is there something I'm supposed to know? Tell you what, why don't you go find a web site that shows which firm he works for, and then I'll go find information about that firm. I've grown a little skeptical about your unsupported statements about someone's supposed qualifications (particularly when this someone writes a complaint that looks like it came from a first-year law student).

> > Nasty, bad, horrible old me.

> I can think of a dozen more colorful adjectives.

I'm sure you can. I'm also sure that they're about as accurate as your description of this attorney's accomplishments.

> >Methinks that the real complaint is that I don't just roll over and play > >dead

> Please do the world a favor and go sailing away into the sunset on your > little boat.

Do you know the difference between a "boat" and a "yacht"? (Old sailor's joke. The quick-witted will be able to guess the punch line.)

> >that doesn't actually allege any facts that would constitute a violation of > >the law.

> Ooh, and you're a New Mexico state judge and would know *grin*.

I don't recall claiming to be a New Mexico state judge, but, then, one doesn't need to be any kind of judge in order to have sufficient knowledge to point out the flaws in a basic complaint. This is a relatively simple tort. Most folks who've taken one course in business law can figure out that this complaint is pretty pathetic.

> Polly wanna cracker??

[Snort.] I dare say we wouldn't be in this little thread, sport, had you actually gone and looked up the information on this attorney rather than repeating what you'd been told by someone else. Now _there's_ a cracker for you.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

Here's some info for your contorted melon to ponder, Merde Man. The guy spent years in Massachusettes. Randy has probably nailed it.

cheers,
Nima

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message
news:99u5090j4m@news1.newsguy.com...

"Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au> wrote in message
news:99u0rv$kom$1@gnamma.connect.com.au...

> "Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message
> news:99t6gc030k7@news2.newsguy.com...
> >The attorney who filed this complaint doesn't > >appear to be very competent.

> The attorney in question is a high powered corporate attorney in New > Mexico working for one of the top firms in the state. He has successfully > sued and won several cases involving big corporations in New Mexico and > Massachusettes, or so I hear.

That's quite a list of accomplishments for someone who only managed to pass the New Mexico bar exam a mere six months ago (<https://www.nmexam.org/pas.htm>). Looks more like this is his first case, and they gave him a throw-away on which to cut his teeth.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

"Patrick Henry" <patrick_henry@liberty.com> wrote in message news:tc693aqc7rvh33@corp.supernews.com...

> Please notice the bahai fundamentalists are failing to respond to the > details of the lawsuit charges:

Please note that the "details" quoted don't allege any actual facts. They simply allege that some vague violations have occurred.

Note the pattern: make vague allegations, then complain about people not responding directly to the vague allegations. I suppose we're supposed to ignore the fact that no attempt has yet been made to prove any of the allegations. Such is the "Glaysher Technique".

Regards,
Rick Schaut

Rick Schaut <rsshaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message
news:99vli702u6p@news1.newsguy.com...

**>
> Yes, it's difficult to know what the facts are when the complaint doesn't > allege all that many.
> (a bit snipped)
>
> > About the only allegations that could possibly have any standing under civil > law would be the allegations of libel and fraud, but the complaint doesn't > allege any facts that would constitute libel and/or fraud under the law.
>
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

Rick,

what advice would you give to Debra/the lawyer to help them present their case?

Perhaps, a more pertinent question is would you help Debra in this case if you could or would you, because it has a bahai institution as a 'defendant', not do so? So far you appear to be assuming a 'defender of the faith role' (i.e. these people on trb holding up this complaint as something to be heard should be fought against).

It's worth a think about. I've been thinking about it and so far have concluded that its important to be neutral (unless one has material information). Statisically, there must be some dodgey LSA's eh?

John

"Charles" <Imno@mindspring.com> wrote in message news:3AC34C32.F43B936A@mindspring.com...

> Since I don't know any of the facts in the case, I cannot comment on them.

Yes, it's difficult to know what the facts are when the complaint doesn't allege all that many.

> Nevertheless, shareholders/members typically do > have a right to see all the corporate documents, so that if the Plaintiff

was

> indeed a shareholder/member, then he/she can see them, and it doesn't > necessarily involve literature review. The Plaintiff would easily WIN that case

> and we will certainly hear about that outcome on trb.

When the 501(c)3 corporation in question also happens to be a religious organization, this is not all that clear under the law. Even if the by laws mention the issue, the courts are going to be very reluctant to step in.

About the only allegations that could possibly have any standing under civil law would be the allegations of libel and fraud, but the complaint doesn't allege any facts that would constitute libel and/or fraud under the law.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

Please notice the bahai fundamentalists are failing to respond to the details of the lawsuit charges:

2. Plaintiffs allege that Trustees breached their duties as corporate officers.

3. Plaintiffs allege that the National Spiritual Assembly breached their duty of deciding appeals owed to Plaintiffs.

4. Plaintiffs allege that the literature review policies of the Local Spiritual Assembly and the National Spiritual Assembly, which lie in privity, unlawfully prevent shareholders from their right to communicate with other shareholders.

5. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants failed to execute their duties under their corporate by-laws.

THOSE are the charges, being ignored by the lackies who handled damaged control on talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai

I would think the lawyer representing the plaintiffs might find many similar stories, during the last decade or so, documented on my bahai webpages, as well as perhaps many potential witnesses to the manner in which the bahai administration now operates....

FULL TEXT:

New Mexico LAWSUIT against bahai institutions for FRAUD 2001

<https://members.nbci.com/FG/NMLawsuit.htm>

**--
FG

www.FG.com

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://members.nbc.com/FG/index.htm>

"Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au> wrote in message
news:99tuhg$1b$1@gnamma.connect.com.au...

> I think it says somewhere it was filed on the 22nd of March.

**>

> cheers,

> Nima

**>

> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message

> news:99talu$6f9$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> Greetings, Nima.

> Good to see you here again.

> What's the date of this? Is this going to go to trial and when?

> By the way, if you replied to my post a while back about my receiving > your test message I didn't get your reply. That post mentioned my review > of ARCHAEOLOGY OF THE DREAMTIME, that's Australian. That review was posted

> to a pagan newsgroup, as just now has my review of A GUIDE TO EARLY IRISH

> LAW. Hooper and his buddies would have loved that. Women had little legal > standing and rulers were very difficult to take to task. I'm currently > working on the 1899 anthropological classic THE NATIVE TRIBES OF

CENTRAL

> AUSTRALIA.

> As always, here's hoping you're doing very well.

**>

Thrive,

**>

Michael

**>

> "Nima Hazini" (lotusapt@wxc.com.au) writes:

> > It's a deposition. Do you know what a deposition is?

**> >

> > cheers,

> > Nima

**> >

> > "Susan Maneck " <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message

> > news:20010328000635.13283.00002188@ng-fi1.aol.com...

> >>Yorgos D. Marinakis

> >>Attorney for Plaintiffs

> >>P.O. Box 45923

> >>Rio Rancho, NM 87174

**> >

> > An actual lawyer wrote this mishmash? It doesn't even make any sense!

**> >

> > "And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no
> time

> > left to start again . . "

> > Don McLean's American Pie

> > <https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>

**> >

**> >

**> >

>
>
>
> --
>
>
>
>
>
>

How about you tell that to your Baha'i brothers also, or is it a Baha'i practice to only point fingers where your own isn't concerned?

cheers,
Nima

"Arfarf5215" <arfarf5215@aol.com> wrote in message
news:20010329234903.25665.00001788@ng-cs1.aol.com...
Sorry Nima but Yorgos D. Marinakis passed his Mass bar exam in February 2000..... I'm sure he's a wonderful person and even kind to animals...in fact I'm sure you are as well. How about lightening up on the acrimony and having a more civil discourse...

>Greetings, Rick.
> As expected this post deals with irrelevant ad hominem.

Dear Michael,

I believe Rick was responding to irrelevant ad hominem.

warmest, Susan

"And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
left to start again . . ."
Don McLean's American Pie
<https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>
Casual passerby my foot.

I don't have a hat you can throw your coin into, but you're most welcome to kiss my **** ;-)

cheers,
Nima

"Roy Hilbinger" <arhil@aiconnect.com> wrote in message news:3292156.DOWXDQJI@news.aiconnect.com...
On Fri, 30 Mar 2001 11:36:55 +1000 "Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au>
wrote:

> Are you one of the Merde Man Schaut's brown nosers I haven't met yet??

Nope, just a casual passerby who happened to stick his head in the door just in time to catch your contortionist act. Thanks for the show! You got a hat I can throw my quarter into?

Cheers back,
Roy

--

*****

"Behold a candle, how it gives its light. It weeps its life away drop by drop in order to give forth its flame of light."

~ 'Abdul-Baha

*****

Visit my website:

<https://www.aiconnect.com/~arhil/Welcome/>

"You'll be glad you did!"

ICQ# 92215158

-----= Posted via Newsfeeds.Com, Uncensored Usenet News =-----

<https://www.newsfeeds.com> - The #1 Newsgroup Service in the World!

-----= Over 80,000 Newsgroups - 16 Different Servers! =-----

Such humility! Really for those that lurk and those of us who have only begun to post it smacks of conceit. But perhaps you are better than most who post here. Are you a Bahai?

On Fri, 30 Mar 2001 06:59:03 -0800, "Rick Schaut"

<rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote:

>On Thu, 29 Mar 2001 14:24:49 +1000 "Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au>

>wrote:

> > You know I was told there is more than one Yorgos Marinakis. This one was >> Yorgos D.

>

>Yes. One wonders what else you've been told that you've swallowed without >investigating for yourself.

>

>> Btw, for someone who doesn't have a JD or ever studied LAW, you sure have >> some pretensions to being a legal expert.

>

>Well, I actually have studied law, but I still wouldn't call myself a "legal >expert". One doesn't need to have a JD to know more about law than the bulk >of the folks who post here.

>

>

>Regards,
>Rick Schaut

>

>

Hey Roy,

Are you one of the Merde Man Schaut's brown nosers I haven't met yet??

cheers,
Nima

"Roy Hilbinger" <arhil@aiconnect.com> wrote in message news:3291441.XYPAARRR@news.aiconnect.com...

On Thu, 29 Mar 2001 14:24:49 +1000 "Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au>
wrote:

> You know I was told there is more than one Yorgos Marinakis. This one > was Yorgos D.

ROFLMAO!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Pardon me while I pick myself up off the floor. My good, that much laughing HURTS!!!!

Mr. Hazini, you've just won the Academy Award for comic contortionism! I haven't seen such a hilarious twisting to get out of a self-dug grave since Houdini did the trick with the locked steamer trunk on the bottom of the frozen East River. It's a good trick if you can pull it off - AND convince the audience!

Cheers back atcha!
Roy

**--

*********

"Behold a candle, how it gives its light. It weeps its life away drop by drop in order to give forth its flame of light."

~ 'Abdul-Baha

*********

Visit my website:

<https://www.aiconnect.com/~arhil/Welcome/>

"You'll be glad you did!"

ICQ# 92215158

-----= Posted via Newsfeeds.Com, Uncensored Usenet News =-----

<https://www.newsfeeds.com> - The #1 Newsgroup Service in the World!

-----= Over 80,000 Newsgroups - 16 Different Servers! =-----

"Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message
news:9a81g10ia6@news2.newsguy.com...

**>

> "Dermod Ryder" <grimreaper@freenetname.co.uk> wrote in message > news:tcea1c75bcdse2@xo.supernews.co.uk...

> > "Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message
> > news:9a5ai50n7a@news1.newsguy.com...

> > > "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
> > > news:9a547q$1d6$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> > > > Greetings, Rick.

> > > > Uhm, I assume you mean that it's short on facts.

>
> > > No. The only thing a complaint does is state allegations. The facts > get > > > brought out at trial, should the case ever get that far.
>
> > And no doubt you are praying fervently that it doesn't!
>
> Actually, I'm praying fervently that it does. I'd take quite a bit of > pleasure in watching you and Mr. Hazini dine on ample dishes of crow.

But what happens if the lady wins her case? Do you promise us a similar pleasure?

"Rick Schaut" <rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message
news:9a5ai50n7a@news1.newsguy.com...

>
> "Michael McKenny" <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message
> news:9a547q$1d6$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...
> > Greetings, Rick.
> > Uhm, I assume you mean that it's short on facts.
>
> No. The only thing a complaint does is state allegations. The facts get > brought out at trial, should the case ever get that far.

And no doubt you are praying fervently that it doesn't!

The Prim Sleeper

>
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

Greetings, Rick.

Uhm, I assume you mean that it's short on facts.

To Ethics,
M

"Rick Schaut" (RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom) writes:

> It was your friend, Mr. Hazini who, rather than address the point I had > raised (i.e. the idea that the complaint is long on allegations but short on > alleging any actual facts),
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."

(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Greetings, Rick.

Sigh. I'm sure you'll be sad to hear I'm too busy to devote the attention to this I'd like to.

For the record, as usual there's a lot here about WHO rather than WHAT. Everything to do with who is irrelevant ad hominem. Stick to the issues man. That's what you're so powerless to do, since your whole position is at odds with rational discourse -- you hold that WHO is all that counts. Doug and his buddies, because of who they are, can define ethics and the good. So, you carry this over into all discourse, you comment about who, rather than what.

Formal logic, in complete agreement with the principles of Baha'i consultation, holds that who said it is of no consequence; what is said is the whole point. The issue is what counts.

I look forward to you addressing issues, but I don't hold my breath.
To the Essential Baha'i Principles,
Michael

"Rick Schaut" (rsschaut@home.NOSPAMcom) writes:

> "Pat Kohli" <kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net> wrote in message > news:3AC40611.995016AD@ameritel.net...
>> Could be a guy from somewhere else who gets thanked for his legal > expertise in >> helping put together a book on wildlife laws which is available at the U > of New >> Mexico web site:
>> <https://ipl.unm.edu/cwl/fedbook/acknow.html>
>
> Not necessarily _legal_ expertise. One "Yorgos D. Marinakis" is also the > author of a couple of papers on biochemistry and the environment.
>
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

**--

"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
(Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

Hi Pat!

I don't know anything about this guy, but in fact many lawyers take bar exams when they move to a new state in order to practice law there. Some lawyers are accredited in several states. Maybe he is a recent arrival in NM, or maybe he is a new lawyer, who knows?

Randy

**--

Pat Kohli <kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net> wrote in message
news:3AC3BE5F.DD90C592@ameritel.net...

> Allahu Abha!

>

> Nima Hazini wrote:

>

> > You know I was told there is more than one Yorgos Marinakis. This one
was > > Yorgos D.

>

> If the "D" is for Dionysus, then Yorgos D. Marinakis' name might be one of
the > ones on the very bottom of the page <https://www.nmexam.org/pas.htm>,

those who > passed the test, but have outstanding requirements to meet before acceptance to > the bar. But this was some months back so they likely have been admitted

to > the bar.

>

> Maybe there is more than one lawyer named Yorgos Dionysus Marinakis in New

> Mexico?

>

You know I was told there is more than one Yorgos Marinakis. This one was Yorgos D.

Btw, for someone who doesn't have a JD or ever studied LAW, you sure have some pretensions to being a legal expert.

cheers,
Nima

"Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au> wrote in message
news:99ud3g$ocs$1@gnamma.connect.com.au...

I didn't see his name on the people who passed the bar exam in "the past 6 months." Pulling rabbits out of your hat again, ay Rick?

cheers,
Nima

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message
news:99u5090j4m@news1.newsguy.com...

"Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au> wrote in message
news:99u0rv$kom$1@gnamma.connect.com.au...

> "Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message

> news:99t6gc030k7@news2.newsguy.com...

> > The attorney who filed this complaint doesn't > > appear to be very competent.

> The attorney in question is a high powered corporate attorney in New > Mexico working for one of the top firms in the state. He has successfully > sued and won several cases involving big corporations in New Mexico and > Massachusettes, or so I hear.

That's quite a list of accomplishments for someone who only managed to pass the New Mexico bar exam a mere six months ago (<https://www.nmexam.org/pas.htm>). Looks more like this is his first case, and they gave him a throw-away on which to cut his teeth.

Regards,
Rick Schaut

I didn't see his name on the people who passed the bar exam in "the past 6 months." Pulling rabbits out of your hat again, ay Rick?

cheers,
Nima

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message news:99u5090j4m@news1.newsguy.com...

"Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au> wrote in message news:99u0rv$kom$1@gnamma.connect.com.au...

> "Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@home.NOSPAMcom> wrote in message
> news:99t6gc030k7@news2.newsguy.com...
> >The attorney who filed this complaint doesn't > >appear to be very competent.

> The attorney in question is a high powered corporate attorney in New > Mexico working for one of the top firms in the state. He has successfully > sued and won several cases involving big corporations in New Mexico and > Massachusettes, or so I hear.

